"Curiously enough, the hitches were far inferior to the dogs, quite an unusual state of things. Mr. Raper's Richmond Victoria is by no means a flyer, being mean in the head; yet she was able to win right away through her classes, and finally to gain the challenge prize. Miriam (second) is also short in head, small and light, but she is a neat hitch, of the old-fashioned sort, reminding me strongly of my old favorite, Champion Violet Broom.

"The only other entry in this class was Classy of Notts, big in ear and fluffy in coat, by no means a worthy representative of the Clumber Kennels. In subsequent classes a very smart bitch was shown, about whose identity I am rather fogged. I think her name was Holdforth Spoil. She might have been much higher but for her shocking feet. They were so flat and splayed that I was near leaving her entirely unnoticed, for this is a terrible fault in Fox Terriers, in my humble opinion. Richmond Victoria, as stated, was a lucky winner of the Bitch Challenge Prize; that for dogs falling to King Elf, whom I should certainly have adjudged the best Fox Terrier in the show."

ROD.

Striped bass fishing is first class during these early September days. Rodco wharf and the shallow waters off San Pablo have yielded numbers of fine fish for a week past, a few going as high as 20 pounds. The waters off Bay Farm Island also abound in big fish, fishing off the sand bars on a high water large tide has been found the best time for bass fishing at that locality. In trolling for bass with the Wilson spoon it is necessary to send the boat through the water "as if you were going somewhere in a hurry." Sailing has been found easier than rowing. The waters of Petaluma creek and San Antonio slough are full of fine fish many having been caught recently. Among the successful fishermen this week have been Henry Skinner, "Al" Wilson, "Doc" Cox, J. A. Pariser, Geo. Walker, J. B. Kenniff, W. F. Shattuck and son, J. S. and Will Turner, James Lynch, Dr. C. G. Levinson and others,

A package of trout (fontinalis) received this week from W. R. McFarland were the finest looking specimens of this species it has been our pleasure to gaze upon for a long period. The fish were caught on Sunday in a mountain lake fifteen miles from Tallac and have the just reputation of being the finest in that section. These trout were very fat and full of roe when caught, their breeding time being in October. In characteristic colors and markings they were models of beauty and perfection. They were received here on Tuesday and cooked that evening; when served they tasted like fish but a few hours only from the water. They arrived in perfect condition, due to the expert manner in which they were packed. The trout were first cut open and cleaned, then carefully wiped dry, not a drop of water being used in the cleansing process. They were then allowed to dry for awhile in the open air. When received each fish was carefully covered with manilla paper, inside and out, the outer covering being several folds of newspaper also carefully rolled around the fish. The bundle of trout were then wrapped securely in a large piece of sacking, which from appearances we are inclined to believe was wet and wrung out before dispatching the package to its destination. We shall endeavor to get the exact process from Prospector Mac; the preparation of the trout to arrive in good condition after a long journey was a skillful detail of angling addenda and is too good a thing to keep from the fraternity at large.

One of the unpleasant features of trolling is changing the spoon on the average trolling rig. Of course, if the angler has an individual leader for each spoon the matter of attaching and detaching to the line is greatly simplified, but the amount of space occupied in one's tackle box by an assortment of spoons attached to separate leaders and the amount of time lost in moistening the fresh leaders and getting them out of coil is a nuisance. The average fisherman attaches his leader to his trolls in one of two ways. Sometimes the spoon end of the leader is put through the eye of the swivel and the line end of the leader then brought through the loop. This necessitates the removal of the leader from the line each time a change is made. Another method, and one which is frequently adopted is to remove the swivel from the trolling spoon and run the lower loop of the leader through the upper swivel ring and then bring the swivel itself down through the loop, then attach the swivel again to the spoon. The better class of artificial baits are so arranged that the swivels may be removed, but even with ones constructed with this in view the operation is not a particularly rapid one.

There is a handy contrivance that has been used here to some little extent, which obviates the trouble experienced by either of these methods, and although the arrangement is not a new one, it is seldom found in the tackle boxes of the fishermen. This affair, which is called a "snell loop connecting link," is a piece of brass wire, bent in the shape of two hairpins, point to point, the pins being connected on one leg and one leg of each being free. On this wire slides a piece of brass tubing, which, when in the centre of the wires, holds the loose ends together, and when shoved up or down will free either end. This arrangement, which runs from three-quarters of an inch to an inch and a half in length, as desired, may be kept permanently attached to the lower end of the leader, and, by simply shifting the brass tube, allows the ready hooking and unhooking of the spoon swivel which it holds firmly in place when the tube is returned to the middle of the link. These affairs, which only cost a few cents each, are far superior to the old fashioned hook or watch spring swivels which are sometimes used for this purpose, but which have been generally discarded on account of their liability to bend under a heavy strain. Al Wilson has improved this link recently and has made a connecting device out of phosphor bronze wire that is a model of utility and ingenuity. The great handiness of these connecting links lies in the fact that they allow one to troll with one leader, to which any number of spoons may be attached one after the other, as rapidly as the angler desires, until the most taking one is found, doing away with the necessity of moistening new leaders or constantly rearranging tackle each time a new troll is attached. The corkscrew swivel is another arrangement sometimes used for the same purpose, but is much slower in operation and more liable to jam.

Speaking of trolling leaders, it is a good scheme instead of using a long one-piece leader to use two or three double leaders of twenty inches in length each, connecting them by swivels. It is a mighty poor policy to use a cheap swivel. Be sure and get the best quality brass hook, or better still barrel affairs. There isn't very much difference in the price, but there is a tremendous improvement in the action. The arrangement referred to not only allows the spoon to revolve more freely, but in case of any section of the leader becoming worn, it may be much more economically replaced than would a whole new leader. In fact, it may be taken as a general principle that for most fishermen short leaders looped together are an economical proposition. A nice, long nine-foot leader will cost anywhere from 50 cents to $1; one of three feet will only cost about a quarter or third of that sum. A nine-foot leader with a weak spot in it is a candidate for the waste basket, unless the fisherman possesses the ability to retie it and make a shorter one out of it. With a nine-foot leader, consisting of three-foot lengths, any part which develops a weakness may be removed and a new one substituted, and the amount saved by the latter arrangement will be quite considerable at the end of the season, and can be applied to the purchase of a few more flies.

If it was not for the inconvenience in carrying, when taken apart, a two-piece rod would be far preferable to a three-joint affair. The more ferrules and joints there are in a rod the more its action is spoiled by the stiffness of the joints. Metal ferrules cannot be made to bend like wood, and the natural remedy would be to have as few of them as possible, only there is not much fun trotting around the country carrying rods whose sections are from three to four feet in length.

A two-piece rod was shown in a leading Market street sportsman's emporium the other day that was a beauty. It was seven feet long and weighed 7½ ounces. The butt, joint, and tip were all of lancewood; the grip was cane wound, and the rod was fitted with anti-friction trumpet guides and a metal reel seat. The tips were finished with three ring tops, and the ferrules had no dowels. For black bass fishing or bait casting, trolling, or for light salt water use, it was a good combination, as well as an economical one, for with nickel-plated trimmings the cost was very reasonable indeed.

There are many times when the fisherman would like a sinker somewhat heavier than the regulation split shot, but lighter than anything which he has in his tackle box. For this purpose the bullet of the 22 short-rim fire cartridge will be found excellent. This bullet, which weighs twenty-nine grains, is also of just sufficient weight to properly balance one of the little two-inch egg-shaped floats which a fisherman sometimes likes to use. The best way of arranging these bullets is to make a split in them with a knife and then close them over a loop of silk or fine line. This loop may be attached to and removed from the leader instantly, as desired.

Mr. Cleveland's next contribution to The Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia, will be an extremely interesting readable paper, in which he sings the praises of his favorite sport. The Reflections of a Fisherman shows very pleasantly the genial "official" side of the former President.

Jackson's Napa Soda cleanses the stomach and renders the eye clear.

This afternoon and to-morrow morning are the times selected for the first of the class re-entry contests among the Fly-Casters at Stow lake. The final re-entry contests take place September 28th and 29th.

At the last Sunday meeting of the club members on the lakeside, F. M. Haight made his initial win in the delicacy and accuracy event with the excellent net percentage of 86½.

The contests at the end of this month will determine the winners in the various classes, with the exception of possible ties, which will be cast off on a day to be selected during next month.

London anglers are jubilant, as they have won a memorable victory over a Midland club. The details of this terrific and exciting contest, says The Shooting Times, are as follows: A South London club challenged a Bedfordshire club to fish a match in the Ouse, and the terms arranged were a first prize for the angler who caught the heaviest fish, the second prize for the greatest number of fish, and the side which had the least aggregate catch was to pay for dinner for both sides. There were twelve members a side, and after they had fished all day it was found that a South London man had won all the prizes. He had caught a fish weighing 8½ ounces, and none of the other competitors had caught anything!

At the Traps.

The regular trap season at Ingleside will wind up to-morrow with blue rock and live bird shooting. The final inanimate target shoot of the Olympic Gun Club monthly club shoots will take place in one section of the grounds and the Union Gun Club will hold the last of a series of three live bird shoots for this season. This pigeon shoot was killed for the 29th inst. An open date on the association grounds and the fact that the open season on game commences October 1st induced a change of dates. This will be a great convenience to many of the club members who are making arrangements for the fall shooting season.

The Empire Gun Club Tournament on the 8th and 9th insts. will go on record as the highest blue rock club shoot ever held in the State. The total number of individual entries in the different events during the two days' shooting amounted to 138 guns, 84 on Sunday, 54 on Monday. The arrangements for the comfort and convenience of the shooters was under the supervision of Secretary J. B. Hauer, who worked hard and incessantly for a successful outcome of the meeting. The high average for both days and for the club shooting season was made by A. J. Wehli, he also won the first prize, a shotgun in the first merchandise event. C. W. Dehenham won the Yellowstone trophy. J. B. Hauer and R. C. Reed divided a pool purse of $25, the Schumacher trophy was won by Hauer also. The prize lapel and cuff buttons given by the club were won by Dehenham, Hauer and V. J. La Motte.

C. W. Dehenham won the first prize in the high event of the second day—four men tied on 20 straight, he shot off the second tie, miss and out, winning from "Wilson" on his twenty-third break. The list of prizes were so numerous that almost every shooter won something.

In the distance handicap events at the Maugatrap, Otto Feunner scored 15 straight and M. Burnell a run of 20 straight. The "machine" puzzled many of the crack guns.

The final shoot for 1901 of the Olympic Gun Club members at pigeons last Sunday was a notable exhibition of excellent shooting. Weather conditions were favorable and a strong lot of birds helped to make the meet at Ingleside conducive to an agreeable day's sport. Many of the birds released from the traps would have challenged the eye and skill of any shooter. The expert shooting indulged in can be understood when but twenty-six pigeons out of 408 shot at during the day crossed the boundary limit. Of the pigeons scored lost ten dropped to grass just over bounds. The fact that but sixteen birds escaped out of the total number shot at argues a high degree of shooting skill possessed by the sportsmen contending.

M. O. Feudner won the first medal in the champion class, he lost but three pigeons out of 100 this season. His fourteenth and ninety-seventh birds were missed. The ninety-fifth pigeon fell just over the fence. The race for second medal in the champion class resulted in a tie between Clarence A. Haight and C. H. Shaw, with 93 pigeons each. On the tie shoot-off, "miss and out," Shaw lost his sixth bird, a left incomer. A defect in the working of the left trigger of his gun caused a fatal delay in using both barrels. Haight then killed his sixth pigeon and won the medal. W. J. Golcher lost two birds "dead out." Both were hard hit and fell close to the harrier in the club race. In shooting up a hack score of fifteen he killed clean. His loss of winning position was clearly a case of shooter's "hard luck." He scored 92 pigeons for the six club shoots.

In Class A the curious anomaly is shown of a supposedly less proficient section of shooters making better scores than three of the expert class. George H. T. Jackson won the first medal in the class, on the excellent score of 95 out of 100 pigeons. Ed Donohoe won the second medal with a score of 94. Donohoe lost but one pigeon in the club race Sunday. Jackson shot up a hack score of fifteen straight, and then lost his second bird in the final club race at twenty-five pigeons. "Slade" who shot in good form, struck a snag in his eighth bird during the club race. It fell dead out. His ninth bird escaping, left him out of the medal race on a score of 92 for the season. He won, however, both a bluerock and live bird medal last year.

President H. B. Hosmer won the Class B medal with a score of 83 birds out of 100. Captain Len D. Owens presented the medals to the shooters after the club race and tie shoot was finished. The five medals given by the club were of solid gold, beautiful in design, elegantly carved and chased and tastefully enamelled.

J. D. Heard, a Yreka sportsman, and F. J. Stone, of Fresno, shot as guests of the club. During the club race six shooters chipped in $5 each toward a sweepstakes purse. This was divided into two moneys, 60 per cent. and 40 per cent., for high guns. Haight and Jackson were high and tied and divided the pool. After the club events Ed Donohoe graced 47 out of 50 pigeons and C. A. Haight killed 44 straight. Some of the pigeons released to these two shooters were very hard birds to drop. The scores in the different events of the day follow:

Clarence Nauman was shooting at Namur, France, at last advices. He had been winning or dividing pool races almost daily. He recently shot out Mr. MacIntosh, a clever wing shot. Nauman killed seventeen straight, his opponent going out after his sixteenth. It is the fashion among English and continental shooters to use a hammer gun. Nauman bought a hammer gun recently in France and paid 750 francs for it.

Cartridge and Shell.

The close season in Marin county on deer will commence to-morrow at midnight.

Large numbers of spoonhills and also many sprigtail ducks are now frequenting the Alvarado and Alviso marshes on the east bay shore.

A peculiar and stereotyped sequence of incendiary announcements proclaiming a "shameless and wanton destruction of young ducks, quails on the nest, does or fawns, the burning of fences and crops or the killing or maiming of stock and cattle" in a particular district, always seems necessary to prepare a selected community for the advent of the State game protection propagandist. Stockton seems to be the beneficiary last selected for the protection of game under this peculiar system.

The constitutionality of the fish and game laws passed by the Legislature was practically established by a decision of the Supreme Court on Thursday.

The law, in regard to which there has been the greatest amount of contention, makes it illegal for any one to have more than fifty doves or wild ducks in his possession on any one calendar day. The observance of the regulation was found to work great hardship on commission merchants, marketmen, hotel and restaurant men, etc., and it was decided to make a determined attempt to have the statute declared unconstitutional.

Accordingly, to make a test case, J. P. Corriea notified the Fish Commission that he had violated the law. He was arrested and after conviction was sentenced to pay a fine of $25. He appealed and the Superior Court affirmed the decision of the lower court.

Petition was then made to the Supreme Court for a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that the defendant was deprived of his liberty under a law which was unconstitutional.

The Supreme Court denied the petition, which action is in effect a decision upholding the constitutionality of the act in question.

The meeting of riflemen at Sea Girt, New Jersey, for 1901, was one of the most important gatherings of marksmen held this year. The meeting included the annual prize meetings of the National Rifle Association of America, the New Jersey State Rifle Association and the United States Revolver Association. The program was a lengthy one and embraced team and individual events open to the world. Perhaps the most prominent attendance of visiting shooters was the team of Irish riflemen from the Ulster Rifle Association of Belfast, Ireland.

A notable performance during the meeting was the victory of Frank Hyde of New York in the open to the world contest on the 10th instant. Every member of the Irish team participated, as well as leading American and Canadian riflemen. The victory of the American in this contest was somewhat of a surprise particularly so as several of the visiting shooters were regarded as extremely dangerous antagonists. At this meeting the leading and best specimens of the world's rifle manufacturers' skill were used. It is a matter of great satisfaction to know that the firearm used to puncture the winning targets made by Mr. Hyde was one of American make, the Remington-Lee magazine rifle—one that is known popularly all over the globe and has the enviable reputation of being a high-class weapon for target, sporting or military purposes. The enormous export sales of this gun by the Remington company are a convincing testimonial of its high power and effectiveness. The range distances in the Sea Girt rifle contests are 200, 800, 900 and 1000 yards.

A Paris newspaper, in commenting on the game season now just opening in France, makes the curious observation that for a long time past it has been noto-ricious that Bunny is a complete nuisance for pheasants and partridges, as the activity he displays, especially during the night, at dawn, and in the evening, deprives the birds of anything in the shape of repose, and is the real cause of the failure to hatch in many instances. Since people have taken to getting rid of the rabbits it has been noticed that the hatching has succeeded admirably, and that the hares—who also detest rabbits—have become more numerous.

The mishap of the Washington hunter given in another paragraph reminds us that there is yet a few cougars, California or mountain lions, as felis concolor is variously known, to be found in this State, and the varmints range the woods and hills not so very far from this city, as will be recalled by the following incident which transpired about a month ago in Santa Cruz county:

While Louis Huddleson was returning to Watsonville from Corralitos on his wheel one night he was chased five miles by a huge mountain lion. The animal finally caught the bicyclist on a steep grade, knocking him from his wheel into a fence, then it crouched for a spring. Huddleson flung his bicycle into the brute's face, smashing the machine, when the lion with a howl made off into the brush.

Just previous to the opening of the present deer season a complaint (?) was published in the columns of a Santa Barbara paper, which presents a peculiar nut for some of our game protection fanatics to crack. The writer stated that residents in the mountain sections of Santa Barbara county are complaining of the ravages of deer. Young apple orchards are being ruined by the deer, according to these complaints, and the mountaineers are calling for a repeal of the game laws. Deer are getting too numerous and too tame; they jump the fences erected to keep them away from the trees and eat the straw from the arms and legs of the scare-crows put up to frighten them. One correspondent writing to a local paper calls them "pests," and wants to know when the supervisors will take squirrels and rabbits under their protecting care.

A press dispatch this week gives the following account of an exciting and perilous adventure in the woods bordering on Puget Sound wherein John May of Aberdeen, in Chehalis county, Washington, had a terrible experience recently with three cougars while hunting in the woods near Gray's Harbor. In the dense woods, several miles from any habitation, a large cougar sprang at him, and was quickly followed by her mate and their offspring. May instantly realized that he had his hands full if he was to save his life. The first animal he succeeded in dispatching with one shot from his rifle. The second brute was maddened at the sight of its dead mate and sprang at him with all the ferocity of its kind. Before he could bring his gun into play again the cougar was upon him, compelling the quick use of his hunting knife. This he wielded dexterously, but not until the animal had chewed a great chunk out of his shoulder and scratched him until the blood was running freely from both limbs. He finally succeeded in plunging his knife into the vitals of the cougar, which dropped dead at his feet. Before attending to his wounds he killed the young cougar, fearing that otherwise its cries might attract other beasts to the spot. After binding up his wounds as best he could, May trudged slowly to the nearest settlement and there received medical attention.

A few years ago there was only one make of very light 22-calibre rifles to be obtained, with the exception of the imported Flobert, which could generally be relied on to shoot all around the mark aimed at until the marksman became sufficiently acquainted with its idiosyncrasies to know just how far away to aim in order to make a hit. At the present day, however, there are several makes of the small bores, which although thoroughly accurate, may be obtained for less than $5, and fitted with barrels of about 20 inches length, which allows their being taken apart and carried in very small compass. As has been before pointed out, the extreme cheapness at which they may be had allows one to shoot B B caps, which are practically noiseless, without twinges of remorse at the damage which the fulminate does to the rifle. We were shown the other day the latest thing in one of these little arms, one which has just been brought out by the makers, the Remington Arms Company. The stock and fore-end which are made of black walnut, were very handsomely finished, the butt plate being of a finely-blued bit of steel. The frame, trigger guard, and breech block were case-hardened, and the barrel, of decarbonized steel, was 20 inches in length and tapered after the pattern of the small bore military rifles. By turning a headscrew underneath the forward part of the frame, the barrel could be removed in a very few seconds. The cartridge is extracted by first setting the hammer at full cock, and pressing down on a little button attached to the right hand side of the breech block, which then drops down and automatically extracts the cartridge. The whole weapon weighs but 3½ pounds, and packs in a space 20 inches long. The parts are so few and simple that it may be easily cleaned, and while its weight is light enough for use by the average small boy within whose reach the price places it, it is also sufficiently accurate for those who wish to do good shooting with light charges. No one examining the handsome finish of the rifle would be apt to judge how small is its price. One of the great advantages aside from the accuracy which our low-priced American rifles possess, is the ability of the owner to cheaply duplicate lost or broken parts, which may be readily obtained from the factories which are located in this country. Any one unfortunate enough to smash any of the mechanism of the old-fashioned Flobert, usually found it cheaper to buy a new weapon than to have the damage repaired.

A new invoice of L. C. Smith and Parker Bros.' guns just received. Some 12 gauge duck guns now in stock are unsurpassed. For quail and snipe shooting and also for ladies' use, we have a special lot of 16 gauge guns. H. E. Skinner & Co., 416 Market Street.

Some Chapters on Continental Sport.

In a recent publication entitled "Sport in Europe" the author, Mr. F. G. Afalo, explains in his preface, the character of a very interesting volume.

"Here are articles on the sport obtained in the different countries, collected from the pens of representative sportsmen." The supremacy of the English sportsman is acknowledged, however, since three of the chapters are written by Englishmen, who have followed the game in foreign countries. Of course the appreciation of what is game varies, for as the editor writes: "An animal that is only trapped as vermin in one country may, however, be correctly coveted, for the gun in another; and it is necessary when surveying under such guidance so vast and so seriously populated an area as is in Europe to take the broadest possible view of sport."

As to the game laws, nothing could have been more natural than the changes made since feudal times. Then the hunt was the privilege of the Court, the nobles and the clergy. The death penalty awaited the deer slayer. The French Revolution at once deprived the nobility of the hunting rights. In France, the editor thinks, license has been carried too far, and in the volume under notice M. Caillard's article "is one long indictment of the present government of France for its neglect of the most simple measures for restoring the former wealth of game." The Spanish and the Portuguese contributors to the work insist that in their own country "there are no game laws."

In Belgium and Holland it is the hare which fires the heart of the sportsman. In England the shooting of a fox is deemed as something near to murder, while in Scotland a man may shoot a fox and nothing is said. In Hungary the lynx is the most coveted of game, and in Roumania he is trapped as vermin. In Spain the eagle is considered as a fine game bird, since the Duke of Frias puts down the noble bird on his list; but then, too, vulture shooting finds admirers in Spain. There is no accounting for tastes.

Mr. W. A. Baillie-Grohman writes of sport in Austria. The stag, the prize of the chase in Austria, is not stalked as in Scotland. He is shot in the rutting season. It is a business requiring great skill and patience. The roe deer is also found apparently in large numbers, as 70,000 are said to be killed every year in Austria. Sometimes the hunter imitates the call of the doe. As to bears and wild boars, none of the latter is found outside of the private parks, and ursus is also rare. The chamois on the northern spurs of the Alps furnish fine sport. Fair chamois grounds may be rented at from $2000 to $2500 a year. There are some curious customs kept up in both Austria and Germany when big game is killed. It is called the presenting of the twig. "After a stag is killed, the keeper takes off his hat and lays on it a small twig of fir or pine (for chamois a twig of the larch is taken) which has been drawn over the bullet hole in the hart's body, and thus presents it to the sportsman, be he his master or guest, who has brought down the beast." There must be fair fishing in Austria, for Mr. Baillie-Grohman tells of the grayling, trout, salbling, and in the Danube of the Salmo hucho, which weighs sixty pounds.

Baron Donald Schonberg is the authority for hunting and fishing in Germany. He believes that there is "close relationship" between the Teuton and the Englishman. The German is quite indifferent for the latest fashion in knickerbockers. He hunts not for show or for the pot. Pretty generally he is a fair naturalist. German keepers are men carefully selected, who have seen service in the ranks, and besides that are well up in forestry. Poaching is severely dealt with. In Bavaria, Silesia, Posen and Prussia, where big game is preserved, shooting a poacher at sight is the practice and often a necessity.

The old German custom of making a grand parade after the day's sport is still adhered to. "At the end of a day's shoot the game is collected and laid out carefully in due order of merit, and then the master and his guests examine it, generally before or after dinner. Often after dark, when the castle yard or the country house lawn is lit up by torches, and the keepers sounding the halali on their bugles, it is a pretty sight, and a sporting conclusion to a day's good sport." The great elk is still to be found in the forest of Ibenhorst, in the Province of East Prussia. He is a sacred animal, that is to say, no common sportsman can shoot him. He is the quarry for royalty. The red deer holds the first place as game. Up to the seventeenth century royalty alone had the right to follow the red deer. In those benighted times the killing of a stag by a nobody was considered a greater offense than murder. On the Tyrolean frontier there are chamois and also red deer. In Brandenburg, Westphalia, the Rhine Provinces and Alsace-Lorraine there are wild boars. There is no pigsticking. The boar, driven by dogs, is shot. Hunting with hounds, when the stag was followed, or coursing, rather belongs to the past. During the last thirty years, however, there has been a revival of hunting with dogs, and to-day there are many packs, "but most are of a more or less military character," and that sounds queerly.

For France, M. Paul Caillard writes: "Although the French have, with surprising aptitude, given themselves up to hard training for sport, it would, indeed, be difficult to institute any satisfactory comparison between the French and the English modes of practicing it." Physical education has been neglected. "To be frank," writes M. Caillard, "the true sportsman is a rara avis in France." In all France there is but one regularly worked pack of foxhounds and they are to be found at Pau. There are, however, several packs of staghounds in the neighborhood of Paris, as at Chantilly, Villiers, Cottrets, Rambouillet, Compiègne, and Fontainebleau. Let us here say a big word of praise in regard to a peculiar breed of dogs in France known as the Vireland. This dog probably is of a most ancient origin, and may be Gascon. Nothing can be finer than the work of this dog when following the roebuck. He is full of zeal, long-winded, and remarkably fast. He stands somewhat higher than most dogs, having rather long fore legs. We should very much wish that good Vireland dogs could be brought to New York for some of the coming dog shows. Certainly the followers of William the Conqueror carried to England their own dogs, and these breeds have been improved on in Great Britain. It is then not unlikely that the French griffon is the originator of the English otter-hound. France, according to our authority, is not the country for shooting. Proprietors of landed estates have no rights. In the north of France shooting is absolutely free for everybody. "Birds of passage like quail, woodcock and wild fowl of all kinds fall to the gunners, though two-thirds of those who hunt them, caring little for sport, make use of destructive nets." Where there really is game, that destructive wholesale slaughter called a battue is in vogue. Then the only dog used is a retriever, who picks up the dead and wounded birds. In Brittany alone there is still fair shooting. Poachers seem to have their own way in France.

In the United States we freely acknowledge our indebtedness to France for our first inkling of fish culture. The propagation of fish in France, M. Caillard writes, has been entirely neglected, and legislation is inadequate for the protection of fish. The salmon was once abundant in certain French rivers. It has today almost vanished. M. Caillard tells, however, of what was almost a discovery on his part, and it was of a salmon river, the Ellee, where he caught many fine salmon.

What about Spain? We should not forget that once Spain was the mistress of the world, and her fine gentlemen engaged in all kinds of sports. Bear in mind, too, that just as in the long past Spain made the finest swords, so she turned out the choicest of firearms. Chokebore fowling pieces! That is a Spanish invention of centuries ago. The Moors brought to Spain their fine hunting dogs. There are some learned in the history of the Pointer who insist that that noble creature is of pure Spanish origin. The Duke of Frias presents a list of the game to be found in Spain. It begins with the red deer, includes the ibex, chamois, boar, bear, lynx, wildcat, wolf, and concludes in birds with the flamingo. To give the details of sport in Russia as presented by Demidoff, Prince of San Donato, would be to exhaust all the space allotted to us. Bears are widely distributed over the Russian Empire. One of the peculiarities of bear hunting is worthy of comment. A hunter in the business tracks a bear, then reports his exact locality, and next sells him to the eager sportsman at so much per pood, "the price per pood varying according to the facilities for getting at the beast, and the distance from the nearest railway station." If the bear is killed, and is larger than usual, an additional bonus is exacted. Coursing for wolves with Borzois, as the Russian Wolfhounds are called, must be a fine sport. It may be remembered that some years ago in the West a good Russian Wolfhound was pitted against an American hound, and the latter got quite the better of the Russian dog. It is said that the Western wolf is a very much stronger and more savage brute than his Russian cousin. "Sport in Europe" is a volume of exceeding interest and contains information of the most varied character. The illustrations are excellent and are from drawings by Archibald E. Caldwell and E. F. T. Bennett, and there are also half tones from photographs. The volume contains 413 pages and is issued by E. P. Dutton & Co., of New York.

"There is an Eastern visitor in this city now who has done a good deal of Western shooting, and so 'tis said, once in a spirit of investigation, walked down an antelope, never shooting at it until he tired it out and looked into its conquered eyes. Well, he was out shooting elk in the north one day and by and by located one. Crouching down in a gully and bracing himself against the half rock, half clay that formed the sides, he waited until a chance for a shot appeared in the glade beyond. Then waiting until the flank was turned to him he fired. He had slightly to raise himself to get his arm clear, his weight having caused him to settle a bit, and as he pulled the trigger his foot slipped. He saw the elk give a jump, and then down he went some eight feet into the gully. Scrambling out he went to see if he had drawn blood, but nary a sign. The animal had gone off due north, and he faced southwest for the camp disgusted. He had not gone fifty yards before he saw fresh blood, and following the trail for quite a distance found a crippled deer. He shot it and investigated. The bullet had entered at the base of the ribs, plowing upward, until it lodged just at the tip of the shoulder socket, which the impact had evidently splintered, and then the beast running away, the weight of its body had eventually cracked the bone and brought it down. A bullet finished its misery. Then the hunter returned to the spot where the shot took effect. A careful search showed that the first bullet had hit a bush bough, had been deflected to the ground at a very slight angle, had plowed a cut an inch deep and struck a piece of iron stone and had been deflected again and had hit the deer, which was following the deer call out of curiosity, as deer will do. Now who would believe such a yarn in cold blood? And yet the relator of this story has not the slightest doubt that it is perfectly true. Governor Roosevelt tells of getting a mountain sheep with a bullet which was deflected from a piece of rock. The instances of men in sink boxes who have been hurt by shot deflected from the water are almost innumerable. A man in a boat fires, say, at a cripple, the shot hits the water and goes on, ricocheting to a greater range than it would in a direct flight, and then some one gets hit just above the water line. There are few old hunters who have not seen two men fire at the same bird on the wing almost simultaneously and the bird knocked by the impact of the shot first one way and then the other before it falls to the ground.

THE FARM.

The Cream Separator.

That the cream separator has come to stay is a demonstrated fact, but a great many must yet learn how to use it in order to get the best result. Those who keep only a few cows must resort to some other method than the gravity machines. Some like the dilution plan, while others do not, because the milk diluted with water is not palatable for table use or calf feeding. Many of these separators are being replaced by deep water setting, thus getting the same amount of cream, and also having the pure unadulterated milk to use at all times. But the question arises: What are we to do who have the dilution machine? They are far ahead of the old crock or pan-setting method, but give unsatisfactory results, especially in feeding of calves, which is practiced upon nearly every farm. Not feeling disposed to throw away our dilution separator we resorted to a method that gives good results. In our spring house we have a cement milk tank one foot deep by two feet wide and four feet long. Water runs through this at all hours of the day and has its course through the tank into the tile drain. Into this tank, filled with water, we set our separator, and without adding a drop of water to the milk, we get all our cream, and have plenty of palatable sweet milk to use all the time.—George W. Brown in Ex.

To Make a Cow Milk Easily.

M., Warren Co., Ill., wants a "reliable recipe for making a hard-milking cow milk easily." The writer can tell him how to make a cow milk easier and not do injury to her teats. Some years ago a great many cows had their teats destroyed by the use of dilating plugs. One smart individual proposed to make holes big enough so that any child could squeeze out the milk, and he just about destroyed his herd. The only "reliable recipe" the writer can give is to be on hand when such a cow drops her calf. Don't allow the calf to suck, or the teats to get wet with milk, but milk her with a strong hand. You will be surprised how the milk valves will open and what a big stream you can get. During the first twelve hours milk her five or six times. It must be done by some one who has a strong hand, and the best milker on your farm should continue to milk her. I have greatly improved many hard milking cows in the above way. The undersigned has no use for either dilating plugs or milking tubes. He treats cows' teats that need treatment in a more sensible way.—A. X. Hyatt, in Prairie Farmer.

How to Train a Calf.

Some of our advanced dairymen differ greatly in their opinions on how to manage the calf immediately after birth. One man says: "I prefer to take the calf away as soon as born rather than be troubled caring for sore teats of the cow. Use for convenience a shallow and broad metal pail, milking for a large calf three quarts, for a small calf about two quarts of milk. Then, after gently caressing the calf, stroking the neck or hack with the hand or talking kindly to it, place the milk under its nose and the fingers touching the lips, but not in the mouth; soon it will begin to try to get hold of your fingers; then gently push its nose down into the milk, and in its efforts to get hold of your finger it will get a taste of the milk and is very apt to begin to drink. A little patience and kindness will meet with success. After it has been taught to drink you will find it much better to always place it in a stallion at feeding time and let it remain there a short time after it gets through eating, so that it will not form the habit of sucking the other calves' ears." Some others prefer to let the calves remain with their mothers until they are three or four days old. Probably the latter has more followers than the former. It is evident that either proceeding gives good results and may be adopted without detriment to the future welfare of the cows.

Importance of Aeration.

The importance of thorough aeration and rapid cooling of milk after it is drawn is shown by a count of a bacteria or germs in it under the microscope, says the American Cultivator. In milk which contained 975 bacteria when drawn and kept at 59 degrees, they multiplied 1.06 times, or a little more than doubled in three hours, two and a half times in six hours and five times in nine hours. But when the milk was kept at 95 degrees in three hours they had multiplied four times, in six hours 1290 times, and in nine hours 3794 times. In other words, in nine hours there would be at the higher temperature 3,699,150 germs, and in the cool milk only 4875. As these bacteria are the germs of decay, or a large proportion are, it is not strange that milk sours rapidly if put away when warm. If milk could be kept at the temperature of well or spring water, usually a little below 50 degrees, there would be but little increase of bacteria in twenty-four or thirty-six hours, by which time all the cream should have risen.—Dairy and Creamery.

APERFIELD COURT STUD

(The Entire English Breeding Establishment of the Late Marcus Daly)

AT AUCTION

Beginning at Noon, October 1, 1901, at

FASIG-TIPTON CO.'S PADDOCKS

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Among the thoroughbred Mares included in this sale are eleven of the late owner's selected matrons from his Bitter Root Stud, Hamilton, Montana, deemed good enough to send abroad to be bred to the most fashionable sires in England, and nine brood mares purchased in England, bought without regard to price, the whole forming the nucleus of a great breeding establishment which Mr. Daly intended to maintain at Apherfield Court, in Kent, England, as an auxiliary to his stud in America. The Stallions and Mares in this latter stud, together with some younger thoroughbreds, were sold by Fasig-Tipton Company in January of this year for $404,550. The Bitter Root Stud yearlings were sold in June last for $51,525. The dispersal of the Apherfield Court Stud severs the last link connecting one of the most liberal and broad minded men ever associated with the turf and breeding interests of both countries. A glance at the names in the catalogue will prove to the connoisseur in such matters that everything herein contained is gilt-edged. For instance, St. Simon is liberally represented, and his service fee in England is 500 guineas—say $2500. Melton is making a phenomenal showing, and his fee is 400 guineas.

Don't Feed Chicks Too Early.

Those who have had the most experience, and who have observed that it requires about forty hours for the chick to absorb the yolk of the egg just before emerging from the shell, will know that it requires at least that long for the chick to clear itself of the faeces caused by its indigestion. For the first forty-eight hours the chicks will do very well if given a warm place in which to exercise, with little or no food, and they should have access to water and some chaff to scratch in. The more experience we have with the incubator chicks the more we are convinced that we feed too much and too soon after they are hatched. We are convinced that a chick that would starve to death at forty-eight hours after being hatched would not do much good had it lived. The vigorous chick will go longer than that without food.

We usually take our chicks from the incubator in about twenty-four hours after the hatching of the first chick, place them in a clean brooder, already heated up to about ninety degrees. They are very tender at that age and susceptible to cold. Having been accustomed to a high temperature they must not be exposed to too sudden reductions in temperature. When they are forty-eight hours old we usually feed them some oat meal to note how soon the little fellows learn to scratch. When we feel that we are feed-about enough we cut it down a little, for fear of feeding too much. As they grow older we change the diet, giving some bone, onions, meat and egg crumbs, stale bread, etc., but we never give any soft or sour food.—Iowa Homestead.

Representative Tawney, of Minnesota, a member of the Ways and Means Committee, proposes to renew with vigor the fight against oleomargarine on the assembling of Congress in December. He believes a check has already been made in the growth of that industry by State legislation and by the more vigorous enforcement of the federal law, but in the former conclusion he will have to count some states out. The trouble in letting the States settle this question comes in the fact that some would refuse to do anything. In Texas, for example, the cottonseed oil industry is so strong that the influence of the farmer vote which is so potent in the North would be lost.

Nearly all the creameries in this State are buying milk on the basis of the per cent. of butter fat and the producers of milk are therefore paid according to its value. The policy of recognizing the distinction between good and inferior milk has become almost universal. In some creameries the price is governed not only by the percentage of butter fat, but by its condition as to wholesomeness, freedom from taint and other qualities as well. There is then every encouragement to the milk producer to select, breed and feed for better milk, at the same time keeping the economy of production prominently in mind.

ASTHMA CURE FREE!

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent Cure in All Cases.

Sent Absolutely Free on Receipt of Postal.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

We want to send to every sufferer a trial treatment of Asthmalene, similar to the one that cured Mr. Wells. We'll send it by mail POSTPAID, ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE, to any sufferer who will write for it, even on a postal. Never mind, though you are despairing, however bad your case, Asthmalene will relieve and cure. The worse your case, the more glad we are to send it. Do not delay. Write at once, addressing DR. ENTRANCE and PAYMENTS—$3 to nominate mare on October 1, 1901, when name, color, description of mare and stallion bred to must be given. $5 January 2, 1902. $5 July 1, 1902. $10 on yearlings January 2, 1903. $10 on two year olds January 2, 1904. $10 on three year olds January 2, 1905.

STARTING PAYMENTS—$25 to start in the two year old pace. $35 to start in the two year old trot. $35 to start in the three year old pace. $50 to start in the three year old trot. All starting payments to be made in ten days before the first day of the meeting at which the race is to take place.

Nominators must designate when making payments to start whether the horse entered is a trotter or pacer.

Colts that start at two years old are not barred from starting again in the Three Year Old Divisions.

CONDITIONS.

The races for two year olds will be mile heats (2 in 3) and for three year olds mile heats (3 in 5). Distance for two year olds, 150 yards; for three year olds, 100 yards.

If a mare proves barren, or slips, or has a dead foal or twins, or if either the mare or foal dies before January 2, 1903, her nominator may transfer his nomination or substitute another mare and foal regardless of ownership; but there will be no return of a payment, nor will any entry be liable for more than amount paid in or contracted for. In entries the name, color and pedigree of mare must be given, also the name of the horse to which she was bred in 1901.

Entries must be accompanied by the entrance fee.

Should the amount of entrance money received be in excess of the amount of the stakes, the excess will be added, less the cost of advertising, to the stakes for the three year old divisions in proportion to the amount offered for each division.

Nominators liable only for amounts paid in. Failure to make any payment forfeits all previous payments. Hoppies will not be barred to pacing races.

Right reserved to decline or reopen these stakes in case the number of entries received is not satisfactory to the Board of Directors.

Money divided in each division of the stake 50, 25, 15 and 10 per cent.

There will be no more moneys in any division than there are starters.

ENTRIES OPEN TO THE WORLD; MEMBERSHIP IN THE ASSOCIATION NOT REQUIRED TO ENTER, but no horse owned in the State of California will be allowed to start until the owner has become a member. Horses owned outside of the State of California are eligible to start regardless of membership.

GOLDEN GATE RACE MEETING.

A Seven Heat Race Opened the Program at Oakland This Week

Trotting thirty feet from the pole on a heavy, cuppy track, the four starters in the 2:14 trot at Oakland last Monday put up a race that will be talked about for a long time by those who witnessed it. No better exhibition of gameness and endurance than that displayed by the roan gelding Dan W. and the bay stallion Boydello was ever seen on a race track, and the fact that the time was slow does not detract a particle from the performance when all the circumstances connected with the race are known.

In the first place the track was plowed deep for the runners twenty feet from the pole, and to get footing for the trotters and smooth running for their bikes, the drivers were compelled to keep the inside sulky wheels outside this deep going, which placed the horses at least thirty feet from the pole during the entire mile. But even this portion of the track was not fitted for anything like fast time, as it was cuppy and heavy and the horses tired very perceptibly after each heat and found it impossible to trot within seven or eight seconds as fast as they had worked on other tracks. During the race there was a great deal of scoring, and while trying to get the word for the fourth heat the drivers made a false start, and trotted seven-eighths of a mile at speed before they could be stopped, the strong wind which prevailed preventing the drivers from hearing the recall bell. It took the whole afternoon to decide the race, and the wonder is that the horses lived through it. But two of the four completed the race, Dan W., a roan gelding owned by G. P. McNeil of Fresno, and Boydello, the property of J. W. Pemberton of Phoenix, Arizona. These horses represent two great families, Dan W. being a grandson of Director 2:17 and Boydello a grandson of Electioneer. In the seventh heat they were but noses apart, so while the first money went to Dan W., honors are about easy between the two. Osito, the handsome little son of McKinney, make a great bid for the race, and won two heats, but had a severe attack of the thumps after the fourth and was distanced in the sixth. Alta Vela, the thirteen year old son of Electioneer, trotted a game race, but had to go to the stable for not winning a heat in five.

The first heat was a contest between Osito and Alta Vela, the former reaching the wire a head in front of the Palo Alto bred horse, and was given the heat, although in the minds of many Alta Vela was entitled to the heat as he trotted every step of the mile, while Osito indulged in two long continued running breaks. Dan W., well played by his owner, was last owing to two breaks, one at each turn. He seemed to have more speed than the others, but being a big, long striding and high acting horse, the turns bothered him.

The second heat found Boydello and Alta Vela making a fight at the finish and Boydello won. Osito broke badly and finished last, while Dan W. also indulged in breaks which lost him much ground.

In the third heat Osito again reached the wire first and was thought to have the race "well in hand," but when scoring for the fourth heat some idiot in the crowd yelled go, and the drivers thinking it was a start and being unable to hear the bell raced until the seven-eighths pole was reached. After two minutes for sponging out they were sent away again and Dan W. being the freshest horse won out as he pleased, Alta Vela being second, Osito third and Boydello last.

Osito was greatly distressed and suffering from the "tbumps," but seemed to recuperate when the twenty minutes was up and after finishing fourth in the fifth heat his owner felt confident he could win the sixth, but he showed that he was a sick horse and was distanced in that heat.

Alta Vela having been sent to the stable for not winning a heat in five, but two horses came out for the seventh heat and at the finish none but those right over the wire could tell which had won. The race was the most severe seen in California for years. In reading the summaries the reader should subtract at least seven seconds from time of each heat to get a fair idea of the race. The track was so heavy that fast time was entirely out of the question and every horse was almost completely exhausted.

Dan W., the winner, is by Hero, a son of Director 2:17. Hero's dam was by Santa Claus 2:17 and his second dam by Bull Pup, sire of the dam of Hulda 2:08. The dam of Dan W. is by Mambrino Prince 2:22. Dan W. is a light strawberry roan, with a head that is a clean bay in color clear to the throat. It is one of the most intelligent heads ever seen on a horse and as he has considerable knee action and plenty of style he makes a grand appearance when trotting. He was driven in the race by Mr. J. R. Albertson, who handled him in a masterful manner and won after many thought the race was lost. Ed Lafferty deserves great credit for his management of Boydello in the race. This stallion is a bad actor, and refused to score or even turn for the word, getting off last nearly every time. Mr. Lafferty had him in superb condition or he never would have lasted through the eight miles trotted. Boydello is game, however, and came out of the race in fine shape.

On Tuesday the 2:12 pace resulted in a four heat race in which that fast but heretofore unlucky gelding Doc Wilkes won after just beating the flag in the first heat owing to two very disastrous breaks. John A. won the first heat and second money, and as this son of Wayland W. is improving he may be expected to show something like his old time form at Los Angeles.

There was quite a sensational episode in the 2:30 trot on Wednesday. But four horses lined up for the word—McKenna, Joe Selby, Lucy G. and Lady Grand. McKenna, on his Sacramento form, was made favorite, but a hot tip on Joe Selby caused the price to go to 3 to 2, at which he was played to a small extent. He was driven in a most excellent manner by J. M. Nelson, and went around his field with a long, sweeping stride that was faster than it looked. McKenna made a bad break rounding the first turn, and dropped far in the rear. Ward tried to make up the lost ground with him, but Selby was sailing out in front and McKenna failed to get nearer than five or six lengths, Selby jogging in a winner in 2:28½.

When scoring for the next heat Joe Selby acted badly, refusing to turn and come down, and finally reared and fell backward, catching Nelson's legs under his body. The horse struggled to his feet and was quiet, but Nelson was very badly bruised and could not walk. A groom mounted the sulky behind Selby and drove him down the stretch, but again he reared and fell, though the groom escaped serious injury. The veteran, William Donathan, then got up behind the horse after lowering his check rein and he acted better, but could not win, the race going to McKenna in straight beats thereafter.

The running races during the three days have been very good, a full detail of the same being given below. There was no racing Thursday, the day of President McKinley's funeral.

Close of the State Fair.

The startling and sad news of the death of President McKinley which was telegraphed Saturday morning caused the Directors of the State Agricultural Society to declare the fair closed and all the races for Saturday off. This action met the universal approval of all and the fair of 1901 was closed in gloom and sorrow for the Chief Magistrate of the Nation, whose recent visit to our shores had been a time of general rejoicing. The Directors met and passed appropriate resolutions of respect and sympathy and the flags that had been flying all over Sacramento were dropped to half mast.

The racing of the last two days of the meeting were not sensational, the 2:13 class pace on Thursday furnishing the only feature that was out of the ordinary. This race was won in straight heats by the sensational horse Sir Albert S. by Diablo, who won as he pleased in 2:10½, 2:12½ and 2:09½. This was his fifth straight heat race and his showing has been a remarkable one. Much interest was manifested in the performance. El Diablo finished second to him in every heat.

The special purse of $400 for pacers brought out five starters. Our Boy's Sister won the first heat in 2:15 but broke her hoppers and was distanced in the second which was won by Richard B. in 2:17 who had it easy thereafter in slower time, having Penrose as his only competitor. Richard B. is a son of Woolsey, brother to Sunol 2:08½ and is his eighth representative in the standard list. Six running races completed the program for Thursday.

On Friday two specials, a trot and a pace, were carded for the harness brigade, and both were won by Mr. I. Mulholland's horses, Osito by McKinney taking the trot and Edna R. by Sidney the pace. Neither race was what might be considered a warm contest, although four heats were required in each.

There were enough good harness events at the State Fair this year to make a week's program, but the necessity of drawing the program out to occupy fourteen days of racing made it look rather thin. We have never seen satisfactory trotting racing on a track cut up deep for the runners and until the Society has two tracks the harness horses will never be able to make a first class showing at the State Fair.

The summaries of the last two days of racing at Sacramento are given below and are sufficient description of the events, which, outside the race won by Sir Albert S., were not remarkable.

A Description of Stamboul.

The following correct and at the same time beautiful description of Stamboul, was written by the late Leslie McLeod while on a visit to California:

"I feel considerable temerity in recording my honest impressions of Stamboul as an individual lest I be accused of insincerity, and of dealing in fulsome flattery—a commodity which I avoid. But if it is a writer's privilege to criticise, it is none the less to praise where, in his estimation, great praise is due. I am not going to say that I never saw a horse individually as great as Stamboul, but I do say I never saw one that in form was his superior, and I would be at a loss to name his equal. When he came out into the light, a long look ended in the mental exclamation: "Now, here is equine majesty and greatness if ever I saw it." If he couldn't trot a mile in five minutes, and if his blood was as plebeian as Blue Bull's, Stamboul is a horse that will rivet the gaze and challenge the admiration—one whose lineaments, distinct and clear, the camera of memory preserves after he has gone from view.

"Stamboul is a deep, rich and glossy bay in color, with white rear ankles, and otherwise black points. He is just 15.3 hands high—as near the right size as I would ask—and weighs, in fair condition, something over 1100 pounds. His head is in good proportion to his body, and is itself handsome and proportionate, with just a slight inclination to a Roman profile. Between the eyes it is wide; and, above, brainy. The neck is very beautiful and well carried, and the shoulders and chest deep, stout and wide. The girth is immense, the depth through the heart region unusual, and the withers rather high and nicely finished. The barrel very cylindrical and springily ribbed, carries its depth well back, so that Stamboul is far from being a "light-waisted" horse, and I am told in his campaigns he never loses his rotundity or "tucks up" much. The back is unexceptionable, short and strongly coupled, and the quarters very smooth, full and muscular. One of the strongest points about Stamboul are his legs, which are simply grand. Cleaner, more perfectly shaped legs and joints one need never see. The cannons are extraordinarily flat and wide, cords clear and conspicuous, and his feet are good. . . . No better idea can be given of the quality of his traveling gear than is revealed in the fact that he does not show a puff for all his campaigning, and is apparently absolutely sound. He carries only five-ounce shoes forward and three-ounce behind, without weights. Stamboul is a more compactly built horse than most of the Sultans that I have seen, and in not any sense a leggy horse. With excellent finish and symmetry, with faultless proportion and consistency of form, he combines great substance and high quality."

C. X. Larrabee, of Fairhaven, Washington, has lost by death the chestnut mare, Ruby Allen, foaled in 1875, by Ethan Allen 2:25½. She was likely the last living daughter of Ethan Allen and was a great loss to Mr. Larrabee's Brook-Nook ranch, as it was desired to get a stallion out of her by one of the Morgan sires in use there. Ruby Allen was the dam of Blarney 2:27½; Opal 2:23, Brooch, dam of Burser 2:07½, Broomal 2:15, Allis 2:27½, Brindisi 2:30, Amethyst, dam of Clematis 2:20½ and Catseye, dam of Cesarea 2:27½.

The Coming Oregon State Fair.

FAIR GROUNDS, Oregon, Sept., 1901.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The Oregon State Fair opens here at Salem next Monday and I expect to see the best race meeting ever held here, and believe it will be ahead of the California State Fair. Nearly all the purses offered are of good size with large entry lists, and will be raced from start to finish. The managers will surely stop any crooked work that may be attempted. The President, Mr. Wehrung, has already instructed the judges that are to act to fine all drivers or riders for scoring behind as well as for scoring in front of the pole horse, so you see an extra effort is to be made to stop all tedious waiting and delays in getting horses started. This will please the public and everything looks most favorable now for a very successful meeting unless it rains, which is of course very easy for it to do at this time up here in Oregon.

I think all the crackerjacks that are racing up in Washington will be down here by Sunday including the wonderful little black pacer Freddie C., the very speedy Myrtha Whips 2:10½, the consistent game trotter Ned Thorne 2:11½, and the gray mare Arketa 2:23½ by McKinney 2:11½, dam by Larco. This mare was raised by Dr. E. Smith of Los Angeles, and if all reports of her speed are true she must be a hot member and will be another 2:15 performer for her sire before the races are over.

On Monday, September 23d, the bell will tap for the first race which will be a very interesting one, as the two year old trotters are to start the ball rolling for a purse of $500. They are a good looking lot of colts as can be found in any state. Four of them are here now and all have been worked out miles better than 2:38. The man who can guess the winner at the present time is a dandy although the Chehalis filly from Walla Walla looks like a first money proposition to me. On the same day the 2:25 pace for a purse of $500 will be raced. There are fourteen entries and unless all signs fall in dry weather Freddie C. will call on Mr. Wisdom for first money.

The second day will call out the two year old pacers for a $500 purse with 13 entries and very likely not less than six starters. I saw two of them work out a mile in 2:28½ this week. Some of the northern youngsters have been winning in 2:32 over half-mile tracks, so it looks as if it would be a great betting race and I expect to see a heat in 2:25, with another Chehalis filly from Walla Walla in front.

The 2:30 trot, $700, with 14 entries, comes off the same day and I think the winner will have a record close to 2:20 when it is over.

The free for all with 6 entries is also to be trotted this day. Ned Thorne is tipped now for the winner, with Lady Alfred 2:20½ for second money.

Wednesday will be Salem day. All the business houses will close and there is bound to be a big attendance. Two races are on the card. The first one will be for a purse of $500 and is for three and four year old pacers. It has 12 entries. Mr. J. W. Tilden's three year old filly Nellie Covert is now the hottest kind of a favorite.

The 2:15 class pacers will start for a $1000 purse the same day. There are 19 entries and what a guessing race it will be. It will be a good betting race with probably a field horse the winner.

Thursday, the fourth day, will have a good program with two races. One is the Oregon Webfoot Stake for three and four year old trotters. It looks now as though the Zombro colt, T. D. C., would win and another Zombro come second. T. D. C. is quite lame at present from hitting his hind ankle, but I expect him to round in time to win just the same.

The Capital City Stake of $1000 for 2:20 trotters, with 21 entries, will be on this program the same day. There are three very evenly matched horses in the race, namely: Mount Hood, Package and Arketa. This race ought to bring people from far and near to see it, as it will be a corker, with the winner very hard to pick.

Friday, the fifth day, will bring out the 2:20 pacers in a $500 purse. There are 12 entries with the fast little Freddie C. and the much touted Altaora, full sister to the great Chehalis 2:04½, in it, and all the other green pacers of the North.

The 2:24 class trot for a purse of $500 will be called the same day. It has 11 entries. This should be a good betting race. Mount Hood is tipped up the winner. I think May Tilden and Mark Hanna will be very close when the wire is reached.

Saturday, the last day, will probably be the best day for speed, as the 2:11 pace for a purse of $800, with 10 entries, will make the fast ones step. Freddie C. and the fast California mare Myrtha Whips are both likely starters and we all expect the little son of Direct will show us just how fast he can step before he gets through with her, as they say here Hellman's mare can beat her record.

There are 9 entries in the 2:15 trot, which closes the week's program, with such horses as Mount Hood Arketa and Lady Alfred among them. We will see whether Frank Frazer, the driver of Mount Hood, can find time to roll cigarettes coming down the homestretch as he is said to have sometimes done when he drove the wonderful Chehalis. Oh, no, Frank, you are not driving such a horse as "Jap" now. That kind a man gets but once in a life time.

Mr. M. C. Gray of Beatrice, Neb., has just arrived here with six head of Percheron stallions which he expects to show at our fair. He has some idea of locating in Oregon.

One of the old Oregon trainers had a dream a few nights since, in which he dreamed he had won the 2:25 pace and was climbing up into the judges' stand to get the money. He woke up and found himself trying to climb up on one of the rafters above him. Now that Freddie C. has come up to start in this race he thinks it was a pipe dream he had, and that the red flannel shirt that hung on the rafter is the red banner that may flash in front of him. He says it is always well to be prepared for the worst as well as the best.

Spreckels Yearlings Sold Well.

"Better prices than last year" is the report that comes from the sale of the yearlings from Mr. A. B. Spreckels Napa Stock Farm, which was held at Sheepshead Bay on Tuesday, September 10th, by the Fasig-Tipton Company. The sale last year was the first consignment that this recently established breeding farm had sent to the Eastern market, and while nearly all the yearlings were by untired sires and out of mares that were new in the market the average of $309 received was considered satisfactory. This year one of the fillies reached New York in poor condition and sold for but $50 which reduced the average considerably, but in spite of this fact it was higher than last year's sale by nearly $80 per head, the total for the twenty-four head sold being $9225, or an average of $385 each. The highest prices of the sale were paid for a chestnut colt by Ravelston, out of Marcel by Luke Blackburn and a chestnut colt by St. Carlo, out of Piquante by Flambeau, each bringing the good price for a yearling of $1100. That they were a grand lot of yearlings all the New York papers agree, and Mr. Spreckels and his efficient superintendent, Geo. W. Berry, are to be congratulated upon the success of the sale, the details of which are here given:

Brown colt by The Judge-Saccharisa by Apache; H. J. Morris.	$700
Chestnut filly by Creighton-Maria F. by Leicester; W. M. Sheptell.	100
Chestnut colt by Puryear D-Bridal Veil by Cheviot; E. Y. Kittridge.	150

Bay filly by Creighton-Lucille II. by St. Saviour; W. L. Powers.	400
Chestnut colt by Creighton-Carnation, by Flambeau; W. L. Powers.	350
Bay filly by Trappean-Abbie F. by Judge McKinstry; G. D. Wilson.	100
Bay colt by Puryear D-Bellguard by Elias Lawrence; Leo Swatts.	300
Bay colt by The Judge-Floriana by Cheviot; B. D. Nolan.	175
Total for twenty-four head, $9225; average, $385.

During the State Fair at Sacramento last week, Mr. T. W. Barstow of San Jose sold his handsome gelding Claudius 2:13½ by Nutwood Wilkes to Mr. J. S. Bransford of Salt Lake City, Utah. Mr. Bransford will not race the horse but use him as a roadster, although he may start him in matinee and club races. Claudius is an ideal roadster, as he is afraid of nothing whatever and can be driven in safety by a child. He is high-headed, large and handsome, a square trotter that has his speed always with him, and is game as a pebble. Few horses show a better record in the Year Books, as he was a consistent winner, being pitted against the best trotters in the State and being outside the money but very seldom. Mr. Bransford has secured a prize in Claudius. The price was not made public but was a good one and satisfactory to all concerned.

Jackson's Napa Soda is sold in every city, town and hamlet in the State.

THE STATE FAIR, and the manner of its management, has been a subject of much discussion recently by the press throughout the State, and by many of our leading business men, farmers and other citizens. The Sacramento Record-Union, published at the capital where this annual exposition is held, during the month previous to the opening of the fair this year, received and printed correspondence from leading men in all parts of the State, in which the fair and its future were ably discussed and many suggestions made for its improvement. There seemed to be an almost universal opinion that "too much horse racing" had injured the State Fair and caused its deterioration, and all sorts of remedies were proposed to change and improve the order of things. That the California State Fair needs rejuvenation there is no doubt. The exhibits that were once made and the crowds that formerly attended without any special effort to get them, must now be importuned and begged for. The present Board of Directors is hard working, honest and efficient, and the Secretary and other officials use every endeavor to make the fair a success, but it seems to be impossible to make the receipts equal the expenditures, even though the State makes an annual appropriation of $15,000 to aid. That something is wrong all agree, but what is it? What is the principal cause of the lack of interest in our State Fair among the farmers, merchants, mechanics, artisans, live stock breeders and others? We answer, Bookmaking, which has made gambling one of the principal features of the annual exposition. It was never the intention of the State Agricultural Society or any of its Board of Directors that this should be so, and they never would have permitted such conditions to arise had they understood or realized the facts. They were led into the trap innocently and were acting for what they doubtless considered the good of the Society when they permitted the evil to fasten itself upon the State Fair, and the only remedy now is the knife. The sore must be cut out, the wound cauterized and the disease guarded against in the future. When the sport of continuous winter racing was inaugurated in San Francisco ten years ago, and jumped into popularity, Californians got their first actual and intimate acquaintance with the English system of betting, and there is no doubt but the gambling fraternity took kindly to it. Under the old American system of auction pools only those with a well lined purse could afford to back the horses, but the new way provided for the dollar bettor and he has grown more numerous ever since. The crowds at the race tracks have increased and the profits of the racing associations are enormous. It was these large crowds and consequent large profits that led the State Agricultural Society and the district associations to believe that in the new order of things was in a way for them to make proportionate profits. The syndicate bookmakers made bids for the exclusive betting privilege, the temptation was irresistible, and the system fastened itself upon the annual race meetings of California. Any person who will give the matter his attention and study will see that while bookmaking is specially adapted to large running meetings in the centers of population, it is totally unfitted for harness racing and especially for those held in connection with the country fairs. It brings the gambling feature into too great prominence, makes crooked racing because odds are offered on the heats instead of the race, and causes associations to look to the betting privilege as their principal source of revenue, which is in itself a great evil. It has been tried and found wanting and there is no excuse for its further use by the State Agricultural Society. If this association will aim to hold a fair next year, with one week of harness and running races without bookmaking, cater to the breeders, farmers and mechanics of the State and give no privileges to the professional gamblers, we incline to the opinion that success will crown the Board's efforts and that there will be a surplus instead of a deficit at the close of the meeting.

A WEEK OF SORROW to the American people has been the one just closing. A beloved President, shot down by the hand of a vile assassin, has given his life (an eminently pure and Christian one) to his country, but in the language of a former President who met the same fate, "God reigns and the government at Washington still lives." Few Presidents of this republic ever occupied as warm a place in the hearts of the people as did William McKinley and in his life and tragic death are examples of love, faith, honor and fortitude that every citizen should strive to emulate that our beloved country may fulfill its destiny and all the glorious purposes for which it was founded. The last address to the American people made by President McKinley was at Buffalo and some of his ideas and thoughts on it and expositions in general were expressed as follows:

"Expositions are the timekeepers of progress. They record the world's advancement. They stimulate the energy, enterprise and intellect of the people and quicken human genius. They go into the home. They broaden and brighten the daily life of the people. They open mighty storehouses of information to the student. Every exposition, great or small, has helped to some onward step. Comparison of ideas is always educational and as such instructs the brain and hand of man. Friendly rivalry follows, which is the spur to industrial improvement, the inspiration to useful invention and to high endeavor in all departments of human activity. It exacts a study of the wants, comforts and even the whims of the people and recognizes the efficacy of high quality and new prices to win their favor. The quest of their trade is an incentive to men of business to devise, invent, improve and economize in the cost of production. Business life, whether among ourselves or with other people, is ever a sharp struggle for success. It will be none the less so in the future. Without competition we would be clinging to the clumsy and antiquated processes of farming and manufacture and the methods of business of long ago, and the 20th century would be no further advanced than the 18th century."

There is much in these words for the readers of this journal and especially those who have the management and direction of our annual State and district expositions to think about. "Every exposition, great or small, has helped to some onward step" is our late President's expressed belief. California is one of the few States that provides a fund for these expositions, and it is a proper time, during the days of mourning over our loss, for the citizens of our State to resolve that every fair, great or small, held in California in future will come as near as possible to the ideal which we can imagine William McKinley would have created for it. Let the California fairs of the future "exact a study of the wants, comforts and even whims of the people," and recognize "the efficacy of high quality and new prices to win their favor." Let there be a resolve and an endeavor to make them clean and wholesome in every department of education or amusement, to make them a place of congregation for the families of the farmers, artisans and business men, where "the daily life of the people may be broadened and brightened." The people in every walk of life in America have been during the past week devising ways to honor our martyred President's memory. If that portion of the people which the readers of this paper represent will unite and resolve to strive for the betterment and improvement in every way of our State and district expositions, to build up all that is clean and beneficial and abrogate everything that is baneful and pernicious in them, they will not only accomplish a great good, but will do that which will honor his memory by following his example and precepts.

THIS MORNING at ten o'clock, Louis Schaffer, the Oakland live stock auctioneer, will sell at auction at the California Jockey Club's track all the horses, harness and vehicles belonging to Mr. H. P. Livermore, Rock Ridge Stock Farm. There are a number of well bred ones in the consignment, two of them being daughters of McKinney 2:11, out of a mare by Winwood.

EROSMONT, the young stallion advertised for sale in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, will be at the Stockton Fair in October this year and can be seen at the track. He is a grand individual, bred in the most fashionable lines and will not only be fast if trained but should make a great sire. His colts are splendid individuals.

AN AUCTION SALE of thirty head of horses, and a number of mules, cows, stock cattle and all the farming implements on the ranch of John Mohr, three miles from Livermore, will take place Saturday, September 28th. Louis Schaffer of Oakland will be the auctioneer. An advertisement giving full particulars of this sale appears in this issue of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. The sale offers a splendid opportunity to obtain good work horses, farm wagons or anything else used on a farm at low prices.

Items From Los Angeles.

SEPTEMBER 19, 1901.

Mr. W. G. Layng's phenomenal pacing gelding Sir Albert S 2:08½ arrived on Tuesday in charge of Mr. John Groom, and Sir Albert S. looks about right, and on the fast track at Los Angeles he should pace a mile in 2:04.

In the same car came Anzella, trotter, 2:10; this is the sensational mare from the State of Washington. She is by Antrim. She is looking and acting well.

Henry Delaney arrived yesterday with Geo. W. Kinney 2:14, trotting, and Almonada 2:18½, a son of Eros, dam Maggie E. by Nutwood 2:18. In same stable is the chestnut mare Nellie I. This mare has been a mile in 2:12. She starts at Los Angeles and is a good mare.

Nora McKinney by McKinney, dam by Dexter Prince, is in "Farmer" Bunch's stable and is due to start at this track. Her mark of 2:16 is no record of her speed.

"Farmer" Bunch arrived in a special car with Consul General Ho Yow's stable, which consists of the beautiful trotter Solo, record 2:14; this mare is out of a dam by Stamboul, and her sire is McKinney 2:11. She comes by her speed honestly and her beauty is easily accounted for since McKinney is a beautiful horse, and the trotter never lived that had as much beauty and finish as Stamboul. Solo starts in the 2:23 2:19 and 2:17 classes and she has a mortgage on them all. Her stable companion is the green mare China-maid by McKinney, dam by the great Onward. This mare is a pacer and a fast one, and when "Farmer" Bunch starts her up, some one's pacer will have to step a bit; she, like Solo, is beautiful. Mr. Bunch has the chestnut gelding Thomas R. by Iran Alto 2:12. This young horse has won this year and got a record of 2:15 and he will trot to a record of 2:10 before he goes back to San Jose. He is about right as a trotter and he comes by his speed honestly; his sire Iran Alto was a race horse and his dam Yedra, by Nutwood 2:18½, is a great broodmare, as a look at the year book will tell. Mr. Bunch has Our Boy's Sister, a pacer that will get a mark of 2:11 before winter. Mr. Bunch has his horses in fine fix, and his bringing Solo to the post and winning with her was a great pleasure to Ho Yow, her owner. Mr. Bunch is doing a great good to the breeders of light harness horses in securing first class horses for Ho Yow, for the reason that this gentleman can and will induce other men to export our harness horses to China and in time make a new market for California trotters, and it is to be hoped that Yo How will be used right by every person in the light harness horse business with whom he comes in contact. He is a gentleman of means and is a very intelligent horse student, and a good acquisition to the business.

Every stall at this track is taken, and Secretary Ted is the busiest man imaginable. The tracks and grounds are in fine fix; plenty of good water, good clean stalls, and Los Angeles will surely have a successful meeting.

C. A. HARRISON.

A Successful Plan.

Whatever may be said of the plan that was so successfully tried at Brighton Beach of ruling out all horses not winning a heat in three, there is no question that in the minds of unbiased men it was an unqualified success. The very first virtue that is seen is the tendency to prevent the laying up of heats, for while it does not do away entirely with this practice it prevents in many instances the attempt, and in races of this kind the spectacle of some winning horse figuring in the summary as having been last in the first two or three heats is missing. The plan also does away to a very great extent with long drawn-out races that seem to the spectator to be interminable and generally wind up with the best horse in the race defeated by a combination of circumstances which his one capacity was not able to overcome. A race is always of more interest after the field has been weeded out, as it is more evenly balanced, and when the non-heat winners are sent to the stable the racing becomes of more interest through that very fact. Doubtless many nominators, as well as those whose chief interest in trotting races lies in their connection with the betting, are opposed to this plan and from their standpoint it is objectionable, for the former in many instances are anxious for as many chances to win a heat as possible, and those connected with the pooling reap a rich harvest in commissions when the race is a long one.

Any horse that cannot reach the wire first in three attempts is not entitled to a part of the prize, for unless such a horse is interfered with his inability to win a heat in three is caused by his inferiority, which might mean either a lack of speed, or bad behavior on his part.

While the race is not always to the swift nor the battle to the strong, the fundamental principle of racing is to furnish competition or contests that shall settle the question of supremacy. The race is intended to be a contest and to be won by the best horse, the best meaning the fastest, gamest and most reliable, these three being the chief requisites in a race horse. Yet under the usual plan as now practiced the race is not infrequently won by another than the best horse, or practices that are fraudulent are frequently indulged in, and any plan that can, even to the smallest extent, lessen the chances of fraud is a step in advance.

Nothing but the fear of displeasing the great American trotting horse driver has kept the managers of many of the leading associations from inaugurating progressive measures, and it is this fear that will prevent the adoption of the plan of ruling out all non-winners after the third heat, as well as the enforcement of the rule against laying up heats.

There have been instances this season where the judges were afraid to punish certain drivers for the most flagrant violation of this rule. In two instances at least, the prestige of the drivers prevented the judges from punishing them for deliberately laying up. We refer to the heats in which Onward Silver and an Patch merely saved their distance, and McHenry and Geers escaped without even a reprimand. As long as the judges have not the backbone to punish fraud wherever found and by whom committed the best interests of racing will suffer. Fear of criticism and the desire to be friendly with all are what prevents the judges' stand from doing its duty.—Kentucky Stock Farm.

Dolly Dillon 2:07 Not Sold.

A report was telegraphed last week from Hartford and published in all the Eastern turf papers that Mr. Frank Rosell, of Boston, had purchased Dolly Dillon 2:07 from Millard Sanders, representing the Santa Rosa Stock Farm, for $13,000, and that the mare had been turned over to Scott McCoy, who would train and drive her in the future.

Mr. Henry Pierce, one of the proprietors of the Santa Rosa farm, denies the report and says that the farm still owns the mare. When at the Hartford meeting Mr. Sanders telegraphed Pierce Bros. that he had an offer of $12,000 for Dolly and asked for instructions as to whether he should sell her. The reply was sent that if the $12,000 was deposited in the Laidlaw Bank at New York on the following day it would be accepted. There was some hitch in regard to the check having been made out on a Boston bank and when Sanders telegraphed saying that another day's time was wanted, he received a reply to the effect that the sale was off, and to start her at Readville on Wednesday of this week. A telegram received from him Wednesday evening stated that Dolly Dillon had won the first heat of the race in 2:11 1/4, after which rain caused the race to be postponed. Mr. Pierce tells us that it will take much more than $13,000 to buy this mare, as he considers her as fast as any mare in America when right, and he believes she is worth about as much to the Santa Rosa Stock Farm as to anybody.

Whitney Extending His Breeding Enterprise.

We learn from the Lexington Herald that Hon. W. C. Whitney has secured options on eight different farms, embracing 2500 acres, situated in Fayette county, Kentucky. The land is located about six miles from the city of Lexington and is bordered by the Richmond, Winchester and Todd turnpikes. The land is said to be thoroughly watered, and splendidly adapted for the purpose of a great breeding estate. With the incomparable Hanover at the head of this magnificent establishment surrounded by a band of broodmares of as high class as the best experience has been able to select when fully completed, Mr. Whitney will possess one of the best and most successful thoroughbred nurseries in the world.

The free for all trot in which Lord Derby and Boralma met attracted more attention than the famous $10,000 Charter Oak Stake. It was the first race this year in which the public could see even a chance for Mr. Lawson's unbeaten gelding to meet defeat, and even after the wonderful exhibitions of speed shown by Lord Derby in his race with Cresceus at Readville, the majority of horsemen thought, that while the Hamlin gelding might beat him a heat, Boralma would win the race at Hartford, and the latter was a strong favorite before the start. With the advantage of the polo Boralma was beaten the first heat in 2:06 1/4, which goes to show that the public has overestimated the capacity of the Boralma gelding. In the second and third heats Lord Derby made breaks and Boralma won, but in the deciding heat Lord Derby kept his feet and clearly demonstrated that he is a faster trotter than Boralma, and when on his good behavior can beat him. Lord Derby is by Mambrino King, dam Claribel by Hamlin's Almont Jr. 2:26; second dam, Coraline by Almonarch 2:24 1/4, son of Almont. As a rule the Mambrino Kings are a high strung lot and many of them, like Nightingale 2:08, have been on the turf a long time before coming to their limit. Lord Derby has certainly got as great a flight of speed as any trotter living, and horsemen look upon him as a coming champion.

A telegram from Butte, Mont., conveys the intelligence that Senator W. A. Clark is about to purchase the famous Bitter Root Ranch, property of the estate of the late Marcus Daly. It is related that Mrs. Daly is personally very anxious to dispose of the property entire and that Senator Clark has sent his personal representative to examine the lands and appointments;

SULKY NOTES.

Concord next week.

Dolly Dillon is not sold.

Enter in the Breeders Futurity.

Los Angeles meeting opens next Saturday.

Eleata 2:08½ has won more than $18,000 to date.

The Oregon circuit opened this week at Everett.

The Oakley Park, Cincinnati meeting is being held this week.

Fresno will give a meeting next year and may open the circuit.

Los Angeles will give a great meeting, beginning next Saturday.

Who Is It 2:10½ is back in training and may start at Lexington and Memphis.

Every district fair next year should pay particular attention to its stock exhibit.

Zomhro 2:11 has been mated with over 60 mares this year and they are a high class lot.

Hollister's annual district fair will be held this year from October 23d to 26th inclusive.

Trotting and running should be divorced on the ground of incompatibility of temperament.

Chico, Red Bluff, Marysville, Colusa and Willows will all give fairs and race meetings next year.

Idolita (3) 2:12 is traveling with the Jones string over the Grand Circuit, but may not start this year.

The Allertons are making their usual great showing this season as money earners and low record takers.

Imp 2:19½ is the latest 2:20 performer for Diablo 2:09½. The son of Chas. Derby is getting a big list of fast ones.

McKenna, black stallion by McKinney, will trot into the 2:15 list on a good track. His dam is Etta Wilkes.

M. C. Gray, of Wenona, Ill., will exhibit a carload of imported Percheron stallions at the Oregon State Fair.

Silver Coin 2:16½ by Steinway out of Jennie Mac 2:09 by McKinney is the fastest three year old pacer of the year.

Prince Alert 2:02 seems to hold the "high card" in the fast pacing classes. He has won twice from Anacanda.

Vol. 15 of the American Trotting Register is out. It contains the names of all stallions registered from No. 30,400 to 34,299.

The Sacramento papers state that the State Agricultural Society will lose about $4500 on the State Fair which closed last week.

The Stockton Driving Club will try to get Cresceus to race against time at its meeting, if Ketcham reaches the Coast, but he may not come at all.

Lord Derby was timed the last half of the second heat at Hartford in 1:01½. That's fast enough to begin figuring on him as a rival of Cresceus.

There will be a sale of trotting bred and work horses at the Oakland track today at 10 o'clock. There are two well bred McKinney yearlings in the lot.

Eleata, Version, Lauretta, Ellalee, Anselita and Marquessa that are racing this year, were all taken East in 1899 by Palo Alto Farm and sold at Cleveland.

John Blue who is now at the Cleveland track with his string and may start at Lexington or Memphis, expects to be back in California for the winter.

Will the foal resulting from the mating of your mare this year get part of that $6000 in the Breeders Futurity? Not unless the mare is entered in the stake.

Don't breed any animal on your farm to an animal that is not a good individual and has not a good pedigree. The time when there was profit in scrubs is past.

With Goshen Jim 2:10½ Mr. Devereux forced Senator Horace White to step two beats with Sally Hook 2:09½ in 2:10½ and 2:09 in the amateur free for all pacing event at Syracuse.

While the California racing season has been nothing to brag of this year the horse owners are not discouraged but are making plans to train more horses than ever in the spring.

They are going to use the Stamboul horse Ellert 2:11 as a pacemaker for the pacer Little Boy 2:03½ to wagon. Ellert can run a mile in two minutes handily when booked to a sulky.

The California owners and trainers are now saying: We will train a large number of harness horses next year and race on the home circuit provided there is no book betting permitted.

One of the amusing features of the California racing season has been the hot air controversy between Sacramento and San Joseans over a proposed removal of the State Fair. It is all talk.

The mare Lady Granard by McKinney out of an Anselvo mare with proper training would make a very fast trotter. She looked to be just out of pasture when she started at Oakland Wednesday.

But few of the get of Nutwood Wilkes have started this year. Next year the get of this great young stallion will be prominent however as there are a large number of them entered in the colt stakes.

All of Dick Benson's string of trotters and pacers are sick with distemper and have been shipped back to Kansas City from Cleveland. The Roman 2:19 did not escape the disease, and he had quite a severe attack.

It is a mistake to suppose that a person must become a member of the P. C. T. H. B. A. before he can make an entry in the Pacific Breeders Futurity. Any one can make an entry by paying the $3 entrance fee.

The new track at Memphis is made of two different kinds of soil. The inside half is clay, while the outside is a sandy loam which is hardly affected by water. An hour after a heavy rainfall it is in condition to race over.

The Oakland track is at least eight second slow this week. The harness horses are compelled to trot nearly a sixteenth over a mile and is very bad footing. Fast time is out of the question and the horses get very tired.

A New York turf writer says he can recall no trotter bred in California so fast by the records as Dolly Dillon 2:07. By putting on his thinking cap once more the names of Azote 2:04½ and Directum 2:05½ might occur to him.

The track at Oakland this week is at least eight seconds slow for trotters and pacers. The horses go nearly a mile and a sixteenth in very bad footing. Fast time is impossible, but some excellent contests have resulted.

Pleasanton people are still working on the idea of holding a two days' meeting at that town. About $1000 has already been pledged by the citizens, but nothing has been done in the way of organization or selecting dates.

The car containing Senator L. and Rowellan was lifted off the trucks in a collision at East Hartford last Friday. Both trotters were stood on their heads, but fortunately for Trainer Golden neither sustained any damage save a general shaking up.

Darlington, the celebrated farm belonging to Mr. E. A. Darling, and situated three miles from Ramsey on the Erie road, is reported in the Eastern press as being sold to a California man who will revive its glory as a breeding farm. Wonder who he is.

It is said that McHenry is going to ask the courts to decide upon the legality of fining a driver who lays up heats. He holds that the chief end of racing is winning the race, and that it is often necessary to lay up a heat in order to get first money, and suicidal to drive one's horse out at times.

Hon. Ben F. Rusb of Suisun, who owns Demonio, a full brother to Diablo, has bred a number of good mares to him during the past two or three years and the horse has been well patronized by Solano county breeders. The foals resulting are as grand looking a lot as can be seen anywhere.

Concord will hold the biggest race meeting ever seen in Contra Costa county this year. The meeting opens next Wednesday and lasts four days. Entries closed yesterday and all the races have filled. Those who miss the fair next week at Concord will miss one of the best of the smaller meetings.

Foxy Quiller, a full brother to Cresceus 2:02½, arrived in Denver this week and is quartered at the Goulding stock yards. The horse is owned by Hanford Brown of Spearfish, South Dakota, and is to be taken to winter quarters at the Overland and trained for swift work.—Denver Field and Farm.

Joe Selby 2:23½ is about 17 hands high and as stylish as any horse in America. He is a clean gaited trotter, wonderfully fast in a brush and would attract attention on any speedway in America. He wears scarcely any boots and can crush a 2:10 gait or better at any time. He was bred by the late By Holly of Vallejo.

A typographical error in the summaries of the Vallejo races given by the Golden Gate Park Driving Club on Admission Day, gave the horse a record of 2:23½ in the last heat of the race won by him. The time of the heats was 2:27½ and 2:28½, and A. B. P.'s record is now 2:27½, the time made in the first heat.

Green Meadow Stock Farm has for sale a two year old filly by Hambletonian Wilkes out of Annabelle 2:27½ that is entered in the Occident Stake next year. La Belle 2:16, a daughter of this mare, won the Occident Stake in 1895, and this filly if trained would have a good chance to win it next year as she is naturally very fast.

Louis Schaffer, the well known live stock auctioneer of Oakland, will conduct a sale of all the horses, vehicles, harness, etc. belonging to H. P. Livermore today at the Oakland track. There are a number of well bred trotting and carriage horses to be sold, three fine teams being among them. The sale will be held at the Oakland track and will begin at 10 A. M.

Dan W. 2:17½ has the honor of winning the longest and hardest race of the season in California. He was the victor in the 2:14 class trot at Oakland last Monday which required seven heats to decide. When the condition of the track is considered, together with the fact that a false start occurred in which seven-eighths of a mile was trotted by all the horses at speed before the drivers heard the recall bell, Dan W.'s victory stamped him as one of the gamest horses seen on the circuit this year. As Boydello was his only competitor in the last beat and beaten but a nose at that the son of Boydell also secured a clear title for gameness and endurance.

Speculation is already brisk as to the probable winner of the Transylvania stake. At this writing among the probable starters will be Dolly Dillon 2:07, Onward Silver 2:08, Eleata 2:08½, Dolly Bidwell 2:09½, May Allen 2:09½, Metallas 2:11, Neva Simmons 2:11½, White-wood 2:12½ and Susie J. 2:14½. This great event promises to furnish one of the best and hardest fought contests of the season.

It is said that the only persons who do not consider the recent fair at Woodland a success are the hookmakers who paid $1600 for the exclusive betting privilege. As the betting was light at Woodland this is natural, but the success of a fair does not depend upon the money made by a hookmaker. Very successful fairs are held every year in the United States where no booking at all is permitted.

The owner of the horse Dan W., winner of the seven heat race at Oakland last Monday, won less than $80 on his horse outside the purse money. The horse was favorite before the start, but there were no auction pools. However, Mr. McNeil managed to get a little money on for each heat. As he lost three times and but small odds were to be had at any stage of the game there was no chance to make much of a winning.

From Buffalo, Millard Sanders telegraphed Pierce Bros. that he had an offer of between five and six thousand dollars for the two mares Dolly Dillon and Janice, advising its acceptance as neither was doing very well. The reply was: "We have paid entrance through the circuit. Go on and trot to win." Dolly trotted the best race of the season at Hartford, and an offer of $12,000 was made for her and refused, and Janice is rounding to and will be heard from.

Frank Jones of Memphis stated at Cleveland last week that he stands ready to enter a pool of $20,000 for a contest of speed to wagon. His plan is for four men to post $5000 each, drive his horse a mile to wagon, the one making the fastest mile to take down the entire amount posted. He proposes that the contest be open to trotters and pacers. Mr. Jones owns the pacing gelding Little Boy that hauled a wagon in 2:03½ two weeks ago, and it goes without saying that Little Boy would be his starter.—Horseman.

It is to be hoped now that John A. McKerron has again won the Challenge Cup race for wagon trotters that his owner will have him put in form to take a record somewhere near his speed limit. So grand an individual and so well bred a stallion as this son of Nutwood Wilkes is, should be allowed to take his rightful place among the great trotters. His mile in 2:07½ to wagon, indicates that he is one of the fastest trotting stallions that has appeared, and as he has done some stud service he ought to be allowed to take a record as fast as he is able to.—Horse World.

C. E. Clark, who has made a very successful campaign over East this year with Toggles 2:09½ and Sue 2:12½ had the misfortune to lose his good mare Listerine 2:13½ by Athadon while at Providence. Listerine started in the 2:14 trot at that meeting and was distanced in the fifth heat, having been taken violently ill. She died the next day. She was seven years old and a very promising mare, having reduced her record four seconds this year.

The highest price of the Palo Alto broodmare sale last week was $305, paid by Mr. Henry Pierce, of the Santa Rosa Stock Farm, for the gray mare Nordica 2:19½ as a three year old. Nordica is by Advertiser 2:15½, her dam is the great broodmare Sallie Benton 2:17½ (dam of Serp 2:10, Starlight 2:15½ and Nordica 2:19½) by Gen. Benton, and her second dam old Sontag Mohawk (dam of eight in the list) by Mohawk Chief. Nordica is but nine years old and is a regular breeder. She was bred this year to Exioneer, a son of Boodle 2:11 and Expressive 2:12½.

At the dinner given during the recent Readville meeting by J. Malcom Forbes to the drivers and owners, several topics in regard to advancing the interests of the light harness turf were touched upon. To the surprise of some of the gentlemen who have the interests of the turf at heart, but who are not in close touch with the rank and file, the drivers were pretty nearly unanimous in indorsing the plan of retiring all but heat winners at the end of three heats. The drivers thought that the horses that could not win with three chances had better stay in the barn. It was also pointed out that under that plan the horses would last longer and that the public would be pleased to see the races ended in reasonable season.

Atalanta, the dam of two in the standard list, and full sister to the great Beautiful Bells, was sold at the sale of Palo Alto brood mares at the State Fair last week for $35. This may seem a ridiculously low price, but Atalanta is 26 years old and the chances of her producing again are not of the best. While her success in the broodmare ranks is not brilliant when compared with her noted sister, still it cannot be said that she was a failure by any means. Bred to Sultan she produced the brown stallion Othello that took a record of 2:28 and is the sire of Wyotta 2:23 and the dam of Osito 2:13½. She also produced to the cover of Sultan the horse Sunny Clime 3951, that sired Clime 2:24. Bred to Guy Wilkes, Atalanta produced Atalanta Wilkes 2:29½, and Linda Wilkes, the dam of Sable Guy 2:27½. With these descendants to represent her it cannot be said that she has been a failure in the stud. At the Palo Alto farm there remains of her foals the brown colt Orlanda by Ora Wilkes 2:11, now a three year old, and the yearling filly Menrosa by Mendocino. Atalanta was stunted to Nazote, full brother to Azote 2:04½ this year, and if Mr. E. J. Bullard of Yolo county, who purchased the mare at last week's sale gets a foal from this service, his investment will in all probability be a very profitable one. Atalanta is a well preserved mare, standing 15.3. She is brown in color, with star and snip and both hind ankles white.

In hot weather there is no drink like Jackson's Napa Soda—plain in a lemonade.

EASTERN NOTES AND NEWS.

Personette 2:09½ has not lost a race this season.

Matin Bells 2:08½ is the third 2:10 performer for Bow Bells.

Dorothy Redmond 2:12½ is a new 2:15 trotter for Director 2:17.

Dan Patch 2:04½ and Audubon Boy 2:06 are great young pacers.

The colt out of Valpa 2:09½ by Bingen 2:06½ should be a great trotter.

Owner Ketcham says that Cresceus' fee after January 1st will be $500.

There were twenty-five heats trotted and paced in 2:10 or better at Providence.

Admiral Dewey and Carrie Bel hold the fastest three year old record for 1901 at 2:14½.

The boys thought they could trim Dan Patch at Providence, but he was too good for them.

At the Providence meeting in the 2:15 pace a ticket on Matin Bells costing $40 called for $1400.

The free for all trot at Hartford averaged 2:07 95-100—the fastest trotting average for five heats.

President Perkins talks of doubling the value of the Park Brew Stake next year, making it $20,000.

Chehalis 2:04½, is stepping the New England half-mile tracks as though he was back in his old-time form.

Dan Patch 2:04½ is now the only real, "simon-pure" unbeaten Grand Circuit performer, having ten straight victories to his credit.

Georgiana 2:26½, dam of the new performer, M. J. M., 2:21 hy Nutwood, is a sister of Patchen Wilkes 2:29½, sire of Joe Patchen 2:01½.

Prince Alert and Little Boy, the fastest half-mile track pacers, will meet in a match race at the fair meeting at Allentown, Pa., for $3000.

Jimmy Gatchow owns a third interest in Audubon Boy 2:06. It was he who induced Mr. Hanley to buy the horse. The price paid for him was $10,000.

W. B. Fasig's hosts of friends will be glad to learn that he has sufficiently recovered from his long illness so as to have been able to attend the Hartford meeting.

James Hanley, the new owner of Audubon Boy 2:06, winner of the $10,000 stake for pacers at the Providence meeting, also owns Prince Alert 2:02, the hopped wonder.

Royal R. Sheldon 2:04½ and Audubon Boy 2:06 are the two fastest performers out of one mare ever seen racing the same year. They are out of Flaxy hy Bourhon Wilkes.

Trainers Henry Titer and E. R. Bowne have raised about $2000 hy subscription for the benefit of Mart Demarest, who is lying at the Massachusetts General Hospital with a fractured knee.

The great colt Admiral Dewey, 2:14½, is slightly lame in one of his legs, just below the hock. Veterinarians say it is due to a strain and that he will recover in time to start in the Kentucky Futurity.

Royal R. Sheldon hy Constantine has started three times in the Grand Circuit this season and has shown eight heats below 2:07½, as follows: 2:04½, 2:06½, 2:05, 2:07, 2:06½, 2:05½, 2:06½, 2:06½, averaging 2:06.

John R. Potts, the pacer that Burt Whitely of of Muncie, Ind., purchased for $5000 during the Pekin, Ill., meeting, and that took a record of 2:11½ at Columbus, Ohio, died at Providence, during the meeting there.

The Park Brew Stake for 2:10 pacers, valued at $10,000, proved to be the drawing card at the Providence meeting through the generosity of the Park Brew people, who gave away about 4000 admissions to their friends.

The chestnut stallion Fillmore 2:21½ hy Palo Alto 2:08½, dam Miss Gift hy Gen. Benton, died recently of poison in his owner's stable near Newburgh, N. Y. He was formerly a member of J. B. Dutcher's Maplecroft Stud at Pawling, N. Y.

Moth Miller 2:07 does not hold the world's record, but he is probably the only pacer in the world that munches oats with a gold tooth. Dr. David Randall, his owner, put a gold crown on one of the crack speedway pacer's nippers recently.

The well-known starter and turf writer, Frank G. Smith, well says: "Most any kind of a No. 6 hat man can condition a horse to go a mile in 2:25, but it takes an artist with brains to make a race horse step below 2:10, and keep him on razor edge."

C. H. Baldwin can show a grandly gaited lot of young trotters at the Glen Falls track, most of them hy Directum and although he has taken them along slowly, quite a number of them can reel off a mile in 2:20 with consummate ease.

When Vatican took a two year old record of 2:28½ the performance made Acolyte 2:21 hy Onward the first stallion to get a performer at five years of age. Last year Vatican, whose record is now 2:18, put three in the 2:20 list, Don Artful 2:19½, My Chance 2:19½ and Buffalo Bill 2:19½.

The Oak Grove Driving Club, at Warren, O., declared a dividend of 180 per cent. to stockholders, giving each man $18 on a $10 investment. The club will give no more meetings this year. Much credit for the good showing is due Secretary E. O. Dilley.

Dolly Bidwell, winner of the $10,000 Roger Williams Stake for 2:14 trotters at the Providence meeting, took a record of 2:09½ in the third heat. She is a black mare hy Inglewood, a son of Onward, her dam being Sally Adams by John Burdine, a son of Almont 33.

There are now two horses in the 2:10 list of the same name as it is pronounced, the only difference being in one letter as it is spelled. Lookheart, the trotter hy Nutwood, took his record of 2:08½ in 1895, while Lookhart, the pacer hy Venture, took a mark at Galesburg, Ill., of 2:09½.

William C. Trimble of Newburgh, N. Y., although in his seventy-fourth year has won three races this season, and seems about as well as ever. He says Cohens was the best horse he ever drove on the turf, and holds Whips in high estimation as one of the best sons of Electioneer.

John W. Springer, president of the National Live Stock Association, who was arrested some time ago for importing a docked horse into Colorado, won out in the courts. The courts held that the law prohibiting the importation of docked horses was unconstitutional, as it conflicted with the Inter-State commerce law.

Dan Patch 2:04½, the unbeaten pacer, has gone down the big line under the skillful manipulation of M. E. McHenry with the loss of but one heat. C. W. Marks, of Chicago, the former owner of Dan's famous sire, Joe Patchen, has been following the Grand Circuit closely for the last few weeks, and gossip has it that he is trying to buy Dan.

At a sale of polo and other ponies, held a month ago in England, sensational prices were realized. The top was $1700 and the general average of the twenty-four sold $1035. The lowest price obtained was $425 and seventeen of the twenty-four sold for $900 or over. It looks as if there was a handsome margin in the breeding of good polo ponies and we can grow the best of them here in the West.

The owner of Cresceus says: "I believe in the two-minute trotters, but I am none too sanguine of Cresceus' ability to trot that fast. With everything favorable, I expect his record to be lowered to at least 2:01. He has sufficient speed to accomplish this, as is shown by his mile at Columbus, when he went to the three-quarter pole in 1:30½. But I fear he cannot cover the last quarter under 30 after going that fast."

It will be remembered that a few years ago C. W. Williams tried the experiment of breeding some of the daughters of Allerton 2:09½ back to their own sire. The first of these to appear in public is the four year old filly Lehana. She started at the Maine State Fair last month and won in straight heats, earning a record of 2:31½. She is hy Allerton, out of Fluvanna 2:27½ hy Allerton; second dam hy Alcantara and third dam hy Volunteer.

Scratches are caused by poor blood and dirt, a combination that should not be found existing in well regulated stables; but there may be found many cases of scratches every season. Mild cases can be cured by keeping the legs clean and dry and applying oxide of zinc ointment. Severe cases should be treated for some time with flaxseed poultices, and after the fever has subsided the ointment mentioned in preceding cases may be used.

After Onward Silver 2:08 had defeated Eleata 2:08½ in the Massachusetts $10,000 race at Readville, several well-known horsemen, among whom was George W. Leavitt, remarked that they thought more highly of Eleata than ever before—"For," said Mr. Leavitt, "we know now that she is game, and will try to win when pinched." As she becomes older she will gain in strength, speed and endurance. Barring accidents, it will be a good one that can beat her two years hence.

Only two Adahells have been trained and started in races, viz: Adahella 2:25½ winner of the two year old stake at Readville, and Rowellan 2:15½ winner of the Horse Review $6000 stake at Hartford last week. Rowellan has been timed the last half of a winning beat in 1:04. Adahella having no engagements this year, has been worked lightly, but C. H. Baldwin drove her an easy mile the other day at Glen Falls in 2:17½. These are simply forerunners of Adhell's quality as a sire.

Last winter Mart Demarest sent a check for $3500 to Joseph A. Thayer of Lexington with the request to buy Onward Silver at the February auction. Mr. Thayer returned Mart's check, saying it was like throwing good money away to buy a rattle-headed fellow like Silver, so he let John Hussey have him for Mr. J. L. Druin, Bardstown, for $3400. Last November they bid him in at $3300, paying the commission and publicly withdrawing him from the "Old Glory" sale. After Hussey went to Patchen Wilkes Farm to train he sent Onward Silver to Ed Geers.

Seven carloads of West Point cadets were given an outing at Village Farm, near Buffalo, N. Y., recently, and Harry Hamlin had one of the officers select, in the name of the West Point Academy, any one of the colts he saw in the Village Farm stables. The value of the colts referred to by Mr. Hamlin ranged from $1000 to $5000. The only condition attached to the offer was that the horse chosen must be submitted to Mr. Hamlin and approved by him as representative of Village Farm horseflesh. The West Point men picked a valuable two year old named Autumn King, out of an Almont mare, hy Mambrino King. The horse was then presented to the government with the compliments of the Village Farm proprietors, to be used in the West Point stud. Autumn King is valued at $5000. The West Point men will change his name to Hamlin Cadet.

The Hero, brother to The Airship (3), 2:11½, hy Barada 2:22½, dam Reinette, hy Gambetta Wilkes, won the unfinished 2:14 pace at Syracuse, lowering his record to 2:10½.

Deacon Partridge observes that when an owner is reticent regarding the breeding of his colt, it is either because the youngster is a bad specimen of a good family or a good specimen of a bad family.

We knew it must be so. It now appears that Dan Patch had two curbs last season. Such things are necessary if a horse ever amounts to anything as a trotter or pacer. And better yet: Dan Patch once possessed an incipient spavin.

After the summary of the 2:06 pace was made up at Hartford the judges thought it looked like it had been "made to order," so they proceeded to fine Turner, the driver of Edith W., $200; Ernest, the driver of Dumont W., $100, and McHenry, the driver of Hetty G., $100.

Brockton, Mass., will offer a $1000 prize in connection with its annual horse show. The Chicago Horseman says this is the largest ever offered by any horse show in the country. What's the matter with the $1000 Stillwell prize, annually offered by the Kansas City Horse Show?

Herbert Gray has offered Charles Marvin $5000 for the two year old trotting filly, Grace Eldred, hy Cecilia, out of Eldred, hy Red Wilkes. This filly has shown a mile in 2:19, and is thought to have a good chance to win the two year old division of the Kentucky Futurity.

Good horses are so scarce right at present that many export dealers are confining themselves to the home trade. It does not pay to export horses that will yield a sure profit in New York, Boston or Buffalo. Poor horses are not wanted, at any price, and lose the ship per money every time he touches them.

N. W. Huhinger made the heaviest play on the Lord Derby-Boralma race and was the greatest winner. He was a strong Boralma supporter before the race, wagering $19,000 at odds of $100 to $35. After the first heat he made a quick switch to Lord Derby, and within a space of five minutes had wagered $27,000 on the Mambrino King gelding at $100 to $70.

The British officers in command of the agency at New Orleans for the purchase and shipment of mules and horses to the British army in South Africa report that they have sent to Cape Town 100 cargoes, consisting of 115,690 mules and horses, about equally divided between the two, the animals costing $11,546,615. The provisions for the trips to Africa brought the total up to $15,000,000.

"No foot, no horse," is an old and very true saying. Perhaps no part of the heavy horse wears out sooner than his feet. They should be long, even in size, straight; horn dense, dark in color; sole concave; bar strong; frog large and elastic, heel wide, high, and width equal to one-half the length from heel to toe. Too much stress cannot be laid on having a large, round foot, especially wide at the heel. Buyers of heavy horses for the New York markets are very particular in this respect.

When Maud S. trotted a mile on the Cleveland track in 2:08½ the performance created much talk, and there was no lack of wise people who declared that the speed limit of the trotter had been reached. They even undertook to prove what they said by figures. They first calculated the utmost length of a trotter's stride, and hy applying the watch they made an exhibit that was truly puzzling. Then Martha Wilkes came along and trotted a mile in 2:08, and these mathematicians marveled greatly. Then came Kremlin 2:07½, Bingen 2:06½, Fantasy 2:06, Directum 2:05½, Nancy Hanks 2:04, Alix 2:03½, The Abbot 2:03½, and finally Cresceus 2:02½, and still they wonder. But why marvel? Nobody is wise enough to measure the limit of speed in the game American trotter.

On a hot day drink Jackson's Napa Soda lemonades and be refreshed.

Trout fishing is excellent at Fount Springs, Stony creek, Colusa county.

John Gallagher left this city on Tuesday for Eel river. This trip is his fourteenth annual pilgrimage after the Humboldt county steelheads. Many anglers who know him best wish the "champion of Oakland" may enjoy fourteen more Eel river fishing excursions.

Fishing at Webber lake is reported excellent. The conditions for fly fishing on the Truckee are still attractive enough to keep a number of anglers on the stream. Lake Tahoe fishing is productive of sport and fish. R. W. McFarland sent down two large and splendid conditioned rainbows to Prof. Markland this week.

The Eel river fishermen are having an innings in Humboldt county at present. Reports from Fortuna and Singleys are to the effect that the fall run of fish is on in fine style. The large steelheads caught will range from nine to fifteen pounds in weight. The small fish run from a half to a pound and a half in size and are plentiful and full of fight in the pools and going over the riffles.

The efforts of the salt water anglers for a week past, except with but few favored fishermen, have been futile. A fleet of boats were in the San Pablo Point waters on last Sunday, but only a few small fish were hooked. The best catch reported was made by Rev. O. W. Jackson, "Al" Wilson and W. F. Shattuck, who fished the San Antonio slough and Petaluma creek in the vicinity of the gun club headquarters. Twenty fish were taken, principally with the trolling spoon. The largest weighed about ten pounds. An incoming tide in the afternoon, both to-day and tomorrow and with rather a small rise, does not give inducement for favorable bass fishing.

"The demand for that little southern delicacy, the oyster crab, is always larger than the supply, and I have all I can do to obtain the 50 or 60 gallons which are required for flavoring stews and making omelets in the leading hotels, restaurants and clubs of this city," said a wholesale fish dealer in New York to a Washington Star writer. "Our northern oysters do not contain the little dainties, so I am obliged to buy them from the oyster shuckers along the York, Rappahannock and other southern rivers. The Chesapeake bay shore oystermen send us some also. The little crab found in the oyster is not, as commonly supposed by two-thirds of the oyster eating community, the young of the blue crab, but it is a distinct species. It is a messmate of and caterer to the wants of the oyster, being therefore a benefit instead of a detriment to the latter. In return for the oyster's kindness in protecting it against its enemies the little crab catches and crushes food which in its entire state could not be taken by the oyster. A singular thing in connection with them is that all found inside of the oyster are females. The male of the same variety has a hard shell."

The Oakland Water Company have at an expense of about $5000, planned to purge the waters of Lake Chabot of the great numbers of carp, which had increased in the lake to such an extent as to become a nuisance. Nets and dynamite have cleaned out the fish to a great extent and now it is proposed to finish the campaign by placing fifty seals in the lake.

In this State the fish is now regarded as a nuisance, worthless comparatively as a food fish and in many localities, by reason of its destruction of vegetation, as a menace to levees and a source of actual damage. A different valuation is placed on the "hog fish" in the East, in Illinois, for instance; where according to Mr. M. D. Hurley, of Peoria, the President of the Illinois Fisherman's Association the German carp is a great and appreciated river fish and has been a Godsend to the people of his section.

"Ten years ago," he is quoted as saying, "the government began the experiment of stocking the Illinois River with young carp. A hatchery was established at Quincy, with a thoroughly scientific man in charge, and millions of minute young fish were turned loose in the water. At the outset a great many people scoffed at the scheme, but in a few years the original stock had matured and a great fishing industry has gradually built up."

"Last year 1,350,000 pounds of carp were shipped to market from the Peoria district alone, and the total value of the shipments from the river as a whole was nearly half a million of dollars. Most of the catch comes to Chicago and is sold in the Jewish colonies. The German Jews are traditionally fond of carp and bring a taste for the fish from the old country. They usually boil it, and the flesh being hard, is peculiarly adapted to that method of cooking. Our carp average about three pounds, which is the favorite size for the table."

"To-day we have many thousand people who subsist entirely through this industry. The enemies of the carp used to be fond of referring to it as a scavenger, but modern scientific observation has shown that to be all wrong. It is really a vegetarian and lives entirely on aquatic weeds and grasses."

KENNEL.

Entries Close on Monday.

The closing date for entries to the Los Angeles bench show is Monday, September 23d, at 10 o'clock P. M. It behooves local fanciers to attend to the matter of entering their dogs at once. Entries mailed on Monday prior to 10 P. M. will be in time. Address D. J. Sinclair, Superintendent, No. 226 South Spring street, Los Angeles.

The prospects down south are excellent for a strong entry of dogs. Present indications are that several strings will be taken down from here and that the attendance of visiting fanciers at Los Angeles next month will be good.

Doings in Dogdom.

A fine lot of strong, well conditioned Great Dane puppies are offered for sale in the kennel advertisements this week.

A Chesapeake bay dog is desired by a sportsman residing in the interior. The kennel editor will furnish particulars upon application.

A stud dog much in demand by owners of high bred English Setter hitches is S. Christenson's Joe Cummings' Boy. A recent mating with Bruce Cornwall's Kitty R. should make a good nick.

John Tate has followed up his judgment in regard to what should be something good in the Bull Terrier line and has accordingly purchased from Jack Bradshaw a puppy from the Ch. Woodcote Wonder-Newmarket Queen litter.

There is an urgent demand among sportsmen for broken dogs, both Pointers and Setters, for the shooting season which opens next month. We can place four dogs easily and would like to hear from owners having dogs to dispose of.

Mr. Phil C. Meyer informed us during the week of the bad luck of his relative Mr. Irving C. Ackerman who was recently confined to his residence with a severe attack of illness. We are pleased to announce that the enterprising young Great Dane fancier and breeder is on the road to good health again.

W. E. Meek, of Haywards, had the misfortune to lose his well-known Mastiff brood bitch Hebe Montez. She picked up a dose of poison apparently during an escaped run on the outside away from Mr. Meek's kennels. She was the dam of a number of bench winners and was formerly owned by J. P. Norman.

Mr. Norman J. Stewart, we regret exceedingly to state, is under the cloud of a serious bereavement in the recent passing away of Mr. Stewart Sr. Mr. Stewart was prevented by his own ill health from hastening to Scotland when apprised of the serious condition of his father. The Coast fancy, among whom Mr. Stewart has a warm following, will no doubt extend the warm hand of sympathy to the Secretary of the Pacific Kennel League in his present affliction.

A litter of St. Bernard puppies by Le King out of Zulika are reported by Mr. Phil C. Meyer to be very handsome and more than an ordinary good lot. One feature of excellence being the splendid distribution of body coloring and perfect head markings.

Miss Barry, a bitch supposed to have been barren, is heavy in whelp to Le King and due tomorrow or the day following.

The Glenwood Cocker string are all in fine fettle, young and old.

The Chalkville delegation are industriously at work selecting a new location for the Pacific Coast Field Trials in January. Last year there was nothing to it but Coronado, that was the ideal location for the trials. Coronado seems to be out of the race just now. A series of letters has, as usual, started the campaign, with "Owner" leading the van; other screeds may soon follow in the same strain. Among the knowing ones, the belief prevails that the communications all emanate from the same individual source. The club received an amount of attention through the daily papers here and in some of the Eastern sporting journals in the reports of the running of the trials last year, that were remarkable for a systematic spirit of unfairness and injustice to the gentlemen, or one of them at least, who judged the trials.

Pacific Northwest Field Trials.

Twenty English Setters and four Pointers constitute the number of entries for the Pacific Northwest Field Trials to be run at Whidby Island, Washington, commencing October 14th. This list is an excellent showing for the second annual trials and argues a strong northern interest in the sport. The club seems to be in a prosperous condition and a popular organization. Among the dogs entered will be found seven sons and daughters of Ch. Count Gladstone IV. Thirteen of the dogs were entered by owners residing in this city and vicinity. Dr. C. E. Wilson of Nevada has two dogs in the list—including Clipper W., who is now well enough to run in the Northwest trials. Dr. Wilson's dogs will be handled by Henry Betten. W. B. Coutts is also north at present in charge of a string. John Lucas has charge of the following string of dogs: C. E. Worden's English Setter Derby entry, Wade Earl (Dave Earl-Accelerando); C. E. Worden's Pointer bitch Pearl's Jingo (Young Jingo-Pearl's Dot II.); Albert Betz's Derby entry, the Setter bitch Hira (Lee R. Hesper); A. De Cortieux's Setter bitch Verona Cash, his Derby entries, Cash Boy and Paying Teller (Marie's Sport-Verona Cash); Mt. View Kennels' Derby entry,

Sport's Money (Marie's Sport-Verona Cash); Alec C., the well-known Pointer; the Pointer Fango (Young Jingo-Abdullah Fan); F. H. Platt's English Setter Dolly's Marie (Marie's Sport-Dolly Y.). Following is the full list of entries for the All-Age Stake:

SETTERS.

Clipper W., black, white and tan dog, by Marie's Sport-Isabella Maid; Dr. C. E. Wilson.
Lorenzo, white and orange ticked dog, by Count Gladstone IV-Ser G.; F. R. Atkins.
Captain Sigbee, liver and white dog; J. O. Haislington.
Peach Blossom, black, white and tan bitch, by Count Gladstone IV-Peach Mark; W. W. Van Arsdale.
Count's Mark, black, white and tan dog, by Count Gladstone IV-Peach Mark; W. W. Van Arsdale.
Sir Mark, black, white and tan dog, by Count Gladstone IV-Peach Mark; W. W. Van Arsdale.
Dick Stamboul, white and lemon ticked dog, by Stamboul-Kitty R.; F. R. Atkins.
Woodcraft, orange and white bitch, by Count Gladstone IV-Ser G.; H. L. Betten.
Cavalier, orange and white dog, by Count Gladstone IV-Daisy Craft; H. L. Betten.
Northern Huntress, black, white and tan bitch, by Joe Cumming's-Mecca II; T. J. A. Tidemann.
Oregon Boy, black, white and tan dog, by Tony Boy-Lady's Countess; T. J. A. Tidemann.
Cumming's Lady, black and white bitch, by Joe Cumming's-Sport's Destiny; T. J. A. Tidemann.
Prince Jock, black, white and tan dog, by Sir Jock-Venue Gladstone; A. C. Froom.
Jack Quinn, black, white and tan dog, by Doc Quinn-Belle Noble; Everett Griggs.
Lady's Count Nohle, black, white and tan dog, by Lady's Count Gladstone-Lady Nohle; Green & Considine.
Silver Lace, black and white bitch, by Val Lit-Cam Sing; W. F. Ellis.
Sport's Destiny, blue belton bitch, by Marie's Sport-Mark's Fleet; A. H. Nelson.
Silver Star, black, white and tan bitch, by Starlight-Silver Plater; Dr. C. E. Wilson.
Dollie Marie, white and orange bitch, by Marie's Sport-Dolly Y.; Mt. View Kennels.
Verona Cash, black, white and tan bitch, by Count Gladstone IV-Daisy Craft; A. Deconrtieux Jr.

POINTERS.

Sport IV, black and white dog, by Duck-Pansy; F. W. Peters.
Fan Go, black, white and tan bitch, by Young Jingo-Abdullah Fan; Mt. View Kennels.
Alec C, liver and white dog, by Glenheigh-Saddle Bags; Mt. View Kennels.
Pearl's Jingo, liver and white bitch, by Young Jingo-Pearl's Dot II; Clinton E. Worden.

German Dog Show Rules.

The following data concerning the rules and regulations governing German bench shows is interesting when compared with the rules of the American Kennel Club, or for that matter the C. K. L. or P. K. L. rules.

L. A. Klein writes in Field and Fancy: Before me is the premium list of the International Exhibition of Dogs to be held at Nurnberg, Germany. This show has 317 classes, of which the open classes in large breeds and sporting dogs have prizes of 50, 25 and 10 marks, while smaller breeds get 30, 15 and 8 respectively. Puppy, novice, and a class somewhat similar to our old challenge class, gets medals only. The entrance fee varies for the different cases and breeds and ranges from six to ten marks.

Nineteen judges are advertised to officiate, and the rules under which the show is held are those of the Delegierten-Kommission, a body similar to our A. K. C., representing all specialty clubs by delegates.

The first striking difference appears with regard to listing and registration, dogs whose owners do not live in Germany being exempt. The bench show committee reserves the right to close entries before the advertised time, but the cancelling of an entry by an exhibitor is not permitted. Bitches in season are excluded from the shows. Collars must have the name of owners on, and the dogs, except Toys, must have strong choke collars and chains with two swivels, and if not thus provided on arrival the management will charge two marks for each collar and chain, and collect C. O. D. on return. Dangerous dogs must be so declared on the entry blank, and if accepted will be benched accordingly, the costs of which the exhibitor must pay. If the judges find a dog entered in a wrong class by mistake, they may transfer it to the proper class, provided such class has not been already judged, and a notice to this effect is posted on the dog's stall. Damaged crates are repaired or substituted by new ones by the management, and cost collected C. O. D.

Every dog is insured against fire for 100 marks, the cost of which is 25 pfennig. If a higher insurance is demanded, it must be so stated on the entry blank. No photographs, name or advertising signs are permitted on any stall before the judging, and after judging only such as are approved by the managers; and in no case is an exhibitor permitted to remove any of the official cards or signs from any of the stalls. The judging is done on the basis of the standards accepted by the Delegierten-Kommission, the prize cards being signed by the judge. Judges must not use catalogues except to avoid mistakes.

Only a first-class dog can receive a first prize in the open class, and special prizes given by the state or the show itself can be won by first prize winners only. No special prize of any kind can be awarded to a dog that has not received at least V. H. C. in a class. Division by sex in the open money prize classes will be cancelled if there are less than eight entries per class. Registration in the stud books is open to dogs over 12 months only, and in the cases of Great Danes, St. Bernards or Newfoundlands over 15 months old. Whoever wilfully withholds any information regarding the names or pedigree of his dog is barred from competition.

All dogs out of the puppy class must be exhibited in the open class. The puppy class is from 6 to 12 months, except for Great Danes, St. Bernards and Newfoundlands, which are from 6 to 15 months. A dog offered for sale on the entry blank cannot have his price raised over that stated on the entry blank during the show, and sales are valid only if perfected through the management. The money is sent to the owner within 14 days of the closing of the show less 10 per cent. commission.

Kennels for a number of dogs of the same owner are provided, if so desired, on payment of 20 marks for 12 square yards, and 3 marks for each additional yard.

RECOGNIZED BREEDS.

Type Indications and the Various Points of a Dog.

That a practical or complete acquaintance with breeds, type, quality and character of dogs is generally understood by most fanciers would naturally be inferred. That such is not always the case was illustrated the other day by an argument between two gentlemen well known to the local fancy. The bone of contention was a question in regard to recognized breeds, which, while not of great magnitude, showed that one of the parties to the discussion was but little better posted than the other. The matter was readily settled and was followed by a broader discussion taking in the further range of expression and general appearance, which subjects were discussed pro and con at some length.

The talk here referred to reminds us that an opportunity is given to use some technical matter which will be of interest to many of our readers and is from the pen of an authority who has passed out the ribbons at more than one of our bench shows.

If the average lover of dogs were asked to name, off-band, the list of recognized breeds of dogs for which classes are provided at Eastern shows, particularly the New York shows, there are few who could bring to mind the following list, which, alphabetically arranged, includes all the breeds which are known as "regular" in the English system, although there are many others which in English-speaking communities come under the head of "foreign" bred, which are not commonly met with outside their district or community.

The breeds are: Airedale Terriers, Bassethounds, Bedlington Terriers, Bloodhounds, Bulldogs, French Bulldogs, Bull Terriers, Boston Terriers, Beagles, Black and Tan Terriers, Blenheim Spaniels, Chow Chow, Collies (rough), Collies (smooth), Deerhounds, Dalmatians, Dachshunds, Dandie Dinmont Terriers, Foxhounds (English), Foxhounds (American), Fox Terriers (smooth), Fox Terriers (wire), Great Danes, Greyhounds, Irish Terriers, Italian Greyhounds, Japanese Spaniels, King Charles Spaniels, Maltese Terriers, Mastiffs, Miscellaneous, Newfoundlanders, Old English Sheep Dogs (bob tails), Poodles (corded), Poodles (curly), Pomeranians, Pugs, Prince Charles Spaniels, Pointers, Russian Wolfhounds, Ruby Spaniels, St. Bernards (rough), St. Bernards (smooth), Setters (English, Irish, Gordon), Spaniels (Irish Water, Field, Clumber, Cocker), Scottish Terriers, Skye Terriers, Schipperkes, Toy Terriers, Welsh Terriers, White English Terriers, Whippets, Yorkshire Terriers.

Many of these breeds have what are termed specialty clubs, which are organized to foster and encourage their breeding and exhibiting. Thus there are in this country clubs for Airedales, Bloodhounds, Bulldogs, French Bulldogs, Bull Terriers, Boston Terriers, Beagles, Collies, Dachshunds, Foxhounds, Fox Terriers, Great Danes, Greyhounds, Irish Terriers, Poodles, Pomeranians, Pointers, Setters (all three breeds), St. Bernards, Spaniels, Scottish Terriers and Welsh Terriers.

Any one can become a member of these clubs on payment of dues ranging from $5 to $10. The prominent breeds are represented by clubs which have trophies and cups valued, in many instances, at hundreds of dollars each, and by arranging produce stakes, sweepstakes and other special competitions the different breeds are encouraged and brought more prominently into popular favor.

In this city we have a Bull Terrier, Fox Terrier and Cocker Spaniel Club, the St. Bernard and Pointer Clubs have been dormant for so long a time that a rejuvenation of the two clubs seems hardly probable, although possible. The California Collie Club is a flourishing organization with headquarters at San Jose. The Pacific Mastiff Club is still in existence and is heard from annually about the bench show time.

There are several terms used by experts in dog lore for denoting the general appearance of the dog. In many breeds much stress is laid upon expression, and different breeds are typified to some extent by the intensity or modification of this quality. Expression is mostly determined by the size, color and placement of the eye. There is the large, full, benevolent eye of the setter and the spaniel; there is the sharp, keen eye with a mixture of cunning and benevolence the collie is known by; the small, richly hued brown, deep sunken eye of the bloodhound, which is supposed to betoken wisdom, and the somewhat sunken eye, showing a little of the jaw, from which the St. Bernard derives its look of benevolence and dignity.

The Terrier expression is more generally alluded to as "varmint," meaning keen, snappy, on the qui vive. This eye is dark, free from any haw (which is the red membrane within the lower eyelid), is not sunken nor large, and is set in a somewhat horizontal position, all of which contributes to a keen "varminty" expression. An axiom in cynology is that the rounder and fuller the eye the milder in expression.

Type is the term generally used to convey the fact that a dog combines in more or less degree those several points and attributes which distinguish one breed from another. A dog is said to be typical, or of good type or bad, as the case may be.

The terms "type" and "character" are generally considered synonymous, but they are not exactly. The term "character" is that vague expression of the whole that conveys a meaning which only dog owners of experience can properly appreciate—expression, points and style are all combined in this quality which associates itself with or stamps every breed. The term "quality" denotes that indescribable something that severs the patrician from the plebeian, and is quite as prominent in the dog as in his best friend, the man, and can only be found in dogs which are blessed with type and character to a degree.

To arrive at a proper understanding of the different points of dogs it will be best to enumerate them. As an example, there are five different kinds of ears, the names for which indicate their formation. The rose ear is that in which the inside of the ear is visible, the overhanging flap of the ear being thrown back and half raised, as in the Greyhound and Bulldog. The button ear speaks for itself, as the ear flap buttons over to the skull or cheek, as in the Irish Terrier or Fox Terrier. The prick ear is the ear that stands straight up, as in the Scottish Terrier, French Bulldog. The tulip ear is allied to the prick ear in carriage, but is not held so upright and is more of the shape of the petal of a tulip—hence the term. The semi-prick ear explains itself, and the best example is seen in the Collie, the ears at attention being erected so that the tips fall over either in line of the face or a little to one side.

When one speaks of upright shoulders in a dog, one means that the shoulders are not laid back or oblique, as they should be in all running dogs.

The loins are that part of the anatomy of the dog between the last rib and the hindquarters, or rather, hip bones, and in different breeds of dogs the length or shortness of this part of the anatomy are important factors in the symmetrical build of the dog. Roached or arched loins are the terms for the arched or wheel formation of loin, as exemplified in the Greyhound, Dachshund, Bulldog, etc. This formation is usually associated with an under-construction which is termed "tucked-up" points of great beauty in the breeds above mentioned. "Long in flank" is to be long in loins and the condition known as contrary to "short-coupled."

Brisket is the fore part of the chest, and the term "deep in brisket" alluding to Bulldogs, means deep in chest.

"Flat-sided" refers to lack of spring in the ribs, and in this connection it is apropos to point out one of the anomalies in dog standards. The Greyhound's formation of rib calls for the barrel shape, the more, in reason of course, the better, while the Russian Wolfhound, an animal of the same family, and also a coursing dog, has what is termed fish-sides, almost flat, but this condition is redeemed in measure by the greater depth of chest in this breed; the "spring" of the rib explains itself.

"Out at elbows" is a condition when points of the elbow turn out.

Pastern is that part of the leg between knee and knuckles.

The pad is the sole of the foot. A hare foot refers to one that is long and narrow in distinction to a foot that is short, round and compactly knuckled, called "cat foot," and seen to perfection in a good Fox Terrier.

Stifles are the upper joint of the hind leg, and "straight," as in Bull Terriers, and "bent," as in Greyhounds, offer the distinction typical of different breeds.

The second thighs, more especially considered in the points of a dog that is expected to gallop, is the muscular development between the stifle joint and hock.

The hock is the lower, more or less pointed joint of the hind legs. As a rule these joints should set in line with the body, but when they turn in like those of a cow they are termed "cow hocks."

The different terms to denote coloring in dogs, and which are not self-apparent, are—tricolor, as in the case of the black, white and tan collie, or the Prince Charles Spaniel of the same three colors. Wheaten red, found on the Irish Terrier's coat, is a pale yellowish hair, with a reddish tip, as in the kernel of wheat. Grizzle is a bluish gray color, mostly found in the rough-coated old English Sheep Dog. Merle is the bluish gray, splashed with black, found in the smooth and rough collie, and usually accompanied by a wall-eye. Harlequin, a Great Dane color, means pied, mottled or patchy in color.

The winners of the Western Canada Kennel Club field trial run at La Salle, Man., commencing on September 2d were: The Derby—first, H. H. Cooper's black and white Pointer bitch Sport's Maid (Sport IV—Dolly Varden); second, Hamber and Code's liver and white Pointer dog Minto (Bang III—Dot's Hazel); third, C. Plaxton's liver and white Pointer dog Range (Prince—). The All-Age winners were: first, W. C. Lee's black and white Pointer bitch Zuleika (Shot—Fannie); second, F. W. Scott's black and white Pointer bitch Fifae (Bang III—Manitoba Belle); third, C. W. Graham's liver and white Pointer dog Wapello Joe (Rex—Wapella Belle). The Sweepstake winners were: first, Zuleika; second, G. W. Scott's white and tan Setter bitch Lanark Bee (Val Lit—Atalanta). third, Range and Fifae.

These trials seem to have been a Pointer meeting entirely.

In Belgium there are more than 50,000 dogs used for draft purposes. They are mostly employed by milkmen, peddlers and small farmers, and a society for the improvement of the breed has just been formed.

VISITS

Mrs. Deming's black Cocker bitch Sadie (Pumpkin—Tootsie) to Plummer Cocker Kennels' Cb. Viscount (Cb. Pickpans—Tootsie) to September 15 and 17, 1901.

Gleamore Kennels (Oakland) Irish Setter bitch Maid of Gleamore (Ch. Finglas—Betsy Crafts) to same owner's Finglas Jr. (Ch. Finglas—Cb. Ruby Gleamore) September 17, 1901.

A. B. Truman's English Setter bitch Fanny Gladstone T. (Pilot—Hazel C.) to S. Christenson's Joe Cummings' Boy (Cb. Joe Cummings—Gracie Grady), August 27, 1901.

Bruce Cornwall's English Setter bitch Kitty R. (Gatb's Hope—Lady Tib) to S. Christenson's Joe Cummings' Boy (Cb. Joe Cummings—Gracie Grady), September 16, 17, 1901.

WHELPS.

Albert Joseph's Boston Terrier bitch Endcliffe Lita (Beaumont's Murs—Endcliffe Della) whelped September 2, 1901, seven puppies, to Walter Mages's Winner (Broker—Rutb).

A. G. Glenn's Mastiff bitch Cleopatra (Tim—Minerva) whelped September 2, 1901, six puppies (4 dogs) to W. E. Meek's Cb. California Cube (Cube—Pedigree).

Greenwood Kennels' (San Mateo) St. Bernard bitch Zulkia (Eborneum—Princess Rachel) whelped September 2, 1901, four puppies (2 dogs) to same owner's Le Klug (Cb. Le Prime—Sylvia's Lola).

GUN.

Coming Events.

Aug. 1—Dove season opened. Closed season commences Feb. 1.
Aug. 1—Deer season opened. Closed season commences Oct. 1
Sept. 22—Olympic Gun Club Blue rocks. Ingleside.
Sept. 22—Union Gun Club. Live birds. Ingleside.

At the Traps.

The Union Gun Club live bird shoot and the Olympic Gun Club blue rock shoot were postponed last Sunday and both events will take place at Ingleside tomorrow.

Clarence Nauman was in New York City last week having returned from his visit to the Continent. He will be in San Francisco again next month. Jack Fanning, another shooter known to local sportsmen is billeted for the Coast about the same time. It is possible these two cracks may come together in a 100 bird race.

Cartridge and Shell.

The deer season closed in Marin county on the 15th inst. The record of bucks killed this year has been a good one.

The open season for shooting quail in Marin county will commence on October 16th and close on January 15th, thus making the open season in that county one month shorter than provided for in the State game law.

In one section of Marin county, on the Pacheco ranch, the Reservoir gulch region we believe, in four days a hunting party of four counted fifty-four does and fawns. Bucks should be plentiful next season in that district.

A party composed of J. Taft, D. McIsaacs, C. J. Murray and A. W. Lehrke secured five bucks during a hunt commencing on Wednesday and concluding last Sunday. The hunters were camped on the Pacheco ranch, Marin county.

Deer have been so plentiful this season in many localities that many sportsmen have hunted as much to get good specimens of heads for mounting as for the venison. Last Friday, W. S. Kittle dropped a buck on the Country Club preserve that had a beautiful pair of horns, but instead of the shape and growth being of the usual style and conformation both horns very much resembled an antelope's and presented a most unique appearance.

A sad message telling of the passing away of Mr. Otto Muser at Carlsbad, Germany, was received in this city on Tuesday. Mr. Muser was a well known sportsman of a genial and kindly disposition. He was the President of the Tamalpais Gun Club and had great interest, until failing health took him abroad for recuperation, in the affairs of the club. He was an enthusiastic angler and for many years past made up one of the company of fishermen who fished Eel river every fall.

The killing of a large bald eagle by a party of deer hunters in Marin county this week was sensationally exploited by a daily paper as if it were a feat of arms few mortals have the rare luck to indulge in. The "monarch of the air at a distance of more than a hundred yards was soaring above them in graceful circles. They began shooting at the bird. Of a sudden at a shot from a 30-30 the huge bird was seen to collapse and fall," the eagle measured more than six feet from tip to tip of its wings.

The action of the party was unsportsmanlike and the wanton killing of a rare and harmless bird. In fact, eagles do more good in destroying ground vermin than they are given credit for, they are not numerous and should receive immunity from thoughtless hunters who send a rifle bullet after every animate object seen afield.

English snipe are practically without protection in this State. The present game law does not include this bird in the list of game birds having the immunity from hunters prescribed by the close season. A bag limit of twenty-five snipe, however, is the only concession made by the present statute in favor of English snipe.

That nothing better was done for the protection and preservation of the English snipe is due to the fact that the season for his appearance in different parts of the State varies. The district from which the most active advocates of the present game law were drawn is one where English snipe shooting is best in April, when the birds are working up to the breeding grounds. The shooters of that district would not forego their spring snipe shooting, in fact have always in the past successfully fought every attempt to bring the bird within the protecting influence of the game statutes.

Whenever there is a meeting of the county protective organization in their city, there is generally a full attendance and the "game hog" and "undiscriminate slaughterer" are flayed alive and the game wardens tremble in their boots for fear they may lose their commissions because enough arrests have not been made, or stories cannot be concocted about killing "flappers" and the "wanton destruction of quail in the nest," etc.

Jackson's Napa Soda cleanses the stomach and renders the eye clear.

Some Anomalies of the Game Protection Cult.

The Corriea case was taken before the United States District Court on habeas corpus proceedings on Tuesday last. Corriea was arrested at his own instance for having more than fifty doves in his possession in one calendar day and in the Police Court Judge Cabaniss imposed the minimum fine, $25. Corriea appealed to the Superior Court and the decision of the Police Court was affirmed. He then took the matter to the California State Supreme Court, but that tribunal refused to have anything to do with the case. Monday morning he filed a writ of habeas corpus in the Federal Court, which was made returnable at 10 o'clock the following morning.

Judge De Haven of the United States District Court refused the petition, holding that the Constitution was not violated and that the case was one over which the State courts had jurisdiction.

The case has been appealed to the United States Court of Appeals. It was the original purpose of the contestant to have the matter brought before the highest tribunal for adjudication on constitutional grounds.

This case is of absorbing interest not only to dealers and purveyors but to sportsmen at large. Statements appearing in the daily press of the State that the law is regarded with satisfaction by sportsmen is contradicted by most sportsmen interviewed on the subject. The statements above referred to almost invariably emanate from one or two individuals who were mainly interested in the game law changes, for personal advantages purely. This system is a continuation of the game protection juggling which was started two years ago and which is now carried on at an expense to the State inadequate to the practical results obtained in favor of fish and game protection—what its political returns may be is another question, it is one however that has aroused great anticipations in the breast of the fence builder who has been particularly active this year in the fermenting of the game protection brew.

Another unsavory ingredient of the system is the constant and unremitting application of harsh and canting epithets to actual and inferred delinquents in the observation of the game law or violations of the unwritten code of the sportsman. While we do not and never will defend individuals who have violated the law in letter or spirit, we contend that a system of vulgar vituperation will, in the end, defeat any possible good aimed at and serve to create a reserve fund of antagonism and resentment in the minds of those who could be brought into camp by a more reasonable and logical style of argument.

Another acrimonious flavor is the perpetual and nagging insistence of extreme penalties to be imposed upon any and all culprits baled before a court on a game law violation charge—the fact seems to be overlooked that there is always two sides to a story and that the local authorities are generally competent to look after matters in their own districts. This slogan of the game protection apostle is exceedingly amusing when the fact is known to a number of reputable sportsmen that the accredited author of many of these drastic diatribes killed a doe deliberately last year and exploited his unsportsmanlike conduct the following week with a boastful account of the bagging of a "fork horned buck." We call to mind another case, the incidents of which occurred in the same county two years ago. An ignorant foreigner was fined $250 for killing a doe. This amount was more than the poor devil could earn in a year and was a severe lesson to him; but we do not here criticize the administration of justice, what we do regard in this case as having a very pale green tint, was the local coloring given to the prosecution by two of the leaders in the case who had themselves that year killed does and fawns out of season, so we are informed by a sportsman whose word we deem reliable.

The game law violator is generally an individual of more or less positive nature. It is not a very hard matter to lead him to the right path. To drive him usually involves a contract with an intensely stubborn subject on the other end of the rope.

We believe in proper game and fish protection and have always been identified with every legitimate movement in that direction. A style of campaign such as we have criticized is but sowing dragons' teeth.

Before concluding we will draw attention to a paradoxical statement we have repeatedly noticed as emanating from one individual in his game-protection harangues, and that is a defense and protection of "a valuable food supply of the people." Under the present State statute the phrase "an expensive food supply for some people" would be more apt. Again, the laudatory reports of the campaign for the organization of county and town associations for the protection of fish and game are subject to an analysis which may question the utility of the movement. When it is known that a large percentage of the membership of the newly formed clubs are business men and converts to the incendiary harangues of the organizer, and the whole rank and file of the many organizations formed and contemplated now numbers several thousand, if interested reports are reliable, the question naturally arises, for whom is the game to be protected and what will be the individual pro rata of fin, fur or feather in the course of a very few years when the game-protection millennium has arrived through the efforts of the Grand Spread Eagle and his satellites, and there is a local branch of the California Game and Fish Protection Association in every city and hamlet in the State?

The style of proselyting hero referred to is shown in the following account taken from a Stockton paper:

The local branch of the California Game and Fish Protective Association started off last evening with a membership of 105 sportsmen. The meeting was held in the Council chambers. The President of the State Association, being present to outline the work and the resultant benefits. He stated that the State Board would appoint as Game Wardens those recommended by the local association. Twenty-one convictions, he said, had been secured in Los Angeles county since last May through the efforts of the local association there. His idea is to appoint Wardens throughout this county, that game may be thoroughly protected from indiscriminate slaughter and from "game hogs."

The State Commission allows $25 for each arrest made, whether or not there is a conviction, providing the district attorney certifies that there was sufficient evidence to make the arrest, so no one loses anything in prosecuting offenders. He also stated that he had learned that quail and young ducks were being killed now and he hoped the association would recommend at least two or three men for immediate appointment and he would have the credentials of the men sent here the first of next week.

G. A. Aherton was elected temporary Chairman and R. L. Quisenberry temporary Secretary. The By-laws of the Santa Clara Association were read, but it was decided best to name a committee instead of effecting a permanent organization last evening. On motion the Chair appointed the following: Organization—W. A. Morrissey, R. DeTreville and Charles Merrill. By-laws—H. C. Keyes, George Houston and R. L. Quisenberry. Nomination Officers—C. L. Orman, F. Cadie and E. F. Harris. Membership—C. L. Orman, William Douglas and James Wood.

The chair was also empowered to name a committee of five to suggest men for the Game Commissioners and secure their agreement to act. These Commissioners can act in any part of the State, not being confined to a county. They also have power to make arrests without warrants if they catch an offender in the act. Several will be appointed on the islands and in other sections of the county where there are quail and doves. The dues are only $1 a year. The next meeting will be held next Monday evening at 8 o'clock in the Council Chamber.

From the above it would be inferred that a stagnation of all public and private affairs will ensue unless Game Wardens are numerous as gate posts—enough of them to handle the grand army of "poachers" and "game hogs" actual and implied.

Snipe Hunting.

With the advent of spring, the sportsman's thoughts turn from ducks to snipe, for, although the duck may be legally killed up to the first of February, as a matter of fact he and the majority of his comrades have usually felt the stimulation of the migratory instinct before that time, and many have started on their long and tedious journey to the frozen tundras of the north, where waterfowl breed in summer. The snipe usually reach hear in the fall earlier than the ducks, and the greater number go farther to the south to winter. Some remain all through that season, though, and those who know where to go may have good sport with them at any time. Yet, the cream of the sport is when they go south and when they return on their northward trip. If the weather be favorable, even well into April, these game little long-billed fellows can be flushed from a suitable bog in sufficient numbers to afford the keenest sportsman as lively a day as he may wish for.

Of all the birds that cleave the air, or float on water, the snipe is the most erratic, and the most difficult to speculate on. He is likely to be in a certain marsh hole one day, and in parts unknown the next. The cause of his sudden departure is best known to himself, and we can not fathom it. Sometimes a sudden frost will drive out all the birds in a given piece of territory, and then the next cold snap may bring in more to replace them.

Some days the birds are wild, rising out of gunshot, and getting out of sight as rapidly as their wings will carry them; another day when weather conditions are no different, they will lay until almost stepped on. No general rule can be laid down in regard to their habits, though usually on warm, quiet days they are inclined to be lazy, and in cold, blustery weather the reverse. There are plenty of exceptions to the rule and it is not an absolute one.

Snipe are voracious feeders when they can obtain their favorite diet, the luscious, fat angleworm. Garden slugs do very well in times of worm scarcity, but the snipe's whole anatomy is built for a worm diet, and it is on that kind of food he attains the excellence of flavor and quantity of fat that have endeared his little trussed body to the epicure. The long bill, so thickly studded with nerve ends at the tip, and those eyes placed so far back the bird cannot see what he eats, were made with a view to keeping down the worm population. Those who know say the bird feeds almost entirely at night, and bores the earth with that long bill in quest of his favorite food, seldom making a mistake in sinking his hole where there are not good surface indications of the presence of fish bait.

Snipe are found in a great many places that an amateur would never look for them, though their preference is usually a hog hole in black, rich land, free from alkali. They can not abide the presence of this, probably because worms are not able to thrive in such a chemical laboratory as the usual piece of alkali land. In looking over unknown country for snipe, it is only necessary to bear in mind their favorite food, and then go to some place where the earth is soft enough to allow them to probe for it. If snipe are in the country, some will probably be there. The number of really good snipe bogs in this end of the State is small, and that is why the birds are so scarce here.

The best way to locate them is to hunt around until a small number of birds are stumbled on, and flushed; then they can be marked down. Usually some of the bunch will pitch into a favorite hole where there will be a number of others. They can easily be located as on lighting they usually run only a foot or two, and can be found when wanted.

A good retriever dog that will stay at heel until wanted is a good thing to have when after snipe. They blend so well with the herbage where they usually rise that a dog's nose is necessary to recover dead ones. There are some dogs which will point a snipe, and the master is fortunate who possesses one of them, for of course he will be a helper worth having, though personal experience has not been satisfactory with dogs other than retrievers in snipe hunting. The bird exhales a very faint odor, and dogs often run over him without making a point. Of course this means a lost shot. When birds are wild, they will not allow a dog to approach close enough to wind them, and it may be safely said that not one bird dog in ten is worth his salt on snipe, unless they are more fat and lazy than usual.

Shooting snipe is the most fascinating and difficult part of the game. In snipe shooting, as in everything else, you must first find your snipe, then shoot him.

The eccentricities of the jacksnipe are manifested in every movement made by the bird, but it is in his flight that he proves the most puzzling to those who hunt him. It is seldom any consecutive two birds rise at all alike, and they are able to give angles that count a miss on the best and quickest shots. Not all the blame lies on the shot, either, as he has no assurance when he fires that the bird may not be a yard below or above or to the side of the spot at which he shot. The aim might have been good, but the bird was not.

It is impossible to reduce snipe shooting, or, for that matter, any other form of game shooting, to rule, and as it is a hopeless task we will content ourselves with looking at some of the ways in which different snipe shots say they shoot snipe.

There is the deliberate way of the man with the hard-hitting gun, who says he lets them "make three dives before he shoots." He lets the birds get up, and when they steady down, as sometimes they do after flying a few rods, he fires. And probably he scores a kill.

Then there is your snap shot, who affects a cylinder bored gun, and relies on a quick aim at short range and a spread of shot to bag his bird. He is likely to be a successful snipe killer, too.

Both are likely to be successful, but that is as far as any certainty of method goes. If the bird was a known quantity and could be relied on to rise at blue-rock distance with bluecock regularity, the snap shot would be in his element. But that is just what a snipe never does. He gets up under foot at the first rise, and if he escapes to be flushed again he may jump at the limit of the gun's range. So what can be done about it?

The time to shoot at a snipe is the same as it is on any other bird. That is when the gun gets "on" him. If he is twenty yards away, good. If he is sixty, and you want to risk a long shot, also good. The quicker the shooter can get on his bird, other things being equal, the more success he will attain as a snipe hunter. The work will probably be snap shooting, and in most cases there is not much figuring done about it. When the bird gets up he is shot at, if this be possible. Some birds will dive about so the marksman cannot get a line on them at all. So, of course, there is no use of scaring up possible other birds in the vicinity by a wasted shot. Like many other kinds of shooting a marked element of success in killing snipe is in knowing when not to shoot, as well as when to draw trigger.

The difficulty in hitting the snipe is due to a blending of two qualities of flight in the bird, either of which are puzzling enough unaided and unaccompanied by the other. These are the bird's great speed and his wonderful control of his little body when in swift motion. The lightning turns to the right, left, up or down which he has under command, coupled with the speed of a teal duck, are entirely accountable for the difficulty of hitting the bird. He has no great amount of vitality, and while an occasional one will carry off bad wounds, usually a slight blow will score a kill.

Once in a while a scared snipe will lose his head and come spinning by over the head of the hunter, and then it takes good shooting to stop his flight. His path will be zigzag and hitting him will be largely a matter of luck. Some say snipe fly in this way because they are unable to see directly in front of them and must take a crooked course, but this is hardly likely. The bird seems to fly with his head on one side, and this is probably to allow one eye to guide its course.

Some snipe hunters claim the birds are most successfully hunted down wind, and others who hunt over dogs swear to the reverse. This is another attempt to reduce the performance to rule, and it is impracticable. Mother Nature has not laid out her swamps with a proper and due regard to the desires of theorists in snipe hunting, and it is frequently impossible to keep either an up wind or down wind course for more than 100 yards, unless the wind be more than usually accommodating and changes for every had spot in the marsh. When practicable, it is better to hunt against the wind if a dog be used, as the breeze gives him the needed benefit of what little scent the birds exhale. If no dog is along better results may be obtained by hunting down wind. The birds occasionally rise against it and offer cross-shots, but the hunter cannot rely on their being so accommodating. They are quite as likely to dart off down wind like a skyrocket.

The best way is to leave the rising of the bird largely to chance and approach him from the most convenient point. He may fly at the shooter or he may not fly at all. Sometimes they will not rise unless actually routed out.

Guns and loads for snipe shooting differ as much as the ways of hunting the bird. Some successful hunters advocate a light cylinder bored gun and small charges of nitro powder. Some like No. 9 shot and some prefer No. 7. The individual abilities of the gun and the wildness of the snipe to be hunted must determine this. No 8 shot seems to be the favorite, and as a close pattern must be obtained to hit so small a bird a close shooting gun seems to be generally used. A pretty stiff charge of powder, to give a quick load, is usually preferred. Smokeless powder is a necessity as the dead birds must be carefully marked or they will be lost.—Los Angeles Express.

THE FARM.

The Farm Boy.

There is no question of the influence which the sturdy outdoor life has upon country boys; and the fact that the life is harnessed to regular, imperative duties is to the boy's advantage. He is developed gradually and healthfully, his mind following his physical strength rather than the reverse. And around him for his everyday observation are the very best object lessons possible for a boy's developing life. He associates familiarly with nature during his work and recreation; and even during his sleep the air which enters his open chamber window is laden with the odors of the apple blossoms, or the harvest season, or, perhaps, is the pure, stimulating atmosphere of the white, undulating winter fields. But it all goes toward making him stronger, sturdier, more self-reliant, more ambitious, more observing. He is healthy all through, physically, mentally, morally. — Farm Journal.

A Good Cow.

What is meant by a good cow? is sometimes asked. Here is the record: A noteworthy milking record has been established by the Red Poll cow Crocus, which belonged to the famous Norfolk dairy herd at Whitlingham. She gave birth to her third calf May 11, 1890; since that date she continued uninterruptedly in milk till September 28, 1899, a period of over nine years. Her milk yield in the last year of her life was at the daily rate of 43¾ pounds, or nearly 4½ gallons. During the nine years and four months that she was continually in milk she yielded altogether 50,428 pounds, or nearly 23 tons of milk. Over the last five years the average quantity of butter fat in her milk was as high as 4.3 per cent. Her live weight when sent to market after being fed on grass for the last six months of her life was 1159 pounds. In the nine years since her last calving she gave something like forty-five times her own weight in milk, and her average production during that period was 5403 pounds of milk, or considerably over 500 gallons per annum. — California Cultivator.

Many of the older breeders of Short-horns are under the erroneous impression that Durham was the original name of the breed and that the term Short-horn is a modern appellation. Such is not the case. The original expression in the ancestral home of the breed was short-horned cattle, a name given no doubt in contradistinction to the long-horn breed, which was a well known established type. It was with long-born cattle that Bakewell of Dishley made his world-famous experiments relating to inbreeding which paved the way for the marked improvement in the old short-horned stock of northeastern England that was inaugurated by the brothers Colling in the county of Durham, more than a century ago. The heart of the old Short-horn country was the little valley of the river Tees, that divides the counties of York and Durham, and the short-horned cattle of the early days were often referred to as the Teeswater breed. As to the date when the word Durham crept into use Short-horn history is silent. As a matter of fact it had no real birth. It is not improbable that the exhibition in England of a very celebrated steer called The Durham Ox supplied a foundation for the use of the word as a breed name. This steer was bred by Charles Colling in 1796 and was sired by the famous bull Favorite 252. He was a monster, fed for years for show purposes, attaining an alleged weight of 3400 pounds and was extensively exhibited by a showman who is said to have refused $10,000 for him.

A Satisfactory Dairy Ration.

One of the most perplexing questions for the average dairy farmer is the feed ration. The cost of production must be considered and also the results.

Shall it be of the finely chopped material or will it be the coarse feed? I will give below the ration used by one of the leading farmers of southern New York and his mode of giving:

He arises at 5 in the morning, goes to the barn and milks, after which he gives his herd of 30 cows three quarts apiece of gluten meal. He returns to the house and eats his breakfast. Then he gives one-half bushel of ensilage, and after this is eaten five pounds of cornstalks. This amount is given twice a day, morning and night.

At noon two quarts of gluten fed with cornstalks, making in all eight quarts gluten meal, one bushel ensilage and 15 pounds of stalks to a cow. This I think is a very good ration, for it includes all those foods which go to make up a good diet, and a thrifty condition is always secured when it is used. My own milk is delivered at the local co-operative creamery and during the past year averaged me $70 per cow; surely not a bad showing for a bad summer. Ours is one of the most successful creameries in the State. It sells butter at the highest price, deducts the cost of help and making, and uses the Babcock butter fat test in distributing the money return among its patrons. This is conceded to be the best method in use and it certainly has been satisfactory. — Morgan S. Joslyn in American Agriculturist.

John Case, of Colorado, gives his experience in feeding alfalfa to cattle: "Five years ago this fall I began feeding cattle for a stock company. We had two fields of eighty acres each covered with a fall growth of alfalfa about a foot high. One field had plenty of water in it, while the other had none. The first of October the company bought 200 head of two year old steers. They wanted the steers pastured on the alfalfa and worked on to corn. We gave all of them a good feed of alfalfa hay, then divided them and put 100 in one field and 100 in the other. The 100 head which were put in the field having the water were never taken out until they had cleaned the field, which they did in a short time. They did remarkably well from the day they were put in and went onto corn feed in fine condition. We did not have a single case of bloat in this bunch. The second bunch in the dry field was turned out into buffalo grass pasture to get water the middle of the afternoon each day and was left until morning. I did not like this plan and it resulted in quite a loss, as the steers would not eat buffalo grass after being on alfalfa a day or two and would always stand at the gate waiting to be turned in, consequently they were always hungry. The first morning there was any dew forty head of them bloated out of the 100 head and we lost five out of the forty. I was close to them and saw the first one fall. It was dead when I reached it. I waited for them to fall before sticking and thereby lost the next four head. I then concluded that when a steer went down it was as good as dead, so we began to stick them on the run, as it were. I sometimes had to stick one twice before relieving it, but did not lose any more. Since then I never take cattle off alfalfa after once putting them on until I remove them for good."

The man in the city who handles dressed fowl has no interest in plumage or stray feathers, nor does he care for carriage; but all recommend pure-bred fowls because there is such symmetry and similarity in carcasses. The smooth, even lot of birds sells the most readily, and the dealer in dressed poultry is as much of a stickler for the pure breeds as the man who deals in live ones and dotes on plumage.

Field Peas for Hogs.

As an experiment last year on June 20th to 25th I sowed two and one-half acres of cow peas for hog pasture, writes a correspondent to the Indiana Farmer. Having no old corn to start the hogs with I thought to aid them by allowing them to run in the peas. The peas came up and did fine, and about September 1st when some of the ripest pods were yellow and just commencing to hull, I turned in 24 shoats, averaging 68 pounds each, and four old sows. They all run in the peas for 28 days without any other feed with no slop. They had water from a spring run. At the end of 28 days I sold the shoats. They weighed 109 pounds, average, which I think did very well. The land was a sloping hillside and badly washed by rains, and would not have produced more than 25 to 30 bushels of corn in an ordinary season. I was so well pleased with the experiment that I am sowing ten acres this year. I would say to those who wish to try cow peas to sow a small patch and see for yourselves whether you like them or not and whether you think they are well suited to your land and method of farming. The farmer should experiment on a small scale with new crops and not risk too much.

Value of Corn Turned Into Pork.

Following are some recent tests of hog feeding in Ohio:

On December 13th a bunch of hogs were weighed and they were again weighed on December 20th and 28th. The gain for the corn fed during the first period was an average of 14.8 pounds in weight per bushel of corn, and for the second period a gain of 15¾ pounds per bushel. In the first instance, calculating hogs at $4.60, the feeding value of the corn was 68½¢ per bushel, and in the second instance at $4.65 for hogs, the result represented 70¾¢ for corn. The market value of corn at the same time was 32¢ per bushel. This is an interesting illustration of what profits can be realized in converting grain into fat animals.

Brown Leghorns.

Great improvement in size has been made in this variety of Leghorns within three years. It has been demonstrated that females weighing five pounds or better will lay quite as many eggs as the little three pounder, and, at the same time, the larger females lay larger eggs than do the smaller ones. Thus are gained larger eggs, as many of them, and when turned into market poultry a carcass that will dress to a moderate-sized fowl, which is much more valuable when sold by the pound. The way to gain the larger size is to breed only from your largest hens. It is not as well understood as it should be that size is to the great extent influenced by the female. This influence runs throughout all nature. A Bantam hen mated to a big Cochin male will produce chicks which when grown will not be one-half as large as would result from crossing a Bantam male with a large Cochin female. If you wish large fowls, breed only from fine, large hens; if you wish small size, use only the eggs that are laid by very small hens; this will hold good with all kinds of fowls.

A correspondent of the Ohio Farmer writes that a few years ago he drew to his barn a stack of hay not really mouldy, but a little musty in smell. He thought it was not bad enough to burn it for feeding purposes, but in a few days after he began to use it he found his butter was off flavor, and it continued so until he began on good, sweet hay again, when it came all right about as quickly as it went all wrong. He was lucky, for sometimes it is not as easy to feed the taints out of milk and butter as it is to feed them in. Avoid both musty and mouldy fodder or grain of all kinds, especially for cows in milk.

Grading Up a Dairy Herd.

Malcome H. Gardner, of Delavan, Wis., is a veteran dairyman and breeder of Holstein-Friesian cattle. He contributed to the Holstein-Friesian Register a capital article on the grading up a dairy herd from mothers who were not of profitable dairy quality. We append the following extract from the same:

In beginning dairy farming, something over twenty years ago, I selected the very best stock I could find, paying from $10 to $15 per head above the ruling auction prices for the average cattle of the country. The cattle selected had half, or better, of Shorthorn blood, were as a rule good milkers at flush, and desirable and for the butcher when dry. They were either pure-bred or high-bred bulls when I got them; and I raised them for cows and calves. I bred them, and the calves to a pure-bred Holstein-Friesian and raised everything for the first two crops of calves.

I got some profit and a whole lot of experience out of the matter. I first learned that, while the cows were good milkers for the first four months, they were not persistent; dropping rapidly, and going dry at an average of eight months. Also that while the dams which I had selected were good milkers at start, their heifer calves by Shorthorn bulls were not to be depended upon—not one-third of them equaling their dams as milkers. The Shorthorn steers fed well and were turned off at good prices at thirty months old; and was much more profitable to me than their sisters, of which I was trying to make dairy cows. Of the sisters, two-thirds were sent to the butcher at three and four years of age, netting me quite a loss when figuring cost of raising against milk and price of beef. The cross-bred Holstein-Friesian Shorthorn steers, fed and turned off at the same price were yet profitable. I could not carry the steer business with the cross-bred animals, milk being of more importance.

In every case I found that the calf of the Shorthorn cow by the Holstein-Friesian bull was a better milker than her dam; and I had some fair milkers from the heifers I had had to turn off as beef. I found that where I had been able to get but about 4500 lbs. of milk as an average per cow, I could now as easily get 6000 lbs. It is not my intention to follow the herd and the adding of pure-bred females, until a yield of 10,500 lbs., milk was reached; but merely to point out that breeding to beef bulls produced beef with certainty, and milk with very great uncertainty; while breeding to dairy bulls made milk a certainty and fair feeders of the cross-bred steers. The growth of the cross-bred steers was specially noticeable, being greater than that made by the Shorthorns; but the finish and handling was no as smooth.

I have pointed out before, that the average man does not understand the great gain in milk production by placing a pure bred dairy bull at the head of the herd. If a cow sired by such a bull produces but one pint of milk at a milking more than her dam did, in the 600 milkings per year it comes to 600 lbs. This amount at eighty cents per 100 lbs., would come to $4.80 per year; or for the six years' average life of the milk cow, to $28.80. Thus, if a bull sire but ten such cows he would earn $288 for his owner; whereas he would probably sire many more, and the gain would not be less than 1000 lbs milk each per year. What matter if the butcher will give your neighbor $5 more for his Shorthorn grade than you for your Holstein-Friesian grade, if your cow has already earned you many times that amount, more than your neighbor's has for him?

The high or rich flavor so much commended by the experts who award the prizes on butter at some of the dairy exhibitions we suspect to be in a large part due to an excess of casein in the butter. By what process it can have been retained there without leaving too much buttermilk we will not pretend to explain. We know that newly churned butter, which has not been thoroughly washed and worked, has to us a finer flavor when new than that which was well washed while in the granular form, or as the directions say, when the butter is in granules about as large as a grain of wheat. But this casein, or the buttermilk that holds it, causes a rapid change in flavor to one that is not as pleasant, and this may help to explain why some high testing samples are found to go off in flavor so rapidly. We are not so sure but some methods of feeding may develop more casein as well as to make butter harder, softer, or more oily in appearance. Years ago this would not have been thought possible, but now these are well known facts.

Will J. Smith and Joseph Green, two farmers who reside at Trask on the Sacramento river, purchased a Shorthorn bull from the Howard herd at the State Fair last week for $300. The number of cattle and other stock sales made during the fair were numerous.

From Pueblo, Colo., almost to the Kansas line, a distance of 100 miles, is a section in which the chief crop is cantaloupes, made famous under the name "Rocky Ford." The "Netted Gem" is the variety, and in 1900 780 cars were shipped from 2500 acres. This year the acreage has been increased 10 per cent. The value of the crop is very large.

ASTHMA CURE FREE!

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent Cure in All Cases.

Sent Absolutely Free on Receipt of Postal.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

We want to send to every sufferer a trial treatment of Asthmalene, similar to the one that cured Mr. Wells. We'll send it by mail POSTPAID, ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE, to any sufferer who will write for it, even on a postal. Never mind, though you are despairing, however bad your case, Asthmalene will relieve and cure. The worse your case, the more glad we are to send it. Do not delay. Write at once, addressing DR. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO., 79 East 130th St., N. Y. City. Sold by all Druggists.

the. ...olk county, ...can trace English history. (See Encyclopedia Britannica.) They were originally bred more for dairy purposes than for beef, but in the last two years they have come to the front and yet retained their characteristics, many cows making 100 lbs. of butter per year. These cows are more good dairy cows in the Red House than in any other of the best breeds. They have very short legs, heavy bodies, are very docile and easily kept, putting on a greater amount of flesh for the amount of feed consumed than any other breed. They mature early and are good mothers.

Golden Gate Race Meeting.

The race meeting at the Oakland track ended on Wednesday of this week. By the very generous distribution of passes a large crowd was drawn to the track each day, and the bookmakers got quite a lively play on nearly every race. Of the six or seven races given each day all but one were for the runners. The harness races resulted in good contests, but the track was so deeply cut up and heavy that the time was very slow in every event of this character.

On Friday of last week the race for horses owned by members of the Golden Gate Park Driving Club furnished a seven heat race, which finally went to the big pacer, Durfee Mac by McKinney, driven by his owner, A. Joseph, who handled the horse well and incidentally gave him a standard record of 2:24 in the fourth heat, which was equal to 2:18 or better on a good track.

Saturday, Mr. G. W. Kingsbury won a good race with his road horse Lynall, beating Floradora, Puerto Rico, Prince Howard and Lena Holly. There was a strong tip on the last named mare, but she disappointed her backers. This daughter of Mountain Boy has a wonderful flight of speed, but is erratic and a bad breaker. She could probably get a record of 2:15 or better could she be controlled.

On Monday rain made the track so heavy that harness racing was out of the question and much to the chagrin of the horsemen who had entries in the 2:12 pace. That race was declared off entirely, although there were six horses ready to start for it on Tuesday or Wednesday. The race Tuesday was for the 2:14 class trotters. But three horses, Alta Vela, Dan W. and Boydello started. Boydello acted badly and got the flag in the first heat. Dan W. also refused to keep his feet, and Alta Vela won in straight heats in slow time.

The meeting closed Wednesday with a good program of racing, which opened with a race for horses owned by members of the Golden Gate Park Driving Club. The pacer Al Sandy by Wayland W., recently purchased by J. O'Kane from T. C. Cahney of Eureka, was the winner, the trotting mare Lena Holly getting second money. The time made in the race, 2:29, shows that Al Sandy will be able to pace in 2:20 or better on a good track. The running events were well contested throughout. During this meeting J. W. Brooks has officiated as presiding judge and starter of the harness races. F. E. Mulholland has been the starter of the running races and has made a good record. He will act in the same capacity at the Los Angeles meeting, which begins to-day.

Summaries of the races from Friday until Wednesday's closing are as follows:

Cresceus Wins Again.

The second race between Cresceus 2:02½ and The Abbott 2:03½, champion trotting stallion and gelding respectively, came off at the Readville track near Boston last Saturday. The purse was $20,000, given by that generous patron of the trotting turf, Thomas W. Lawson, and the winner of the race took all.

Something over twelve thousand persons paid to see the big event, and all this money went to a local charity. The weather was perfect, but the track very heavy from rain the day before and fast time was out of the question.

Cresceus won the race, but The Abbott managed to take one heat. The son of Chimes was not right and acted badly in every heat except the second in which he fairly out-trotted his rival, and had the track been fast a mile in 2:03 might have been seen.

Ketcham won the toss for position and had the pole in the first heat. There were three scores before the word was given. Cresceus shot to the front immediately on getting the signal and The Abbott broke before the first turn was reached. It required a strong effort on the part of Geers to get him back to his feet, and by that time Ketcham's horse was about a dozen lengths in the lead. Geers drove to get within the distance and when safe stopped driving, Cresceus winning by about ten lengths in 2:10½.

There was some excitement in the second heat as The Abbott kept his feet and a contest resulted. Cresceus went out in the lead as before and was a length in front of the gelding at the first quarter pole, gaining probably another length at the three-eighths. Here Geers began driving The Abbott and overhauling the stallion caught him by the time the half mile pole was reached and passing him took the pole.

A mighty cheer went up from the crowd which was undoubtedly friendly to The Abbott, and when the high handsome bay had increased his lead to three lengths at the head of the stretch the crowd was frantic. Ketcham began laying the whip to his horse and the champion responded, but he could not catch the gelding and Geers, looking back, held The Abbott in hand, reaching the wire a half length in front of Cresceus, and received an ovation. The time was 2:03½.

In the third heat The Abbott again acted badly and Ketcham drove very fast when scoring, evidently with the intention of keeping his rival off his feet as much as possible. When the word was given The Abbott was on a break, and Ketcham had the stallion around the first turn before Geers got the gelding squared away. Ketcham drove to put The Abbott behind the flag and although at one time the latter was more than a distance behind, he put on a tremendous burst of speed and was but forty yards behind when Cresceus crossed the score.

Two-ounce toe weights were put on The Abbott before the fourth heat, and while they steadied him, they also tired him and he could not beat the determined stallion who seemed able to race all day if necessary. Cresceus took the lead at the start, and was three lengths in front of The Abbott at the quarter pole. Geers made a drive and The Abbott gradually cut down this lead until his head was in front as the three-quarters was passed. Here he tired perceptibly and Cresceus went by him.

Geers saw it was a hopeless case and pulling his horse up permitted Cresceus to win by six lengths.

The summary of the race is as follows:

Special match, trotting, purse $20,000.
Cresceus, ch b by Robert McGregor, (Ketcham) 1 2 1 1
The Abbott, b g by Chimes, (Geers) 2 1 2 2

Pacing Races Seem to be Popular.

From the passing of the Narragansett pacer in the early part of the last century until 1879, the pacer as an American race horse was considered of no value, and no classes were made for him in arranging the programs of the great race meetings of the country. In the year last mentioned a number of sensational lateral gaited horses were in training, among them being Blind Tom, Mattie Hunter, Lucy and Rowdy Boy. Their performances at the small meetings in the early part of that year were of so brilliant a character as to attract the attention of race-goers everywhere, and certain progressive managers, appreciating the popularity which would inure to their meetings by the unequalled performances of these fast, but despised race horses, offered liberal purses for their appearance, and for the first time in a generation this class of horse was recognized as a fit associate of his aristocratic trotting brothers. The races in which these pacers participated were the most sensational of that year, and on the days when they were to race greater crowds attended than had ever assembled to witness a trotting race in all the history of those associations. The experience of that year demonstrated the fact that the public desires to see speed in harness racing in whatever form it comes, and for that reason the pacer has become a permanent fixture in harness racing. Ever since the gates were opened to the pacer that year he has been a prominent factor in every successful race meeting held in this country. As his popularity began to increase, certain prominent breeders began to deery his merits and predict that unless something was done to eliminate this so-called plebeian member from harness racing the great industry would eventually crumble into ruins, and so hysterical did some of the advocates of this policy of extermination become that they would not have an animal on their breeding farms whose ancestors possessed a strain of pacing blood, but notwithstanding this fusillade of abuse the breeding of harness horses continued and, at frequent intervals, the fastest and most promising racing prospect produced from the trotting nurseries was afflicted with an insane desire to become a great race horse as a lateral gaited performer, and try as they would the breeders and trainers were unable to disahuse his mind of this improper notion. In his obstinacy he exemplified the old maxim, that "a man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still." The popularity of this once despised horse has increased to such an extent that he is at least an equal favorite with the trotter on the speedway and the race course. That he holds a high place in the estimation of the public was illustrated at the recent Providence meeting, when a large field contended for a purse of $10,000 before an audience of 15,000; being by far the largest gathering ever assembled upon a Rhode Island race course. So well satisfied were the managers with the performances of the horses entered in this important race and their ability to attract the populace, that they have announced a purse of $20,000 for a 2:10 pacing class in 1902. That General Tracy will derive much consolation from reading the report of the Providence meeting we do not believe, but the pacer will live and prosper in the future as he has in the past without the aid or sympathy of those who consider him an outcast—Rider and Driver.

The Place to Study Horses.

In the matter of breeding horses for market, perhaps at no other place could more valuable lessons be learned by the farmer than right at the auction ring. With many breeders there is either a woeful lack of judgment or a provoking carelessness in breeding for market which can only result in a little expensive experience. It seems to be the opinion, and quite universal, too, that in a drafter, size is about the only essential feature. This is a fallacious idea which will be readily obliterated in the minds of those who would avail themselves of the opportunity to attend the auction sales. A drafter weighing a ton, but leggy and illy proportioned, will bring a disappointing price from the very critical buyer. The hocky fellow with heavy quarters, short coupled, good head and neck—one that shows breeding and action—he is the one that will make the money. The other one will be classed as a plain worker, and sell that way, too, no matter what his weight.

The same is true of the coacher, only he must be finished, and style and action emphasized more strongly. He is an unfortunate farmer who cannot overcome the idea that "any old thing will do" for a broodmare. Your broodmare should possess as much and the same quality as a sire, and if she doesn't, don't breed her. These suggestions are not new, but perhaps you had forgotten them, or, possibly, you who freely criticize others are guilty of the same offense.—Chicago Live Stock World.

President McKinley's Favorite Team.

President McKinley was exceedingly fond of good horses. He used to prefer a saddle horse, but since that form of recreation deprived him of the company of Mrs. McKinley in recent years, he rarely made use of his fine saddle horse, Denmark. A favorite pair with the President and Mrs. McKinley was a handsome team of sorrels which the President purchased from F. C. Warren of Fox Lake, Wis. There is probably not another coach team in the United States bred exactly like them. They are descended on the paternal side from steeds of the desert. On the maternal side they trace back to Henry Clay, founder of the Clay family of trotters.

THREE DOLLARS—That's not a very large sum of money, but it may enable you to sell a colt for a big price or win a large sum with him out of the $6000 Pacific Breeders Futurity, which is for the foals of mares bred this year. Anybody who puts up the $3, whether he is a member of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association or not, can name a mare in this stake, which will close Tuesday next, October 1st. This is the last appeal we will be able to make to the readers of this journal who have bred mares this year and we desire at this time to impress upon them the benefits to be derived from the small expenditure required to make an entry. Every person who breeds with the idea of training and racing the produce knows the necessity of entering in stakes, for the reason that more money can be won in one stake than in several purses, and buyers and breeders set a higher value on stake winners than on the colts that win the ordinary events. There is an honor in owning a stake winner that every breeder should be anxious to achieve and it will do more to advertise the stock of a farm than anything else. Every stallion owner who desires to give his horse proper advantages and opportunities should never fail to have the produce of his horse well represented in stakes, as it is an undeniable fact that the sires of stake winners get large patronage. The owner of a stallion can therefore do no better or more effective missionary work for his horse than by inducing those who have bred to him this year to name the mares and enter the produce in the Pacific Breeders Futurity. This stake will be the big feature of Pacific Coast racing when the different divisions are trotted and paced. The one that closed last year had the largest entry list of any stake thus far inaugurated on this Coast, and has attracted the attention of breeders and owners all over the State. The stake that closes this year should have a still larger entry, and if the breeders and owners show the proper enterprise the stake will be worth nearer ten thousand dollars than the guaranteed six thousand. There are many chances to win money in this stake and we ask our readers to turn to the advertisement in this issue and make note of them. The owner of the stallion, owner of the mare and owners of the colts all have portions set aside for them. It is one of the best and at the same time one of the least expensive stakes ever devised. Don't miss this opportunity and don't forget the date of closing—October 1st.

WHILE CRESCUS FAILED to lower or equal his record last Thursday at the Belmont track, Philadelphia, he trotted a great mile and showed to the eight thousand people present that he is a wonderful horse and entitled to his name of champion. His mile was in 2:04½ and the quarters were as follows: 0:30½, 0:30½, 0:32, 0:31½. Even a champion cannot repeat his best performance every day and it is only when the horse, the driver, the track and the weather are all at their very best that champion records are made. Any trotter that can make the circle of a mile track in 2:04 is worth going a long way to see: a mile at that speed is a great mile. We incline to the opinion that Cresceus will again equal his record of 2:02½ and there is a possibility that he will recede it, but whether he does or not his honors of championship are not lessened because he cannot repeat the performance every time he makes the attempt.

WHAT OF THE FAIRS NEXT YEAR? A large majority of the district associations in California failed to hold fairs this year, but will draw their entire appropriation in 1902 and make an effort to give an exhibition and race meeting that will be a credit to all concerned. If there is any lesson which the history of the district fairs for the past few years has taught it is that the public will patronize a worthy one and will give the indifferent ones the go by. Where a good showing of the products of the district is made, and a good race meeting given in connection therewith the gate receipts are large and the fair a success, but where the tax-payers, farmers, fruit growers and manufacturers are slighted and the gambling element catered to, small attendance follows and a deficit invariably results. It was never intended when the districts were established and money appropriated for them that the live stock and other exhibits should be a secondary consideration, as it is expressly provided in the law that none of the money appropriated shall be expended on the racing. Many boards of directors, however, seem to proceed on the basis that the races are the chief end of the fairs and that the money paid in for exclusive betting privilege should be the chief source of revenue. This must be changed. It is not fair to put the live stock exhibits to the rear with a few hog-rag premiums and provide generously for the horses that race. The resident of the district who imports fine specimens of the beef and milk breeds of cattle is doing more to build up the interests of his county and to increase its property values than the man who raises a skate race horse. The persons who plant orchards and vineyards are more worthy of encouragement with favors than those who pursue the vocation of bookmaking on race results, and if a lot of free admission tickets are to be distributed they had better be given to the farmers than the touts. The fairs of 1902 can be made of great value to the State and to the districts where they are held if they are managed in accordance with the ideas on which they were established. The premium list for live stock, fruits and the products of the districts should be increased. The gambling features should be given less prominence and bookmaking abolished altogether. A good program of harness racing with a few running events can be arranged that will furnish the amusement end of the fair and draw large crowds to see them if they are properly managed. This feature should be as closely looked after as any part of the fair. While we advocate the giving of generous purses associations should be careful not to give too large purses or too many. Give as much as you can afford and no more, and we will add right here that the harness horse owners have about made up their minds and will probably enter into an agreement not to enter at any meeting next year where the hookmakers are given the betting privilege. District fair racing, as well as the State Fair racing, has been almost ruined by the professional gamblers and if the fairs are to be brought back to their former standard they will have to return to former methods. The California district boards have a grand opportunity before them to make the fairs high-class and successful. It is to be hoped they will grasp it.

LOS ANGELES will be the Mecca next week of all California horsemen who have anything that is able to race. The meeting in the southern metropolis opens to-day and unless all signs fail, it will be the best meeting held there for years. All the harness purses have good lists of entries and among them are several horses that have not started this year as yet, so it will keep the horsemen guessing to pick the winners. A very large number of runners are on the ground for the overnight entries, while the stakes all filled with big lists. Syndicate hooking is not to be permitted this year and there will be auction pools on all events. No city in the United States has the beautiful climate which is a feature of Los Angeles at this season. The officers of the association are energetic and affable gentlemen who are doing everything in their power to make the meeting successful in every way. That there will be good racing is certain, and no pains will be spared to have the rules strictly followed by all who participate or are in any way interested in them or the management thereof. A pleasant two weeks can be passed by anyone who attends the Los Angeles fair and race meeting this year.

AT SANTA ROSA, the Sonoma and Marin County Agricultural Society is holding a street fair this week, which is being largely attended. There is a fine display of fruit and other products of the district and a creditable exhibit of live stock. No racing is being given. The exhibits are highly spoken of by those who have attended. This is the last day of the fair and a round trip price of $1 has been made by the California and Northwestern Railway from San Francisco to Santa Rosa and return.

TWO CASES will probably come up before the Pacific District Board of Appeals of the National Trotting Association this fall that will be of much interest to all harness horse owners and trainers, as well as the directors of associations that give racing. In the first case protest was filed by an owner suspended by the Santa Rosa Racing Association, on the ground that the association which gave the meeting was not the Santa Rosa Racing Association which made the suspension, but another organization altogether. It will be remembered that the Santa Rosa meeting was first advertised by an organization of Santa Rosa citizens, and that the management of the races was afterwards turned over to Caesar Young, the hookmaker. The other case is a protest to be filed against the directors and officers of the Golden Gate Race Meet for declaring off the 2:12 pace at its recent meeting at the Oakland track. The race was originally advertised for Saturday, September 21st. On account of the death of President McKinley the track was closed on Thursday, which necessarily put the date of the 2:12 pace over until Monday. On Monday rain prevented all harness racing and although the meeting continued until Wednesday, the directors declared the 2:12 pace off and refused to allow it to be placed on the program. There were six horses ready to start and the owners will protest against the action of the directors and ask that they be compelled to pay the purse of $500 to those ready to start or be suspended.

THE STALLION SEASON of 1902 promises to be much greater and more profitable than the season which has just closed. There are many stallions owned in California that have great individuality and royal breeding but their light has been hid under a bushel as it were. The owners have failed to advertise them or let their good qualities be known outside their immediate locality and the horses have consequently had scarcely any opportunities whatever. Every stallion should be well advertised that the public may know something of his qualifications and this advertising should be done early, as breeders begin figuring as soon as the new year opens and before as to the stallions they will send their mares to. One of the best and most effective ways of advertising is through the columns of recognized turf journals and small sums invested in this manner will surely bring paying results. Advertising by cards containing tabulated pedigrees and full information of the horse and his ancestors is another good way to reach the breeders. This office is prepared to compile and print all such matter in a correct and artistic manner and at reasonable prices. It is not too early to begin figuring on getting out your stallion advertisements for 1902.

THE SALE SEASON for thoroughbred yearlings is during the months of October, November and December, and Mr. William G. Layng, of the Occidental Horse Exchange, is getting ready for them now. He undoubtedly has the only place in San Francisco that is fitted up in proper shape to sell horses at night, and as it is seated with chairs, is brilliantly lighted by electricity and is warm and comfortable, the attending of sales held there is a pleasure. Those who have their yearlings ready for sale this year should make arrangements for dates with Mr. Layng at once, as the sales promise to be numerous. Thoroughbreds are not the only horses that can be sold with profit during the next few months, however. Good roadsters and well bred trotters and pacers will bring fair prices now, as there are many people looking for stock of this description who will attend sales and be prompt bidders. Read Mr. Layng's announcement in our advertising columns to-day.

EDITH W., THE MONTANA MARE, paced the three fastest consecutive heats ever paced by one of her sex, when she won the 2:06 pace at Cincinnati last Thursday. She made it three straight in 2:05½, 2:05½ and 2:05½ and had behind her Harry O. 2:06, Riley B. 2:06½, Tom Ogden 2:07 and Dumont W. 2:06½. It was a great field and the best of the five wcn. Edith W.'s record is 2:05, reduced this year from 2:06½. She is by Ben Lomond Jr., son of Ben Lomond 2870, he by Trojan 312, he by Flying Cloud 134 and he by Black Hawk 5. Ben Lomond Jr. is also the sire of the pacer W. W. P. 2:05½.

THE WEBFOOT STAKE for three and four year old trotters came off at the Oregon State Fair at Salem last Thursday and was won by the brown gelding T. D. C., a son of Zombro, with Edmund S., another son of Zombro second. This was the way the race was called last week in this journal by our Salem correspondent, Geo. T. Beckers, owner of Zombro. As there were twelve entries in this stake this is pretty good guessing even allowing for a stallion owner's natural favoritism for the get of his horse. The Zombros are trotters surely.

Jackson's Napa Soda untangles the feet!

WILLIAM HOGOBOOM, one of the best known and most highly respected horse breeders and trainers in California, has removed from Marysville, Yuba county, this State, to his former home in Walla Walla, Washington. We understand that Mr. Hogoboom has made this change on account of the poor bealth of his son, in the hope that a change of climate may improve it. Mr. Hogoboom has been a resident of Marysville for several years, where he was in the employ of the late D. E. Knight, and engaged with him in breeding and training trotters. He owns the stallion Lynmont, one of the best sires for his opportunities in California, and will take that horse with him to Washington, where he will be a valuable addition to the breeding ranks of that State. Mr. Hogoboom will be missed from the California circuit, where he has won many rich stakes with colts of his breeding, and we hope that he will meet with success in his future home, and that the health of his son may be fully restored. The Marysville Democrat speaks as follows of his departure: "Mr. Hogoboom came to this city about nine years ago to take charge of the racing stable of the late D. E. Knight, and during his stay here he has succeeded in raising the fastest colts in the State, among them Eula Mac and Charles A., sired by his valuable horse Lynmont. During his residence in this city he and his estimable wife have made hosts of friends and their departure will be regretted by all."

A GREAT RACE was paced by Joe Patchen 2:01½ and Anaconda 2:01½ at Evansville, Indiana, last Thursday. The California gelding won in straight heats and the time was 2:04½ and 2:04. The brief telegraphic report says finishes were close, which is evidence that the black stallion is getting back to his best form and he may yet down the "suake horse" before the season is ended, as these horses that get so close to two minutes must be in perfect condition to win. With either of these two a trifle out of fix, the other will win.

Horse Racing in Russia.

It is a racing day in Moscow. The course is swept free from snow and follows the wooded shores with red painted railings on each side. On one side is a stand with seating room for several thousand people and a special box with tent, hangings for the governor, general, surmounted by the imperial eagle in gold. In front of this box, lower down, you see the prizes, consisting of gold and silver cups, vases and ornamental pieces, all in Russian style and taste. A bell rings. The course is cleared by mounted gendarmes, and the competitors in due order take their places in front of the stand, but not side by side, as they always start from opposite sides of the course, with heads also turned in opposite directions. The usual race course hum and noise of hetting men are heard and increase in volume as the bell rings the second time. They are off! And the fascination of rapid motion, open air and strenuous exertion throws its spell over the assembly, high and low, for trotting is certainly the most fashionable and beloved sport in Russia.—Exchange.

Colts and fillies that are entered in stakes attract more attention from buyers than those not so entered, and it is always a matter of pride to an owner when showing a colt to be able to say "that fellow is entered in several rich stakes." The $6000 Breeders Futurity for the foals of mares bred this year will close October 1st.

The Oak Grove Driving Club, of Warren, O., has declared a dividend of 180 per cent, to stockholders, giving each man $18 on a $10 investment. The club will give no more meetings this year. Much credit for the good showing is due Secretary E. O. Dille.

Time Pointer, a brother to Star Pointer 1:59½, took a record of 2:24½ at Clarion, Pa., recently. This promising pacer has had comparatively little training and is expected to take a low record next season. He is owned by Dr. J. J. Crawford of Coraopolis, Pa.

It is reported that the affairs of the Penn Valley Farm, which were in a complicated state last spring, have been settled and that all the farm horses, including Oakland Baron 2:09½, have been returned to the farm at Morrisville, Pa., from Wellsville, N. Y.

Will Logan, Jr., for a long time on the staff of the Horse Review, has taken charge of the Eastern department of that paper in New York, formerly in charge of Harry Fancher.

Jackson's Napa Soda is sold in every city, town and hamlet in the State.

McKinney, Diablo and Direct.

It looks as though the three California sires named above at the close of the season will stand very close to the head of the list of stallions that have produced new performers and horses with reduced records this year. As far as we have been able to ascertain, the lists of new ones and those with new records, sired by these stallions, are as follows:

Toggles Defeats Dolly Dillon.

If there is a more consistent trotter out this year than the California bred gelding Toggles, owned by Mr. Grabam E. Babcock of Coronado, and being campaigned in the East by the well known trainer C. E. Clark of Fresno, we have failed to discover him in the summaries published thus far. On Friday of last week at Readville, Mass., the same day that Lord Derby 2:06½ gave Boralma 2:07 his second beating this year, Toggles won the $10,000 stake for trotters of the 2:10 class, defeating Dolly Dillon 2:07, Little Dick 2:10½, Alcidalia 2:10½ and the great Onward Silver 2:08. The first heat of the race was trotted on Thursday and Dolly Dillon won in 2:11½ with Alcidalia second and Toggles third. Rain began to fall and the race was postponed until the following day when Toggles went out and won in straight heats the time being 2:13½, 2:12, 2:11½. The track was rather heavy and slow from the rain, or faster time would have resulted. Toggles is now one of the best winners of the year and the money to his credit must amount to ten thousand dollars or over by this time. Toggles has been one of our favorite California horses, his perfect gait and manners and magnificent road qualities making him about as near the ideal trotter as a horse can be. In Trainer Clark's hands he has won nearly every race in which he started during the past three years, and is undoubtedly good for several years yet although he was foaled in 1891. His record of 2:09½ was made at Los Angeles in 1898, and although he can probably trot a mile when just right in 2:07 or 2:08, he has won his races this year in slower time. We append the summary of the race at Readville:

2:10 class, trotting, purse $10,000.

Toggles, br g by Strathway.....	(Clark)	3	1	1
Dolly Dillon, b m by Sidney Dillon.....	(Sanders)	1	4	5
Little Dick, br g by Harry Plummer.....	(Pope)	4	2	4
Alcidalia, b m by Sir Walter Jr.....	(Dore)	5	3	3
Onward Silver, cb b by Onward.....	(Geers)	5	3	3

Time—2:11½, 2:13½, 2:12, 2:11½.

Says the Kentucky Stock Farm: "The fastest trial by a two year old at the Lexington track this year is to the credit of the brown filly Prelatess by Ponce de Leon 2:13, dam Prelacy by Lord Russell, in Joe Rea's stable, she having negotiated the track route without a skip in 2:17½ last week. This filly is beautifully gaited and is entered in the Lexington Stake. Rea has also a quick stepper in the bay gelding Anak (2) by Milroi, dam by Prodigal. Soon after his arrival at Lexington he trotted a mile in 2:24."

One of the best of the new 2:10 pacers out this year is the gray horse New Richmond 2:08½ by Brown Hal. His dam is Jewess by A. W. Richmond, a full sister to the old time pacer Arrow 2:13½ and the pacer Ellwood 2:17½. The dam of Jewess is Chrichton's First by Chrichton, a son of imp. Glencoe. The picture of New Richmond in the last issue of the Chicago Horse Review bears a very strong resemblance to the pacer Waldo J. 2:08, who is also out of an A. W. Richmond mare.

Some Good Suggestions.

ABBOTSFORD INN, LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 24, 1901
EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—In recent issues of some of the Eastern papers a California writer makes some comments on the small attendance at the recent Breeders Meeting. Will you allow a lay man to make a few comments and a few suggestions along the line of why so poor attendance at all California race meetings. The idea occurred to me while looking at the crowds trying to buy tickets for the circus while the circus man was yelling out, "walk up," "roll up" and "if you can't get up, throw your money up." Well, what do they all get when inside the circus tents? a few laughs at the clowns, look at the same elephants, the same contortion act, the same hippodrome racing, and of course all circuses are good, they are like death and taxes, they come and go. Our people rush to a circus, rush to a fake prize fight, at $3.00 per seat and upwards, while race meetings in some towns are almost ignored; every hamlet that sports a track in Eastern states this year has a good attendance, and no better racing than is being had in California.

Now, suppose we try to imitate our Eastern brethren. Get out and patronize the meetings; quit knocking and saying it is so much better over East; let's make it good here; let all the fast performers stay in California next year; devote the same money and time for the good of the cause in California; get better purses; get the people to throw away the hammers and do at least as much for the race horse and his friends as they do for the circus and the fake prize fight. Let the native sons of the Golden West make racing in California, God's country, as good as it is over East. California horses like our great men must get a chance at home on their native heath, but the public must be with them at all times.

Let the daily journals get in and enthuse a bit, and owners of fast horses will put up good honest racing. There is not one-third as much crooked work as is talked of. Harness horse men are just as honest as any other class of amusement people, and put up the best show for the money; and it is more elevating to go out on a nice day and look at a number of highly bred horses in a contest than to pay three to five dollars for a few hours in a smoky hall looking at a few pugs punching at each other and hearing a lot of foul-mouthed men yelling "soak him Fitz", "soak him Jim".

Now, if this article is not near the point let some other man get in and say a few. Yours truly,
C. A. HARRISON.

Answers to Correspondents.

L. C. Ukiah—We have no record of the mare and there is none in the books of her ever having started.

B. L. K., Marysville—Ruby M. is a pacing mare by Almont Patchen. Her record is 2:12½ and not 2:08. She is by Almont Patchen, dam Mag by Wakeup Jake, grandam Kate M. by Henry Belmont. Tilton Almont is by Almont 33, dam by Clark Chief 89, second dam by imp. Hooton, thor. The pacer Alcyone 2:10 by Aleyone was foaled in 1887.

L. A. C., Pleasanton—Sweet Marie by Guide is not registered. Guide is by Director out of Imogene by Norwood 522. His record is 2:16½. Lady Sessions is by Ulster Chief, son of Hambletonian 10. Her dam is Alice R. (dam of Eva W. 2:25½ and Redwood 2:27) by Naubuc, sire of dam of Directly 2:03½; second dam Nell by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31.

S. L. W., Bonanza—Yes, Tod Sloan was at one time the owner of the horse E. H. Shirley.

$6000 guaranteed.

Do you want some of it?

Enter in the Pacific Breeders Futurity.

Entries will close on Tuesday next, October 1st.

Le Roi 2:19½ is a new pacing performer for Altamont. He is out of the dam of Klamath 2:07½.

Coucord's meeting opened last Wednesday and will close to-day. It has been highly successful.

Frank Trainor's at Santa Maria with four horses which he is training for the races there next week.

The Los Angeles meeting opens to-day, and the prospects are good for two weeks of first class racing.

Al Me, bay mare by Memo, reduced her record from 2:19½ to 2:15½ at Spokane last week. Her dam is by Altamont.

We have had many record breakers in late years, but no four year old trotter has yet equalled Directum's 2:05½.

Ned Thorne got beat in 2:31 the first heat of his race at Everett and then won the race in a few seconds faster time.

Lady Jones, the filly that won the two year old stake the opening day of the Oregon State Fair, is by Captain Jones, son of McKinney.

There was a fair and racing at Alturas, Modoc county, last week which was very successful and largely attended. The races were principally for local horses and great interest was manifested in them.

Phebon W. 2:18½, pacing is another new one for Hambletonian Wilkes this year. He is said to be a full brother to that great race mare, Phoebe Wilkes 2:08½.

Rippling, a black mare by Charles Derby, won two races at Kenton, Ohio, and took a record of 2:25½. She took her races in straight heats and is a promising trotter.

Take your horses to Stockton. The meeting will begin there October 15th. Entries will not close until one week previous, and purses will be arranged to suit the horses on the ground.

Freddy C., the little black son of Direct, won two races at the Everett, Wash., meeting and took a record of 2:14½. This was fast time for the track. He beat Myrtba Whips in his second race.

There is a movement on foot among the harness horse owners of California to sign an agreement to refrain from entering at any meeting next season where bookmaking is the system of betting.

Clytie II., the dam of Neerut 2:12½, is now in the great broodmare list. The six year old brown horse Naniwa that recently took a record of 2:17½ over East, is one of her foals and was sired by Charles Derby.

One of the leading features of the parade of standard bred stock at the Stato Fair this year was the dam of Anaconda 2:01½ with a full brother and sister of that great campaigner. They were in the Rancho del Paso exhibit.

The pacing gelding Frank McKinney 2:16½, which nearly everyone of our turf exchanges has been crediting to our California sire McKinney 2:11½, is not by that horse, but is a son of Mikagan 4554. The pacer's name is what led to the error.

Mack Mack 2:29 is a new standard trotter for McKinney 2:11½. He won the 2:30 trot at Everett, Washington, last week. He is a brown gelding out of a Gen. McClelland mare and is owned by Chris. Simpson. His record was made in the third heat.

Good road horses are in better demand than ever. A well mannered, fast horse, that has good looks and is sound, can be sold readily for a good price, but the unsound horses and the knee bangers are very hard to dispose of, no matter how fast they are.

Volume 15 of the American Trotting Register has been issued. It contains 791 pages and carries the number of stallions registered up to No. 34,299. The book is invaluable to the tabulators of pedigrees and all compilers of trotting and pacing statistics.

A race meeting will be held at Santa Maria, San Luis Obispo county, October 3d, 4th and 5th. The purses will range from $40 to $160 and will be for runners, trotters and pacers. Thos. Boyd is President of the association and W. B. Lierly Secretary.

The pacer Abdino 2:17½ by Wilkesdale, dam Abbio Woodnut by Woodnut, was sold last week by Mr. Callendine of Sacramento to Mr. A. S. Hanks of San Jose, who will probably ship the horse to Honolulu and race him there. The price paid for Abdino was $400.

Lord Derby 2:06½ defeated the great Boralm the second time without great effort at Readville on Friday of last week. He won in straight heats in 2:07½, 2:07½ and 2:08. There was a heavy wind blowing and the time was therefore more remarkable. In two of the heats Boralm led until within two hundred yards of the wire, when Geers brought Lord Derby up with a great burst of speed and beat him. Lord Derby is one of the greatest trotters ever seen, and has license to trot as fast as The Abbot or Croseus in another year.

When he sold Dr. Book 2:10, Will Durfee took as part payment a stallion by Onward that the owners had paid $4000 for. This horse, with all the rest of Durfee's string, with the exception of Charlie Mac and one other, was shipped to Los Angeles from the East last week.

The dates of the Hollister fair and race meeting have been postponed to October 23d to 26th inclusive. This action was rendered necessary by the fact that the farmers, fruit growers and others of San Benito county are too busy at this time to make exhibits or attend the races.

There are eight newcomers to the list of 2:10 trotters this year and three of them, or 37½ per cent., are from one State California. These are Dolly Dillon 2:07, the fastest of the lot; Eleata 2:08½, the greatest money winner of the year; and Dr. Book 2:10. A pretty good showing for one State pitted against the entire country.

Any person who wants to make a good investment in the horse breeding business can get a bargain by addressing P. J. Williams at Milpitas in regard to his great broodmare Hattie, the dam of Monterey 2:09½ and Montana 2:16. She is good for three or four foals yet and is stout and vigorous. She had a foal this year and is in foal again.

Mr. T. Cabney of Eureka, Humboldt county, writes the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN that there is much interest manifested in a fair and race meeting to be held next spring at Eureka, at which an effort will be made to haug up purses that will attract horses from all parts of the State. Some thirty or more trotters and pacers are to be put into early training at the Eureka track for the races of 1902.

When Imp, the big tall son of Diablo, paced the fifth heat of his race at the Oakland track on Friday of last week in 2:25, good judges who have driven over the track say the mile was as good as 2:15, as the horse was in deep going on the outside all the way. Imp is now six years old and his mark of 2:19½ made at Vallejo on the 9th instant is no measure of his speed. He would be a new 2:15 performer for Diablo with proper handling.

Hon. Jesse D. Carr, of Salinas, who is now in his 87th year wishes to be relieved of the care of the large number of standard bred mares, colts and fillies now on the well known Gabilan Stock Farm and offers them all for sale. There are many of them entered in the Breeders Futurity, Occident, Stanford and other good stakes and there are some as fine individuals as a person would wish to see. Mr. Carr wants to sell and will put a low price on any or all of them.

Lee Rose of Los Angeles, while at Sacramento attending the State Fair, purchased from Mr. A. G. Gurnett of the Sulphur Spring Stock Farm the four year old bay gelding Zambra by McKinney. Zambra has a three year old record of 2:23. Accompanied by Mr. Gurnett, Mr. Rose paid a visit to Rancho del Paso and selected a mate for Zambra, that for style, conformation, size, color, gait and disposition is almost his counterpart and a finer road team would be hard to find.

El Milagro, the four year old colt by McKinney out of the dam of Margaret Worth 2:15, is going up against aged horses this year and improving all the time. At Readville last week he was started against such crack-erjacks as Iva Dee, Eleata and Porto Rico. Eleata won the first heat in 2:13½, and then El Milagro beat her back in 2:14½. Eleata took the third heat in 2:14, but Iva Dee, who had been driven a waiting race by Geers, captured the next three heats in 2:12½, 2:16½ and 2:16½.

Ollis McKinney 2:21, the mare by McKinney that has made such a successful campaign through the Mississippi valley half mile circuit this summer is owned by J. C. Blair, Newell, Iowa, who purchased her dam Princess by Electioneer when carrying Ollis in California. The dam of Princess is by Nutwood so the breeding of this mare is in the purple. Ollis McKinney is eight years old, a solid bay in color, stands 15.2, of compact build and is said to have much more speed than is indicated by her record.

An afternoon of racing will be given at the San Jose race track this afternoon by the association owning the grounds. There will be two purses for trotters, in which the entries are local horses. During the day the Palo Alto stallions Monbells and Nazote will be driven for a record against time by Mr. C. A. Durfee, who has been handling them for a few weeks. Monbells is by Mendocino and is the last of the foals of the great broodmare Beautiful Bells. There is scarcely a doubt but he will trot several seconds below 2:30 and if so, he will be the grand old mare's tenth performer. Nazote is a full brother to Azote 2:04½ and a grand looking stallion. He should take a record of 2:25 to-day without much trouble. Monbells is four years old and Nazote is seven.

Janice started at Oakley track, Cincinnati, September 24th, in the 2:14 trot, for which a purse of $3000 was hung up. She won the first heat in 2:12 and the fourth heat in 2:15. Ozanam, a mare by Axtell, got the second and third heats in 2:12½ and 2:13½. Palm Leaf by Onward took the next three in 2:13, 2:15 and 2:18½. After the sixth heat, Ed Benyon, driver of Ozanam, followed by a crowd of about 200, went to the judges' stand to demand the enforcement of the rule against racing after the daylight had too far gone to be able to distinguish the color and gait of the horses. The judges insisted on deciding the race, and Palm Leaf and Janice were sent away for the final journey. It was so dark that no color of horse or driver's cap could be distinguished on the back stretch and far turn. The heat was won by Palm Leaf. The judges declared third money to go to the association. Benyon entered a protest amid the cheers of the crowd, and the money is now tied up for a decision of the National Trotting Association.

The $6000 stake is worth having several entries in and those who have bred mares this year should not let the date go by without naming one or more of them. The date is October 1st, and the cost is $3 per mare. See the advertisement in this issue.

Athanio won again at Baden, Germany, August 29th. He was handicapped at 1690 meters, Caid at 1670, Bonatella at 1635, Col. Kuser at 1620 and Belle J. at 1690, the last named distance being exactly one mile. In the first heat Athanio won in 2:18 2-5, a 2:12 gait for the mile. Caid won the second heat in 2:18 2-5, and Athanio won the third and deciding heat in 2:19. Athanio is making such a good showing this season that he may be brought back to the United States next year and raced on the Grand Circuit.

John A. Bilz, the well known inventor and manufacturer of Pleasanton, died there last week from injuries received while at work in his factory. Mr. Bilz was the inventor of many farming implements that were in general use, among them a vineyard plow that was very highly thought of by vineyardists. He was best known to horsemen, however, by his invention of the Bilz cart, which was widely advertised and had a very large sale. Mr. Bilz was highly esteemed in the community where he lived and his funeral was the most largely attended of any ever held at Pleasanton.

W. G. Durfee is now the sole owner of Charlie Mc 2:11½, having purchased the interest of his partner (a Los Angeles gentleman) in the son of McKinney for $5000. Soon after making the purchase the horse was taken sick and has not been in good condition since. He won second money at Cincinnati last Monday. The race was won by Wauban in straight heats, the best time being 2:11½. There were eight starters. Charlie Mc is one of the most promising horses in training in the opinion of Eastern horsemen, and should get a mark below 2:10 next year.

Thirty head of trotting bred horses from Inyo county will be sold at Nelson's Training Stables, Alameda, on Tuesday next. These horses will be sold by Louis Schaffer, the well known live stock auctioneer, and the sale will be absolutely without reserve. These horses are young, good looking, sound and broken. They are by sons of Gibraltar 2:22½, and grand sons of Nutwood and Gen. Benton. There are consigned by Mr. R. W. Scott, who has earned a reputation for bringing high class horses to this market. The horse Joe Bonney, that took a record of 2:32 two or three weeks after arriving here from Inyo county, was in his sale last year.

The Stockton races did not fill as so many of the horses in the classes advertised have gone wrong or been thrown out of training. However, the enterprising directors of the Stockton Driving Club propose to hold five days of good racing, and have set aside a large sum of money for harness races during the fair which will open October 15th. It is proposed to give $250 added money in every race where there are five starters and but $10 will be asked for entrance. This will give horse owners an opportunity to get good racing after the close of the Los Angeles meeting. Trainers should bear in mind that the Stockton track is one of the best in the State and is now and will be kept in perfect condition for the harness horses.

Again has Gus Macey's chestnut trotter Country Jay 2:11½ proven that it pays to enter a horse known to be fast and a consistent performer well through the season in stake events. He won $1250 at Syracuse Tuesday and to date, although the winner of but four races, his winnings amount to $14,250. Of course his trainer and party have played him when he looked good enough to win, and so their season down the Grand Circuit has been decidedly profitable, says Percy in the New York Telegraph. Last season Macey gave Country Jay some fast work, and late in the fall drove him a mile in 2:10 over his track at Versailles, Ky. He was wintered with a view to this year's campaign, and, after a let-up from November till February, take up and given good, strong road work until the warm weather set in, then came his keying up and the finishing touches. True, the owner of the somewhat sensational horse has been fortunate in that Country Jay has met with no accident or sickness. He has yet four or five stake races to trot, then will go into winter quarters one of the greatest winners ever campaigned. They were lucky, too, in not having to shoulder a low record. If he does not beat 2:11½ this season it leaves him for the 2:12 class during the earlier meetings next season. He would be eligible also to the $10,000 Massachusetts Stake and one or two other important fixtures.

Mr. H. K. Devereux, of Cleveland, seems to be able to drive his great California bred stallion Jehn A. McKerron by Nutwood Wilkes a little faster every time he hitches him to a wagon. It was only a few weeks ago that we chronicled the fact that Mr. Devereux had driven the horse a mile in 2:07½. Since then he has won the second race for the Boston Challenge Cup with him, and on Saturday last at a matinee of the Cleveland Driving Club gave him a new matinee record of 2:06½. The first half of the mile was trotted in 1:04, the last half in 1:02½ and the last quarter in 30½ seconds. This is a world's record for a stallion driven to wagon by an amateur, and the fastest mile ever made by a trotter of any sex driven by an amateur. On the afternoon of Saturday, September 14th, just one week previous, Mr. Devereux worked his stallion four heats in company with Edwin B. 2:12½, and John Nolan 2:08. Three beats were worked in 2:19, 2:16 and 2:15. He then brought McKerron out alone and after going to the half in a jog as it were in 1:11, called on the handsome horse and he fairly flew around the turn and through the stretch. This half was in 1:02, the first quarter of it in 32 seconds, the last quarter in 30 seconds flat and the last eighth in 14½ seconds. With the exception of The Abbot, who last season trotted the last half of his 2:05½ mile at Hartford in 1:00½ and the last quarter in 29½ seconds, no other trotter ever showed such a flight of speed to wagon.

EASTERN NOTES AND NEWS.

The Massachusetts purse may be for $20,000 another year.

Mr. Sayles will breed Martha Wilkes 2:08 to Cresceus 2:02½.

Cresceus 2:02½ trotted an eighth of a mile recently in fourteen seconds.

Joan is another good one for Joe Patchen 2:01½. She took a record of 2:14½ over a half-mile ring.

Donald Sphinx is another 2:10 performer for Sphinx, having taken a record of 2:10 flat at Indianapolis.

Over a dozen mares have already been booked to Bingen for the season of 1902. His fee will be $200.

Sphinx is well represented with fast pacers this year. They are Sphinx S. 2:08½, Capt. Sphinx 2:08½ and Frazier 2:09½.

From Consuela S.'s race in the $10,000 purse at Providence, Directum 2:05½ will soon have a 2:10 trotter to his credit.

It is said that outside watches timed Lord Derby the last half in 1:01½, after he made his break in the second heat at Hartford.

The average time for the five heats in the Lord Derby-Boralma race was a little better than 2:08. This is the record.

Alcidalia 2:10½ is one of the best mannered and best dispositioned trotters in the country, racing without check or boots of any kind.

Beauseant, the $17,500 brother of Boreal 2:15½ and Main Bells 2:06½, is lame. It is due to a curb, however, and merely transient.

Preferably Cresceus is given his slow jog work on the roads, whenever possible. He has been taught that tracks are to step fast over.

Salvini, the sire of Easter 2:12½, is by Piedmont out of Elsie by General Beaton; second dam Elaine 2:20 and third dam Green Mountain Maid.

Arion 2:07½ gets a new performer in Masconomo 2:20½, whose record was made on a half-mile track. Titer has driven the four year old a mile in 2:15½. He is out of Hour 2:17 by Onward.

Anagallia, by Prodigal out of Annie Wilton, is the dam of Gavotte (3) 2:27½ and Anak (2) 2:24½. She is but seven years old and has two race winners in the list. They are her first two foals.

There will be more horses winning over $10,000 in purse money this year than has been the case for a good many seasons, Eleata, Country Jay, and Neva Simmons having passed those figures already.

The honor of being the fastest two year old trotter of the year now belongs to the brown filly Prelates, by Ponce de Leon, dam Prelacy, by Lord Russell, who took a record of 2:19½ at Lexington, Ky., last week in a field of aged horses.

The Rajah, a two year old bay gelding by Prince of India, that won the New England Futurity at Readville on Monday, taking a record of 2:20½, is out of Buffalo Maiden, whose dam was the famous old race mare Buffalo Girl 2:12½.

Few fast trotters wear as few boots or as little extra rigging as Lord Derby 2:06½ and he seems to have as great a burst of speed as any trotter out. He is game and when he learns to stick to the trot will make it interesting for any trotter that wears harness.

John S. Phippen is working seventeen head of young Electrites at the Dallas, Tex., track, and all are going well for him. August 16th, Blondie 2:13½ by Electrite stepped a mile in 2:12½, with George R. King up, and they look for him to show well at Lexington and Memphis.

The bay gelding Goshen Jim 2:10½, was beaten only a head at Syracuse in the 2:10 pace for amateurs, and was separately timed in 2:09 the second heat. As he is a handsome upheaved fellow, well mannered and wearing no extra rigging he should certainly make an ideal wagon pacer.

The Massachusetts trainer James Brady, drove a three year old, by May King, a quarter in 32 seconds over the Readville track. The colt is a trotter, and is bred in lines somewhat similar to Bingen, as his dam is Etta Red, by Red Wilkes, while the second dam of Bingen is by Red Wilkes.

Friday, October 11th, will be "Cresceus Day" at Toledo, O., the home of Geo. H. Ketcham. Elaborate preparations are being made for a first class program in addition to the exhibition mile by the great stallion, the proceeds to be distributed among the various Toledo charitable institutions.

Ed Benyon, trainer of the Walnut Hall farm string, that was located at the Cleveland track all summer, made his first start of the season at the Oakley Park meeting, Cincinnati, and won the $5000 stake for three year old brotters with the brown colt Walnut Hall, the time for the second heat being 2:16½.

Main Bells, the five year old bay mare by Bow Bells, dam Rosy Morn (dam of Boreal 2:15½ and two others) by Alcantara, won the 2:11 pace at Hartford, September 6th, in 2:07½, 2:06½, 2:08½, over a big field of good ones. She is the third 2:10 pacer to the credit of Bow Bells. Her previous record was 2:16½, made in 1898, when she was a two year old.

Almonarch 2:24½, died a few days ago at Monarchal Farm, Caustota, N. Y., at the age of 26. He was one of the great sons of Almont, having sired a respectable list of speed performers, and his daughters are becoming famous as broodmares. One produced Fantasy, 2:06, and another is the granddam of Lord Derby 2:06½.

Of the 450 nominations, made at the time of closing the Horse Review Stake of $5000, only four came to the wire and the event was won by Rowellan, a son of the champion yearling Adhell, and the fastest heat was 2:16½. The paid-up amount to start in this race was $115, and the fourth horse won $385 above its entrance money.

The Charter Oak Stake was divided this year with a view to rewarding a horse for what he did and each heat winner was to receive $1000 and what was left of the original stake of $10,000 was to be divided among the first four horses in the regular percentage. This gave Eleata $6000 as her share and Dolly Bidwell $2500, Alan $900 and Volo $800.

C. W. Mills, an Iowa shipper, marketed a full load of carriage horses in Chicago at auction last week. The first fourteen horses made an average under the hammer of $240. The twenty head brought a total of $4500. The highest price was $315 and the lowest $132.50. The best of the load were taken by New York and Philadelphia dealers.

Sir Thomas Lipton, widely known as the owner of Shamrock I and Shamrock II, and at present in America to make a second attempt at winning the international yachting trophy, is not alone devoted to ships and sailors. At his country home, known as Osidge, in Hertfordshire, twelve miles from his city offices in London, he keeps a fine stable of pleasure horses, eighteen head in all, most of them standard-bred American trotters.

An exhibition of rare level-headedness was given at the Mondovi, Wis., meeting. Oaklawn Stock Farm had their three year old filly Festival in the 2:25 race, and in the first heat while in the lead at the three quarter pole a rein broke. The filly made a short break, then settled and came home a winner in 2:24½. After passing the wire she slowed up, turned and jogged back to the judges' stand like an old hand. It was her maiden race, which she won in straight heats.

Dr. S. W. McMahan, for many years on the editorial staff of the Western Horseman, died at his residence, 817 North Delaware street, Indianapolis, Wednesday evening, September 11th. His affliction was a complicated one and of long standing. Dr. McMahan was a man of sterling worth and was most congenial both in business and social life. For ten years he has been a stockholder and director in The Western Horseman Company, but for some time past his old position on the paper's editorial staff has been filled by his son, Blaine S. McMahan.

It is current report that J. Scott McCoy has been engaged to take charge of the stable of Mr. C. K. G. Billings. He is now quartered at Empire City track with a dozen or so of the Chicago millionaire's best ones, and after the speedway season closes will doubtless winter at the new Memphis track with the string. Thirty boxes, specially built, have been erected for Mr. Billings' horses and caretakers. It is a model wintering ground and when the warm weather comes again Mr. McCoy should be able to turn over some great horses for Mr. Billings' matinee driving.

Herbert Gray, representing Thomas W. Lawson, of Boston, was in Lexington last week to see his employer's latest purchase, Mary P. Leyburn, 2:21. This filly is at Lexington track, in Clem Beachy's stable, and will carry the Lawson colors in the Futurity next month. Those who remember the peerless Maud S. 2:08½, say that the daughter of expedition is a counterpart of that great mare, both in color, conformation and action. Beachy has been instructed to order a new sulky and harness for the filly. Mary P. Leyburn has not been a mile faster than 2:14½ this year, but nobody doubts that she is capable of a much faster effort.

It is reported on good authority that Charley Herr 2:07, the game and fast son of Alfred G., will never be raced again and has been shipped to Lexington by his owner, David Cahill. It is doubtful if any trotter ever possessed more courage, gameness and bulldog racing qualities than this great Kentucky stallion has displayed in the many hard-fought and gruelling contests in which he has participated ever since he began his remarkable career as a two year old. Charley Herr was foaled in 1895, being sired by Alfred G., a son of Anteeo. His dam was Bessie Huntington by Happy Traveler; second dam Madeline Mamhrino by Mamhrino Patchen.

"We are selling more draft horses right now than we sell ordinarily at the height of the fall season. I don't know where the big horses are coming from when the coal dealers, truckmen, brewers and other large concerns begin to buy for their winter work. There are simply not enough horses of the kind they want to go around. Business men are so prosperous these days that they all want to buy bigger and better work horses than ever before. Coming right at the end of a long period of depression in horse breeding, this extraordinary demand finds the country almost stripped of strictly high class young stock, thus making it doubly difficult to fill orders.

Ed. Geers, recently, in speaking of pacers, remarked that he believed "Arbutaskan" James had a coming crack in a bay horse by Vice Regent, that he sold Mr. James last spring for $1000. Said Mr. Geers: "I bought this horse for $480, out of the Village Farm consignment at the Fasig-Tipton Co.'s Horse Show sale last fall. I took him to the covered track at Buffalo, where I trained him at the trot and drove him a quarter in 34 seconds, and sold him as stated above. Mr. James informed me that the horse wanted to pace as his training progressed, and he has allowed him to have his way. I saw him work him a mile well within himself in 2:13½ the other day."

Reports from the mule-breeding sections of the South are to the effect that despite the high price of feed the demand is good for mule colts. At Cynthiana, Ky., for instance a fortnight ago 200 sucklings were bought at an average of $30 each and for one as much as $52.50 was paid. In Lincoln county, Ky., as high as $71 has been paid this season already and one Pennsylvania buyer took 96 in one day at an average of $31 for the lot.

Mr. W. R. Janvier's young horse Refero, by Guy Wilkes, gained admission to the Great Table of the Year Book through his two year old daughter Bell Moor, ch 1, dam Silver Morn, by Anteeo, taking a trotting record of 2:29½ at Lexington, Ky., September 11th. The combined ages of sire and dam of this young miss are only thirteen years. Refero's son, Day Book, won the New England Futurity pace, for three-year olds, at Readville, in 2:29½.

Norval King 29543, a six year old stallion by Norval, son of Electioneer, furnished the feature of the judging, September 3d, in the Minnesota State Fair horse show by defeating the fine old show horse Kentucky Peek, which has a record of 260 prizes and has been one of the famous show horses of the United States for sixteen years. Both were entered in the trotting stallion class and were shown to balter. The victory of the six year old is the more remarkable in that the blue ribbon won at Minnehaha was his only previous prize. He is owned by C. L. Kinney, of Pine Bluff, Wyo., and is by Norval, dam Lulu J. by Onward. His entry against Kentucky Peek was watched with interest. He is a magnificent mahogany seal brown and his fine points indicated a contest.

Saddle Notes.

William Cunningham, of Honolulu, has sold the thoroughbred stallion Indra by Hindoo to a planter of Hawaii who will use him in the stud.

The starting gate with a recall flag will be used at the Los Angeles meeting this year by F. E. Mulholland, who will start the runners. Mr. Mulholland has been very successful starting at Oakland during the past week.

Oscar Duke, of Conejo, Cal., has sold two colts and leased three fillies, all by Montana, to Geo. McNeil, of Fresno. Mr. McNeil also owns The Miller, the five year old gelding by Kylo, and is having him and the five geldings trained at the Fresno track. All were looking and doing well at last reports and will be ready to race after January 1st.

The Cuban Jockey Club will attempt to make racing popular at Havana. A new track has been built a few miles out of the city, and Sunday racing will be tried to induce the Cubans, who are fond of Sunday sports, to attend. The horses will be a poor lot, but the hook-makers will be numerous, and the Cubans will get as much fun out of hetting on a lot of skates and worn out cripples as they would out of stake horses.

Peter Weher's system of training runners is being adopted by a large number of trainers. Walter Maben of Los Angeles is the last one to work his horses on this plan, which is driving them to a cart instead of having them ridden by an exercise boy. Mr. Weher claims that working colts to cart makes them better mannered, gives them better mouths and saves their legs as they do not have to carry weight. Nervous horses are often greatly improved by the driving system.

Geo. S. McKenzie, former sheriff of Napa county and now manager of the Volcano States at Hilo, H. I., arrived in San Francisco last Wednesday on the steamer Sierra. Mr. McKenzie will order while here a handsome cup to cost $300 which is to be given by the Hilo track for a mile race at the meeting to be held there New Year's day. It is probable that the running horses Socialist and Weller will be the competitors for this cup. If these horses start the race will be one of the best ever seen on the islands.

On a hot day drink Jackson's Napa Soda lemonades and he refreshed.

Horse Owners Should Use

Southern Bench Show Notes.

Entries for the Los Angeles dog show closed on Monday, a list of the same was not received in time for publication this week. The bench show feature of the fair has met with an enthusiastic following down south which will be backed up by an excellent exhibit of dogs.

Over fifty dogs will be taken south from this city, including the strings of Mr. L. A. Klein, Chas. Dresser, John Bradshaw and J. L. Cunningham. Mr. Dresser will take W. J. Foster's two Fox Terriers, Vivacity and a promising young puppy that Foster banks upon making a number of wins. Mr. Cunningham will take the Great Danes, Ch. Juanita, Ruy Blas, Don Juan and Carlotta; also C. K. Harley's crack Fox Terrier Vibo. Mr. Klein's string will include Ch. Ivel Rustic and a lot of good ones, including Fox and Irish Terriers, Bulldogs, Scotch Terriers, Dachshunds, Poodles, Yorkshires, etc., that are high class and will be entered for exhibition only, thus enabling southern fanciers to view a number of Eastern prize winners.

Jack Bradshaw's string will be composed of Woodlawn Kennels' Fox Terriers Eclipse, Blanche, Dictator, Lady Mask, Dottie and Legs and Feet, the Bull Terrier Newmarket Queen, E. Courtney Ford's Irish Terriers Virginia F. and Barney F., Mrs. Tbos. Magee's Boston Terrier Winner, Irving H. Ackerman's Great Danes Beau Brummel II. and St. Leonard, Phil C. Meyer's St. Bernards Le King, Alta Rachel and Miss Barry, the Cocker Spaniels Glenwood Havoc, Polly Pastime, Colorado possibly, a Chow and a Greyhound. N. H. Hickman's Fox Terriers Norfolk Trueman, Ione and a wire haired bitch, Chas. Newman's St. Bernard Golden Lion Jr., O. O. Heydenfeldt's Bull Terriers Ch. Woodcote Wonder and American Belle and J. B. Martin's Fox Terriers Ch. Aldon Swagger and Powhattan Queen.

Among the fanciers from this city who will attend the show are Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Klein, Mr. and Mrs. Phil C. Meyer, J. L. Cunningham, Jack Bradshaw and Chas. Dresser. It is rumored that Senor Pani, the noted Mexican Bulldog and St. Bernard fancier, will also attend the Los Angeles show.

The Manitoba Derby.

Twenty-four out of eighty entries started in the Manitoba Derby at Carman on the 10th inst. The first day was favorable, a southwest breeze and a cloud overcast dispelled any chance for warm weather. Rain fell in the forenoon of Wednesday and the Derby was concluded in the afternoon and decided in the third series. First was won by the black, white and tan English Setter bitch Pitti Sing (Tony Boy-Nellie C.), owned by John Meyers, handled by D. E. Rose, purse $100. The lemon and white Pointer dog Nebraska Bon (Young Jingo-Queen's Rip Rap), owned by Thomas Johnson, handled by C. H. Babcock, won second, purse $75. Third place was awarded to the liver and white Pointer dog Rohs (Rob-Akhit), owned by George Gould, Capt. C. E. McMurdo handler, purse $50. Tankas (Prime Minister-Cutea), a black, white and tan English Setter bitch owned by Avent and Duryea, J. M. Avent handler, won fourth place, purse $25.

Out of sixty-three entries, thirty dogs started in the All-Age Stake. There was a white frost early in the morning of the 12th inst., but the day was rather warm from 10:30 to 3:30. A late start was made. Under the rules each brace was down for forty-five minutes in the first series. Prime Minister (Ch. Count Gladstone IV.—Hester Pryme), a black, white and tan English Setter dog owned by Avent and Duryea, handled by J. M. Avent, won first, purse $100. H. J. Hoover's black, white and tan English Setter bitch Pink's Nellie (Pink's Boy—), handled by D. E. Rose, won second, purse $75. Third place was taken by Zulieka (Shot-Tannis), a black and white Pointer bitch owned and handled by W. C. Lee, purse $50. Tony Man (Tony Boy-May Blue), a black, white and tan English Setter dog owned by Avent and Duryea won fourth, purse $25.

The first prize in the Free For-All Stake was won by H. S. Boyan's Clyde, purse $190.

BLOODHOUNDS.

Instructions for Training Young Bloodhounds.

You can scarcely commence too early to teach your pups to hunt. I often give mine their first lesson when three to four months old. Begin training them about the yard when they are about two or three months old. For the first two or three months it is best for them to run some one they know and entered to one particular scent, and kept to that only.

One method of training is to rub the boots of the man who runs for the hounds with blood, and to discontinue this gradually as the hounds become more expert. This is a very bad system. It is quite easy to enter Bloodhounds without any artificial aid of this kind, and it is much more difficult to get them to run man after they have been accustomed to a stranger scent. I consider that hounds work better when entered to one particular scent, and kept to that only, and I never allow our hounds to hunt anything but the clean hoot. After they learn what is wanted of them it does not matter how often the "runner" is changed. He should first begin with them by dragging something (an old shoe, coat or hat) carelessly about the yard. The pups will soon learn to run after it, and the "runner" should try to get away from them by hiding from them and by going through a house, through crowds, etc. This should be repeated several times, then the pups should be taken to some field or meadow land, the "runner" should caress and make much of the pups and then let them see him start away, but should get out of their sight quickly, and run say 200 or 300 yards in a straight line, then hide himself. The man who hunts the pups should know the exact line taken, and take the pups over it, trying to encourage them to hunt until they get to their man who should reward them with a small bit of meat. This may have to be repeated several times before they really get their heads down, but when they have once begun to hunt, they improve rapidly and take great delight in the run. Everything should be made as easy as possible at first and the difficulty increased gradually. This may be done by having the line crossed by others, by increasing the time before the pups are started on the trail, or by the "runner" crossing roads, going in houses and through crowds.

When the young hounds have begun to run fairly well it will be found very useful for the "runner" to carry a bundle of sticks about two or three feet long, pointed at one end, with a piece of paper (white) or goods stuck in a cleft at the other end. Put up one of these sticks at the starting point and incline it in the direction he is going to take. When he makes a turn or crosses a fence or road he should put one of these sticks down and pointing in the direction he is going to take next. This will give the person hunting the hounds some idea of the correctness of their work, though the best hounds do not always run the nearest to the line. These sticks should always be taken up when done with or they might be found to be misleading. The hounds will soon learn to try back if they over-run the trail and should never receive any assistance as long as they continue working on their own account. It is most important that they should become self-reliant. The line should be varied as much as possible as it is not well to run hounds over exactly the same course they have been hunted over on some previous occasion. If some hounds are much slower than the rest, it is best to hunt them by themselves, or they may get the "score-cry," as the old writers say, instead of patiently working out the line each for himself.

It is a great advantage to get hounds accustomed to strange sights and noises. If a hound is intended to be brought to such a pitch of excellence, as will enable him to be used in thoroughfares, he should be brought up in a city or town and see as much hustle as possible. If he is only intended to be used in open country, with occasional bits of road work, this is not necessary. Bloodhounds give tongue freely when hunting any wild animal, but many hounds run perfectly mute when hunting man. This is, however, very much a matter of breeding. Some strains run a man without giving tongue at all, others are very musical.

Anyone who is fond of seeing hounds work, but who has only a limited amount of country to hunt over, will find an immense amount of pleasure in hunting man with one or two couples of Bloodhounds. In such circumstances it is a great convenience to be able to select the exact course, which could not be done if hunting some animal, and a great variety of different runs can be contrived over limited grounds.

When the hounds are about six months old the "runner" should always fight lightly with them when they come up with him until their trainer arrives, who should immediately place his ropes or harness on them and allow the "runner" to get on the ground and fight at them a few minutes and then run off 300 or 400 yards and climb a tree; then the hounds should be turned loose and they will soon find their man and will bay loudly until their trainer comes up. Young hounds should always be handled by one man only, as it is not a good idea for them to have too many masters. They should be used at least twice a day until they are twelve months old, then once a day for six months and you will have something valuable. Young hounds should be taught to jump boldly, and to swim brooks when necessary. They should never be allowed to get too fat, as a slim dog can stand more than a fat one, and a hungry dog will do the best work. Young dogs should be fed three or four times a day until about one year old, after which twice a day will be sufficient, giving them more for supper than breakfast.

Keep a warm dry kennel for your dogs to stay in at night and a good roomy yard for them to run about in during the day. It is necessary that they should have plenty of exercise. Treat your dogs kindly, but at the same time let them know that you are their master. We would draw your attention to the fact that the Bloodhound is by no means the bloodthirsty animal he is depicted and supposed to be; on the contrary, he is most good tempered and trustworthy, very faithful and affectionate with his master, companionable and intelligent, and just as tractable as any other breed. He is king of all other dogs. With the above suggestions and a little experience, any intelligent man or boy will soon learn how to train Bloodhounds.

Now that people are beginning to realize that Bloodhounds can be used successfully in trailing criminals in this country, I think a few lines on this valuable animal would not come amiss. There is no doubt but what we have Bloodhounds that will successfully trail a man, and you will be disappointed when you see them if you expect to see them as large as an English Mastiff, or if you expect them to try to eat a man up when they meet him.

Thirty-five years ago in the South they were trained different from the training of to-day. They were expected to be very fierce, and if they took a chunk of meat out of a runaway negro, so much the better; but now all we ask them to do is to trail the offender to his place, and then he is expected to make up with or at least not attack. Every law abiding citizen ought to encourage this business and also know what to do to assist this noble animals in their work.

A dog does not know an honest man's track from a thief's, although some people think he ought to. It is very necessary for them to have something to start from. If your house has been robbed and the robber come in through a window or the cellar, keep the people away from there until your dogs arrive, then assist the owner in every way possible to start the trail. It is not necessary to tell him you think Mr. So and So did it; just give him all the assistance you can. If you think the party lives south of you it would be all right to tell him. If he had nothing else to start from, he might cast out and get the trail. Do not wait till you have asked everybody in the neighborhood their opinion and the officers give it up, before sending for the dogs. Send for the dogs first, then go on with the investigation. A good dog will take a trail twenty-four hours old and follow it to the finish under favorable circumstances, but they can follow one from five to twelve hours old better; in fact, sooner they get there the better.

Do not preserve one or two tracks and allow all others to be trampled over, save all you can. Even under what seems very favorable circumstances they cannot always finish a trail. They, like all other hunting dogs, may lose the trail. Our very best officers do not always succeed, and at times a good detective can commence where the dogs quit and finish it for them. Another thought, some dogs, like some people, are nervous and get "ratified." Assist in keeping the crowd back. I have known young dogs to be perfectly useless by such a large crowd gathering to see them trail, while under other circumstances they would have worked perfectly. If I had sent for Bloodhounds I would tell no one but the proper officers, and ask them to keep it quiet and would keep everything clear until they arrived. This would not interfere with the officers, and would give the hounds a better chance.

I do not think every man can take Bloodhounds and trail criminals. The owner of Bloodhounds should at least have as much sense as his dogs, and if he has more, so much the better. He can assist them in numerous ways, especially in starting a trail. I think the day is not far distant when a Bloodhound's testimony will have great weight with a jury.—Claudvill in Dog Fancier.

Doings in Dogdom.

C. W. Minor's English Setter Roy Montez annexed champion honors at the Nanaimo bench show.

An order for a pair of Stag hounds has been placed with the Kennel Editor of this journal. Particulars can be had, by owners desiring to sell, upon application.

We are much pleased to note the recovery by Mr. Byron Erkenbrecher of his good Bull Terrier Teddy Roosevelt. Teddy will be henchd at the Los Angeles show next week.

Phil J. Fay is the owner of a likely dog puppy from the Ch. Woodcote Wonder-Newmarket Queen litter. He proposes to use him as a stud dog for his own hitches; he likes the blood lines of the youngster and is sanguine of breeding some high class Bull Terriers.

English Setter winners at the Nanaimo, B. C., show last week, P. K. L. rules, were the following:

Dog puppies—Tom McConnell, Merry Hunter, 1; R. Watson, Motley, 2.

Bitch puppies—Plimley & Turner, 1; Plimley & Turner, Heather Bell, 2.

Limit dogs—C. W. Minor, Roy Montez, 1; Victor L. 2.

Open dogs—C. W. Minor, Roy Montez, 1; Victor L., 2.

Winners' class—C. W. Minor, Roy Montez, 1.

Limit hitches—Plimley & Turner, Lady Howard, 1; C. W. Minor, Gladys Montez, 2.

Rare Trout Fishing in Sierra Valley.

Sierra valley in the vicinity of Bassetts can be found an almost virgin section of country for those who love sport with rod and gun. This district contains, within a radius of ten or eleven miles, no less than fifty-two mountain lakes, varying in size and depth. Fifteen streams, which finally merge into the Yuba and Feather rivers, ideal for the angler and well stocked with rainbow trout, are also at the disposal of the visiting fisherman. Twenty-six of the lakes are well stocked with fish, principally rainbows. Many of these bodies of water are owned by private parties; nearly all of them are splendidly adapted for fish, plenty of good water and excellent spawning ground seems to be the prevailing condition.

This locality is rarely visited by the ordinary angler. It is reached by stage from Truckee to Campbell's Hot Springs, thence to Bassetts via the Sierra City road, a ride of eighteen miles.

A party, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Cumming, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Busbnell, child and nurse left this city on August 22d and returned from that section this week, enjoying an outing meantime, such as can only be had in the high Sierras at this time of the year. A short stay was made at Campbells, English snipe and doves were fairly plentiful and some good sport indulged in. Thence to Bassetts for two weeks, where the party did most of their fishing in the three Salmon lakes, two Sardine lakes and Packer lake. Most of the sport was found in lower Salmon lake, distant an hour and ten minutes horseback ride, over a trail, from Bassetts. In this water over 1700 fish were caught with the fly. The fish ran from a half to a pound. The killing lures were Benn's royal coachman, black gnat with a royal coachman wing, professor, grizzly king and light winged caddis on a No. 8 Sproat hook. These flies were found effectual on all the lakes and streams in that section. In little Salmon lake, about 150 yards away, enough fish were caught to count up a total of nearly 2200. In Packer's lake, where the fishermen had to construct rafts, there being no boats on any of the lakes in the region, eleven large fish, rainbows, were caught, weighing from two to five pounds apiece. Fish were seen in the lake that would weigh at least ten pounds each. They ignored every lure, there being plenty of natural feed in the water—shellgrubs. Fishing from the shores was hardly practicable, the best results were to be had from a raft or boat. Fred Busbnell booked two large fish from the bank, using a Wilson striped bass spoon. He landed them, but each one managed to flop back into the water again. The party propose taking canvas boats into that region next year when they again visit this delightful country.

From Bassetts a trip was made to Webber lake, where John B. Coleman, Frank Ireland, John Quinn and Frank Hayes joined the party. The fishing at Webber lake was rather unsatisfactory. The surface water was cold enough in temperature, but the fish remained in the depths of the lake, apparently not disposed to search for insect life or pay any attention to its counterfeit. A storm was apparently needed to stir the fish up.

Fishing will remain first-class in Webber, Fordyce, and Rancherie lakes, Bowman's dam and in the vicinity of Bassetts until the ice forms this winter.

The trout in the vicinity of Bassetts very strongly resemble, in appearance, the Mt. Whitney golden trout.

The Cumming and Busbnell party were under the guidance of John Bassetts, who is a thorough sportsman, a splendid shot and expert fly-fisherman. The accommodations at Bassetts are good for a small party, the establishment is in charge of Mrs. S. B. Lusk, a sister of John Bassetts.

GUN.

Mark!

Some seasonable suggestions are here offered by "An Old Sportsman" on a number of subjects germane to the first day of October and sport on field, fen and upland.

Preparatory work and attention to many preliminary details have been religiously observed for several weeks past by many sportsmen, I dare say, and those of us who love sports afield who have taken time by the forelock regard the opening day of the season with complacency and the anticipation of pleasure and recreative outing. Many a sportsman, however, and unaccountably too, will put off until the eleventh hour, taking his gun to the gunmaker, expecting of course, that his particular gun must be put in order immediately, not realizing how many orders are ahead of him. And I regret to say, that I have noted the same tactics every season. The result is, almost invariably, that the laggards are disappointed in the expectation of having their guns repaired or in order for the opening day.

In connection with this subject, there is one other thing I may look upon, one of as great, if not greater importance than that of a gun being in order in the beginning of the season, and that is, the condition of the dogs, Setters and Pointers used on the field.

Sportsmen as a general thing are prone to be very lax and remiss in their want of attention to their dogs previous to the opening of the quail season, as those game little birds are the first we pay attention to, save when there is an early flight of Wilson's snipe. Take a look around a railroad car where probably from twenty to twenty-five dogs are to be met with on the day previous to October 1st, as their owners journey toward their favorite shooting ground, and judge of their fitness for field work!

There is not, I venture to assert, more than four or five out of the twenty-five, in any decent kind of condition and fit to last for a day's work, the majority being over-fit and soft, from lack of necessary preparation for at least a week before.

The result is, a disappointment to the sportsman, a severe trial to the best of tempers, and if the weather is at all warm: (a not unlikely thing about the beginning of October) a used-up dog before half the day is over and utterly unfit to take the field the day following. And this occurs year in and year out and the lesson is never learned. So much for dogs.

There is one thing more I would like to say a little about, and endeavor to impress upon the mind of both old and young sportsmen—namely, the desirability of using a more open shooting gun for upland shooting; by this I mean quail, snipe and other small birds, not game such as doves, ducks, etc., etc.

Since the advent of the "choke bore" and the consequent craze following its discovery, the efforts of our gun makers, both foreign and domestic, and to meet the demands of sportsmen, have been to produce the closest shooting guns possible, with the result that they have gone to extremes, too much so, and the natural reaction after a number of years' trial has now set in, with a daily increasing demand for more open shooting patterns.

I do not wish to be considered dogmatic in giving the opinion I am about to do; but I assert as positively as I can, and after an experience on the field for over forty years, that the best gun for upland game is one bored with a pure and simple cylinder, in both barrels.

The majority of quail and snipe are killed within thirty yards; every intelligent and thinking sportsman will admit this, and a thoroughly good cylinder will do this and the game will be killed cleaner, without mutilation, in better condition to give away to a friend and also for table use.

If the sportsmen, however, insist upon any closer pattern than that made by the "cylinder," then strike a happy medium by having one or both barrels an "improved cylinder" so-called.

Even for duck shooting I prefer a "modified choke" in both barrels, and I see but one use for a "full choke" gun, to my way of thinking, and that is for trap shooting, when the distance is from 30 to 31 yards rise!

Go into any of our markets where ducks are displayed for sale during the season, and look carefully over a lot of the plucked ducks prepared for sale and my word for it you will find fully half of them so "plastered" and perforated with shot, looking like the end of a pepper box, as to render them almost unfit for sale, and certainly, to my mind, unfit to eat.

I submit the foregoing remarks for the perusal of sportsmen who may feel inclined to read them, and are, in a brief statement, the result of many years of experience on both upland and marsh. Numbers, no doubt, will not agree with me in my conclusions, but I give them to my brother sportsmen for what they are worth.

Cartridge and Shell.

At the Cincinnati Gun Club's annual tournament this week, Ira B. Post, of Spencerville, Ohio, won the first money in the handicap 100 bird race. The total purse amounted to $800. L. J. Sucer, of Cincinnati, defeated Elliott, Heikes, Crosby and other crack shots.

John Hauerwass won the live bird shoot at Los Angeles last Saturday, he scored forty-six birds out of fifty. His opponent D. E. Llewellyn grassed thirty-three pigeons and paid for a dinner afterwards.

The blue rock contest between Matfield, Smith, Van Valkenburg and Bruner, all Los Angeles sportsmen, has been indefinitely postponed.

Clarence C. Nauman made his re-appearance on Sportsman's Row Tuesday morning after an absence of about seven months. Nauman left here last February to take part in the Grand American Handicap and other Eastern trap shooting events. He was one of the straights in the main events at Interstate Park in April last.

He then visited England and shot live pigeons and blue rocks with some of the English experts. He was recognized in England as a crack shot, so much so, that at several of the pigeon shooting clubs he was heavily distance handicapped in many events, going back to the 35-yard mark in some club shoots. In France, he found himself pitted against skilled shooters, but here also he was placed in the long distance rank. In Belgium and Italy he had a pleasant and also profitable experience at the trap. He brought back a number of cups and other trophies which he won abroad. In England and on the Continent most of the experts use hammer guns for trap shooting. Nauman recently bought a hammerless gun in Paris, paying therefor 750 francs.

In England the boundary for live birds is generally 50 yards. Across the channel the boundary varies, being 20 yards, in Namur for instance, which fact required a quick eye and good centering to drop birds to score a kill.

Jackson's Napa Soda cleanses the stomach and renders the eye clear.

The campaign of denunciation and vituperation employed to gain converts to the game protection movement is bearing fruit, as might naturally be expected. The constant cry of "game hog," "indiscriminate slaughter," "pot hunter," etc., has an exasperating effect and is the means of causing a reckless disregard of the law that is to be deplored. A press dispatch from San Diego mentions the following cases in illustration.

It is improbable that a conviction can be obtained against Samuel Schiller, one of the San Diego duck shooters who came to trial recently. That section of the game law making it a misdemeanor for any person to kill or have in their possession wild duck prior to October 1st is a dead letter so far as San Diego county is concerned. On September 1st State Game Warden (as Deputy Fish Commissioners are sometimes called) Pritchard of Santa Monica arrested seven sportsmen of this city for violating the game laws. Warden Pritchard came upon the hunters just as they returned to their shacks at Fake bay. They had in their possession some twenty ducks, and one of the party shot a duck when within twenty yards of the game warden. The case was tried in the justice court before a jury, and after being locked up until 2 o'clock at night the jurors were discharged, as they were unable to agree, the final vote standing ten for acquittal and two for conviction. Warden Pritchard testified that he shot the duck within twenty feet of where he stood, then saw the bird fall to the ground; then he saw defendant go and pick up the duck, and, returning to where he stood when the shot was fired, cut the bird's throat. While the blood was still running from the wound Warden Pritchard says he placed defendant under arrest, and taking possession of the bird at the same time had retained it in his possession ever since, and exhibited the dead bird at the trial. His testimony was not shaken, but, remarkable though it may appear, the jury could not find defendant guilty of having violated the law. Another jury has been summoned.

The State Game and Fish Protective Association will push the matter to the last ditch, and has three other charges against the accused man.

Game and Fish Law Pointers For Sportsmen.

The opening of the shooting season on October 1st makes applicable the following synopsis embracing the essence of the State game and fish laws and is a correct and safe guide for sportsmen to follow. Prior to the adoption of the present statute, many county ordinances were on record and in force; those regulations which conflict in whole or in part with the law now in force are invalid. What changes have been made by county boards of supervisors are noted below—that is, such as we have been advised of to date.

Section 25, Subdivision 28, of the County Government Act, provides that Boards of Supervisors, in their respective counties, have jurisdiction and power to provide by ordinances, not in conflict with the general laws of the State, for the protection of fish and game, and may shorten the season for the taking or killing of fish and game within the dates fixed by the general State law, but cannot lengthen the same.

By the decisions of the Supreme Court (Ex parte Aneur, 114 Cal. 370, and People vs. Tom Nop, 124 Cal. 150, violations of Sections 632, 634, 635 and 636 of the Penal Code are made triable in the Superior Court, and a Justice of the Peace or a Police Judge has no trial jurisdiction. The maximum penalty is not stated. Offenders under these sections must be examined before a Justice, or a Police Judge, who is the committing magistrate.

Section 632 is that portion of the statute pertaining to trout of any variety.

Section 634 defines the present law concerning salmon, striped bass, shad and sturgeon.

Section 635 defines the law governing the use of explosives and the pollution of the waters of the State.

Section 636 defines the law in relation to the use of seines, nets, etc.

The open seasons, prohibitions, etc., are as follows: Quail, partridge, grouse, sagehen, curlew, ibis or rail—Oct. 1st to Feb. 1st.

Wild duck—Oct. 1st to Feb. 1st.

Doves—Aug. 1st to Feb. 1st.

Male deer—Aug. 1st to Oct. 1st.

Tree squirrel—Aug. 1st to Feb. 1st.

Unlawful to kill, sell or possess larks at any time.

Female deer, elk, antelope, spotted fawn or mountain sheep, killing prohibited.

Limit of one day's individual bag or kill, or to have in one's possession not more than 25 quail, partridge, snipe, curlew, or ibis, nor more than 50 doves or ducks, nor more than 20 rails.

Male deer, limit for killing or having in possession in any one open season not more than three.

Prohibited, running or trailing with dogs any deer during close season.

Prohibited, the sale of any deer pelt from which the evidence of sex has been removed.

Prohibited, netting or trapping of quail, partridge, grouse, wild duck, curlew or ibis.

Prohibited, trespassing on any enclosed or private grounds, which is private property, and when signs are displayed not less than three to the mile, prohibiting shooting thereon.

Unlawful to tear down signs on private property prohibiting hunting thereon.

Unlawful to destroy or have in possession the nest or eggs of any of the game birds mentioned.

Killing or trapping of birds in any public cemetery is a misdemeanor.

Prohibited at any time, the killing of or having in possession Mongolian or English pheasants, or any bob white, Eastern or Chinese quail or English partridge.

Sale prohibited of, any quail, partridge, pheasant, grouse, sage hen, ibis, plover, or any deer meat.

Prohibited, night hunting, and night shall mean one-half hour after sundown to one-half hour before sunrise.

The possession or taking of game for scientific purposes legal when a permit has been procured from the State Board of Fish Commissioners.

For the transportation of game from the State permits must be obtained from the State Board of Fish Commissioners.

Common carriers must not receive more than the bag limit of game from any one person during one day.

Game shipped from one point in the State to another must be at all times open to view and labeled with the name and residence of the shipper.

Following is the close season for killing or taking fish:

Striped bass—May 31st to July 1st.
Black bass—Jan. 1st to July 1st.
Shrimps—May 1st to Sept. 1st.
Trout—Except steelhead—Nov. 1st to April 1st.
Trout—steelhead—Feb. 1st to April 1st. Above tide water, Nov. 1st to April 1st.

Salmon—fresh water—Sept. 10th to October 10th. Above tidewater, Oct. 15th to Nov. 15th.
Lobster, crawfish—April 1st to Aug. 15th. Legal size, nine and one-half inches in length.

Unlawful to place or allow to pass any lime or substance deleterious to fish in any waters of the State.

Unlawful to use dynamite or any explosive to kill fish.

Catching of striped bass of less than one pound weight illegal.

Catching or having possession of sturgeon, female crab or female lobster prohibited.

The taking of abalones which measure less than fifteen inches around the outer edge of the shell prohibited.

Young fish of any species can not be caught, sold, or had in possession whether fresh or dried.

Black bass and trout must be caught with hook and line only.

Screens must be placed over the inlets of mill races, irrigating ditches, etc.

Legal weight of trout bought or sold, one-half pound. Steelhead trout may be caught with nets in tide water between April 1st and February 1st. Nets must drift free with current or tide and remain unsecured. The meshes of the net must not measure less than seven and one-half inches.

Illegal to seine for salmon, shad or striped bass between sunrise of each Saturday and sunset of the Sunday following.

Legal size of mesh, seven and one half inches. Nets must not extend more than one-third across the width of a stream or slough.

Set nets, weirs, traps and fixed fishing contrivances are illegal.

Fish ladders must be placed in all dams or other obstructions of streams by the owners of the dam, etc.

Coal tar, refuse or residuary products of petroleum, etc., prohibited from being discharged in navigable waters.

Penalty for violation of game laws. Not less than $25 nor more than $500 or imprisonment for not less than 25 days nor greater than 150 days, or both such fine or imprisonment.

Fines collected for violation of the game laws above mentioned shall go into the State game preservation fund.

Responses to inquiry by the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN have been courteously forwarded by the county clerks of the various counties here enumerated and changes of the present law made by county boards of supervisors noted accordingly.

The present State game and fish laws are in force and unchanged in the following counties:

Colusa, Contra Costa, Merced, Monterey, Santa Cruz, San Benito, Solano.

The following counties have adopted ordinances in regard to fish and game and which are now in force as follows:

Alameda—Quail, Nov. 1 to Feb. 1. Rail, Oct. 15 to Feb. 1.

Marin—Male deer, Aug. 1 to Sept. 15. Quail, Oct. 15 to Jan. 15. Shooting on county roads or in cemeteries prohibited. The use of "pump" gun, repeating shotgun or any kind of magazine shotgun for hunting in the county is prohibited.

Monterey—Sea gulls and blue cranes, killing of prohibited. Use of guns of larger calibre than 10 gauge prohibited.

Santa Clara—Quail, Oct. 8 to Feb. 1.

San Mateo—Quail, Nov. 1 to Dec. 1. Rail, Oct. 15 to Nov. 15. Shooting from boats at high tide prohibited.

A Deer Hunt in the Marin Hills.

DEAR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN: Now that the open season for deer in Marin county for 1901 is past—too beautiful to last!—the horses neigh within their stalls, the hounds bay and strain upon their restraining chains or lie dreaming, fighting their battles o'er again with many a baffled whimper or exultant cry.

On Friday, the 13th of September, Mrs. Hamilton gave her tenants a deer hunt on the land she leases to the Country Club. A motley crowd were there—Irish tenants from Antrim and Leitrim, McGaughey, McComman, Davison and others; also Swiss from Ticino on the Italian side of the Alps, Martini, Buletti; Portuguese from the western islands, the far Azores; Yankees, Southerners and Westerners, on horseback and afoot, all gathered round the hostess.

"You take charge of the hunt, Payne."

"All right," replied, not the Countess Payne, but the other Count Payne.

"Frank Miller, you are the Nestor of Marin county hunters, you captain one party, Mr. Davison the second, Mr. Dixon the third, and Mr. Payne the fourth."

We drew straws for first choice. It fell to Mr. Miller. Davison got second, Dixon third, Payne fourth. In this order the choice of locations were made. All the parties had hounds except Mr. Payne's. It had Mr. Hamilton's Rover, a mongrel pointer but a rack deer dog, and a shepherd dog. These made up a pack of two. Mr. Payne gave his instructions, as he went away on his horse Rollo, with many misgivings as to getting anything.

"Martini, you come with me," said Mr. Payne. "You, Dave Geary, and Shafter and Howard go down this valley. Keep on the west side. We will go on the east side. Try and jump a buck out of the willows. There is a big one there, I am told, which escaped fourteen shots at the Country Club's hands. Quatrieme is a lucky number."

Martini and Payne picked up a bigheaded foxhound pup, which followed them. They were no doubt dear to him, as the pup trailed the hunters faithfully. Captain Payne was following Rover down the spur of the ridge, which overlooked the willows in the valley, when bang! bang! went two shots from Martini's rifle on the next ridge. Putting spurs to Rollo, Payne saw Rover in close pursuit of a big buck. Running around the head of an intervening ravine the Captain heard Dave Geary, on the other side of the valley, yelling: "Go on! Ride on! Rover has got the deer at bay in the water!"

Outspread in front of the hunters lay Limantour Bay, an inner bay of Sir Francis Drake's Bay. The deer stood belly deep where the fresh and salt water met at the end of the valley. The dog would watch his chance and grab his quarry by the throat. The buck would shake his assallant off, turn and dash the dog out of sight under the water. Rover would come up out of the water behind the deer, swim alongside of the buck and grab him by the throat again. Our friend Payne was fearful the deer would leave the estuary, swim to the salt marsh land and cross to the main land before Geary or Howard could reach the spot. So, watching his chance when the deer had shaken the dog off, he fired and shot the buck through the heart. The tide was coming in strong from the sea, so "The dead, steered by the dumb, went upward with the flood."

The dog tugged at the deer, now swaying him to one side of the channel, then to the other. Dave Geary had hurried down to the opposite bank. "I will have to strip, swim in and get him out!" "All right! go ahead!" replied Payne. Naked, what a picture Geary made—a veritable Hercules! Broad and deep chested, small waist, big hips and thighs, he stood like a statue ere he dove into the water. A few strong strokes took the lusty swimmer alongside the buck. It took but a few minutes to tow the antlered monarch of the glen to the shore. It was a big lift and a lift altogether to put the big deer on to Rollo's back.

We all felt proud when—the last to choose a place, with but one dog—we were the first to kill and the first to return to the meeting place. We weighed the buck, when he was dressed, and he tipped the scales at 153 pounds—quite a healthy deer. The toes of his left front foot had been shot off some time before, and he had a club foot, which accounted for his taking so readily to water. Beef was roasting on the spits over a big charcoal fire; a keg of beer was on tap. We heard a number of shots fired by the Miller party, heard the dogs keep on running, which is a good sign for the deer but bad for the hunter. Pretty soon the Davison party came in with a lordly buck, one horn shot off. He weighed 144 pounds. Next came the Dixon party with two. One weighed 120 pounds, the other 110 pounds.

We hung the four bucks up against the side of the dairy house. Mrs. Hamilton took a snap shot—it was a dead shot at the four bucks. One of the pictures I shall give to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. Our hunt passed off without an unpleasant word. "What shall he have who kills the deer?" was drunk in many a horn of beer.

RUSTIC.

Don'ts For Sportsmen.

Don't be a game hog.

Don't be a trout butcher.

Don't carry a loaded gun in your wagon, unless you have murder in your heart.

Don't kill game unless you can use it. It is scarce enough, the Lord knows.

Don't leave a loaded gun around the house, unless you want to reduce the size of your family.

Don't shoot at "moving objects in the brush." You are not the only fool hunter abroad in the land.

Don't shoot an animal and leave it to run off wounded and die. Pick out the vulnerable spot and shoot to kill.

Don't try to hammer a shell in your gun if it sticks. It might spoil your face when it went off, as it surely would.

Don't point a loaded gun at any human being, except the "Is-it-hot-enough-for-you" man. In this case, point it and pull.

Don't carry a gun into the woods or mountains during the closed season. It is a useless encumbrance. A camera is far preferable.

Don't gaze down the barrel of a gun. It might be a hard matter for the Coroner to identify your remains by nothing but the trunk.

Don't tell every hunter you meet that you have the best gun made. It's not the gun alone, but the man behind the gun, that does the business.

Don't tackle a grizzly with a 22 rifle. Throw door knobs at him and throw them good and hard, unless you are ready to be turned into Hamburg steak.

Don't pull a gun out of a wagon muzzle end foremost, whether it is loaded or not. Your life insurance company won't thank you for bereaved family a bit for it.

Don't try to climb a fence with you gun cocked. Remember, it would be no fun for the other fellow to have to pack a dead or wounded man twenty miles to a doctor or undertaker.—Los Angeles Times.

A new invoice of L. C. Smith and Parker Bros.' guns just received. Some 12 gauge duck guns now in stock are unsurpassed. For quail and snipe shooting and also for ladies' use, we have a special lot of 16 gauge guns. H. E. Skinner & Co., 416 Market Street.

In hot weather there is no drink like Jackson's Napa Soda—plain in a lemonade.

At the Traps.

The final club blue rock shoot at Ingleside for this season was held by the Olympic Gun Club last Sunday. Weather conditions were pleasant and favorable. The number of men who faced the traps was not a criterion as to the club list of eligibles for medal honors. A number of shooters were barred from participation in the final shoot for the reason that they had not kept up their scores earlier during the season.

A. J. Webb won the first medal in the champion class on a total score, for six club shoots, of 141 out of a possible 150. Fred Feudner won the second medal for the champion class, with a record of 134 breaks. In class A, Edgar L. Forster, with a total score of 131 broken targets, was awarded first medal for the class. Clarence A. Haight annexed the second class A medal on the score of 130 for the season. Four men tied, with 124 out of 150, for the medal in class B. On a shoot-off of the tie N. H. Neustader won the medal, scoring 22 breaks out of a possible 25. The medals were all solid gold, handsomely designed and beautifully chased.

Three shooters participated in a 100 bird race, with the intention of breaking the Coast record. The scores while good did not cut down any established record.

Gold bars for straight runs of 25 were won as follows: A. J. Webb 2, E. L. Forster 1, W. J. Golcher 1. Silver bars were awarded for straight runs of 15, to the following shooters: Dr. A. T. Derby 3, Fred Feudner 3, E. L. Forster 2, and M. Burnell, A. J. Webb, F. W. King and G. Gordon 1 each.

The scores made by the shooters were as follows:

The Union Gun Club live bird shoot on the 22d inst. brought to a close the Ingleside pigeon shooting program for 1901.

The club shoot at twelve pigeons was the third and last of a series of club live bird meetings. In this race P. J. Walsh missed but three birds out of a total of 36 and won the first prize, a handsome pair of gold sleeve buttons, embellished with the club design. T. L. Lewis won the second prize, a counterpart of the first, but made of silver. The birds supplied on Sunday were the strongest and swiftest lot of pigeons released from the Ingleside traps this season. After the main event a number of six-bird pools were shot. "Pete" Walsh lost but seven out of 88 during the day. In a "freeze out" with C. A. Haight he lost to the latter by missing his nineteenth bird. During the shoot Haight shot from the 32 yard mark, Walsh stood at 31 yards.

The scores made during the day follow:

THE FARM.

Destroying Weeds.

There are a great many troublesome weeds that are quite tenacious of life, to extirpate which the only method now known is laborious, destructive culture. Whether easier ways will ever be found for getting rid of many of them is open to doubt, and yet one need not be without hope. For several years past efforts, attended by more or less success, have been made in Great Britain to destroy wild mustard in grain fields by spraying, without injuring the grain. The statement of the problem looks a little like that which the amateur hunter in the story undertook to solve by aiming "so as to hit it if it was a deer and miss it if it was a cow." It seems almost hopeless to use a spraying solution in the expectation that it will kill wild mustard without injuring the wheat or barley in which the mustard is growing. Nevertheless in Great Britain and Ireland field tests with a three-fourths per cent solution of sulphate of copper, at the rate of forty gallons per acre, practically destroyed the mustard without injury to the barley, and these tests also seriously injured the thistle, dock and some other weeds, although it did not kill them. Tests in France also with a twelve and one-half per cent. solution of iron sulphate applied at the rate of about a hundred gallons per acre, killed quite a number of weeds without injuring either cereals or clover. In Germany a fifteen per cent. solution of sulphate of iron has been used with success.

In this country no farmers so far as we know, have ever used either the copper or iron sulphate in a commercial way in the field. A number of experimental tests, however, have been made, chiefly at the North Dakota Station, with very promising results. In one instance a wheat field infested with mustard, wild barley, wild roses, lsmhsquarter, ragweed, shepherd's purse, wild huckwheat and cress was sprayed at a time when the weeds were about five inches high. Before the season was over all the weeds were destroyed except the wild rose and some of the cress. The wheat blades were slightly hurried, yet, notwithstanding this fact, the yield on the treated plot was greater than on that which was untreated.

The subject is not only an interesting one, but a very important one in the northwestern fields, and indeed anywhere that cereal crops are grown repeatedly on the same land without intervening cleaning crops. It will be observed, however, that the weeds which the spraying destroys are chiefly annuals, not particularly tenacious of life, but making up for weakness in this direction by the immense amount of seed they produce. So far as the practice of spraying to destroy weeds has yet been carried there is no evidence that it would do any good with the more tenacious perennials, to which class most of the really dangerous weeds belong.—Iowa Homestead.

Robert S. McCormick, United States Minister to Austria, took with him when he set out for Vienna sundry complaints from Chicago and New York that American packages of meats were not properly handled by the Austrian officials. Mr. McCormick is at present on a visit to this country and recently stated that he found the situation somewhat as claimed and altered it. He states that the fault lay with the slowness with which the packages were handled. "For instance," he said, "if a package of lard lies at Trieste for ten days or two weeks and the weather is hot the goods will be damaged and the reflection will be on the American shipper or manufacturer. This condition has been remedied." Mr. McCormick says there ought to be a good market for American implements in Hungary.

The Shropshire's Place.

A very interesting discussion anent the breeding and qualities of the Shropshire is at present going on in the columns of our esteemed contemporary, the Pastoralists' Review. "A Lover of Shropshires" discusses the question as follows:

"The Shropshire has his appropriate sphere; keep him in it. Every time you induce a man to use him outside it you have a breeder who loses no opportunity of condemning the breed. The bare fact of any Shropshire or Shropshire cross wether living to be a four-tooth shows that a mistake has been made. Any crossbred Shropshire should die a lamb, or, at least, at 18 months old, and as one who has the interests of the breed at heart—in fact, my own interests—I deprecate any attempt to convert them into the will-o'-the-wisp, the general purpose sheep.

"We have been through it all here. One man tried to breed black faced Lincolns under the guise of Shropshires. Your correspondent aims at black faced Merinos. With both of them a sheep is a frame upon which a long wool or Merino fleece may be hung. I grant you that sheep in small paddocks, housed, nursed and coddled, may on occasions produce both wool, carcass and early maturity, but under the conditions of ordinary farming at a profit something must go, and the attempt to secure everything too often ends in getting nothing. If you want a big, thin lamb with a good skin you can get him. You can also get a fat lamb with a second rate pelt. But you cannot get a fat, shapely lamb carrying either a Lincoln or a Merino fleece. The Shropshire—i. e., a good Shropshire—will get you early maturity, good shape and a better fleece than the Southdown will out of the same ewes, but the Shropshire-Merino cross is about the last that I would recommend to any man for any purpose. The meat is much too dark for the London market, and if you want wool you can do better with your Merino ewes. Carbine, I daresay, would have made a tolerable harness horse, but his realm was the race course. So it is with sheep. Each breed is best for one purpose in one particular locality, but to use mutton breeds for wool is like breeding Jerseys for beef.

"The worst of all this nonsense about Shropshires as wool producers is that it deteriorates the breed. Men bitten by the wool mania discard their best Shropshire rams, thick set, compact, hardy sheep, because they do not open on the belly to please them, or they do not carry wool well down; they spend hours examining the wool on a ram's purse, but for a well-turned rib, a good neck, heavy legs of mutton, they have no eye. Judges at shows, too, fall a prey to length of staple, and I have seen sheep with three inches of last year's wool left on, beating better sheep that had been honestly shorn. Of course we all like a well covered head, and I would have hare points a la Border Leicester, a kempy breech, or black polls, but beyond that I regard the attempt to make Shropshires into wool producers as the greatest mistake that could be made. Let a flock cut seven or eight pounds of wool if you like; after that let carcass reign supreme.

"In a toot note you say something about cross breeding. Over here the comeback has been tried and found egregiously wanting. The best crossbred sheep, the best sheep, indeed, for it now is a breed by itself, is bred thus: To Lincoln-Merino ewes put a Lincoln-Merino ram. Always have your ram first cross, but your ewes may be bred as above continuously. The ewes of this breed are invaluable. They clip well, are good, hardy mothers and they sell like hot cakes. If you want wool, put a Lincoln ram to them; if for lambs, a Shropshire. They produce a very pretty sheep to the English Leicester. The wethers freeze very well, and the breed is, in point of fact, the hedrock of our best Canterbury mutton. Five year old ewes of this breed are worth 15s or 16s a head to-day.

"To return to Shropshires. There is no sheep more difficult to breed to one's satisfaction. There is no breed which so quickly deteriorates. A good Shropshire is a good sheep in his sphere, a bad one is probably the worst, ugliest, most useless wastrel in the animal kingdom. My advice to breeders is: Pay a decent price for good Shropshires, use them for fat lambs in country suitable for lamb rearing. If any lambs from any cause should not fatten, in no cases hear them twice. Under no possible circumstances have anything to do with a Shropshire ram unless he has a good carcass."

The British Islands have developed many odd industries. The latest to gain a foothold in the "tight little isle" deals with creamery milk after all the butter fat has been extracted from it. The whole milk of the cow is taken to the creamery and the butter fat separated as soon after the milking as possible. Then the skimmed milk is treated so as to coagulate all the proteids remaining and the coagulated mass is kneaded and dried, after which it is ground to a powder which has been given the name of "plasmon." This is found to be nutriment in a most highly concentrated form and already the discoverer finds that he can sell all his product, and much more in addition, to any one of half a dozen governments to feed to their soldiers. The German Empire has offered him an advance of some thirteen per cent. on the price at which he is at present supplying the entire output of his little factory to the British War office. The "plasmon" is sent mostly to the British soldiers in hot climates and in South Africa. Official data show that one ounce of this plasmon eaten by an average man will enable him to endure as much fatigue as three and one-quarters pounds of good beefsteak. It is figured that there will be no trouble now in reaching the proper formula for compounding a good ration to be used by troops on forced marches.

In Bath, England, a man was arrested, convicted and fined £40, or $200, for selling fresh butter containing 23.84 per cent. of water, and salt butter containing 23.74 per cent., the lawful amount of water in butter not being to exceed 16 per cent.

Fine Imported Sheep.

There was recently received at the Bliss ranch, on the Chowchilla, nineteen miles from Merced, six very fine rams. The animals were purchased in England by J. G. Massey of Colorado for George D. Bliss. They are the thoroughbred Hampshiredown, two years old, and weigh about 200 pounds each. They cost $140 each, and the cost of bringing them here was $20 apiece. On the way here they were placed on exhibition at the Pan-American Exposition, where they attracted much attention. Mr. Bliss has about 400 ewes, all of high grade, being a cross of Yorkshiredown. Their large size makes them especially valuable for mutton, while the wool is very long and fine and commands a much higher price than common wool. At Christmas time last year fourteen wethers were sent to the San Francisco market from the Bliss ranch which created a sensation among the marketmen. They weighed 172 pounds each, dressed—nearly four times the weight of an ordinary sheep carcass. —Merced Star.

To keep chickens growing well, they should have a variety of food. Corn or wheat alone are not the best, but they should form a part of the ration after they are two months old, and wheat or cracked corn may be given the second week. A little buckwheat, barley and oats occasionally, are all good for them. We do not fear their getting too fat on the corn or wheat if they are used alone, but there may be a danger of liver disease, which is often the cause of death when the food is only of these grains. Of course they need green food every day, and if confined to yards the feed must be carried to them. But we would have one meal a day of a mash of wheat bran, to which add about half as much corn meal and a handful of beef scrap for each gallon of mash. This keeps them in good appetite and good health, if otherwise well cared for, and they will grow rapidly and mature early if of good vigorous stock. Some will not grow because they lacked vitality when hatched.

The use of incubators is spreading. They are now made of all sizes, beginners preferring the smaller sizes. As a 100-egg incubator will hatch as many chicks as eight or ten hens, and as the chicks can be kept in a small space together under one brooder, there is no more care required than in attending to a large number of broody hens. As all the chicks can be hatched at once, they consequently reach the market in one lot and are uniform in size. The best time to learn with an incubator is in the summer, when eggs are cheap, as the cost of running the brooder is also then low. It is not difficult to operate an incubator, but there is something to learn; hence the incubator and brooder should be operated as a trial before attempting to hatch for the market.

A Jersey Red boar was recently slaughtered in the county of Essex in England. It was two and one-half years old, weighed, alive, 1610 pounds and killed out, dressed, 1337 pounds. It was 30 inches across the loin, 30 inches across the hams, 72 inches in girth and 108 inches from tip of snout to end of tail. When split at the shoulders its flesh cut just three feet thick from rind to rind from outside the shoulder blades. The cheeks or jowls were nearly 24 inches wide at top. The face of the monster hog measured only sixteen and one-quarter inches. From hip bone to toe the measurement was five and one-half feet or 66 inches, which gives one the idea of the size of the ham.

Seven-cent beef on the hoof is a rare sight in any American market at any but the Christmas season. It was seen in Chicago though last Wednesday, Sept. 11th, when S. O. McCullough, Devitt Co., Ill., presented a high grade Angus steer weighing 1,720 pounds. The purchaser of the seven-cent beef was Silas Palmer who has sent the black steer to the farm of James Meredith in Kane county to be finished off for exhibition at the coming International Show next December. This steer was sent along with a load that without him averaged 1,393 pounds and brought $6.40 per cwt. The big steer brought $120.40.

Great Britain is increasing her annual bill for mutton very greatly. During the first six months of this year the Britains paid several hundred thousand pounds more for sheep and lambs than during the similar period of 1900, but, strangely enough, the imports of live sheep have fallen off nearly twenty per cent. The number, however, taken from the United States has increased 131.89 per cent., the number from Canada 311 per cent. The number of sheep sent alive from this country to Britain from January 1st to July 31, 1901, was 188,382. Canada sent 22,891. Argentina sent 178,196 live sheep to England in the first six months of 1900. The declared value of each sheep was $8.75.

When we have a cow a year or more she usually yields double the amount of milk that she did when bought. We conclude from this that a cow like a race horse—she needs training and fitting for business. Many a good cow is hardly paying her board for the reason she does not have the proper care and feed. When a cow is fed a full ration, sixty per cent of what she eats goes to supply the waste tissues and to furnish energy. It is short sightedness to withhold any of the forty per cent that goes to furnish material for milk making.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY Nothing Reserved

Every Horse on the well-known GABILAN STOCK FARM, the property of Jesse D. Carr, Salinas, is offered for immediate sale at a bargain.

Mr. Carr wishes to be relieved of the care of managing a stock farm, and has thrown on the market about 50 head of high-class Brood Mares, selected for their breeding and individuality, nearly every one of them being standard, and it is rarely that such an opportunity is offered to buyers to secure high-class stock at a bargain. In addition to Brood Mares Mr. Carr has about 50 youngsters from weanlings to three-year-olds, out of these great mares and by the best stallions on this Coast. Many of them are entered in the Pacific Breeders Futurity Stakes, the Stanford Stake and the Occident Stake, and those that are old enough are broken, many of them showing speed that warrants the assumption that they will be great race horses.....

A list of all of the stock on the ranch is in preparation. The stock can be seen at the ranch, and lists and further information can be had by addressing

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

We want to send to every sufferer a trial treatment of Asthmalene, similar to the one that cured Mr. Wells. We'll send it by mail POSTPAID, ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE, to any sufferer who will write for it, even on a postal. A shipment of 600 dehorned Kentucky steers, straight from the bluegrass region, was taken on board the freighter Consuelo at Jersey City, N. J., last month. One hundred of the steers were to be unloaded at Hull, the rest at London, England. The consignment averaged 1400 pounds and had been contracted at five cents the pound. So large a shipment attracted attention and inquiry at the office of the Jersey Stock Yards elicited the information that so great is the demand for American meats abroad that some cattle dealers who five or six years ago shipped 600 or 700 monthly are now shipping 600 a week.

When hogs sold for $7 per cwt. in Chicago on Monday, September 9th, the highest notch was reached for the month since 1882 when $9.35 was paid for swine in that market. That figure in turn was the best paid in Chicago since along in war times when $13 per cwt. was reached. In September, 1896, the top price in September was but $3.35.

HIDALGO'S GOSSIP.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

I left London with my wife at 3:40 on Tuesday and at 7 o'clock our train had pulled up at Lincoln, where we had concluded to spend the night, as I had been informed that beds in Doncaster were only to be had in private houses, and for a sovereign at that. We went to the Saracen's Head and, although it was quite late, had a hearty British dinner washed down with some Swiss champagne, made at Neufchatel, which I liked very much as it was exceedingly dry and not a headache in a barrel of it. We slept as sound as tops, and not a breath of complaint escaped us through the incessant patter of a night-long rain. And when we awoke it recalled the lines of Aytoun:

"The morning dawned full darkly,
The rain came flashing down
As the ragged streak of the levin bolt
Lit up the gloomy town."

But when breakfast was over the sun began to break through the clouds and we felt confident that we were going to have a bright day for the oldest annual race in the world—the Doncaster St. Leger. We got a cab after breakfast and drove up to Lincoln Cathedral and the castle, both of which were novel sights to American eyes. At noon we were on the train for Doncaster and, when we arrived there, the rails were so crowded that they took us off the train at an out-of-the-way siding and made us walk over half a mile to the depot, where we left our luggage and got a hack to the town moor. When you stop to consider that there has been no added money given to the St. Leger for the past two years, the track charges are exorbitant, for they charge you $5 for a seat on a stand about 120 yards up the stretch and $5 more to go into the saddling paddock. At Melbourne on "Cup Day" they charge you $5 for a reserved seat on the grand stand (with a coupon to keep any one else from claiming it if you should leave it) and admit you to the paddock beside.

In any other country but conservative old England the St. Leger would have been moved from Doncaster to some other course the very moment that added money to the race was refused. The principal horse owners on any American track would have gotten together in the next twenty-four hours and offered the race to any other course that would give the greatest amount of added money to it. But here, bless your heart, they would do nothing of the sort. What! Remove the St. Leger from the town moor? You might as well talk of removing the Parliament houses from London itself.

I never saw anything like the crowd that filed out of the Doncaster streets on foot in all my life. By 1 P. M. there were at least 75,000 people in the infield of the track, but the stands were not so crowded as I expected. There were bars on all three floors of the grand stand, from which all suspicious looking persons were excluded, but I saw several apparently respectable ladies taking their brandy and soda till their heads began to whirl. I had seen so many costly toilets at the Melbourne Cup that I was expecting them here, but actually did not see what would (in America, at least) be called a well dressed or stylish looking woman on the whole grand stand. Down in the betting ring I met my old Melbourne friend, Joe Thompson, looking a trifle older than when I met him in San Francisco in 1890, but the same genial old Joe for all that. We talked a while over old days at Flemington and Caulfield and then I went back to the grand stand to rejoin my wife.

The first race of the day was the Rufford Abbey plate of two miles, for which there were seven starters, and you could get 11 to 1 against any one of the three first choices. Congratulations, a sorrel with the high foreleg roan to the shoulder, was the heaviest played, but not enough to cut the price. On any American track the same amount of money would have dropped her to 8 to 5. Coventry gave me a rather ragged start, with congratulations two lengths back of the leaders, but she forged in front and was soon on even terms, Uncle Mac lying third. In this way they came into the straight (which is over 700 yards long) and just as congratulations looked all over a winner, Halsey gave the top weight (Uncle Mac) his lead and he won by nearly two lengths. After this came the Tattersall's Sale Stakes, for which Robert Sauer's horse Larengro was a sizzling hot favorite till Pekin by St. Simon—Lady Yardley managed to head him by a length and then came the most sensational St. Leger since Dutch Oven won it, nineteen years ago.

Not a single turf prophet in London (or elsewhere, that I can find out) hinted at better than third place for the horse actually bracketed the winner. I was told Volodyovski was an arrant coward and would shut up shop whenever a good and game horse "took him by the head," so I got bold of the calendar to play form, with the result that I bet $100 straight and place on Fortunatus at 10 to 1 and $100 straight and show on Veronese at 12 to 1, on the strength of the latter's third in the Derby and the former's victory in the Goodwood Cup. An old race goer told me that the latter was very bad betting.

"No horse that ever won a Goodwood Cup has won a St. Leger afterward," he said quietly.

"And why?" I asked.

"Because the gruelling work that a horse gets to make him stay the Goodwood course takes all the edge off him for a race that is six furlongs less. Moreover, the character of Goodwood Cup horses has been deteriorating quietly for the last forty years. You had a Goodwood Cup horse by the name of Starke; and he had all he could do to beat Thormanby and The Wizard with 22 pounds the best of the weight." Volodyovski stood pat at 13 to 10 on till after the first race was over and then receded to 11 to 10 and even then there was no great anxiety to back the field. A better description of the race than I can give has been already printed in the daily papers, but I can only say that, in my belief, Doricles was a very lucky horse, and that I do not believe he will ever again beat "Volo" at even weights. He had two good helpers in Aida, who knocked Fortunatus almost to his knees, and in Revenue, who bumped both the favorite and Veronese twice as they came through the stretch. It was all right for the stewards to dismiss Reiff's complaint against Doricles, but how they could give Revenue the third money in the race after what they must have seen—if they had any eyes in their heads—passes my comprehension. The fact, however, that the get of King Edward's good horse Florizell II. came 1-2 in this race shows me very clearly which is the best son of St. Simon now at the stud.

Not a man of my acquaintance had a dollar on Doricles and as good as 40 to 1 could have been had until the parade, when he and several others advanced to 100 to 3. Volo was even money at the time of the preliminary canter. The difference in the appearance of the two horses is a striking one, as Volo is a very lengthy strider and goes more like "Old Jack" (Carbine) than any horse I have ever seen in the past ten years. Doricles is a red bay horse and goes with more of a scuffling gait than Mr. Whitney's colt, to whom Veronese ranks next as an easy and frictionless mover.

I never saw a much worse actor at the post than Sir James Miller's filly Aida, by Galopin, who won the One Thousand last May. She kicked and faunched at the post till she got Lord Robs, Cyneros and Fortunatus into the kicking bee, at which Volodyovski afterwards took a hand. All of this may have had something to do with changing the main results of the race, for Fortunatus beat Doricles easily in the St. George Stakes at Liverpool. If ever the two horses, Volodyovski and Doricles, meet again at even weights, I shall back the former at 100 to 20 rather than not get the money on; and a match race with 126 pounds on each I believe that Mr. Whitney's colt can beat him even the same distance, shoes to plates.

I have heard people say the favorite was run short of work, which I do not believe, true he did not have any such bloom on his coat as Doricles, Fortunatus or Veronese, but I looked him well over and he looked as hard as mahogany. I have also heard it said that Lester Reiff did not ride a good race; I think otherwise. He was badly humped and used roughly from the time he went to the post. He was at least six inches ahead of Doricles for three or four strides after gaining an opening but the humping he got from Revenue, coupled with the long delay at the post, had told upon him and he was unable to cope with a comparatively fresh horse like Doricles who had clear sailing all the way. When a boy rides what I call a really bad race, I am as ready to censure him as anybody but believe it wholly undeserved in the present instance. Of course, after a bunch of money has been lost on a top heavy favorite there are always hosts of people ready to censure either the trainer or the rider or both.

We left the track as soon as the Leger was over and did not care to see any of the races that followed. We took the 3:45 train at Doncaster and came down to London by way of Newark and Grantam. Never did a fairer country lie before the eye of man than did dear old Yorkshire with its rolling green hills and patriarchal oaks. There was a rich mantle of purple and gold in the mellow autumn sky as we rolled out of the land of John Browdie and crossed into the wealthy county of Nottingham. And "just as the sun went down" in a blaze of glittering glory that I never can forget a fellow passenger in our compartment pointed out a big body of timber and said "There is Sherwood Forest, Sir." It brought up memories of my good old friend Henry Clay Barnabee and I seemed to hear the rich and mellow voice of Bill McDonald, singing "The Brown October Ale." And at 7 o'clock, having come 158 miles in three hours and fifty minutes, with cloven stops, the panting train rolled into the station at King's Cross and we were once more in foggy old London.

HIDALGO.

Horse News From Hawaii.

[Honolulu Advertiser]

An August 31st, at Hilo, Fierro beat Merrill's Force at six furlongs in 1:22½. Merrill's force carried ten pounds overweight.

On September 5th the horses met again and this time Fierro carried ten pounds extra. Fierro won in 1:21½. It was declared no race on account of Fierro's rider being five pounds short of the weight agreed upon.

On September 7th the race was re-run, weights as before, and Fierro was a 1 to 2 favorite. Merrill's Force won by five lengths in 1:19½, which is within one-half second of the Hilo track record for the distance.

The horses have been matched to run at even weights in a few weeks.

Hilo will have semi-monthly races throughout the fall. The idea of this is to stimulate interest in racing on Hawaii. Races will be held on the first and third Saturdays of each month, beginning at 3 P. M. The events at first will be confined to runners, but later on harness races may be instituted.

The programs will be short and snappy, consisting of two races for Japanese owned and two races for haole owned horses. Twenty-five cents will gain admittance to both track and grand stand.

An extra card will be provided for Thanksgiving Day which will take the place of the Saturday program for November 16th.

The following horses will participate in the races at Hoolulu Park: Fierro, Merrill's Force, Carter Harrison, Jr., Bushwhacker, Dixie Land, Rejected, Lilly Mac, Princess Leotos and Alpheus. The last three are from Horner's ranch.

There will be a big New Year's meeting at Hilo. The townspeople have subscribed to a fund for the purchase of a Hilo Track Cup to cost $150. It will be put up for a mile race and must be won twice before it becomes the property of any one owner. The cup will be purchased by G. S. McKenzie while in San Francisco.

This trophy will be contested for at the New Year's races. There is a possibility that Socialist and Weller may be in the race for Prince David when in Hilo last July said that he would match Weller against Socialist providing a decent trophy were offered. If this race can be arranged it will be one of the best ever seen in the Islands. Socialist went a mile last December in 1:39½ at Oakland. Weller has gone a mile here in 1:42½ which is 1:40 at the Coast.

With the Hilo Track Cup will go a purse of $100 given by the Volcano Stables.

Another big prize at the meeting will be the Hilo Mercantile Cup won last July by Harry Evan's Billy McCluskey. This cup has just been received from the Coast; it stands eighteen inches high and is a beauty.

It is probable that the New Year's races will be run on Friday and Saturday, December 27th and 28th. It is believed that this will be more convenient for visitors from other parts of Hawaii and Honolulu.

The semi monthly races will commence just as soon as G. S. McKenzie returns from the Coast. He leaves next Tuesday on the Sierra. When he comes back he is likely to bring several racehorses with him.

Harness Races at Whatcom, Wash.

The meeting held at Whatcom, Washington, September 17th, 18th and 20th, was a great success. Myrtha Whips beat the little black pacer, Freddie C., in straight heats on the last day of the meeting. The summaries of the harness events of the meeting are as follows:

Trotting, 2:20 class, purse $500—Oveta by Caution 3-1-1-1, Bob Kirk by Wildmont 1-2-2-2, Phil N. 2-3-3-3, King Pateben 4-4-4-4. Time—2:23½, 2:21, 2:21½, 2:23½.

Pacing, 3:00 class, purse $250—Francisco by Caution 1-1-1, Lady Pearl 2-2-2, Direct C. 3-3-3. Time—2:19½, 2:20, 2:18½.

Trotting, free for all, purse $600—Ned Thorne by Billy Thornhill 1-1-1, Oveta 3-2-2, Meteor 2-4-4, Hamrock 4-3-3. Time—2:30, 2:26, 2:18½.

Pacing, 2:25 class, purse $300—Marjorio by Texas Sack 1-1-1, Daniel J. 3-2-2, Francisco 4-8-3, Diodeuc 2-dis. Time—2:17½, 2:17, 2:20½.

Trotting, special—Roy S. by Del Norte 4-3-1-1-1, Saltese by Caution 1-1-3-4-3, Duke of Waldstein 2-2-2-4, Mack Mack 3-4-4-3-3. Time—2:26, 2:25, 2:28, 2:30½, 2:28½.

Trotting, 2:50 class, purse $200—Lady Mac by Direct 1-1-1, Mack Mack 2-2-2. Time—2:30½, 2:33½, 2:27½.

Pacing, free for all, purse $600—Myrtha Whips by Whips 1-1-1, Freddie C. 2-2-2, Starkey 3-3-3. Time—2:15½, 2:12, 2:13½.

Pacing, two year olds, purse $200—Oregon Sunshine by Bonner N. B. 1-1, Ollie N. 2-2. Time—2:42, 2:43.

Strike!—if they don't give you Jackson's Napa Soda when you ask for it.

San Francisco, Saturday, October 5, 1901.

STOCKTON'S RACE MEETING will open October 15th and continue five days. There will be one or more harness races each day, the purses will be free or where entrance is charged $250 will be added to the entrance money. This is a most liberal offer on the part of the association to the horsemen and there should be a generous response on the part of the latter. The idea is to so classify the horses that good contests will result and this will give all a chance to win something who take their horses to Stockton. A $250 purse with free entrance is worth trotting or pacing for at this time of the year, especially as there is no liability incurred for entrance and no danger of suspension if your horse goes sick or lame or cannot start. The Stockton Driving Club is composed of responsible gentlemen, who have always given first class meetings and who always pay the purses in full as soon as the race is finished. Stockton is one of the most thriving and busiest cities in California and large crowds always attend the races there. The track is famous as one of the best and fastest on the Pacific Coast and the Directors assure the harness horse owners that it will be in excellent condition for harness racing. Take your horse to Stockton and you will get a race for him that will be worth winning. Address Secretary J. W. Willy for anything you want.

THE TEAMSTERS' STRIKE, which began two months ago in San Francisco, and which fortunately for all concerned came to a close last Wednesday, has been very rough on the horses used in express and heavy teaming, and if the poor dumb brutes could speak they would probably meet and pass resolutions of congratulation to themselves that the strike is over. If there has been one thing demonstrated clearly by the strike it is that the poor horses have been the greatest sufferers. The big trucks and freight wagons have not only been overloaded during the past two months, but incompetent men have necessarily been put in charge of them, and the result was that horses were compelled to do work that overtaxed their strength and amounted to extreme cruelty in many instances. A man may be a good plowman or driver of country freight teams, and still be utterly incompetent to handle a pair of horses drawing a heavy load over the cobbles of a crowded thoroughfare. The heavy horses of San Francisco have heard more swearing and felt the lash oftener during the past eight weeks than for a whole year previous, and no doubt are highly pleased in an equine way over the return to the old order of things. Among those who come in for congratulations over the strike settlement the San Francisco horses are entitled to a place.

THE PACIFIC BREEDERS' FUTURITY for the foals of mares bred this year, closed last Tuesday, and while a few entries from distant northern and southern points will probably not arrive until to-day, it is safe to say that the stake will be as successful as the one closed last year, when 305 entries were received. This is encouraging and shows that the interest in harness horse breeding, which had such a revival last year, has not decreased. This year, unfortunately, the Palo Alto Stock Farm has not made any entries, as it is the expressed determination of the management to race their horses no more on the Pacific Coast. Had this farm made the same number of entries in this stake as it did last year, the entry list would have been larger than that of 1901. As it is the number will probably be two or three under or over that of the first stake. It is a matter of congratulation to all concerned that these stakes have been so successful as far as entries are concerned. Let us hope that the races which result will bring to the post the best and fastest lot of colts ever bred in America. The complete list of entries will be published in full in these columns next week.

THE OUTLOOK for next year is most encouraging to California owners of harness horses. The districts will all hold fairs and race meetings and with an appropriation for two years to aid them should be able to offer premiums that will make a most creditable display. That there will be many horses trained every person acquainted with the present condition of affairs believes, as the great scarcity of good horses now existing will make such animals very profitable for years to come. Every good sound horse that can show 2:40 speed will meet with ready sale at a good price next year, and every one that shows 2:20 speed will find many opportunities open to win money on the California circuit of fairs and harness meetings. There has been some good racing this year although the number of horses in training during the entire season was small, owing to the fact that so few places gave meetings. While we do not think it is a wise policy for district associations to miss a fair one year and draw the entire appropriation the following year, it could be made a good plan if the 45 districts could agree on dates and half of them hold meetings on alternate years. But this would have to be a matter for future consideration as unless the appropriations are all expended in 1902 they will revert to the State and cannot be used at all, so it is very likely that every district in California will hold a meeting next year. The managers of the different tracks throughout the State should see that they are put in condition for training this winter. By February next there will probably be at least a thousand trotters and pacers taken up and worked with the idea of racing them if they show sufficient speed. If all the districts that will hold fairs in 1902 would make an announcement of the fact through the proper channels, and state the size of purses that will be offered, instead of one there would be two thousand horses at work by March 1st. There is every chance of a very prosperous year for California in 1902 and the harness horse owners will get their share of it.

CLIP YOUR HORSES NOW if you intend working or driving them during the winter, as when the heavy coat is off they will keep in better condition and be less liable to contract colic and fatal pneumonia. Of course, a good blanket must be provided and the horse not allowed to stand on the street at any time or in the stall at night without this covering, but if clipped he will not remain damp all night, as the majority of work horses do that have heavy coats of hair during the winter. And if you clip your horses, you will find the new "1902" machine just placed on the market by the Chicago Flexible Shaft Company as the best of the hair removing devices that has been invented. It works so easily and noiselessly, does the work so well, and can be used at any angle so readily that it is really the most convenient and best machine on the market. It is guaranteed to do more work in the same time than any other machine, which is another big thing in its favor. The well known firm of Baker & Hamilton are the agents for these machines on the Pacific Coast and will ship them anywhere from either their Sacramento or San Francisco establishments. The price of the 1902 machine is but $15, and a person can earn enough with one in a day to pay for it.

CRESCEUS, THE CHAMPION, is coming to California. The Sacramento Driving Club has already made and signed a contract with Mr. Geo. Ketcham, owner of the great horse, by the terms of which Mr. Ketcham agrees to have Cresceus at the Sacramento track on November 28th, Thanksgiving Day, and will drive him in an effort to lower his present record of 2:02½. The gentlemen of the Sacramento Driving Club are to be congratulated on their enterprise in securing such an attraction, and we believe there will be such a gathering of horsemen and the general public there on that day that all previous records of crowds at the famous old track will be eclipsed. May the weather, the track, and the great stallion be in perfect condition and may the result of this combination be the two minute trotting record which has been so long sought and desired by every lover of the American trotter.

A GREAT RACE will result should the plans of Secretary Teed of the Los Angeles District Agricultural Association be carried out. He is attempting to bring about a meeting of William G. Layng's great pacer Sir Albert S. 2:08½ by Diablo, and Mr. Geo. A. Kelly's fast trotting mare Anzella 2:10½ by Antrim. While the majority of horsemen are of the opinion that the pacer would win such a race, Mr. Kelly is confident that his mare will give the pacer the race of his life should they meet when Anzella is feeling just right. She has a wonderful flight of speed and can cover a mile close to the pacer's record with the conditions favorable. A race between the two would be a great drawing card and should fill the big stand at Los Angeles to overflowing.

Oregon's Big State Fair.

The State Fair held at Salem, Oregon, last week was a big success in every way in spite of the fact that there was rain and lots of mud during the first three days and racing was necessarily quite slow.

The cattle display was the finest ever seen in Oregon but the horses of the thoroughbred and standard breeds were not so numerous. Every stall was filled and many new ones had to be built. There were 22 car loads of cattle, 6 of sheep, 6 of hogs and 12 of horses including race horses.

The races were all good and there was a determination on the part of every driver to win if he possibly could. Owing to the rain and mud the drivers were a sight during the first part of the week and after a race looked like the jockeys at San Francisco during the winter racing.

The attendance each day was over five thousand and on Salem day about ten thousand were on the grounds. The summaries of the week's races were as follows:

September 23. Trotting, two year olds, purse $500—Lady Jones by Capt. Jones won, Miladi second and Flaxie D. third. Time, 2:46, 2:47.

Pacing, 2:25, three in five, purse $800—Freddie C. by Direct won, Marjorie second Daniel J. third and Prince Tom fourth. Time, 2:20½, 2:24½, 2:26½.

September 24. Pacing, two year olds, purse $500—Ollie M. by Westfield won, Sunbeam Lou second, Oregon Sunshine third, Dr. Lulu fourth. Delgo and Miladi distanced in first heat. Time, 2:28, 2:35.

Trotting, 2:30 class, purse $700—Saxaline by Saxwood won, Mack Mack second, Roy S. third, Juniper fourth. Time, 2:31, 2:31, 2:29.

Trotting, free for all, purse $500—Ned Thorne by Billy Thornhill won, Volo second, Lady Alfred third, Road Boy fourth. Time, 2:26½, 2:26½, 2:36½.

September 25. Pacing, Inland Empire Stake, for three and four year old pacers, $500—Chehalis Maid by Chehalis won, Nellie Covert second, Robert H. third, Admiral Dewey fourth. Time, 2:25, 2:34, 2:36.

Pacing, Salem Chamber of Commerce Stake for 2:15 pacers, $1000—Pathmark by Pathmont 2-1-2-2-1-1, Starkey by Chehalis 3-3-4-1-1-2-2, Ben Bolt 5-4-3-3-3, Hassalo by Westfield 1-1-2-4 dis, John Crawford 4-5 dis. Time, 2:21, 2:21½, 2:30, 2:31½, 2:33, 2:25½, 2:27½. The last two heats of this race were paced September 26th.

September 26. Webfoot Stake for three and four year old trotters, $500—T. D. C. by Zombro won first, third and fourth heats; Edmon S. by Zombro won second heat. Gracie Dell and Kath Alene distanced. Time, 2:40½, 2:46½, 2:39½, 2:36½.

Trotting, Capital City Stake, 2:20 class, $1000—Mt. Hood by Westfield won second, third and fourth heats; Oveta by Caution won first heat. Saxaline, Package, Volo and Phil N. also started. Time, 2:24, 2:24½, 2:27½, 2:30.

September 27. Pacing, 2:20 class, purse $500—Freddy C. by Direct won, Le Roi second, Harry Hurst third, Marjorie fourth. Altacora distanced. Time, 2:22½, 2:22½, 2:23½.

Trotting, 2:24 class, purse $500—Mt. Hood by Westfield won Mack Mack second, Boh Kirk third, Kitty Caution fourth, Roy S. fifth, Tilden distanced. Time, 2:23½, 2:25½, 2:25½.

September 28. Pacing, free for all—Freddy C. by Direct won, Myrtha Whips second, Al Ne third, Alta Norte distanced. Time, 2:14½, 2:14½, 2:17½.

Trotting, 2:15 class, purse $800—Lady Alfred by Alfred G. won third, fourth and fifth heats, Arketa by McKinney won first and second heats, Kitty Caution was third and Road Boy fourth. Time, 2:22½, 2:25, 2:24½, 2:24, 2:25.

The grandson of Onward that W. G. Durfee took in part payment for Dr. Book 2:10 is Petigru 2:24½. He is registered in volume 15 of the American Trotting Register and is by Kingward 12,562, sire of John 2:14½, Dodge 2:21½ and others. Kingward's sire is Onward, his dam by King Rene and his second dam by Almont 33. The dam of Petigru is Lemonade 2:27½ (dam of Bessie Wilton 2:09½, Lady Wilton 2:11½, Lemonce 2:18½) and Petigru 2:24½ and granddam of Lady Thisbe 2:16½ by Kentucky Prince Jr. 3:139; second dam Susie Melbourne by Melbourne Jr., son of imp. The Knight of St. George; third dam Kate, a producing granddaughter of Abdallah 15. Petigru's pedigree shows a beautiful blending of the choicest trotting and thoroughbred blood and as he is a good individual and only six years old, he should be a very valuable addition to the breeding ranks of California. Mr. Durfee may race him next year, as it is said the stallion has much greater speed than his record shows.

The Commercial Tribune, published at Cincinnati, contained the following in its issue of September 26th: "Sandy" Smith blew in from Boston Tuesday night, and will remain during the meeting. "Sandy" is one of the characters of the trotting turf, and is a queer sort of a genius, who follows the trotters from early spring until late in the fall. During the lifetime of the late Tom Keating he was that great trainer's chief factotum. "Sandy" lives in California, but comes East every spring and manages to get a good bunch of those coarse yellow notes so much desired by every turf follower.

Contra Costa County Fair.

No agricultural district in California makes better use of the money appropriated by the State for an annual fair than district No. 23, comprising the county of Contra Costa. The fair is held every year at Concord, where the association owns six acres on which its buildings stand, and adjoining which is a good mile track on the land of Mr. E. S. Paddock. The officers of the association are H. J. Curry, President; James Rankin, Treasurer; A. B. McKonzie, Secretary, and the Directors are Robert Wallace, L. M. Lassell, E. J. Randall, Geo. Sellers, J. E. Durham, George Meese, H. H. Elworthy and Theodore Moiles, the last named, who is constable at the town of Crockett, acting as Marshall during the fair. There is not one of these gentlemen but is in attendance every year at the fair, doing when he can to make it a success, and that their efforts are appreciated one has only to visit the place while the fair is on to be thoroughly satisfied. Last Friday there were about 3000 people in attendance, which would be considered a fair crowd at the State Fair, and the live stock exhibit, particularly of heavy draught stock, compared favorably with the State exhibition in both quality and quantity, as it was nearly a mile in length when led out for inspection.

It is a real pleasure and source of satisfaction to see this fair conducted without the open display of gambling that is prevalent at so many fairs. There is a good program of races every day of the four of the fair, but as the pool selling is confined to a building entirely away from the grand stand and is patronized by very few, the races have more the appearance of matinee events than they do of actual professional contests. Some very fair purses were hung up, and all the horses that started this year were out for the money and trying for every heat.

Among the exhibitors in the live stock department this year were Assessor Henry T. Jones, whose Shropshire sheep, Poland China and Berkshire hogs were all especially fine. Mr. E. Randall, the Martinez banker-farmer, also made a fine exhibit of Shropshire sheep, hogs and cattle. Albert Glass, of San Ramon, showed as fine a lot of draught horses as one can see at any fair and his stallion Pride with three of his get was awarded first prize in this class. President Curry showed a pair of handsome grey carriage horses that would attract attention on the streets of any city, as they were large and very stylish.

There was a pavilion exhibit which was not large but excellent. The fruit was superb, the grains, etc., first class, while the floral displays, and the needle work, painting and other displays of art by the ladies were very good.

We are pleased to announce that the Contra Costa association without the aid of a large sum for the letting privilege, and with but a very small sum from the State, made a financial success of its fair and after everything is paid has a neat sum in its treasury. The Concord fair is an object lesson for the districts that find it so difficult to make their fairs pay.

The track is a little narrow, but the footing is good and it is not cut up for the runners. During the meeting Gaff Topsail, a son of Diablo, broke the track record by going a mile in 2:16, and the gray horse What Is It by Direct won one of the hardest fought races that has been seen on the circuit this year. There were but four starters in the race, but What Is It was compelled to take the overland route every time, and when he finally won there was great cheering for the horse.

The presiding judge and starter of the harness horses was W. S. Wells, who is Superior Judge of Contra Costa county, but steps down from the bench during fair week at the unanimous request of his people to act as judge at their fair, as they have the utmost confidence in his integrity and ability. He was ably assisted this year in the stand by Messrs. George Van Gorden and S. R. Curry.

The summaries of the four days' racing are as follows:

Not So Wise After All.

Another scandal of the Boh Kneehs order is just coming to life in the Czar's dominion, writes Palmer Clark of Chicago. It seems that an Indianapolis blacksmith named Thomas Mack went to Russia and secured employment in the royal stables at Moscow. His ability was such that his services were sought after by many of the owners of noted track horses. Among those brought to his shop was one that had been winning quite heavily on the Russian turf, and, curious to relate, the blacksmith recognized the horse as one he had formerly shod for V. L. Shuler, of Indianapolis; a horse which he claimed had a record of 2:16½.

As the horse had been trotting in classes for Russian bred horses, the officials immediately began investigation, with the result that a photograph of the horse sent to Baron de Schlippenbach, Russian Consul at Chicago, has been identified by Mr. Shuler as Oslund L., a horse owned by him in 1894-5-6, and which made a record of 2:16½ at the Minnesota State Fair. The horse is being campaigned by a Mr. Wise, but nobody seems to know who the Wise man is. Oslund L. is certainly not a Russian bred stallion. On the contrary, he was bred and trained in Minnesota. George W. Sherwood, of St. Paul, whose farm is at Sheldon, Iowa, bred him, and V. L. Shuler, who drove John C. Oswald's Greenleaf 2:10 to his record and handled a goodly number of good horses in that part of the country, had charge of Oslund L.'s education. The depositions taken will prove absolutely that the horse is a Minnesota product, and that Mr. Wise knew it when the animal was entered for foreign races, and, as a result, he may languish for a spell in Siberian prisons.

Answers to Correspondents.

C. H. Marysville—Garry Herrman was bred by Kinzea Stone, Kingston Stud, Georgetown, Kentucky, who owned his dam, Silk Gown, by Longfellow.

Little Boy has again lowered the wagon record. At the Empire City track, New York, last Saturday, driven by Mr. F. G. Jones, his owner, he went against his former record of 2:03½, made at Washington Park, Chicago. The mile was made in 2:02 flat, the quarter being in 0:31, half 1:00½, three-quarters in 1:31, coming home the last quarter in 0:31.

It is not likely that Lord Derby and Boralma will meet again unless Mr. Hamlin changes his mind. He says Lord Derby will be reserved for trials at the record, and that he will contest with no horse until he has been given every chance to lower the world's trotting record.

Before the opening of the season this paper stated that a green trotter that could beat 2:18 three times in a race could win in California this year, and the racing has demonstrated the fact that three heats in 2:20 were good for the money in most of the trotting events.

Chas. F. Kapp has sold his handsome little pacing stallion I Direct 2:12½ to Mr. Frank Hoey of this city. Mr. Hoey will use him on the road and we understand is in the market for a pacer that will mate him.

Zomhro 2:11 was bred to 95 mares this year instead of 65 as stated last week. He won the blue ribbon for standard trotting stallions at the Oregon State Fair last week over seven competitors.

Jackson's Napa Soda untangles the feet!

Letter From Oregon.

FAIR GROUNDS, Oregon, Oct. 1, 1901.

BREEDER & SPORTSMAN—The races are over and so is the rain and as nice weather as one ever saw now prevails. The State Fair was a great success, if it did rain every day of the meeting. Everything passed off very nicely. The races were all on the square and no one made any kick. Starter Charles Jeffries did exceedingly well and got the horses off in a hurry—no delays at all. No accidents occurred, no collisions, not even a broken spoke or a punctured tire. There was a very large attendance every day, and on three different days from ten to twelve thousand people were present. Had the weather been good I think the big day would have seen twenty thousand here. I expect to see the highest fair next year ever held on the Pacific Coast right here in Salem.

Two years ago there were but 17 car loads of exhibits here at the fair, last year there were 30 and this year there were 70 carloads, so you see the present Board of Directors are hard workers and hustlers for the State Fair. They deserve a great deal of credit, especially Mr. M. D. Wisdom, the Secretary, and Mr. Wehrung, the President, who worked very hard.

Next Saturday, October 5th, there will be racing at the Salem track. Some fast horses are here that will be given faster marks than they now have. Stambou Belle 2:21 and Al Me 2:15½ will try to lower their records. They were both bred to Zomhro 2:11 this year. Al Me is the mare that forced Freddie C. 2:14½ to his record on a half-mile track at Spokane. I look for her to pace a mile in 2:12 or better Saturday if the conditions are right.

Mr. C. E. Barrows will take his young stallion Phal-mont 33,411 to Walla Walla next year, and should do a good business as he has a good horse.

W. O. Trine, of Eugene, Oregon, has leased the State Agricultural Society's race track at Salem for one year and has already taken possession. Mr. J. C. Moshier, the former lessee, has turned everything over to him and will move to Los Angeles within a couple of weeks, and make that place his home. He will take a carload of horses and one of highly bred Jersey cows with him.

Mr. Trine, the new lessee, is a horseman, and has had Al Me 2:15½ and the horse Oregon Bull on the northern circuit this year.

Mr. A. Melvin will leave Salem next week with six head of gallopers which he will race at Oakland.

Sam Jones will also leave for San Francisco in a few weeks with a carload of youngsters, all runners.

Race Meeting at Pleasanton.

PLEASANTON, Cal., October 2, 1901.

BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—There will be a two days' race meeting given at Pleasanton upon its famous training track on Friday and Saturday, November 1st and 2nd.

The meeting will consist of harness and running races and the speed program as far as arranged is as follows:

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 1ST.

No. 1—Free for all trot, 3 in 5.....Purse $300
No. 2—2:35 pace, 3 in 5....." 200
No. 3—Running one-half mile and repeat....." 150

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 2ND.

No. 1—Free for all pace, 3 in 5.....Purse $300
No. 2—2:30 trot, 3 in 5....." 200
No. 3—Buggy race trotters and pacers without records....." 100
No. 4—Running race, 1 mile dash....." 150

P exhibition miles by Bonnie Direct 2:05½, Rey Direct 2:10, Flying Jib 2:04.

A grand parade of draught and road horses at 1 o'clock, Nov. 2nd.

Other features will be added; for particulars see next issue or address the Secretary, W. H. Donahue, Pleasanton, Cal. Yours truly GEO. A. DAVIS.

Mixed races have become a dead letter in cities of any size says the Los Angeles Herald of last Tuesday. For country fairs this style of conducting a meeting is all right, for it is impossible to attract enough horses of either class to give a day's sport without the other. Harness racing in a metropolitan city always have a large following, but admirers of the trotters and pacers do not, as a rule, care for the gallopers. In the same way the portion of the public which likes running races does not wish to have half the afternoon consumed with what they deem tedious three-heat harness events. This fact was apparent last fall and is even more apparent at this meeting. However, the cards from now on promise to afford much better sport than heretofore, and another year will probably find the condition of affairs materially changed.

ELKTON RANCH, DE WINTON, ALBERTA N. W. T.,

CANADA, November 13, 1901.
Having had very satisfactory results from Gombault's Cattle Balm I thought it might be worth while writing to you and asking you whether you have any representative in this part of the world. C. DAVIDSON.

Charles Jeffries, the well known horseman who trained Mr. A. B. Spreckels' trotters on the California circuit last year and drove Dione to her record of 2:07½ at Woodland, acted as starting judge at the Oregon State Fair races at Salem last week.

SULKY NOTES.

Another world's champion.

Beautiful Bells, dam of ten in 2:30.

Toggles reduced his record to 2:08½ at Terre Haute.

As a four year old Eleata has won nine heats in 2:10 or better.

Dorothy Redmond 2:10½ is now the fastest daughter of Director.

Readville made a net profit of $23,000 on its Grand Circuit meeting.

The Pacific Breeders Futurity will have about as many entries as last year.

These early rains probably mean dry, nice weather for the Stockton meeting.

Fifteen three year olds have had final payments made on them in the Kentucky Futurity.

Joe Patchen 2:01½ will be a great sire of pacers. He has four or five new ones in the list this year.

Los Angeles track is cut up for the runners, which accounts for the slow time there by the harness horses.

Nazote 2:28 puts Josie, the dam of Azote 2:04½, in the great broodmare list. Nazote is a full brother to Azote.

Hontas Crooke's mile in 2:08 to wagon at the Chicago matinee is the record for a pacing stallion in a race to wagon.

Over 200 horses were purchased for the United States army in southern Texas recently at an average price of $115.

Ed Mills has purchased "Knap" McCarthy's interest in Searchlight 2:03½ and will have him campaigned next season.

Three 2:10 pacers have died within the past two months. They are Courier-Journal 2:06, Dark Wilkes 2:09 and Vistigie 2:09½.

Janice 2:10½ and Toggles 2:08½ will represent California in the 2:10 trot at Lexington during the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders meeting.

Gazelle 2:11½, dam of Zolock 2:10½ and the $9000 filly Zephyr by Zombro, was bred to Council Chimes this year by her owner, A. H. Miller of Buffalo.

The Austrian bred filly Princess Nefta by the American bred horse Prince Warwick, recently trotted a mile in a race in 2:15½ from a standing start.

You Bet, the bay pacer by McKinney, won a five-heat race at St. Joseph, Missouri, September 24th, and reduced his record to 2:11½ in the third heat.

Axtell gets a new 2:15 performer in Home Circle 2:13½, a winner at the Oakley Park meeting, Cincinnati. Ax 2:17½ is also a recent addition to his 2:20 list.

Matin Bells 2:06½ by Bow Bells stands a good chance to become the champion pacing mare. She is a full sister to Boreal 2:15½, is a beauty and a splendid race mare.

Daniel 2:05½ is another feather in the cap of C. T. Chapin of Rochester, N. Y. He selected her as he did Connor after she was regarded as having reached her record limit.

Wm. C. Hendrickson of the Belle Meade Stock Farm has decided to sell, at the Fasig-Tipton sale, his entire crop of yearlings and two year old colts and fillies by Red Wilkes.

The pacing mares are doing pretty well this year. Among the fast ones that have taken new records are Edith W. 2:05, Hetty G. 2:05½, Daniel 2:05½, Mazette 2:0½ and Matin Bells 2:06½.

The State Agricultural Society's race track and grounds at Sacramento have been leased for one year, from October 1st, to James Martin Jr. for $2755. Mr. Martin is a son of the former lessee.

In comparing the Boston stallion race of last year with the Lord Derby-Boralma race at Hartford this year, both being of five heats, the former averaged 2:07 12-20, while the latter averaged 2:07 19-20.

S. S. Huntley, who at one time had a large breeding farm at Helena, Mont., and who lately was president and general manager of the Yellowstone Park Transportation Company, died recently at the age of 70.

The Salem, Oregon, races were all in the rain and mud, which accounts for the slow time. They pull off harness races up in that country, rain or shine, as otherwise they would never get through a meeting.

Norval 2:14½ by Electioneer is the sire of seventy trotters and pacers with records of 2:30 or better, fifty-four of which are trotters. He leads all the sons of Electioneer as a sire of both 2:30 trotters and 2:30 performers.

Although Ed Geers' stable contains only three or four horses, it holds two of the season's best records. Lord Derby 2:06½ is the fastest trotting gelding of the year, and Shadow Chimes 2:06½ is the fastest new pacer of the year.

Gaff Topsall 2:16 by Diablo reduced the Concord track record to 2:16½ last Saturday. The record was previously 2:17. Diablo made his first appearance on the Concord track, and it is proper that one of his sons should hold the track record.

Algonetta 2:14 is to be sold at the Old Glory sale at New York, which opens November 25th. Algonetta is by Eros and is one of the nicest road mares ever bred in California. She is a square trotter, needs no boots and has more speed than her record shows.

The horses named for the Transylvania Stake are twelve in number, Onward Silver 2:06, Dolly Dillon 2:07, Dolly Bidwell 2:09½, Chain Shot 2:10½, Allright 2:09½, Susie J. 2:12½, Alan 2:12½, Chestnut King 2:12, Nera Simmons 2:11½, T. J. 2:12½, Volo 2:12½ and Newton A. 2:13.

The largest horse in the world was sent to the Chicago Union Stock Yards last week by Geo. M. Tegard, El Paso, Ill. The animal is a coal black Shire gelding, six years old, standing 21½ hands and is well proportioned. He weighs, in good condition, upward of 3000 pounds.

A report comes from Denver that all the horses in Edwin Gaylord's stable, with the exception of Yarrum, have the distemper at Lexington, where they are in care of John Blue. Yarrum is entered at the Lexington meeting and may be able to win some of the money if he stays right.

Twenty-one head of horses brought down from Inyo county by R. W. Scott, were sold at auction at the Alameda track last Tuesday and averaged $72.56 per head. They were a very fair lot of horses and the prices obtained were satisfactory. Louis Schaffer acted as auctioneer.

Rebates of one-twelfth the amount paid for privileges at the recent State Fair have been granted to those interested on account of the fair closing down the day of President McKinley's death. It is announced that had it not been for this day's closing there would have been no financial loss.

Toggles has won five races over East this year and has gone against the best 2:10 horses on the Grand Circuit. He has now reduced his record to 2:08½. His sire Strathway should be well patronized by breeders next year. He is not only a well bred horse, but he gets speed with great uniformity.

Among the new and novel features of next week's horse show at Brockton, Mass., will be a trotting race for docked horses shown in the heavy harness classes. The high steppers are to go under saddle with jockeys in silk on their backs, and are to trot half mile heats. Seven have been entered for the race.

Nancy Hanks 2:04 and her this year's foal by Peter the Great 2:07½, won the blue ribbon in the broodmare class at Readville last week Tuesday, and on Wednesday her son, Admiral Dewey 2:14½ by Bingen 2:06½, won the $5000 New England Futurity, for three year olds, in a jog.

The sale is reported of the fast pacer March Gale for $6000. The purchaser is A. B. Cummings, and knowing ones say the new owner is Banker Isaac Eckert, of Reading. March Gale was bred by Kissinger & McCoy, of Washington C. H., O., and is a grey mare by Bobbie Burns, dam Dover Girl, and a fortnight ago got a mark of 2:11½.

One of the fastest and most consistent pacers being raced over the Pennsylvania half-mile tracks this year is the bay gelding Roamer 2:13½ by Moquette 2:10. He has won eight straight races and looks like a 2:10 pacer over a half-mile ring. Roamer's dam is Ida Lyne by Mambrino Abdallah, and she is also the dam of Molo 2:13½ and Mildura 2:17½.

The pacing stallion Sir Alcantara 2:05½ and the pacing mare Daniel 2:05½ now rank as the two fastest harness performers ever bred in New England. Sir Alcantara is by Alcantara 2:23 out of Cinderella by Abdallah Prince and Daniel is by Alcantara 2:20½, who is almost a brother of Sir Alcantara, being by Alcantara out of Cleopatra, own sister of Cinderella, by Abdallah Prince.

A person who gives a meeting expecting to lose $5000 is dead game to say the least. After the close of the recent meeting at Cincinnati, Andy Welch said: "We had expected to lose $5000 at this meeting, and, while we have not figured up yet, I am satisfied that we have had nearly an even break. Next year we will try to open the Grand Circuit. I know that Cincinnati is a good town for harness racing."

John A. McKerron's mile in 2:06½ attracted attention all over the country, and every leading paper made favorable comment thereon, Mr. Devereux also being in receipt of many congratulatory telegrams. "Doc" Tanner is deserving of much credit for the fine condition of the great stallion, and it is only another of many instances which prove that as a conditioner "Doc" is second to none in the country.

P. W. Hodges has taken his string of colts to the Stockton track. He has two three year olds by Nutwood Wilkes, belonging to Nutwood Stock Farm, which he will probably start against time during the Stockton meeting. He also took with him a couple of two year olds by Directum 2:05½ belonging to Judge W. E. Greene, of Oakland. These colts are very promising, but will not be started this year.

Onward Silver's third heat in 2:08 at Readville makes him the fastest trotting son of Onward, and again calls attention to the wonderful showing the family of this son of George Wilkes is making on the turf this year. Can any one remember, inquires the Horse World, when any one sire has been represented in one season on the turf by four such trotters as Onward Silver 2:08, Cornelia Bello 2:10, Gracie Onward 2:12 and Iva Dee 2:12½? These four trotters by Onward have been racing since the opening of the season, and they have caused many horsemen to revise previously formed opinions as to the merits of Onward as a sire. With two of the four already in the 2:10 list, and the other two good prospects for the same, Onward's last years are such as no other sire has enjoyed.

The 2:09 pace at Indianapolis last week proved to be one of the hardest fought contests of the season. There were twelve starters and not a horse was distanced, four being drawn after the fourth heat. Five heats were paced, three of them being in 2:09 or better and only one slower than 2:10. After Ione by Moody had won two heats, Chestnut by Glenarm Jr. two and Fred the Kid one heat, the money was divided as they stood.

Ringling is a penitentiary offense in Michigan. Felix Reynolds, an old horseman of Cleveland, O., who has defied the American and National Trotting Association for more than a year, has been run down and caught at Port Huron, Mich. He has been ringing with Jerry W., he having been entered under no less than seven fictitious names. Reynolds has probably rung his last ring. At the same meeting Frank Derby 2:14½ was proven to be a ringer and his owner was arrested.

"Down with the foul drivers," says "Veritas," in Trotter and Pacer. "This should be the unwritten rule of all judges' stands, and, if observed, there would be fewer collisions and shocking scenes at trotting meetings than are now brought before the spectators of harness racing. Much turf iniquity is done in the name and ever-ready phrase of 'an unavoidable accident.' The real accidents are so few and far between that they should not rule general cases of collision."

The closing out sale of horses, cattle, farming implements, etc., at the John Mohr ranch near Livermore last Saturday attracted about five hundred people. Forty head of farm horses averaged $80, a good price as old and young were included. Mules brought from $80 to $125. A heavy team sold for $371. Everything was sold in a few hours and good prices were obtained. Louis Schaffer of Oakland was the auctioneer, drew out the bids promptly and conducted the sale in a business like manner throughout.

The Road Drivers' Association, of New York, have decided to hold a series of amateur races at the Empire City track on Saturday, October 12th. Among the prominent New York amateur reinsmen that have already given assurance that they will enter their horses are Nathan Straus, C. K. G. Billings, A. B. Gwathmey, W. C. Floyd-Jones, C. C. Lloyd and many others. There will probably be four regular class events on the program, also a race for trotting teams. F. G. Jones, of Memphis, Tenn., has promised to start his fast pacer Little Boy to beat the world's wagon record.

After proving one of the greatest disappointments ever brought into the Grand Circuit, the Indiana mare, May Allen 2:09½, suddenly took it into her head to trot steadily, and she won a good race at Indianapolis, Ind., last week. The grotesque side of her performance lays in the fact that the purse for which she battled so well last week was only of $700, while those in which she disappointed her backers so badly in the Grand Circuit ranged in value from $3000 to $10,000. She has one more big engagement, the Transylvania, at Lexington, and if she goes back to her old tricks after trotting consistently for a $700 purse, her owners would not be blamed if they gave her chloroform.

Horses are not machines and the trotter was never foaled so far above ordinances that persistent campaigning and many miles at top speed would not cause him to deteriorate. Besides, when horses are asked to extend themselves beyond their capacity, or beyond what they feel like doing at the time, they are likely to resent it. In one heat of the Boston race his driver used the whip on Cresceus hard enough to sting him, for the first time this season, and it is said, upon apparently good authority, that when Ketcham went into the stall of the champion after the heat, to pet him as usual when he was being rubbed down, Cresceus made a vicious grab at him with his teeth, and ripped off a sleeve of the driver's jacket. That was pure resentment, the horse saying as plainly as possible, "I was doing the best I could, and what did you hit me with that whip for,—you?" He has a temper, and killed a stable boy once. It is to be hoped that his owner, who has succeeded in gaining his full confidence, has not forfeited it permanently. As for Saturday's race, the simple fact seems to be that both competitors, while better than 2:04 trotters on occasions, were barely in the 2:08 class that particular day, but trotted a very good race at that—Griffin in Turf, Field and Farm.

Hon. Jesse D. Carr is determined to get rid of all his stock horses. He has fifty or sixty broodmares and fillies, many of them registered and nearly all eligible to registration, besides a lot of geldings. Mr. Carr is 87 years old and says he cannot engage in horse breeding any further. Many of the mares have been named in the futurity stakes and are in foal to high-class stallions. In our advertising columns to-day will be found a list of forty-eight mares and fillies on which he puts prices that can be had on application. The prices are from $40 up, and none exceed $200 but one. This is a yearling filly by Nutwood Wilkes 2:16½, out of a mare by Electioneer. Mr. Carr says she shows every point of a crackerjack and that $500 is cheap for her, especially as she is well entered in stakes. The others will be sold at from $40 to $200 and there is not one but is worth double the price asked. If any person will take them all in a bunch, he will offer them a bargain that will be worth considering, and as he is not in need of ready money will take a well secured note in payment. He says he is too old for the business. His health is fairly good but his eyesight is nearly gone and his hearing as well. His mind is as clear and his business faculties as acute as they ever were however and he goes about like a young man yet. But, as he says, his eyes and his ears tell him that he should get relief in his old age from too much business, and for this reason he is determined to get rid of his horses. We advise anyone who wants to buy something that is worth the money to look over this stock. They can make no mistake in buying at the prices asked.

Will Open at Emeryville.

Emeryville track will be the scene of the opening of the California winter racing season next month instead of Tanforan as at first announced. Saturday, November 2d, will be the opening day. This announcement was made last Tuesday after a meeting of the directors of the New California Jockey Club. The change made to accommodate the large number of horses now quartered here and en route from the East, as the track across the bay has greater facilities in the matter of stabling and other details than has Tanforan.

The racing will continue about thirty days, when the scene of operations will be shifted to Tanforan.

It was determined to insert the claiming clause in half the selling purses and to eliminate it from the others, thus giving horsemen an opportunity to exercise their choice in such races.

All jockeys and trainers will be required to make application for license from the New California Jockey Club. This condition is enforced by all other turf bodies in America and other countries. Jockeys and trainers will not be permitted to pursue their respective vocations on the California tracks until such license is granted.

Hereafter the judges will not have the power to suspend nor rule off. They will report all cases to the Board of Stewards, who will act thereon. The Board of Stewards will be composed of C. H. Pettingill, Thomas H. Williams, Jr., Colonel D. M. Burns, Charles F. Price and F. E. Mulholland.

Henry Clay and the Mule.

Commodore Rodgers long ago brought to Wasington from Spain four Andalusian jackasses—no ordinary animals, be it understood, but jackasses of high degree and purest lineage. At that time such beasts were greatly wanted for breeding purposes in this country, and the long-eared quartet excited a vast deal of admiration. Henry Clay saw them, and, being himself interested in the rearing of fine stock, was most anxious to possess one—so much so indeed, that he offered as a "swap" a large lot of land near the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Madison place, valued today at about $60,000. The Commodore accepted, and Mr. Clay, having thus acquired title to one of the jackasses, immediately proceeded to lose him over a gambling table.

This did not end the matter, however, for Mr. Clay afterward redeemed the jackass and sent it to Kentucky, where it became the progenitor of what is now the most remarkable strain of mules in the United States. As for the lot, Commodore Rodgers built on it a dwelling which in later years obtained the cheerful designation of the "House of Doom" because of the series of tragedies and misfortunes connected with it.—Boston Transcript.

Beautiful Bells, Champion Broodmare.

Beautiful Bells is now the dam of ten trotters with standard records, which places her in a class by herself as the champion of all broodmares. Last Saturday at San Jose, an afternoon of racing was given by the District Agricultural Association and the Palo Alto Stock Farm took this opportunity to start Monbells, the last son of the great mare, for a record. Monbells has been handled for a few weeks by Mr. C. A. Durfee, owner of the stallion McKinney, and he succeeded in driving the four year old son of Meudocio a mile in 2:23½ official time, although outside watches caught the mile a little faster. The performance of Monbells gives Beautiful Bells her tenth performer, as follows:

Hinda Rose, br m, 1880, yearling record 2:36½, two year old record 2:32, three year old record 2:19½, by Electioneer.

St. Bell, blk e, 1882, four year old record 2:24½, by Electioneer.

Bell Boy, br c, 1885, two year old record 2:26, three year old record 2:19½, by Electioneer.

Palo Alto Bell, b m, 1886, three year old record 2:22½, by Electioneer.

Bow Bells, b c, 1887, five year old record 2:19½, by Electioneer.

Bellflower, br m, 1889, two year old record 2:24½, three year old record 2:16½, four year old record 2:12½, by Electioneer.

Bell Bird, br f, 1890, yearling record 2:26½, two year old record 2:22, by Electioneer.

Belsire, br c, 1891, record made at eight years of age 2:21½, by Electioneer.

Adbell, br e, 1893, champion yearling record 2:23, by Advertiser, son of Electioneer.

Monbells, br c, 1897, four year old record 2:23½, by Mendocio, son of Electioneer.

Monbells is a bay horse, 15½ hands high, with a star and off fore foot and ankle white, off hind foot white to ankle, near hind leg white half way. He was foaled May 18, 1897, and is undoubtedly the last of the produce of the great mare. On the same day that Mr. Durfee drove Monbells to a record he also drove Nazote, a full brother to Azote 2:04½, a mile in 2:28. Nazote is a big brown horse 16.2½ hands, and was foaled February 23, 1894. He is also one of the Palo Alto Stock Farm's promising sires.

The Big Winners.

The Horseman.

At the opening of the campaign a table was printed in these columns showing the great amount of engagements that could be secured for a trotter in the Grand Circuit and at the Brighton Beach, Lexington and Memphis meetings. The list showed an aggregate of $85,000 worth of stakes in which a green trotter could be nominated. It was a fact that engagements aggregating $81,000 were made for Neva Simmons. Eleata and Country Jay were just as heavily entered. Outside of Cresceus, perhaps, all three have won more than any other trotter in training. Their total winnings for the season are as follows:

Eleata, by Dexter Prince, first money, 6; second money, 1; third money, 1; fourth money, 0; amount won, $18,265.

Country Jay, by Jay Hawker, first money, 4; second money, 1; third money, 0; fourth money, 0; amount won, $13,562.

Neva Simmons, by Simmons, first money, 4; second money, 0; third money, 5; fourth money, 0; amount won, $12,271.

The entire winnings of Cresceus during all of 1900 were $17,375, while next to him, in the order named, came Annie Burns, Charley Herr and Boralma, each having won a trifle over $11,000. Neva Simmons, Country Jay, and Eleata were green horses when the campaign opened, and while neither of the first two named has trotted a mile in a race this year the equal of last year's trials, both having shown 2:10, trials which warranted their owners in so heavily entering them, they have not been a disappointment. The owner of Neva Simmons said when the entries closed, that if the mare remained sound and well and won part of the money in a majority of her races he would be well satisfied. She has started nine times so far and has yet to finish behind third money. Country Jay has been either first or second in all his races, 11, and Eleata has been successful in six of her eight attempts. Before the week is out her total winnings will have exceeded $20,000, as she will start in the $5000 stake four year olds at Readville, a race she can hardly lose.

NASHUA, N. H., March 30, 1901.

Dr. S. A. Tuttle, Boston, Mass.: Dear Sir—Will you please name us the very lowest price you will sell me one gross of your Elixir for horses, as I have used it for several years, and I don't think its equal is on the market. Yours truly, F. A. LITTLEFIELD.

On a hot day drink Jackson's Napa Soda lemonades and be refreshed.

Lord Derby's Great Speed.

When Lord Derby defeated Boralma at Hartford the friends of the latter were not entirely satisfied that the Mambrino King gelding was the better horse, claiming that Geers' horse had the advantage of laying up two heats, after breaks, while Boralma was forced to go all five heats to his limit. The Monk carrying him the heats in which Lord Derby was laying up to the flag. After the race at Readville last Friday there can be no doubt about the ability of Lord Derby to beat Mr. Lawson's gelding at any time when he is right and on his good behavior. He simply outclasses Boralma, and at Readville could step by him at any stage of the race. His three heats in 2:07½, 2:07½, 2:08, under the conditions which prevailed, were certainly as fast as any ever trotted, as good judges estimate that the day and track were at least two seconds slow. Boralma trotted a grand race and was well driven by James Gatchcomb, who tried every possible way to defeat Lord Derby only to find them all of no avail. In the first heat he went away slowly, going to the half in 1:06, and tried to stall off Lord Derby's rush in the stretch. The last half was in 1:01½ and the last quarter in 30½ seconds, but even this clip was easy for Lord Derby, and he stepped by the chestnut gelding very easily. In the second heat Gatchcomb drove an evenly rated mile with the same result as in the first heat. The last heat he sent Boralma away from the wire at full speed, but again the bay gelding could outbrush the chestnut at the finish. Lord Derby is certainly one of the speediest horses which ever stepped on a race track, and quarters at a two-minute gait are only play for him. After last Friday's race most horsemen place him in the same class as The Abbot and Cresceus and also look upon him as a possible two-minute performer.—Boston Courier.

Big Prices for Daly Horses.

The final sale of the late Marcus Daly's breeding establishment was held October 1st at Sheephead Bay. The richly bred mares from his stud in England were in great demand and the prices were high forty-one head selling for $205,100, an average of $5002 per head. James R. Keene paid $18,500 for Field Azure, by Bend Or, dam of three stake winners, and $11,000 for Lady Reel, the dam of Hamburg, J. E. Madden paid $17,000 for Pocahontas, and August Belmont $17,000 for Lucy Cross, a daughter of St. Simon. The two year olds also brought big prices. W. C. Whitney taking a brown filly by St. Simon—Lady Reel at $16,000, and J. B. Haggin paying $15,500 for a chestnut colt by Ayshire—L'Esclave. August Belmont paid $25,000 for a weanling, sister of Hamburg.

Refero 2:24½, the young Guy Wilkes 2:15½—Director 2:17 stallion, brother of that swift mare Dollade Wilkes 2:10½, owned by Mr. W. R. Janvier, of New York City, and Silver Spring Stock Farm, Ticonderoga, N. Y., is surely one of the coming sires of early speed. He is now but seven years old and has very few foals old enough to train. One of these is the chestnut filly Bell Moor, out of Silver Morn by Anteeo 2:16½, who made a two year old trotting record of 2:29½ at Lexington, Ky., September 13. Another is the black colt Day Book out of Olive by Daniel Lambert, who won the two year old pacing division of the New England Futurity at Readville last week, distancing his only competitor in 2:29½ and doing the first three-quarters at better than a 2:20 gait. Mr. Janvier bred both these precocious youngsters. He has great faith in Refero's future as a sire, and evidently it will be justified at an early age.

EFFECTUAL

The most effectual remedy in use for the cure of ailments of horses and cattle is

GOMBALT'S CAUSTIC BALSAM

Used as a Blister or Lotion.

This preferred remedy is prepared exclusively by J. E. Gombault, ex-Veterinary Surgeon to the French Government Stud.

As a HUMAN REMEDY for Rheumatism, Sprains, Sore Throat, etc., it is invaluable. Every bottle of Caustic Balsam sold is warranted to give satisfaction. Price $1.50 per bottle. Sold by druggists, or sent by express, charges paid, with full directions for its use. Send for descriptive circulars, testimonials, etc. Address THE LAWRENCE-WILLIAMS COMPANY, Cleveland, Ohio.

KENNEL.

Los Angeles Show.

The Southern California show opened on the 2nd inst. auspiciously. A total of 211 entries with 158 dogs benched comprised the exhibit. About one-third of the dogs benched were taken down from this city. The vexed question of securing a judge for the Pointers, Setters and Spaniels was settled by getting A. Russell Crowell to judge the sportsman's dogs.

The entries in each breed were as follows, Mastiffs 3, St. Bernards (rough coats) 20, St. Bernards (smooth coats) 4, Great Danes 16. Deerhounds 2, Greyhounds 17, American Foxhounds 2, English Setters 5, Irish Setters 4, Gordon Setters 2, Field Spaniels 2, Cocker (black) 14, Cocker (other than black) 9, Collies 20, Poodles 2, Bulldogs 2, Bull Terriers 15, Boston Terriers 2, Dachshunde 4, Fox Terriers (smooth coated) 40, Fox Terriers (wire haired) 9, Irish Terriers 3, Pugs 1, Yorkshire Terriers 1, Maltese Terriers 3, Chows 1, Miscellaneous 1.

The Cocker and Fox Terrier exhibit was a good one. In St. Bernards Chas. Neuman's Golden Lion Jr. romped through in his competition and won easily. Le King, California Eboracum and Omar Khayyam came together in open and limit. The Greyhounds are reported to have been a good bunch of dogs. The winners in Bull Terriers we apprehend were Champion Woodcote Wonder, Teddy Roosevelt, Teddy and Newmarket Queen in the order given. L. A. Klein judged all classes but the Setters and Spaniels and Chas. A. Summer judged Fox Terriers, David J. Sinclair was Superintendent. Local papers have been giving the show some very flattering notices. A more extended report and a list of awards will appear next week.

Doings in Dogdom.

The premium list of the Oakland show will be issued on or about November 1st. Entries will close on November 23, 1901. The bench show will come off in the Exposition Building on December 4-7, 1901. The show will be under the A. K. C. rules and will be a part of the combined poultry, pigeon and pet stock annual exhibit. Mr. G. C. Hinds of Alameda is the Secretary.

The fourth annual field trials of the Brandon Kennel Club held at Brandon, Manitoba, run on the 19th and 20th insts., gave some of the California dogs now on the Eastern circuit a chance to come out with the winners.

The Derby was won by Verona Kennels' black, white and tan English Setter bitch Verona P. Gladstone (Ch. Count Gladstone IV.—Countess K.). W. S. Tevis' (Stockdale Kennels) liver and white Pointer dog Cuba, Jr. (Cuba of Kenwood-Florida) won second and third was taken by Verona Kennels' orange and white English Setter bitch Verona Wilhelmina Gladstone (Ch. Count Gladstone IV.—Countess K.).

The Puppy Stake with seven entries in brought out W. C. Lees' white and black Pointer bitch Zulieka (Shot-Tannis), a winner in the Manitoba trials, third in the All-Age. Second was won by E. H. White's white and tan English Setter bitch Manitoba Prairie Bird (Brighton Maid-Manitoba Belle). W. C. Lee's orange and white English Setter dog Duke's Rush (Duke of Manitoba-Cam Sing) won third.

The All-Age Stake was finished with Verona Kennels' black, white and tan English Setter dog Verona Diablo (Ch. Count Gladstone IV.—Daisy Craft) first; Thomas Johnson's liver and white Pointer bitch Manitoba Blythe (Alberta Joe-Indiana) won second and third was divided by J. W. Flynn's lemon and white Pointer dog Senator P. (Cap B.—Queen P.) and W. S. Tevis' (Stockdale Kennels) liver and white Pointer bitch Petronella (Young Jingo-Florida). In this stake Zulieka went out in the second series; she ran against Verona Diablo. Major J. M. Tay'or officiated as judge during the trials.

Worms.

With the solitary exception of the morbid condition affecting dogs vulgarly termed "distemper," there is probably no disorder that gives more trouble and causes greater anxiety among breeders of dogs and cats, and owners who keep for show purposes, than that due to the various descriptions of parasites which infest the intestinal canals and other portions of the internal economy of these animals. Inasmuch as I have addressed myself to the careful study of the subject writes J. Sutcliffe Hurdall, M. R. C. V. S. in the Fox Terrier Chronicle, and have as a result formulated certain theories and adopted a line of practice for the eradication of these unwelcome guests, I venture to submit, with your permission, a few thoughts and suggestions regarding the same, and I do so more particularly because my views are somewhat at variance with those generally held by members of my own profession and of practical dog and cat fanciers.

Broadly speaking, if practice is to be relied upon as an evidence of the opinions generally held by those who make a study of dogs and cats, the only method of combating the evils that owe their origin and continuance to the presence of one or more of the numerous classes of internal parasites commonly designated "worms," is to destroy the helminth while in situ. In the early days of my professional practice—and before

I gave any serious consideration to the subject of helminthology—I used to adopt the various measures which I learned during my student career, and blindly administered the different kinds of anthelmintics according as the parasite happened to be trematode, cestode, or nematode, ringing the changes on areca nut, oil of malefern, koussou, kamala, turpentine, santolin, mercury, tobacco, aloes, staphisagria, and what not besides; but I cannot recall any really satisfactory result accruing therefrom. Among dogs in particular. I found that, in nine cases out of ten, the greater portion of the drug so administered was rejected, a sufficient quantity, however, being retained to produce many of the pathogenetic effects peculiar to the drug upon the host; while there was not a sufficiency retained in the intestinal canal to effect the destruction of the guests. In some cases, especially among puppies of six to eight weeks old, the consequence were far more serious, for in treating these for nematodes, or round worms, the administration of santolin, the presumably correct agent for this class of helminth, produced very decided pathogenetic symptoms, among which were enuresis, nervous spasms showing the action of the drug upon the brain, and defective vision; while in more than one case death followed the administration of an ordinary dosage. Again, when the drug was retained, and the passage per anum of a large bunch of tapeworm or numerous strongyles realized, I have almost invariably found that the relief obtained was only temporary or partial, and that in the long run that the patient was almost sure to return for further treatment, a fact that may be accounted for on various grounds; such as the retention of a portion of the original batch or the hatching of a new batch from eggs previously deposited; or the fresh introduction of a new colony from external sources. Whatever be the cause, however, the result is eminently unsatisfactory and disappointing to the owner.

I soon wearied of this state of affairs, and addressed myself to a more serious consideration of the subject. I argued that if the host (as the case in the majority of instances, though not invariably so), is affected constitutionally by the invasion of these unwelcome guests in so serious a degree as to manifestly influence health and general condition, and not infrequently pain in the abdominal region, convulsions and even paralysis, it seemed highly probable that a morbid state of the intestinal canal was present in the host which favored the presence of the guest, that if not present would be inimical to its life and existence.

As a first step towards testing the reasonableness of this theory I carefully examined the fecal deposits of a number of dogs affected with worms, and almost invariably found that they were coated with a mucoid secretion, from which I deduced the argument that the mucous membrane or its secretions, or both, of the intestinal canal were probably in a condition that, as affecting the host, would be considered abnormal, but that was favorable to the life of the helminths. I thereupon watched the subjects under notice, to discover whether there were any symptoms present or conditions affecting the general health and constitution which indicated some slight irregularities, and I was not disappointed in my investigation.

Instead, therefore, of trying to destroy the parasite while located in the internal economy of the host by poisoning it with one of the afore-mentioned so-called anthelmintic agents, I tried what treating the host would do, being guided to the selection of a drug by the symptomatic indications presented to my notice, and most satisfactory was, and has been ever since, the result. The time which such a course of treatment involves is of necessity tedious; and from this standpoint it will very probably not commend itself to the judgment of a great many owners of dogs and cats.

At the same time it will be apparent to anyone, after mature consideration, that such a change as it is necessary to effect to bring about an alteration in the conditions of animal life cannot be realized at a moment's notice. Patience and perseverance in the consistent administration of the remedy are absolutely essential to success, and without both it were better not to attempt it. It is not practicable to mention the remedies, for the simple reason that each case requires a prescription peculiar to itself, according to the symptoms indicated. There is no such thing as a common specific even for worms; at least, such is the conclusion I have arrived at after many years of close observation and practice. I might, however, state, as regards the various remedies relied upon they are specially prepared in potencies suitable to the age and constitution of the patient to be treated, and thus all risk of injury from over-dosage is avoided, such as generally follows the administration of ordinary vermifuges.

Owners often ask me to account for the presence of worms in their pet animals, and have generally expressed considerable surprise, not to say scepticism, to learn that their dogs and cats as the ultimate hosts, can carry the intermediate hosts upon their backs; and having regard to the final portion of the paragraph referred to, in which you say, "young kittens fall victims to these pests, having sucked in the disease with the mother's milk," I can go one further back and state that when breeding Greyhounds I satisfied myself that fetuses in utero become infested with worms, as I proved by numerous post-mortem examinations upon whelps immediately after birth, and the examination of stillborn youngsters.

I apologize for the length of this communication, but plead for your forbearance on the ground of the importance of the subject, which is pregnant with interest to dog and cat fanciers, and which calls for more searching inquiry than it has so far received.

By your kind favor I have already had the opportunity of bringing under the notice of your numerous readers some experience respecting the methods I have found succeed in my endeavors to relieve canine and feline patients of the unwelcome presence of the varieties of internal parasites. By your permission I should like to present a few more suggestions for the consideration of such of your readers as may desire to learn something respecting the best system of dealing with this troublesome difficulty, for there is no manner of doubt that, to breeders and exhibitors of both class of animals, helminthiasis is accountable for many unsuspected morbid conditions beyond those that are readily acknowledged to be traceable to this source; and I am satisfied that I shall render valuable service to many who by your favor may honor me with a careful consideration of my views, and who will investigate the subject from the standpoint I have already advocated in your valuable columns.

It is well-nigh impossible, in my judgment, to exaggerate the importance of this subject in the interest of fanciers, for the influence and effects which internal parasites exercise and produce upon the growth, condition and general well being of dogs and cats are much more far-reaching and deleterious than is generally suspected, and are generally productive of consequences far exceeding in importance the temporary inconvenience experienced by the host during the unwitting entertainment of these unwelcome guests.

With a view to make the matter clearer, I propose, by your kind permission, to give a short list of the more important symptoms I have observed present in various canine patients that were, without doubt, the subjects of helminthiasis, most of which yielded in a very satisfactory manner to the system I follow of treating the host, while, without exception, one and all were greatly benefited thereby; and it should be distinctly understood that this end was attained without incurring the risk of injury to the host under the influence of powerful anthelmintics or vermifuges, as is so frequently the experience of fanciers, especially among the very highly bred and more delicate animals.

The following are among the many symptomatic indications I have observed present in various cases of helminthiasis, viz.:

The Eyes—Pupils almost constantly dilated; the eyelids nearly closed, as though aching, which is aggravated by motion; sensitive to light; the whites of the eyes red and injected; patient acts as though sight were defective, being guarded in its movements; eyeballs roll about in distorted fashion; opacity of the lens and amaurotic conditions.

The Nose—Great irritation, evidenced by frequent rubbing on ground or with paws.

The Tongue—The dorsum centrally coated with yellow fur, on the sides appear round or oval spots of a pink or deep crimson color; occasionally slightly elevated, when vomiting and diarrhoea are present accompanied, and spots are observable through the coating of fur.

The Mouth—Dribbling of slimy saliva, especially during sleep; breath foetid and very offensive; frequent grinding of the teeth, both when asleep and awake.

Cough—Dry, short and spasmodic.

Appetite—Capricious, depraved, frequently ravenous; occasionally in abeyance.

Heart—Palpitation; violent and irregular actions; sharp pains indicated by crying out and biting at the ribs over seat of heart; very rapid breathing.

Abdomen—Swollen and hard to touch; gripping pains, indicated by rolling about; lying on stomach with outstretched legs; flatulence; vomiting.

Anus—Considerable local irritation, indicated by dragging along on hind quarters; protrusion of the mucous membrane and prolapse of the parts.

Skin—Coat rough, stands on end, abundant scurf; herpetic eruptions; thick, and lacking usual pliability.

Feces—Constipated, with frequent ineffectual efforts to pass, coated with slimy mucous; or loose, papescent, mixed with slimy mucus, great straining, dark colored, sometimes bloody and very offensive; discharges of slimy mucous only are frequently observable—at such times evacuations are white and greenish, attended with much straining.

Urine—Passed with difficulty, pale or milky appearance, or white and thick, passed involuntarily.

Nervous System—Convulsions, cramps, paralysis, giddiness, irritability, sleeplessness, depression, restlessness, suddenly jumps up out of sleep, whines, and cries out as with fear; epilepsy, chorea.

General lassitude and progressive wasting.

The afore-mentioned symptoms have at one time or another been observed in patients that concurrently suffered from an invasion of worms; I have no doubt that in the minds of most dog fanciers the impression will prevail that no intimate relationship existed between the majority of these morbid conditions and the presence of the entozoa, but such is not my opinion. The results of treatment have led me to the conclusion that, improbable though it may appear, a very distinct connection is traceable, as in all my cases where a cure was effective of such of these morbid conditions as presented themselves; the worms also disappeared, and the patient resumed a normal state of health, put on muscle, and gained a brilliant condition as to coat, spirits and general appearance.

A very large number of cases of helminthiasis arise without any of the afore-mentioned symptoms being prominently observable; at the same time a large proportion numerically present some one or two of the symptoms in a modified form that would be plainly discernible to the professional eye, if carefully sought for, and I may add that some one or other is rarely absent. So far as treatment is concerned these symptoms furnish the key to the situation, and upon their recognition depends the prospect of ultimate, complete and satisfactory cure.

A cure to realize these conditions must be effected not merely to bring about the expulsion of the worm, but so to influence the system of the host as to remedy the condition which favors the development and support of the worms, corrects the abnormal state of the alimentary canal, and destroys the nidus which favors their existence and multiplication. The attainment of this object depends upon the selection of the drug, which can only be successfully made according to the indications furnished by some one or other of the symptoms given in afore-mentioned list. According to my experience this end can be attained without risk to the health and life of the host, although the treatment frequently involves a lengthened trial, and only those who are prepared to exercise patience and perseverance should attempt it. Cures of this description are not effected miraculously, but when they are realized the effects are permanent and in all respects satisfactory.

Like all good things, Jackson's Napa Soda has a dozen counterfeits. Watch out!

GUN.

The Hunter From the City.

Now the hunter from the city takes his gun and hies away,
With a wild determination in his heart to maim and slay;
He stumbles through the pastures and he scrambles over logs,
And he dodges through the briars and goes sloshing through the bogs,

And here and there he sees
Warning signs upon the trees,
And now and then he hustles to outrun the farmer's dogs.

Oh, the hunter from the city, starting out with hope so high,
Couldn't hit a flock of haystacks if they passed him on the fly,
But his sporting blood is tingling, and his breast is all aflame,
As he hurls and blindly blazes at the startled, fleeing game.

And the words he has to say,
As the white smoke drifts away,
Are intended to show clearly that his weapon was to blame.

Oh, the hunter from the city goes out boldly hunting now,
And he fires at the chipmunk and brings down the farmer's cow;
And at night, with aching shoulders, he slinks homeward with his gun

And a deeply set conviction that it weighs at least a ton—
There's a farmer with a bill
For a cow that's cold and still,
But no matter, for the hunter from the city calls it fun.

County Game Laws in Force.

The present State Game and Fish Laws are in force and unchanged in the following counties:

Alameda.	Merced.	San Benito,
Colusa.	Monterey.	Solano.
Contra Costa.	Santa Cruz.	San Joaquin.

The following counties have adopted ordinances in

The commission men acted as brokers for the hunters, who also forwarded to their broker a blank delivery order for the birds. The broker, after finding a purchaser for the game, filled in the buyer's name on the delivery order. The purchaser then received the game from the express company upon request and presentation of the delivery order. In this manner a broker can sell to hotels, restaurants, market men, etc., and keep within the restrictions of the law, as he never has actual possession of a single bird. This feature of getting around the law is ingenious, to say the least. One thing, however, is certain, although wild game will now be sold in larger quantity than was contemplated, the day is happily past when a commission house will receive in one day, a hundred or even two hundred sacks of ducks.

Teal brought $5 a dozen on Tuesday. Sprigtail, from $7 to $10, mallard $8 to $12 and spoonbills $4.50. Far better prices than have been obtained in many years on the first day of the season.

One of the best bags brought to the city came down from Sherman island with J. B. Lemmer, Fred S. Johnson, William Swain, Don McRae and M. J. Geary. The birds—mallards, spoonbills, teal, blackjack and a few gray ducks—were shot in the Black Jack ponds. The weather was hot and sultry, the morning flight being over by 10:30 o'clock. One of the party took a flock shot at a string of pelicans flying over the "open water," where he was stationed in a blind. One fine specimen was secured and another, wing-tipped, swam away in the direction of Johnson's blind. Coming in from his post, Johnson saw the wounded pelican and endeavored to secure it. A long chase and stubborn fight by the bird was finally ended by Johnson's untying the painter of his boat and lassoing the bird, which is now domiciled in Bill Remfree's back yard at Antioch and finds solace in fighting the visiting felines of the neighborhood.

The Black Jack Navy.

Clarence A. Haight and James Maynard had an excellent shoot on the Canvasback Club ponds.

Ducks and geese were plentiful at Brentwood on the 1st. Many guns were out on the river and sloughs.

The rain this week had a tendency to drive most of the ducks south. There should be plenty of birds at Los Banos, Newton, Firebaughs and vicinity at this time.

The Board of Supervisors of Alameda county have repealed a county game ordinance recently in force. The State game law prevails and now controls the sportsman in that county.

The sprig and mallard drakes shown in the half-tone on this page were mounted by H. F. Lorquin, the taxidermist. The birds are two very large ones and were shot when their plumage was at its best.

Ducks are said to be found in large numbers "up the rivers," meaning the tule sections of the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers. The "shoot" on the 1st is reported to have been a very good one in the vicinity of Rio Vista.

California sportsmen are not alone in having a bountiful number of quail for this season's shooting. Reports from many eastern States are to the effect that the past year has been most auspicious for quail and that they are very numerous in many localities.

All the Sacramento market hunters announced their intention to be busy on the 1st, and they state that they will shoot and personally sell their kill. They claim that they expect to make wages in this way, even with the restrictions placed by the law on the size of the bag for a day's shoot.

The International Forest, Fish and Game Association is making plans to hold a sportsmen's show in Philadelphia in November. The next Boston Sportsmen's Show, held once in two years, will open in Boston, February 19, 1902, for private exhibition, after which it will be open to the public for possibly three weeks.

The Peerless Gun Club of Davisville had their club house and stables thoroughly refitted last week, and will open the duck hunting season next Sunday. Their ponds have been flooded with fresh water from Putah Creek, and they have good shooting in prospect, as their preserve is patrolled by two keepers, who have zealously guarded the club's interests.

A party of nineteen Sacramento sportsmen, including Frank Wright, Judge Hughes, W. Eckhardt, Will Devlin, George Wittenbrock, Fred Raschen, John Morrison, Frank Ryan, Stewart Upson, Frank Ruhstaler, Jr., W. Geary, George Sherman, Al Booth, Hiram Johnson, Fred Adams, Will Hendricks, W. Leeman, Billy Hamilton and Louis Breuner of the Del Paso Gun Club, were on the club's preserves on the grant on the opening day. Mallard are reported plentiful on the Del Paso preserves and also a large number of widgeon, teal and sprigs.

The Field and Tule Club members, A. M. Shields, Cal McMahon, Al Cumming, Harry Hosmer, Fred Bushnell, L. Titus, L. Harpbam and others made a combined bag of nearly 300 birds. Several of the members remained at the club house over night, intending to shoot again in the morning.

On the other club grounds, Col. Eddy, Hermann Oelrichs, Frank Maskey, E. F. Preston, Len Owens, Chas. Fair, Joe Harvey, Joe Eppinger and others all had a crack at the birds, but one gun was credited with a limit kill, Col. Eddy at the Cordelia Club ponds.

Jackson's Napa Soda is sold in every city, town and hamlet in the State.

regard to fish and game, and which are now in force as follows:

Fresno—Quail, Nov. 1 to Feb. 1.
Marin—Male deer, Aug. 1 '00 Sept. 15 Quail, Oct. 15 to Jan. 15.
Shooting on county roads or in cemeteries prohibited. The use of "pump" gun, repeating shotgun or any kind of magazine shotgun for hunting in the county is prohibited.
Monterey—Sea gulls and blue cranes, killing of prohibited. Use of guns of larger caliber than 10-gauge prohibited.
Santa Clara—Quail, Oct. 8 to Feb. 1.
San Mateo—Quail, Nov. 1 to Dec. 1. Rail, Oct. 15 to Nov. 15.
Shooting from boats at high tide prohibited.
Sonoma—Quail, Nov. 1 to Feb. 1.

Cartridge and Shell.

Scores of sportsmen were a broad on marsh or upland with gun and dog on Tuesday, the first day of the open season on quail and ducks. The main body of the local hunters had recourse to the Alameda marshes for their shoot, this district having more open territory for the individual shooter.

The club preserves on the Suisun marshes were well patronized by club members.

From all the bay shore and marsh districts the reports were not favorable as to weather conditions, the day being hot and sultry, and but comparatively few ducks flying. In most places the shooting was over by 10 o'clock A. M. Compared to the results on the open day last year the shoot was mediocre. The bag limit was the exception and not the rule. Reports from the quail hunters are to the effect that in Napa, Alameda and Contra Costa counties, where the season on quail commenced on the 1st, the birds are very plentiful. In the vicinity of Niles and Haywards some good bags were made and hunters who tried the Berryessa valley had a good shoot. Quail are more numerous this season than they have been for years past.

The futility of the game law to withstand the ingenuity of market hunters and dealers was aptly illustrated on Tuesday. To evade the observance of the law, in spirit and practically in the letter, the commission men instructed the individual market hunters to ship the limit number of birds to this city by express and addressed to themselves. The shipment of game was in every respect in conformity with the provisions of the law.

Nearly all of the sportsmen who returned from the east bay shore marshes brought back a few ducks, many of the shooters having also rail, curlew, plover and smaller fry. Ed Schultz and Jules Bruns had a small bunch of teal which they shot on the Willow Gun Club ponds. Dr. Alden and a friend also had a fair bunch of ducks. George Price who shot near the "bridges" brought in a string of fifty teal for the market, the result of three guns. Fred W. King and H. Von Soosten made a good bag at Dumbarton Point. Many other hunters who had only ordinary luck remained on the shooting grounds for a shoot next morning. The weather conditions were favorable for a good morning shoot. Monday night the moon was nearly full and bright. This fact was taken advantage of by a large number of unscrupulous shooters, who shot all night, thus spoiling others' sport next day and also violating the law. The sport on the marsh near Mt. Eden was spoiled by night shooting.

A west wind blowing in the morning started many ducks from the Alameda marshes across to the San Mateo and Belmont marshes, where they were received by a band of hunters with guns and dogs. This reception caused the birds to continue in flight westwardly and on to the water company's lakes. The line of flight was videtted by over forty shooters, many of them posted along the county road. These shooters had plenty of duck shooting, and some of them, particularly a party composed of Hip Justins, E. W. McLellan and W. Gazell, who were in position in a valley, bagged a nice string of sprigtails and teal. Many of the men stationed along the road used 10 bore guns and black powder.

Wild Animals Which Thrive Without Water.

The faculty of many wild and also of some domestic animals, to live for a greater or less time without water, is well known, but the following illustrations of apparently extraordinary powers in that respect, is given by an author on African fauna.

Writing, for instance, of the giraffes in the great Kalahari Desert, Mr. H. A. Bryden ("Nature and Sport in South Africa" p. 145, 1897) makes the following observation:

"For three-fourths of the year giraffes can exist without water; and, as I can personally testify, they are nowadays usually only to be encountered in absolutely waterless deserts, the nearest portion of it from twenty to forty miles away from any river or fountain."

Again, when treating of the same animal in the same locality in "Great and Small Game in Africa" (p. 502), Mr. Bryden writes as follows:

"Its most favorite country at the present day, South of the Zambezi, is undoubtedly in the vast, waterless, giraffe-accacia forests of the North Kalahari. Here, far from permanent water, in country where even native hunters can scarcely penetrate, large troops of giraffes still roam. In this, the most waterless portion of South Africa, giraffes have the faculty of being able to exist for long periods—six or seven months at a time—without drinking. This faculty they share with the eland, the gemsbuck, hartebeest, dinker and steinbok, all of which are to be found ranging these dry and remote solitudes during the months of the African winter when not a drop of surface water is to be found over hundreds of miles of country."

Similar testimony in favor of the abstinence from water of the giraffe is offered on page 495 of the same volume by Mr. A. H. Neumann, whose experiences were obtained in East Africa. He writes as follows:

"These creatures [giraffes] of course feed exclusively upon the leaves, tender shoots, and sometimes the seed-pods of trees and shrubs. Although they undoubtedly do drink sometimes, they are certainly able to go for considerable periods without water, and are found in the driest country, long distances away from any possible drinking place."

Equally conclusive testimony is afforded by Count J. Potocki ("Sport in Somaliland," 1900) with regard to the thirst-enduring habits of the great game of the Somali country. On page 36, for instance, he writes as follows:

"In spite of this lack of water, there is a large amount of game in the Haud. Immense herds of antelopes find their permanent pasture in this desert, while there are more lions than in any other part of Somaliland. It is a phenomenal peculiarity of the local fauna to be able to exist so long without water, especially (as we had occasion to remark more than once later on) since the antelopes on the Haud seem in perfect condition, and as fat as if fed in the richest pasture."

On a later page (118) of the same work Count Potocki discusses this subject more fully in the following paragraph:

"To return once more to a subject which I have touched upon several times in the course of this journal, and which has become an enigma to me, I may add a few words regarding the existence of the animals of this region in the absence of water. Nowhere did I convince myself more completely than in Dumereli that all the animals of this country can exist for months absolutely without water. Numerous species of antelopes and various kinds of beasts of prey go entirely without drink from November till March; and yet, in spite of this, the former are fat, though the grass is dry and parched like ashes, so that it cannot be nutritive food for them."

"How it happens that the organization of these animals, which, moreover, differs in no wise from that of their congeners living in the neighboring regions, can endure so long without water, I am unable to explain, and I regret that no naturalist (not excepting Brehm) has turned his attention to this wonderful peculiarity of the fauna of the high plains of Somaliland."

Many other passages from different writers might be cited, but the foregoing prove up to the hilt the fact that in many parts of Africa a great number of large herbivorous animals subsist for long periods at a time entirely without drinking. And what is true for the animals of Africa may equally well hold good for some of those of India, such as the bluebuck and the chinkara.

But it is not only wild animals that can do without water. As every flockmaster knows, sheep will live without drinking for long periods, even in dry districts where little or no dew falls at night; and guinea pigs can be kept without water even when they are given only a very small allowance of green food.

The statement of Count Potocki as to the non-nutritious character of dry grass is, however, regarded as an error by no less an authority than Mr. R. Lydekker, who makes the further assertion that domesticated cattle, with a sufficiency of water, will often thrive better on parched pastures than on those in which the grass is soft and "washy." And, as every sportsman is aware, the wild sheep of Ladak and Tibet, like many of the African antelopes, grow fat and sleek on sparsely scattered tufts of dry herbage that look insufficient to support an inhabitant.

The Fly-Casters.

The San Francisco Fly-Casting Club concluded the season's contests on Saturday and Sunday last when the second re-entry contests were decided.

On Saturday, with splendid weather conditions in their favor, Chas. F. Grant won the tie cast-off against E. A. Mocker in long distance with a score of 110½ feet against 107 feet. Mocker cast up two scores in this event, making 95 and 90 feet respectively. In accuracy he stood 89 8-12 and 88 8-12 for two hack scores. His net percentage in the delicacy event was 84 points. Messrs. Mansfield and Grant judged, T. W. Brotherton was referee and Horace Smyth kept the records.

On Sunday the wind was southwest and rainy weather prevailed. In long distance the following casts were made for back scores: E. Everett 111 feet, J. B. Kenniff 118 feet, E. A. Mocker 96 feet. In casting off ties H. C. Golcher scored 124 feet against T. W. Brotherton's 112 feet. J. B. Kenniff scored 121 feet, heating E. A. Mocker who made a cast of 105 feet. Chas. F. Grant beat H. F. Muller on the score of 110½ feet against 107. In the accuracy event the hack scores cast were Everett 82 4-12 per cent, J. B. Kenniff 82 8-12, Mocker 80 8-12. In the delicacy contest the hack scores cast up were, Everett 91 6-12 per cent, J. B. Kenniff 86 11-12, Mocker 84 9-12. The cast off of ties in accuracy were between C. G. Young 91 4-12 and H. F. Muller 85 8-12. W. E. Brooks 94 4-12 and A. M. Blade 73 4-12. The tie cast off in lure casting was between C. R. Kenniff, who scored 93 10-15 per cent, and T. W. Brotherton 90 2-15.

The medal winners will be announced at the meeting and banquet to be held on the 15th inst.

Sonoma creek, from Glen Ellen down, is good for a day's angling. The spoon and spinner is the effective lure. Several baskets of excellent trout were taken from the stream recently.

Fishing at Webber lake and on the Truckee is still on, and a few devoted anglers are up in the Sierras trying the fly and spoon. Reports from Eel river are favorable. Many fish, from a half to a pound and a in weight, are taken daily.

Bay fishing for rock fish and "blue cod" never was better than it has been for several weeks. The best catches have been made at Belvedere Point, Angel Island and California City. The Sausalito shores out to Lime Point are also splendid fishing ground.

Chas. Precht, one day this week caught, in the Paper Mill creek, eighteen of the prettiest looking steelhead that have been taken out of the stream this season. Three fish scaled over a pound each and one ran a half pound heavier. This latter fish was a beauty from head to tail and in the very finest condition; the color and markings were rarely handsome. These fish had escaped the many anglers on the stream all through the season until Precht's tempting spoon swam through the pools where the trout were in fancied security taking matters comfortably.

Striped bass angling has been somewhat tame for a week past. A few fair catches only have been made. For some reason the fish seem to have deserted the East shore waters of San Pablo bay and have betaken themselves to the opposite shores and waters of Petaluma creek and adjacent creeks and sloughs. The Italians have been netting the bass to some extent in the deeper parts of San Francisco bay, the fish caught ranging from 8 to 15 pounds.

In Midshipman slough, near Sears' Point, last Sunday, Chas. Breidenstein hooked two four pounders, Chas. Precht and Frank Dolliver each caught some small fish. Dr. Miller and a party of friends also hooked some small bass. Bait was used by the anglers. Al Wilson, F. Frost and Hart Williams fished San Pablo slough on Tuesday. Mr. Frost caught two fish on a Wilson trolling spoon, six or seven other fish were caught with clams. A number of small bass hooked were returned to the water. The largest bass caught weighed 8 pounds.

A Scientific Fish Story.

Since the general acceptance by the scientific world of the theory of evolution the facts of animal intelligence have acquired a new importance quite apart from their general interest from the strong probability that they furnish object lessons, so to speak, of the remote predecessor of the human mind in its early evolutionary stages.

The study of animal intelligence in the hands of such men as Roumies and Lubbock, Darwin and Spencer has been of exceeding value in tracing the evolution of mind. And, although the enthusiasm which leads to elaborate researches on the reasoning powers of angle worms and tadpoles may perhaps in the majority of cases be unproductive of anything practical, when the higher animals are studied by competent men data of the highest interest and importance may be expected.

Prof. Norman Niplett of Clark University has recently published an interesting account of such an investigation regarding the educability of two perch, which he kept in an aquarium and experimented with for several months. Fish may be said to be the lowest members of the higher group of animals, and thus present especial interest as being on the borderland between the two brain types.

Prof. Niplett was led to his investigation by the story by Mobius, which is thus recited by Bateson: Pike, having lived some time in a tank separated by a glass plate from another in which small fish were living, desisted from trying to catch them, and on the glass plate being removed, never attempted to do so, the pike having evidently come to believe the minnows to be under special protection of some sort.

In Prof. Niplett's experiment two perch, a male and female, had been kept in a small tank in the laboratory for several months and fed on live minnows, two or three inches in length, which they took greedily. A glass partition was now placed in the tank and their food changed to angle worms. Just before feeding them with the worms a few minnows were placed in the new tank on the other side of the glass and allowed to remain until the worms were thrown to the perch. At the first trial, as soon as the minnows were placed in the adjoining tank, the perch began ramming the glass partition to get at them; their actions becoming more violent as the minnows approached the latter. They continued to strike the glass viciously until the worms were thrown to them the female especially showing signs of great anger and impatience. At the second feeding their efforts were neither so long continued nor so violent, and after about a month's experience of the glass partition they paid very little attention to the minnows. One day, after the appetite of the perch had been a little dulled with worms, Prof. Niplett removed the partition and admitted a minnow. The latter swam around with the perch, over and under them, evidently seeking companionship. The male perch paid no attention to it, but the female, whose persistence at the glass had been much more marked, moved toward the minnow several times, but always stopped and turned away without striking, apparently thinking herself unable, for some mysterious reason, to reach him. Although this experiment was repeated for several days, and even when the perch were very hungry, the minnow was unmolested. Minnows were then left in the other tank continuously. The perch paid little attention to them and rarely touched the glass partition, although they occasionally took up a position near it and watched the minnows at play. When the partition was removed the minnows swam freely about with the perch, but were unharmed.

The curiously limited way in which these perch had learned their lesson was shown by another experiment. One day, instead of dropping the angle worms into the perch tank, as usual, they were dropped into the minnow tank. The perch immediately dashed violently against the partition in their efforts to reach them, and continued to strike the glass energetically for some time.

This brings out in a very striking way the extremely limited educability of most forms of animal intelligence, which, although qualitatively of the same sort as our own, perhaps, is so very sharply circumscribed as to be hardly worthy of the name of reasoning. The perch had finally, after a month or two's experience, learned that they could not get at the minnows; but evidently, instead of imputing their inability to the glass partition, they considered it some new and remarkable property of the minnows themselves, and were no doubt greatly surprised when they found even angle worms developing the same mysterious power.

The minnows were next removed from the sight of the perch for several days, and then placed directly in the tank with them. It was plain that the behavior of the perch had been very much modified by their previous experience with the partition. Although they were very hungry, they paid little attention to the minnows at first. Finally, the female followed one of them into a corner and, apparently much to her own surprise, struck and secured it. The male, although he chased the other minnow around the tank in a listless way, seemed to have lost confidence in his hunting powers, and after five hours the minnow was still unharmed.

As Paulsen suggests regarding the Mobius pike, "A strike at the minnow had come to mean a bump on the nose for him." When the glass partition was taken out the male perch would swim up to its previous position and make little humps forward as if expecting to strike the usual obstruction, and was plainly at a loss when he didn't. He then turned and swam down as if following the glass.

During the whole of the time the perch were fed upon worms they showed a marked interest in any one who came about the tank, especially near the meal time, and would gaze out, snap their jaws, flirt their tails, and swim about the tank impatiently.

Regarding the sense of hearing in fish, although the weight of opinion seems to be that they hear little or nothing of sounds either in water or air, Prof. Niplett found some indications of such a sense, at any rate, one of "jar," if not of true hearing in his perch, and a tank of goldfish kept in the laboratory almost never failed to respond to his whistle, especially if hungry.

In his book on animal intelligence Romanes give an interesting instance of the reasoning powers of a perch. It was one day discovered in a stream, guarding its nest full of small fry, and was evidently much disturbed by the attentions of the visitors. When next day they again returned to watch her she and the nest had disappeared, but upon looking a few yards up stream the female was found, still guarding her fry with jealous care, in a little cavity she had scooped out of the coarse bottom sand.

THE FARM.

Feeding Alfalfa to Young Stock.

A farmer that has an alfalfa field is as safe as if he had a bank account. His stock is assured of hay at any rate. No season will be so dry but he will get at least two cuttings of hay. With this to count upon he can risk keeping more stock than he otherwise could. Not only will grain be saved, but the animals will do better and will grow in bone and muscle and he in the finest condition for fattening when the finish is to be put on.

As a pasture for swine and for cattle it is valuable where it is grazed in the right manner. It requires some skill to pasture cattle on it without endangering their lives. With swine it is very likely, if too closely pastured, to injure its growth. However, it is especially valuable in this way on account of its feeding properties and reliability. Alfalfa furnishes a valuable protein feed in forming a balanced ration. The greatest problem for a farmer to solve is to furnish the protein. Alfalfa furnishes this long felt want.

In the feed lot and fattening pen it is hard to estimate its value. Any stock will do well on well-cured alfalfa. Some inferior fats the oleo maker prepares a mixture at one-third the cost of real butter. He then colors it to appear like honest butter and sells it at a price which will give him a tremendous profit and thus scale down the price of real butter. The Grout bill was aimed at this fraudulent part of the business. The present state laws have not proved adequate and this counterfeiting is more prevalent than ever. A heavy tax on the product which may be fraudulently sold seems the surest way to stop the evil. This plan has been endorsed by practically all the dairy associations in the country, and by produce dealers and boards of trade. The only concerns that stand out against it are the National live stock association and the Chicago stock yards company, both of which are virtually one and the same so far as hooks and eyes go.—Denver Field.

Shorthorn cattle breeding and exhibiting has for many years afforded the faithful critic ample scope for wide and varied observations. This grand old breed has been greatly butchered, so to speak, by many of its professed friends. So much was this the case in other years—which seem now happily gone by—that no true friend of the breed could afford to remain silent while a mistaken course of breeding

Who's to Blame? Not the Cow.

The milk when drawn from the cow is generally good, except when the grasses or food which she eats is strongly flavored, like turnips, rape and some weeds, or the water she drinks is stagnant or impure, says Sam Haugbald, America's champion buttermaker. In ninety-nine out of every one hundred cans of milk brought into our factories and found to be tainted and faulty, the improper care of the milk after it is drawn from the cow is the cause for its defects. This nuisance of tainted and bad milk is the general cause of so much poor butter being made, and if I were to answer the question, Who is mostly to blame for the poor quality of so much of our butter, the buttermaker, the cows or the dairymen? I should not hesitate to say that the dairymen and creamery patrons are more to blame than the buttermakers, and least of all the cow is to blame. The dairy butter as we find it at the stores is a striking evidence of what the result will be when the milk or cream is not properly taken care of, and an unskilled buttermaker is employed, as there is no good reason why dairy butter should not be good if properly made, and the milk and cream are properly taken care of.—Dairy and Creamery.

quicker than some of the larger breeds. The service of a young bull should be very light. We are not prepared to say how much a young bull might safely be used, but if we had a valuable animal we would use it as little as possible until at least eighteen months old. As to the service of a mature bull much depends on whether the service is to extend through the year, or whether the cows are expected to come in as nearly together as possible. We should say that it would not injure a mature bull to serve fifty cows if the service extends throughout the whole year.

The latest census report shows that while twenty states made gains on the number of cattle for 1900 yet only two states had a greater number of cattle than in 1892. There were 10,165,176 more cattle in 1892 than in 1900, and while we are losing these 10,165,175 cattle we increased our population 10,500,000 in these eight years. In 1892 the number of cattle was 54,067,000, population 65,450,000; ratio 826. In 1900, number of cattle 43,902,000, population 75,010,000, ratio 586. To maintain our present ratio of cattle in 1903 when our population will reach 80,000,000 we should have 46,800,000 cattle or a net gain of 1,000,000 annually. In 1920 at our present increase our population will reach claim that it is not a healthful feed for horses. As practical experience has proven it is far superior and less injurious than timothy, clover or millet. For skimmed milk calves it furnishes a feed that will make them equal to yearlings that have been raised by their mothers. As fine calves as I ever saw for just common stock was a hunch that had been fed all winter on a diet of skim milk night and morning while they were given the privilege of running to the alfalfa ricks whenever they chose, which was quite often.

The calves came through the winter in fine condition and were sold in the spring at top prices. As fine a bunch of pigs as I ever saw marketed were given a feed of alfalfa freshly cut three times a day from the time they were old enough to nibble until the alfalfa season was over. The alfalfa hay was fed them and they were given the run of the pile of straw or chaff, whichever it is called, left from the crop threshed for seed. Both the hogs and the fattening steers in the feeding lot seemed to relish the stuff and during the winter consumed the large pile from a fifteen-acre field.—J. L. Irwin.

Yellow is the color by which butter has been known for centuries, and this is one of the things which distinguished it from other animal fats. By using cheap and was being pursued. Shorthorn breeders have happily changed their tactics of late. The result is that there is marked improvement in the younger generations of the breed. The tale is best told perhaps by the bare statement that the champion bull and the champion female of the recent Pueblo state fair were out-crossed Scotch. A strict inspection or analysis of the bull's breeding will show a mixture of Bates and Cruickshank with a dash of Booth blood near the top and Knightly blood not very far back.

The value of salt for sheep is shown by an experiment in France, where of three lots of animals fed alike on hay, straw, potatoes and beans for 124 days one lot had no salt, one had half an ounce of salt each every day and the other had three-fourths of an ounce. Those that had half an ounce gained four and a half pounds each more than those that had no salt and one and one-quarter pounds more than those which had more than a half ounce. So it seems that too much salt can be given as well as too little. The salted sheep clipped one and three-quarters pounds more of wool and better fleece than those that had no salt, showing better results in the wool—that is larger profit than in the flesh.

Angoras and Brush.

Because Angora goats thrive on a diet made up of brush and weeds, it does not follow that they live without food, as some enthusiastic writers seem to think. Brush is, in fact, very nutritious food, but it is hard for most animals, except goats, to reduce it to a digestible form. A good many beginners with Angora goats allow them to run down in flesh and strength. This is especially apt to be the case where they are used for clearing the brush from land in fields in which grass and weeds are scarce. In such places the big, strong wethers get all the best picking and eat off the tender twigs until they are out of reach of the does, kids and young wethers. Goats ought to be fat this month and if not should be provided with pasturage where they can get in good condition. It is probable that more than half of the goats which died last winter would have survived if they had been well nourished.—Rural Northwest.

A bull can be put to service at from ten to twelve months old according to breed and development. If a calf is kept hustling right along from birth, it will be much more fully developed at ten months than a poorly fed one at twelve or fourteen. Then again Jerseys develop much 100 000,000, and even to have 500 cattle for 1000 population our cattle must increase 6,000,000 and to maintain our present ratio we must have in 1920 58 500,000 head of cattle.

Unless the price of beef cattle should materially advance, the present indications are that the shipment of cattle from the northern ranges will this season be much lighter than usual, in spite of the fact that there are at present more beef cattle in that country than ever before. The fine condition of the range makes cattlemen quite independent, as there is at present an abundance of feed and water for stock purposes. Consequently commission men on the ground are looking for a very light movement of cattle.

The Pan-American cattle show was the most successful ever held east of Chicago. The exhibit of beef cattle while small was of excellent quality and means much to the pure-bred cattle industry of the East. The dairy breeds surprised every one. The beef breeds were represented in numbers as follows: Shorthorns 86, Herefords 54, Aberdeen-Angus 8, Galloway 33, Red Polled 50, Polled Durham 17. Total 322.

Fine Stock for Hilo, H. I.

The following is from the Hilo Herald: "Eben Low, who is now visiting W. H. Shipman's with his wife and daughter, has just imported from New Zealand a thoroughbred hackney stallion, said to be the finest horse ever brought to the Islands. He was shipped on the Kinan from Honolulu and was landed at Mahukona in perfect condition. Mr. Low has now on his ranch a herd of 35 thoroughbred Hereford cattle, pedigreed, which he brought from the Canterbury association of New Zealand, now the only foreign stock association recognized by the U. S. Government. He is one of the first on the islands to import this class of cattle with a view to improve the quality of his herds, a fact which was favorably commented upon by Prof. Stuhls in his report to the Agricultural Department at Washington."

Writing in Drovers' Journal, C. P. Reynolds says: "The horse's stomach is built for more highly concentrated feed than the ox. He cannot take the same kind simply because he has not the capacity to digest it in sufficient quantities to supply his system with the needed nourishment. The result is when too much hay is fed the horse becomes badly pot bellied and is unable to secure the required nourishment to work at the best advantage. A working horse should have plenty of grain, which furnishes his nourishment in the most highly concentrated form that is practicable to feed. It requires also a certain amount of hay, but the hay is not to supply it with the main portion of its nourishment. The most experienced teamsters are relying on grain for the main portion of the feed, not only because experience has demonstrated that it is the most economical, but that it is also best for the horse."

There is no room for further discussion of the question as to whether it is more profitable to have cows freshen in the spring or in the fall, says Hoard's Dairymen. It has been tried too often and under too widely different conditions, and without exception, so far as we are advised, the cow that freshens in the fall will yield more milk in 12 months, and the milk and its products are worth more money. The best plan of all probably is to have cows freshen at different times in the year—say three-fourths of them from September to January and the others at intervals throughout the balance of the year.

Next time you have a vicious heifer to break, try this method. Put a strong halter on her and tie her up to a post of the cow yard fence, bringing her head close up; then take a long rope and tie it up to the post a foot or so below her nose; crowd her up close alongside the fence, bring the rope around her, letting it pass along her shoulder, side and hip, and tie to the next post behind her. She will then be held firmly against the fence. If she attempts to kick, pass a strap around her hind legs behind the udder, and draw them together and huckle them there.

The cow cannot always maintain a high average yield of milk or butter. Even the same exact feed and general care that may enable a cow to make 350 pounds of butter in one campaign, may be rewarded by only 300, or even 250, pounds in the next campaign. This is one of the inevitable variations with which the dairy farmer must contend. It is a variation based on constitution, and for that reason it is impossible to evade it, or control it, or to make up for it in any way.

To some men a ton of hay is a ton of hay; but, all the same, one ton of bright, well cured hay cut at the proper season is worth two tons of late cut, storm spoiled stuff which is still called hay.

There are two varieties of cows—the cow that gives more than she eats and the cow that eats more than she gives. Which variety would you prefer in making up a dairy herd? Which variety do you actually have? Now, there is no difficulty about telling the cow of one class from the cow of the other. There used to be, but there isn't now. The Babcock test does it. The apparatus consists of a small scale, a Babcock test, and a little gump-tion. By testing each cow separately a man can soon tell which ones are paying a profit and which are merely boarders.—American Agriculturist.

ASTHMA CURE FREE!

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent
Cure in All Cases.

Sent Absolutely Free on Receipt of Postal.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

We want to send to every sufferer a trial treatment of Asthmalene, similar to the one that cured Mr. Wells. We'll send it by mail POSTPAID, ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE, to any sufferer who will write for it, even on a postal. Never mind, though you are despairing, however bad your case, Asthmalene will relieve and cure. The worse your case, the more glad we are to send it. Do not delay. Write at once, addressing DR. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO., 79 East 130th St., N. Y. City. Sold by all Druggists.

QUINN'S OINTMENT FOR HORSES

stands at the head of all veterinary remedies. Such troubles as Spavins, Curbs, Windpuffs, Splints, Bunches have no terrors for a horse if the master keeps and applies Quinn's Ointment. All well known horsemen speak of it in the highest terms:

Miller & Sibley of Franklin, Pa., owners of St. Bel, brother of late Bel Boy, write, "We have used Quinn's Ointment with great success and believe it fulfills all claimed for it. We cheerfully recommend it to our friends." For Curbs, Splints, Spavins or Bunches it has no equal.

Price $1.00 per package. Sold by all druggists, or sent by mail.

TRY IT.

When to Cut Alfalfa.

Alfalfa should be cut when not more than one-tenth of the plants have come in bloom. Cut at this early stage, the yield of hay for the season will be much greater than if the alfalfa is cut near maturity, and every pound of hay secured will be worth more for feed.

The late cutting of the first crop seems to injure the plant more than at any other time, and the Kansas station has found it profitable to cut alfalfa the first time as soon as one-tenth was in bloom, even though the weather was bad and the crop spoiled in curing. The increased yield from succeeding cuttings over that cut late much more than makes up for the loss of the first crop.

Successful clover growers the first time they try alfalfa often ruin the stand, so that it has to be plowed up, by waiting to cut until it reaches the stage at which clover is usually cut.

The great value of alfalfa is the large amount of protein it contains, that material in feed that is absolutely necessary for the formation of blood, lean meat and milk. The higher the protein in alfalfa the more valuable the crop.

Experiments made in three states—Kansas, Colorado and Utah—prove that alfalfa cut in the first bloom will give the greatest yield and feeding value. The leaves of alfalfa contain more than three times as much protein as the stems, a ton of alfalfa leaves containing as much protein as 2800 pounds of bran. Every care should be taken in curing alfalfa to save the leaves.

One strong feature of the American cattle market is that despite the very high price of beefs in Chicago the exports keep on increasing in the most gratifying manner. In the month of August last exports of cattle footed up 25,430 or about 5000 head more than in August 1900, when the value was considerably lower. Up to August 15, 1901, the receipt of foreign cattle in London, England, had exceeded those for the same period of 1900 by over 10,000 head.

The Beef Steer in the Future.

Every farmer, on however a small scale, should endeavor to feed a few cattle every winter, instead of hauling all his grain to market. The outlook for the farm-grown, corn-fattened beef steer was never better. Little by little, in some localities in the West, and with great hounds in others, the rangers are being invaded by the settler and small farmer, and the herder of cattle forced to market or other and less inviting pastures. The great Farwell ranch in Texas is being rapidly sold out in small tracts, and soon cotton and grain will be growing where once the "long horn" grazed. A large colony will locate in the northern part of the same state next month, and a whole county will be cut up into small farms of from forty to 100 acres each. The Kiowa and Comanche reservations recently opened, deprived the rancher of over a million acres of grazing land. Thus the grass-fed ranger will shortly disappear and competition with the farm-raised steer will cease, and the industry will be more profitable to the farmer and feeder of the Middle West. Feeding a few cattle will afford the small farmer an opportunity of disposing of his roughness and feeding them on the farm will tend to the enrichment of the soil.—Drovers' Journal.

Haggin & Carr, large land owners on Staten Island, in the San Joaquin river, are changing their farming land into a stock farm in order to raise and fatten cattle for the San Francisco market. Two large barns, 360 feet long by 60 feet wide, are already contracted for, as are also five dwelling houses for the cattlemen and their families. An immense hay warehouse will be constructed later. A large force of carpenters will be kept busily employed for about four months.

A NEW CLIPPING MACHINE. THE "1902." THE BEST YET.

PRICE $15. A REVOLUTION IN CONSTRUCTION.

Undoubtedly superior to anything previously manufactured by us or any others. Surprisingly SIMPLE, STRONG, DURABLE, and costs but a fraction of the price of antiquated machines and does better work. We are confident in presenting our "1902" machine that it embodies every desirable feature of a perfect Horse Clipper. This machine has a large cut gear which engages a small hard steel cut pinion on a shaft which is connected with a universal joint, which is covered; this joint being attached to a flexible shaft. The handle is very long, so that it may be turned with either hand, and unlike other machines it is not necessary to hold one hand on the standard to steady the machine. The "1902" is furnished with a seven-foot flexible shaft and one knife, and is recommended with the fullest confidence that it will do the work in a rapid and satisfactory manner. They are guaranteed to do more work than any other machine made by us or any other manufacturer. Drop us a postal card to-day and we shall send you free a beautifully illustrated Catalogue containing numerous half-tone engravings of every type of a clipping machine that is worthy of the name, whether operated by steam, water, electricity or gas power.

Orders for machines to be sent C. O. D. by Express must be accompanied with $5, the balance to be collected on delivery.

TWO FAST SAN FRANCISCO ROAD HORSES.

JOTTINGS.

GREAT RESULTS ARE EXPECTED from the union of the Direct and Hal pacifug families, and when the colts and fillies from the Hal mares that have bred to Direct 2:05½ and Directly 2:03½ are ready to score down for the word it is expected that the 2:10 class will have a new member every time one of them starts. The ten thousand dollar colt Direct Hal, which Ed Geers bred and sold to the Hamlins, is one of the first of this union of the two great pacing crosses, but there will be many others before long and they will be coming out of the Tennessee hills every year like a flock of cyclones if the expectations of the breeders are realized. That the Hal family is a wonderful one is admitted by all, and that the Directs will nick well with its members is not doubted, but there is a horse here in California which, in the writer's opinion, would outbreed the Directs two to one as a sire of extreme speed at the pace were he to be mated with the choice mares of the Hal family. We refer to Diablo 2:09½, son of Chas. Derby 2:20 and Bertha by Alcantara. Diablo has never during any of the years he has stood for service, been mated with a high class lot of mares. Some royally bred ones have been sent to his court it is true, but taken as a whole he has met an ordinary lot, the majority being non-standard and many of unknown breeding. Diablo is but twelve years of age yet he has to his credit Clipper 2:06, Sir Albert S. 2:08½, Diodine 2:10½, Daedalion 2:11, Diawood 2:11, Tags 2:11½, Hijo el Diablo 2:12½, El Diablo 2:12½ and Inferno 2:15, besides many more with slower records. Himself, a very fast pacer, never defeated but once in a race, his produce are wonderfully fast and game, and invariably grow better as they get age. It is the exception when a Diablo cannot show standard speed as soon as he is rein wise. They all seem to have a desire to go fast and many of them have been knocked out as two and three year olds because their trainers could not resist the temptation to let them go as fast as they wanted to. The Diablos have that very high rate of speed which the two minute horse must have, and I expect to see his list of 2:10 performers as large as that of any horse before he is five years older. He is one of the greatest producers of pacing speed for his opportunities in America.

It seems they have a very liberal lot of preachers over in Kentucky. An associated press dispatch from Lexington, under date of October 9th, states that Rev. Bakor P. Lee, dean of Christ's Church Cathedral of that city, has donated $25 to the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association with a statement that it is a token of his appreciation of the good work the association is doing. The dispatch also mentions the fact that the Rev. D. E. Muller of the Presbyterian Church was at the track Monday watching the horses in their preparation and expressed himself as highly pleased with the prospects of a good race meeting. It is a foregone conclusion that both these ministers are men who are doing good work in their chosen field of work to make men better. The fact that they enjoy and endorse speed contests as conducted by the celebrated Kentucky association is evidence that their minds are broad and that their faces are not long drawn and miserable looking. They are not of the class that consider all pleasure sin, but are ready to take part in and enjoy sport that is clean and honest. When the records of all time are at last made up their names will be in the list along with that of Ahou Ben Adam and others who "loved their fellow men." More power to them in their work.

Rey Direct 2:10 did not make a good showing this year, but it was not his fault. He was entered all through the Grand Circuit and, although entirely out of condition, was started in nearly every race in which he was entered. He should have been scratched at Detroit and sent home instead of being compelled to start when he was a sick horse. His owner, Mr. Geo. A. Davis of Pleasanton, was glad to get him back under his care again, and as evidence that the horse is all right, had Burt Webster drive him a mile the other day. Rey Direct had not been worked for two months, but he stepped the track in 2:14 last half in 1:06 and last quarter in 32½ seconds. He did it so easily that there was not a particle of doubt in the minds of Mr. Davis and Mr. Webster that the handsome son of Direct can reduce his record any time he is put in shape and started in a race. Rey Direct is a wonderful foal getter. Many of the Direct family are very uncertain horses in the stud, but Rey Direct has a record earned last year that is remarkable. He was bred to 31 mares and 31 foals resulted. There is to be a prize offered at the Pleasanton meeting next month for the best stallion and five of his produce. Mr. Davis' horse has none that are aged, but he would like to meet all comers with him for a prize and $100 in coin for a stallion and five yearlings, the judging to be on points of size, bone and conformation. That Rey Direct and his get would be very hard to beat in any country is the belief of all who have ever visited the Rancho del Valle.

When Pleasanton gives its meeting next month there will probably be a congregation of all the old time and new horsemen who live within a radius of a hundred miles of the historic training ground. San Francisco will undoubtedly send more harness horse admirers there than she has sent to a meeting in years. Somehow or other there is a charm about the Pleasanton track that hangs over no other oval on the Pacific Coast. There are recollections and traditions of men and horses, champions both, that will attract and interest every lover of the trotting or pacing horse as long as memory lasts and horses are driven. Among the fastest of the world renowned horses that have occupied stalls and been trained at Pleasanton are Alix 2:03½, Azote 2:04½, Directum 2:05½, Dolly Dillon 2:07, Dione 2:07½, Klamath 2:07½, of the trotters, and Anacanda 2:01½, Coney 2:02, Directly 2:03½, Searchlight, 2:03½, Flying Jih 2:04, Bonnie Direct 2:05½, Lenna N. 2:05½, Direct 2:05½, Klatawah 2:05½, Clipper 2:06, W. Wood 2:07, Little Thorne 2:07½, Much Better 2:07½ and other pacers "too numerous to mention." Of the old guard Flying Jih 2:04 is still there and can be seen almost any day pulling a buggy through Pleasanton's streets. Bonnie Direct 2:05½ and Rey Direct 2:10 are still residents of the historic burg and these three fast ones are to be exhibited at the meeting next month for the edification of the visitors. Pleasanton is and has been for years the horse centre of California and there are a number of enterprising citizens of the place who propose that it shall keep its place as the equine hub of the Pacific wheel, and this two days' meeting is a starter to a regular horse revival. It will be worth a journey to see, and it will be good to be there. The dates set for the two days of horse talk and racing are the first two days in November and as the Stockton and Hollister meetings will be over this will furnish the last chance to see harness racing this year in California.

I don't believe one breeder in ten realizes the shortage that exists and will continue to exist in the supply of broken horses. When I say broken I mean horses that have been taught to pull a buggy or a wagon and that will be gentle under the saddle. For sound horses that have these qualifications there is an unlimited demand at the present time, and will be for years to come. It will pay the owners of two and three year olds to hire men to break them during the next few months as they will sell for good money as soon as they are reasonably gentle. Palmer Clark, the well known horsman and turf writer of Chicago, had an interview recently with Dr. Patterson, a prominent veterinary surgeon of St. Joseph, Missouri, who has made no less than six trips to Africa with horses intended for the British forces in the field, who advised him of conditions that, while they bode little for the peace of the world, must be exceedingly pleasant for American breeders of horses to contemplate. Dr. Patterson states that with neglect, hard service and the African fever the British forces are losing at an average 10,000 horses every month, and there is no indication that the guerrilla warfare now inaugurated, and which is so hard on mounted troops, is likely to end for several years yet. Nor is this all. Every available horse that the United Kingdom can spare has already been transported, so that when the troops return to England the remounts necessary on that occasion will require a number of horses even greater than has already been used. With a knowledge of this fact in view, the agents of the British government have already leased a tract of ground approximating 4000 acres near Lathrop, Mo., which will be used as a coralling and preparation station. There are now being shipped an average of 9000 horses from New Orleans every month, with the prospects of this number being augmented rather than diminished. There is also a move to change the shipping point to Newport News, Va., instead of the Louisiana city, and if satisfactory freight rates and shipping arrangements can be made this will be done in the near future. These conditions, so contrary to the prevailing notion that the demand for this class of horses had been exhausted, will be pleasing news to horse owners of the West and Northwest, as the price of ordinary grade stock will naturally be kept up to its present high standard for some years to come.

That old standby "Unknown" got a new 2:15 performer at Los Angeles last Monday in the 2:27 pace, the winner of which was Dr. W. Le Moyne Will's Cœur de Lion in straight heats, and the time was 2:12½, 2:12½ and 2:15. This is pretty fast time for a matinee pacer whose breeding is not traceable, and the Doctor must have a pretty good horse in Cœur de Lion. The Los Angeles track has not been fast at any time during the meeting, so this son of an unknown sire is quite a pacer.

And so Cresceus 2:02½ is coming to California and will give an exhibition at the Sacramento track on Thanksgiving Day, November 28th under the auspices of the Sacramento Driving Club. Thanksgiving Day in California is usually favored with good weather, and the only condition that will prevent the biggest crowd ever seen in the Capital city will be a change from the ordinary course of climatic events in the way of a rain storm. Given a good track and a clear sky and there will be thousands out to see Cresceus trot. I understand that the Sacramento Driving Club will spare no expenso to make the track as near perfect for record breaking as possible and it should be equal to the task of making it feel like velvet to the hoof of the great champion. There is a report going the rounds that an enterprising theatrical manager has made Mr. Ketcham an offer of $1500 a week to put his stallion in vaudeville and make the circuit of the big show towns. There is no doubt but Cresceus would be a great drawing card and no more exhilarating or beautiful sight could be placed before an audience. I can imagine an appropriate setting in which the mighty chestnut would stand with nothing on but a halter while some person would recite his many victories and give his bloodlines and history, while the audience rose to the occasion and cheered him wildly. It would make a horseman happy to be there. But Mr. Ketcham would hardly take the chances of such a tour and those who want to see Cresceus will have to go to the tracks where he is exhibited.

It has often occurred to me that the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association might add a feature to its annual meeting that would not only be an attractive one to all harness horse breeders, but one that would arouse the interest of all who admire that animal. This is the annual offering of prizes for stallions, mares and colts. Suppose, for instance, the sum of $500 was set aside for such prizes. $100 could be given for the best trotting stallion and five of his get and $100 for the best pacing stallion with five of his produce. These would be worth competing for and if the meeting were held after August 1st, there should be no trouble in securing a large number of entries in these classes. Prizes of a liberal cash value should also be given for the best broodmare and a certain number of her foals, also for yearlings, two and three year olds, for the best roadsters, single and in pairs, etc. As none of the breeds outside the standard bred horses would be provided for the prizes could be made very liberal and thereby attract many competitors. It would be an annual show of light harness horses, a horse show, if you please, without reference to the "appointments." I believe it would help make the meetings of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association more popular and then if it would abolish hookmaking on its races there would be great hopes in my mind that it would come nearer fulfilling the destiny for which it was created.

Speaking of the Breeders Association reminds me that there is an effort being made to have this association give a meeting at Eureka, Humboldt county, during the first week of July next year. Mr. T. C. Cahney, who is a member of the P. C. T. H. B. A. and also a resident of Eureka, interested himself in this idea while attending the Breeders meeting at Sacramento last summer and after returning to Eureka talked the matter up among his people. The Humboldt Standard says that more than $1500 has been promised to secure the meeting and at an informal meeting of the Board of Directors of the Breeders Association held this week it was the unanimous opinion of all present that a meeting at Eureka in July would not only be a splendid idea, but would result in a delightful outing and a week of excellent sport for many San Franciscans who would like to attend. If the meeting is given there, the Breeders will hold another meeting at San Francisco or some near point later in the fall. An effort would be made to get the very best horses in training to go to Eureka and to that end large purses would be given. The steamer trip from here to Eureka is a delightful one at that time of the year and accommodations for horses are first-class. The Breeders Association could doubtless induce the steamship company to put on an extra large excursion boat, and low rates have already been promised. I don't know a more pleasant trip. Eureka is the metropolis of the Humboldt and Mendocino trade in lumber and dairy products and is probably the most thriving town of its size on the coast. It is a picturesque place, as well as a great business mart and one of the most interesting points to visit in California. The climate is particularly delightful in the summer months. An enthusiastic reception awaits the Breeders if they decide to go there, which they will doubtless do.

Like all good things, Jackson's Napa Soda has a dozen counterfeits. Watch out!

SECOND PACIFIC BREEDERS FUTURITY.

Again has the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association successfully inaugurated a rich stake for colt trotters and pacers. The $6000 stake for foals of mares bred in 1900 closed September 1st last year with 305 nominations made by 155 individuals or stock farms. The second stake, which closed on the first of October this year, has 299 mares named by 199 persons or farms. Forty-four more persons have made entries this year than last, and while the total number of mares named is six less than in 1900, the increase in the number of nominators shows an increased interest in breeding the light harness horse. The falling off this year is entirely with the big farms. Palo Alto made ten entries in 1900, and has dropped this year. Oakwood Park named twenty mares last year and but eight this time. Santa Rosa Stock Farm had seventeen entries in the stake of 1900 and has dropped to eight this year. In spite of these facts, there are but six mares less this year than last, while there are forty-four more nominators. The result is a matter of great satisfaction to the officers and members of the P. C. T. H. B. A. who have worked to make this stake a popular one. They feel that their labors are appreciated and can congratulate themselves on the fact that the people engaged in breeding the harness horse on this Coast with the intention of developing them are on the increase. The Pacific Breeders Futurities are now assured successes and will be great racing features in the years when they are decided. The complete list of nominations to the second stake are as follows:

SULKY NOTES.

Stockton next week.

Don't miss Pleasanton's meeting.

Sir Albert S. has again made it three straight.

Seventy stallions are represented in the Breeders Futurity for foals of mares bred in 1901.

There are forty-four more nominators in the Pacific Breeders Futurity than there were last year.

Alta Vela again equalled his record of 2:15 at Los Angeles last week, but failed to win the race.

Advertiser 2:15½ gets a new performer in Adaria 2:15½, a four year old, out of Aria 2:16½, by Bernal.

Louise G. 2:08½ by Alclayon is the fastest four year old mare and the fastest green pacing mare of the season.

Hambletonian Wilkes, has five new standard performers this year, and three that have reduced their records.

Nutwood Wilkes is represented in the Breeders Futurity by twenty of the mares that were bred to him this year.

It is announced that King Cecil 2:18½ by Oro Wilkes dropped dead in the second heat of the 2:19 class at Electric Park.

What Is It was behind the flag in his race at Los Angeles. This is the first time he ever got a glimpse of the red banner.

It is reported that Geo. H. Ketcham has been offered $45,000 for a thirty-weeks' engagement to appear with Cresceus in vaudeville.

Ed Lafferty will locate at Pleasanton the "horse center" and is ready to receive horses and colts to work for the road or track.

A mare was bred to Zomhro 2:11 on Saturday, October 5th, which makes 99 mares that have been mated with this stallion this year.

Little Boy 2:02 to wagon is the only pacer, now in training, with the exception of Dan Patch, that has a license to get into the two minute class.

Any person wishing to purchase a three year old filly by McKinney out of a standard bred mare can hear of a good one by writing this office.

Few fast trotters wear as few boots or as little extra rigging as Lord Derby 2:06½, and he seems to have as great a burst of speed as any trotter out.

The stallion Redondo by Stamhoul was not burned to death as reported. It was Redo, a son of Redondo, that met his death in that tragic manner.

Prince Alert paced the half-mile track at Allentown, Pa., in 2:04½ last week. This ties the race record held by John R. Gentry over a half-mile track.

The Los Angeles meeting ends today. It has been fairly successful from an attendance standpoint and the racing has been "on the square" throughout.

Many horsemen have gone to Stockton with their horses this week to be in readiness for the races which begin next Tuesday. The track is in superb condition for the harness horses.

There are many horsemen that confidently believe that Little Boy 2:02, to wagon, can come nearer to reducing Star Pointer's 1:59½ than any pacer that has been out since the champion's day.

It is said that the track at Oakley Park, Cincinnati is the best appointed and prettiest trotting track in America. Only the leading running tracks can vie with it in beautiful lawns and floral adornments.

John A. McKerron will not be seen in public again this year. He will shortly be shipped to Lexington, as will that other consistent wagon trotter, Peko 2:11½, and carefully wintered at the Walnut Hall Farm.

There should be a concerted movement all along the line of the district fair associations of California to have their fair grounds in as neat condition as possible next year. It will be paid for by increased attendance.

Ed Lafferty will be at Stockton with his string of horses and will then locate at Pleasanton for the winter, where he will open a public training stable, handling colts and aged horses for the road and track.

Henry Hellman made a very good move when he took Ned Thorne and Myrtha Whips north. He has won several races and never been worse than second, and is probably two thousand dollars to the good.

The record of Louise G. 2:08½ is the fastest that has been made this season to date by a four year old mare. The fastest made by a four year old stallion, 2:06½, stands to the credit of Audobon Boy. Both were sired by sons of Aleyone 2:27.

One of the most promising yearling fillies ever bred in California, met an accidental death at the Hobart farm, near Burlingame, last week. She was by Nutwood Wilkes 2:16½ out of a mare by Axtell that Sam Gamble purchased with several others in the East three years ago for W. E. Lester. The Axtell mare has "no other foal at foot by the same sire, which it is hoped will meet with better luck.

Iran Alto's son Thomas R. 2:15 is one of the best trotters of the year that has appeared on the California tracks and has not reached the limit of his speed by any means. He has won two good races at the Los Angeles meeting.

While at Belmont Park, Philadelphia, Cresceus occupied a stall that may be appropriately called historic, for among its past occupants have been four previous world's champions—Alix 2:03½, Nancy Hanks 2:04, Sunol 2:08½, and Maud S. 2:08½.

"Doc" Tanner drove the runner when Little Boy paced a mile to wagon in 2:02 at the Empire City track, New York, last week, and says that the fast gelding will pace a mile close to two minutes to wagon at Memphis, provided weather and track are good.

Tom Marsh will end his engagement with Senator Jones, Maplewood Farm at the end of year and Hiram Tozier will take his place. Mr. Marsh has been very successful with the Senator's horses and under his tutelage Eleata 2:08½ is the greatest money winner of the year.

It is announced that an offer of $20,000 has been refused for Dan Patch 2:04½ by Joe Patchen 2:01½. The success of Joe Patchen as a sire is now so well established that he should be able to earn enough in the stud hereafter so that his owner can afford to retire him from racing.

The Stockton Driving Club will try the experiment of putting crude oil upon the race track at the Stockton fair grounds. If the experiment is successful the cost of keeping up race courses in California, where the cost of water is a very heavy item of expense will be materially reduced.

One of the handsomest fillies in Placer county is a daughter of Stam B. 2:11½ out of a mare by Silver Bow. This filly is owned by Mr. A. Ryder of Loomis. As she comes from good looking families on both sides of the house, it is not at all strange that she has a generous supply of good looks herself.

It has been demonstrated that in world's fairs lasting six months that nearly three-fourths of the attendance occurs during the last three months. It is the same with harness meetings and fairs. Much more than half of the gate receipts of the two weeks' meetings are received during the second week.

A telegram from Memphis brings the sad announcement of the death of the venerable mother of Secretary Murray Howe of the new Memphis Association, which opens its meeting after the close at Lexington. Mr. Howe was at Boston when notified of his mother's illness. He hurried home, but could not make the journey in time to see his mother alive.

Diablo is making a great showing as a sire of very fast pacers. The meeting held at North Yakima last week brought out another very fast one in Diodine a bay mare by Diablo that won in three straight heats, the time being 2:10½, 2:11½ and 2:11½. This is wonderful fast for the North Yakima track and is conclusive evidence that Diodine is one of the best pacers of the year that has come out on this coast.

There is a probability that the Pleasanton track will be purchased by a company composed of a number of residents of that thriving place, and if the deal goes through the track will be fenced, a grand stand built and an effort made to obtain a place on the circuit for a first class meeting every year. It could be made one of the most popular tracks on the Coast.

Pastime by Rustie is dead. This old gray mare was owned at the time of her death by Dr. Latham, to whom she was presented some years ago by Payne J. Shafter, of Olema. She was the dam of the trotting mare, Secret, three year old record 2:26½; Silkey, that took a pacing record of 2:13 at Honolulu; Antevenio three year old record 2:33, and Spotless, a very fast mare still owned and driven by Mr. Shafter.

At Readville the plan of sandwiching in three races worked splendidly, and in no other way could the program have been completed. It is such a time-saver that the wonder is that it had not been tried before. The waiting between heats, which is so unpopular, is practically done away with. As soon as one heat is over a fresh lot of horses appear on the track. This innovation was the idea of Secretary Jewett, and it will be followed largely.

A big price was recently paid for a sensational saddle mare when Mr. E. E. Smathers, of New York, gave Gen. John B. Castleman, of Louisville, Ky., $3000 for the bay saddle bred mare Alberta. This is a daughter of that famous Black Squirrel horse Highland Denmark, which has had few equals in Kentucky as a progenitor of handsome horses, and her dam is Miss Fullenwider. Alberta is a mare of size and substance and rare beauty, with enough action for successful show ring work. She will be exhibited at the Louisville and New York horse shows.

Some horsey terms: A white spot in the forehead is a star. A white face from eye to eye is a bald face. A stripe between the nostrils is a snip. A white eye is a glass eye. A horse has pasterns not ankles and there is no such joint as a hind knee or fore shoulder. White around the top of the hoof is a white coronet. White below the pastern joint is a white pastern or above the pastern it is a white leg. A snip cannot be anywhere except on the nose. Amble is a gait like pacing but slower, in which the two legs on the same side are moved together. The croup is that part of the horse back of the saddle. The fore arm is that part of the leg between the elbow and the knee and the elbow is the joint of the fore leg next above the knee and next to the side. When a horse forges it strikes the toe of the fore foot with the toe of the hind one and this is sometimes the result of bad shoeing. Everyone should know that the hand—a term commonly used in describing the height of a horse—is one-third of a foot or four inches.

The famous old mare Hattie R., by Andy Johnson, got her seventh 2:30 performer when her daughter, Alfonso Maid, by Alfonso, won the 2:45 trot at Bath, N. Y., September 26th, from a field of ten starters in 2:29½, 2:27½ and 2:29. Hattie R's seven performers were sired by five different sires. Alfonso Maid, like all the rest of the old mare's foals, was bred and is owned by S. H. and H. M. Rohie, of Savona, N. Y. and she can trot a half-mile track close to 2:20 now.

Captor, the trotter that Charles Marvin drove to a record of 2:10 in a winning race at Cincinnati last Friday, is one of the horses presented to this veteran reinsman last Christmas by his former employers, General Charles Miller and Representative Joseph C. Sibley, of Frankliu, Pa. Captor is a brown gelding, six years old, by Electric Bell, a full brother to Chimes the sire of The Abbot 2:03½. Captor's dam was Eula Lee 2:29½, the dam of St. Andre 2:13½, by General George H. Thomas. Marvin's new 2:10 flyer came out in the 3:00 class about two months ago. He is the fastest green trotter of the year, excepting Eleata 2:08½.

Be careful of the horse's mouth. Men who jerk the reins because they are too mad to be sensible and humane should have a hit placed in their own mouths and have it jerked by some fellow who would enjoy giving pain. In breaking colts be very careful about the mouth, and never bit an animal that has a sore mouth while it continues sore. The mouth of the horse should be more frequently examined than it usually is. Sometimes the teeth need attention and occasionally it may be necessary to draw a tooth. It is by no means uncommon that the poor condition of a horse can be traced to some ailment of the mouth which prevents the proper mastication of food.

The people of Eureka, Humboldt county, desire very much to have the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association hold a spring meeting at that place next year and have signified their willingness to subscribe a very liberal amount toward such a meeting. A very cheap rate for transporting horses has been secured and as Eureka is one of the most thriving towns on the Coast, a very successful meeting could be held there. There is no doubt but the P. C. T. H. B. A. could secure the attendance of more than a hundred horses from this part of the country and among them would be the very best horses in training in California.

C. A. Durfee has purchased from James W. Rea a colt by McKinney out of a mare by Director, second dam by Nutwood, third dam by Ethan Allen Jr., fourth dam by Williamson's Belmont. Mr. Rea had named this colt Charley Durfee, and when Mr. D. was paying the money he informed Mr. Rea that he intended changing the name. The San Jose politician held that the name was a good one and should not be changed, but the owner of McKinney insisted he could select a better one and immediately upon receiving possession altered the cognomen to Jim Rea. "With that name," says Durfee, "I don't see how they will ever beat him."

The McKinney gelding, You Bet, who reduced his record to 2:11½ on the half-mile track at St. Joseph, Mo., last month, seems to be right good just now, in fact, has shown good winning form for some weeks past. Driven by his owner, C. M. Sumner, the lead mine man of Galena, Kan., You Bet won over the half mile track at Chanute, Kan., recently in 2:15½, 2:16, 2:14½. At Iola, Kan., over a very poor half-mile track, he went one heat in 2:16, winning easily. At Carthage, Mo., the following week, he won in 2:17½, 2:16, 2:14. His victory at St. Joseph, when he won a five heat race, reduced his record to 2:11½ and paced all his heats inside of 2:15, was his fourth win in as many weeks and shows that he is a mighty good horse this year.

A laughable occurrence was witnessed during the recent races at Indianapolis. Sousa's band, led by the famous John Philip himself, gave a concert in front of the grandstand. As the horses scored down the first heat of the 2:25 pace, the band had started on one of its choicest selections. After they got away there was a noticeable discord in the music. Lo and behold, each artist had one eye on his notes and the other on the horses, and Sousa, unmindful of his leadership, waved his baton mechanically as the bunch clattered down the homestretch. The burst of uproarious applause received by the great musician was a heartfelt tribute to his sporting blood. He acknowledged afterward that it was the first time he had ever seen a harness race, and the thrilling sight was too much for him.

"Columbus," the entertaining editor of Western Department in Western Horseman writes as follows of M. E. McHenry's early days in the sulky: "The writer can remember McHenry when he was only a stripping of a boy. He was driving for Porter, of Davenport, Ia., at the time. 'Twas during those years that the "boys" told the following story on McHenry. Porter had entered the bay mare, Lucy, by Felter's Hambletonian, at a county fair in Eastern Iowa, and McHenry unloaded the mare and reached the track only a few moments prior to the calling of his race. When Lucy and her driver appeared upon the track the starting judge was announcing positions, and McHenry had no time to jog his mare, but at once began scoring for the word, which was soon received, and, as usual, Lucy sailed away in the lead. After going something near a quarter, McHenry came to a place in the road where began looking for a sign heard. It was one of those old-fashioned figure 8 tracks, and the Davenport outfit had never run up against such a proposition before. Discovering a man standing near the loop, McHenry pulled up and inquired the way. Having obtained the required information, and discovering that the rest of the gang was nearly upon him, he set sail and won the heat, and afterwards the race. Down through the Grand Circuit McHenry would hardly dare to take such chances; but life in the West was different, at least twenty years ago."

HIDALGO'S GOSSIP.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

A Visit to Cobham.

"Ten-twenty sharp from Waterloo station and change cars at Ampton." The speaker was a tall man already past 50, with a singularly scholar-like air about him—William Allison, Esq., the favorite English writer on breeding and manager of the Cobham Stud as well as of the International Horse Agency through which so many successful stallions and brood mares have been secured for American paddocks. Seldom has it been my lot to meet a more graceful or magnetic gentleman.

The Cobham Stud was a company organized after the death of Mr. William Blenheim to take over the most of the horses belonging to the Middle Park Stud which made such fame for the decedent. Owing to some bad financial management the Cobham concern became insolvent and finally passed into the hands of Mr. Allison, and the genial "North Yorkshireman" soon placed it on a paying basis which I trust may long continue.

There are eight stallions now located at the farm, which is situated on the river Mole in one of the most beautiful portions of Surrey, nearly forty miles from London. The day was dark and lowering, but the ride was made in an hour, where we found a village cart drawn by a stout cob awaiting to take us to the farm nearly two miles away. The pleasant-faced "North Yorkshireman" met us at the door with his bonny wife and daughter by his side. After a glass of wine to keep out the cold we started for the stables, and the first of the sires that greeted our eye was that magnificent old brown horse, Trenton, now past 20. The old hero, who has the prettiest imaginable way of carrying his head, would readily pass for 14 and has his hook filled for the next two years. Nothing could be more beautiful than the kindly glance of his handsome brown eyes, and his back is swayed but little with his two-score years.

Next to him stood the "traveling," conquering "terror" of Australia in the eighties—the big and beautiful Abercorn, a red chestnut with mane and tail a still darker red than the rest of his coat. He won twenty-one races in all, only two of which were handicaps and in both of them he carried top-weight, 135 pounds. He is now seventeen, but owing to good care, he does not show it. His good temper also has much to do with this. His fee is 50 guineas and his hook is full for next year. I regard him as the truest made and most perfect big horse that it has ever been my good fortune to see.

Next came Aurum the best three year old of his day at the antipodes, and I never before saw such a real prize fighter on four legs. He is now eight years old and built on lines very much like those of Luke Blackburn, a heavy body set on short legs. His sire was Trenton and his dam, Aura, was own sister to the Admiral, thus giving him two crosses of the great Fisherman. Aura also produced Auraria, the Melbourne Cup winner of 1895, at odds of 30 to 1. Not only this, but she won the Victoria Oaks and dead-beated Wallace, a Derby Winner, for the Fisher Plate at two and one-half miles all in the same week. Aurum is becoming already a great favorite with the select English breeders.

Now, here's a fellow you may like or may not, but I sent him out to the Colonies at 800 guineas and bought him back at 3400, so you can judge if I have a liking for him or not," said Mr. Allison. The good-natured groom opened the door and here stood a dark brown horse—Bill of Portland, by the unbeaten St. Simon. I think him the finest looking Blacklock horse I ever saw. He was just low enough in flesh to show his magnificent conformation and has a racy cut about him that captures you at the very first glance. Of course, Florizel has furnished the first and second horses in a St. Leger, which has been true of none other since Stockwell, but I shall be surprised to find him as shapely a horse as Bill of Portland, who was the only horse in Australia to head the list at the close of his third season. He was very gentle, though no more so than any of the rest of the Cobham sires; and I feasted my eyes on him as he stood in his box and sniffed the murky autumn air with his great flaring nostrils.

Sir Tristram, a five year old bay with a very intelligent face and superb propelling power, occupied the next box. His breeding is exceptionally good, being by Bend Or out of Angola by Macheath, from Angelica (dam of Orme and sister to St. Simon) by Galopin. If there is any better bred horse than he, I don't know where to look for him. I have already written to one of your prominent breeders, advising him to purchase this splendid young horse, even though he is affected in his wind. Prince Charlie was a roarer but if he were alive his book would be full at $1000.

Merman came next, the greatest foreign bred horse that ever tramped the English turf except Gladiateur. He won the Lewis Handicap and Cesarewitch in his first season in England, the Jockey Club Cup in the second, the Goodwood Cup and Goodwood Stakes on consecutive days in his third and the Ascot Gold Cup in the fourth. He is a very dark chestnut with a narrow blaze and is rapidly thickening out into a superb looking horse. Perhaps his greatest performance was his second to Fourise in the Prix Dearville in France, in which he carried 145 pounds to Fourise's 123. He made a very good season at 100 guineas this year, having retired from the turf a perfectly sound horse.

The last horse shown was Balio, now in his twenty-third year and the last surviving son of the great Blair Athol, who died at this place. His dam was also the dam of that consistent performer and most worthy sire, Doncaster. For bone and substance I can hardly recall his equal. He has a blaze face and four legs white to the knees and hocks, thus resembling his sire more than any other horse he ever got. After an hour's inspection of broodmares and weanlings, the party returned to the old house for luncheon. And what a house it was, built in 1653, just two hundred years before I landed in San Diego, a smooth-faced boy and now I am nearly 68 years old. Heavy oaken beams are overhead and the fireplaces are the work of men long since gathered into God's Acre. Mr. Allison's sister was also of the party and the charm of our reception was the total absence of ceremony with which the wanderers were received. Few people have the same happy knack of making pilgrims feel at home and divesting exile of every pang.

The rain came plashing down with incessant drip but it was all bright and warm within the old cottage. The ladies sat in the drawing room and had a conversation over subjects that most interested them while Mr. Allison and I talked over mutual friends like Bruce Lowe, W. R. Wilson, and Matt O'Shanassy, three sterling men all gone over to the majority. At last train time arrived and 'mid the hardest downpour of the day, Mr. Allison escorted us to a close carriage drawn by a great brown horse who looked as if he could draw a pullman car. As we came away my wife looked back at the old house and quietly said: "It's hearts that make homes, after all." And so we journeyed on to the station and thence to the city with our minds filled with sweet recollections of a day that will grow fairer and brighter as we shall view it through the mist of the fast-receding years. And of all "the pictures that hang on Memories' wall" there will be none sweeter than that of the rainy day at Cobham.

"Fare not from my vision, sweet home of contentment
Where childhood found mirth and the aged repose;
Where our hearts were as light as the breath of the zephyr,
Our thoughts ever pure as the dew of the rose."

Starting Without a Recall Flag.

Since the recall flag was abolished at the New York tracks a few weeks ago there has been much discussion in the Gotham papers as to whether or not it is an improvement over the old system. The New York Telegraph of October 4th contained the following:

Each day adds fresh converts to the new style of starting, and at the present rate it will not take long to win over the most stubborn of its antagonists. Much of the improvement noted in the last two or three days can be traced directly to the jockeys. Not that they are any more inclined to take an even break now than before, but the presence of one of the stewards at the post, and the manner in which disobedience has been dealt with, has had the desired effect.

It is not to be wondered at that the public found little with which to find fault yesterday, for the starts were certainly as good, if not better, than any seen this season, and the same good work will soon end all arguments. The fields were sent away in perfect order, and with a despatch, secured at no sacrifice, that landed all home to an early dinner.

Starter Fitzgerald is enthusiastic over the results of the past few days and to use his own words "it is the only way to start horses." The boys are behaving better every day, and the sooner they realize that they must the better it will be for them, for the stewards are determined that they shall not mar the starts by their work. From now on no boy can expect any mercy for misconduct at the post. It will not be fines, but the more effective punishment, suspension.

This method of dealing with the jockeys seems to have had the desired effect, for they do not enjoy, at least many of them do not, being on the ground. Then, too, it puts the owners to a lot of trouble, for good riding talent is at a premium, and while it was an easy matter to pay a boy's fines, the suspensions are a barrier they cannot get over. Thus their orders are not so imperative as formerly. Instead of "Get away in front and I will pay the fines," their instructions probably are "Get off well, but take no chances of getting set down."

All of which makes it very much easier for the starter, better for the horses, and in favor of the best horse winning.

Jackson's Napa Soda untangles the feet!

Results of Scientific Inbreeding.

[W. H. Rowe.]

While the apparently lucky victory of Doricles in the recent Doncaster St. Leger proved a great disappointment to the admirers of Hon. W. C. Whitney's Volodyovski, the net results of the contest from a theoretical basis are singularly balanced by the fact that Doricles is by the same stallion who sired Volodyovski.

In other words, while the "mixup" in the closing stages of the Doncaster struggle deprived a son of Florizel II of a victory which up to the contretemps had appeared well nigh inevitable, the comparative rating of Florizel II on the list of winning stallions is to-day exactly as it would have been had the Whitney candidate achieved the victory. The triumph of Florizel II is therefore all the more unique and complete, and the elder of King Edward's trio of great sons of St. Simon has certainly scored a remarkable success very early in his stud life. To sire a Derby winner and a St. Leger winner in his first season is no ordinary achievement for a stallion, while it is surely worthy of note, not to say genuine emphasis, that Florizel II is also represented by a third three-year-old, Mackintosh, who has this year scored four straight victories.

Doricles, who scored for Mr. Leopold de Rothschild his first St. Leger, is out of a daughter of Rosierucian, and we at once come face to face with the very important fact that Volodyovski is also out of a Rosierucian mare. It is possible to promptly go even a step further, however, and make the equally notable statement that Mackintosh's grandam is a daughter of Beadsman, who was the sire of Rosierucian. On these accounts alone the pedigrees of these three sons of Florizel II deserve especial recognition from the student.

Florizel II, it must first be noted, is by St. Simon out of Perdita II, she by Hampton out of Hermione, she by Young Melbourne out of La Belle Helene, she by St. Albans out of Tetterton, she by Voltigeur out of Ellen Middleton by Bay Middleton. St. Simon is by Galopin, son of Vedette, he by Voltigeur, son of Voltaire. Galopin's dam was by Flying Dutchman, son of Bay Middleton out of a daughter of Voltaire. St. Simon's dam was by King Tom (son of Harkaway and Pocahontas) out of a mare whose dam was by Hornsea, he by Velocipede, son of Blacklock, which latter horse also sired Voltaire.

Hampton, sire of Perdita II, was by Lord Clifden, who was by Newminster (son of Touchstone) out of The Slave, she by Melbourne out of Volley, a full sister to Voltigeur. Hampton's dam was by Kettledrum, he by Rataplan, son of Pocahontas. Hampton's grandam, Haricot, was by Lanercost (he by Liverpool, son of Tramp) out of the immortal Queen Mary. Young Melbourne, sire of Perdita II's dam, was by Melbourne, while St. Albans, sire of her grandam, was by Stockwell, brother to Rataplan and half brother to King Tom.

Both Doricles and Volodyovski possess pedigree characteristics which form at least fairly strong grounds for the belief that they were produced by the "colt nick" of returning some of the strains of Florizel II's dam. In the case of Doricles, his grandam is by a son of Melbourne, while Volodyovski's grandam is by Wild Dayrell, whose dam, Ellen Middleton, we have already found to be a direct female ancestress of Florizel II.

These observations must not, however, be construed as overlooking the obvious strength of the "inside nicking" between Perdita II and Rosierucian in the case of both colts. Rosierucian was by Beadsman out of Madame Eglantine, she by Cow out of Diversion. Beadsman was by Weatherbit, son of Sheet Anchor, he by Lottery, son of Tramp. Beadsman's dam, Mendicant, was by Touchstone out of Lady Moore Carew by Tramp. Madame Eglantine was by Cow, son of Bay Middleton, while Diversion was by Defence, son of Whalebone. The Tramp and Touchstone are obviously strong nicks, and in Volodyovski's case they meet with additional support in the inbreeding of Ellen Middleton's own line of the number 7 family.

Doricles, as we have shown, has a return of Melbourne in his grandam, who is Pitteri, by The Prime Minister out of Linley, she by Orlando, who brings another line of Touchstone.

Other successes of Florizel II also show an operation of certain affinities. As I have already said, Mackintosh's grandam is by Beadsman, sire of Rosierucian, and it is also notable that Champagne, another three year-old stake winner by Florizel II, has for his grandam a mare by Chevron, son of Rosierucian.

Mackintosh's dam, Cullercoats, is by Darby, he by Jock of Oran (son of Blair Athol) out of Elizabeth, she by Statesman, son of Young Melbourne. Darby thus returns Perdita's Pocahontas, Melbourne, Queen Mary and Touchstone, while the grandam of Cullercoats is by Stockwell out of Haricot, who was herself the grandam of Hampton, who sired Perdita II.

Champagne's dam, Honey Cup, is by Albert Victor, who was by Marsyas (son of Orlando) out of Princess of Wales, she by Stockwell out of The Bloomer by Melbourne. Honey Cup's grandam was by Young Melbourne out of a mare by Newminster, son of Touchstone, while Chevron, who sired Honey Cup's dam, was by Beadsman out of a Stockwell mare.

Floriform, who won the Middle Park Plate as a juvenile, is by Florizel II out of the Maid of Athol, she by The Miser, whose leading lines are Touchstone, Stockwell and Voltigeur. The Miser is a great grandson of Ellen Middleton. Maid of Athol's dam is by Blair Athol, and her grandam is out of a daughter of Touchstone. Mackintosh's female line is number 10, Champagne's is number 17 and Floriform's is XIV.

The composite pedigrees show the benefits of scientific inbreeding to a marked degree, and the three-year-old sons of Florizel II must therefore be regarded as a group whose pedigrees should profoundly impress upon breeders the benefit of such a policy.

San Francisco, Saturday, October 12, 1901.

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL STAKE has been inaugurated by the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association. The second Breeders Futurity with a guaranteed value of $6000 closed October 1st with forty-four more nominators than made entries to the first stake. The stake for mares bred in 1900 closed last year with 155 nominators; the one for mares bred in 1901 closed on the 1st instant with 199 nominators, an increase of over thirty per cent. This is a splendid showing. While the large stock farms have not made as many nominations as heretofore, Palo Alto dropping out entirely, the number of mares named in the stake are within six of last year's number. The stake of 1901 makes a vastly better showing than the first one opened and proves an increase in the breeding interest on this Coast, as well as attesting the popularity of the association guaranteeing the stake. The total number of mares bred this year and named in the stake is 299. These mares were bred to 69 different stallions. Of these McKinney 2:11½ is most largely represented, 36 of the matrons bred to him having been nominated. Nutwood Wilkes 2:16½ comes next with 20, Zomhro 2:11 follows with 24, Zolock 2:10½ is next with 18, Neernut 2:12½ a close fifth with 17, and Boodle Jr. sixth with 11. No other stallion has as many as ten. Monterey 2:09½ is represented by 8 of the mares bred to him this year, Chas. Derby 2:20 and Washington McKinney 7 each, while Stam B. 2:11½, Diablo 2:09½, Nushagak, Bayswater Wilkes 2:25½, Diawood 2:11 and Bonnie Direct 2:05½ follow with 6 each. Three stallions, Meridian 2:12½, Scott McKinney and Strathway 2:19, are represented by 5 mares, Wilkes Direct 2:22½, Silver Bow 2:16, Rex Gifford 2:14, Neil W., and Demonio, brother to Diablo, have 4 each, Welcome 2:10½, Exioneer, Waldstein 2:22½, Athadon 2:28 and Conifer have 3, fourteen stallions are represented by two each, and twenty-five by but one. Of the 299 mares nominated McKinney is the sire of 11, Altamont of 8, Guy Wilkes of 6, Anteeo, Dexter Prince, Director, Steinway and Silver Bow each of 5, Eugeneer, Nutwood Wilkes and Silkwood each of 4, and Electioneer, Alex Button, Conifer, Athadon, Dawn, Hambletonian Wilkes, Nutwood, Sidney, Tempest, Waldstein and Whippleton each have three daughters nominated. It is very evident to the person who looks over the complete list of nominations published in this issue that the very best blood lines in America are represented in this stake and it is not unreasonable to predict that out of the produce of the mares named will come a number of future 2:10 performers and big winners on the Grand Circuit. These races that result from the entry lists of the stakes of 1900 and 1901 will be looked forward to with pleasure by every person on the Pacific Coast who is interested in the breeding and development of the American trotter.

THE PACERS have furnished the best race that has thus far been decided at the Los Angeles meeting, so far as a close contest goes. On Thursday there was a seven heat affair between four horses. The race went to Midnight, son of Nutford and a mare by Grandee. The Stockton horse, Toppy, took the first two heats, reducing his record to 2:11½ in the initial heat of the race. Our Boy's Sister then took a couple, 2:15 being her fastest, but was unfortunately distanced in the sixth heat. Midnight had less speed than either Toppy or Our Boy's Sister, and after four heats had been decided was the least tired one of the bunch and won the next three almost as he pleased, his time being 2:20, 2:20 and 2:22. The Los Angeles pacer, Cour de Lion, of unknown breeding, was a close second in the first two heats but caught the flag in the third, much to the disappointment of his admirers, who thought he would win. It was easily the most exciting race of the meeting thus far and probably the most money was played on it.

STOCKTON'S FAIR and race meeting will open next Tuesday. The steamer and car routes leading to the metropolis of the San Joaquin valley have been carrying horses and horsemen for the past week. It is estimated that fifty trotters and pacers from this city alone have been shipped to Stockton, and, while owing to the fact that the entries were necessarily kept open for the races until the opening of the meeting and it is therefore impossible to publish the racing program in this issue of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, enough is known of the class of horses sent there to predict that as good racing as has been seen in California this year will be held. Stockton at this season of the year is one of the most delightful cities in California in which to spend a week. The rains of last month thoroughly laid the dust in the big valley, cleaned up the atmosphere and rendered the air delightful. The city of Stockton is one of the busiest and most prosperous cities of this Coast, and the young gentlemen who manage the Stockton Driving Club are active and energetic in everything that will tend to make the meeting successful as well as pleasant for the horse owners and all taking part in any way in the racing program. There is no place where purses are more promptly paid than at the Stockton annual fair. The officers of the club invite all horsemen in California to be at the track on Monday with their strings and guarantee that races will be provided for both fast and slower classes of trotters and pacers with free entrance.

ACRUSADE should be inaugurated by the breeders of live stock in California against hookmaking and its attendant evils at the district fairs. For some unexplainable reason the country fair directors have seemingly been hypnotized by the hookmaking fraternity in the past few years and permitted the plan of making the letting privilege the largest source of revenue to prevail in California. This is all wrong. Whenever the main revenue of any business or sport depends upon a certain class, it may be expected that that class will be the principal one catered to. The district fairs were instituted for the purpose of encouraging all the legitimate industries of the State. One of the principal of these is the breeding of live stock—horses, cattle, sheep and swine. It is breeders of these animals that have been pushed aside and the place of prominence given to those who race horses instead of those who breed them. This should be changed and it can be done if the breeders will assert their rights. It would not be too much to ask the Legislature to refuse all appropriations to associations permitting hookmaking at their fairs. If the California State and district fairs are to be what they were intended, the gambling feature will have to be placed in a less conspicuous position. The taxpayers should say to the gamblers in the slang of the day, which they will easily understand: "Go way back and sit down."

THE TRANSYLVANIA went to Ed Geers' great race horse Onward Silver after one of the hottest contests in the history of the race. Nine trotters scored for the word, the others being Susie J., Chain Shot, Dollie Bidwell, Neva Simmons, Dolly Dillon, Chestnut King, All Right and J. T and their places in the final summary were in that order. Chain Shot won the first and second heats, his best time being 2:11; Susie J. took the third in 2:10½, Onward Silver got the fourth in 2:10½ and also took the fifth. Susie J. managed to get her nose in front in the sixth heat, but Onward Silver out gamed them all in the seventh and captured first money. The California mare Dolly Dillon 2:07 was outside the money. It is a fair conclusion that she was either in poor condition or acted badly, as the time would not have stopped her had she been right, and there is no gamer trotter in America than she.

PLEASANTON will give a two day's race meeting on November 1st and 2d. This announcement of itself is enough to draw hundreds to the "horse centre" on that day and when the advertisement in this issue is read by the horsemen there will be plenty of entries assured to the purses offered. One of the leading features of the meeting will be an exhibition of draft horses and roadsters. Prizes and ribbons are to be given and as Alameda and the adjoining counties are noted for the many highbred and handsome horses produced within their confines it is certain that this exhibit will be worth going a long way to see. The Pleasanton people have the matter in charge and they never yet did anything by halves. It will be a success, in every particular.

HAROLD H. is clearly entitled to the pacing championship of Canada. In his campaign, which began at Windsor in July, and included the Grand Circuit, he has won seven races, two second moneys, and been once unplaced in ten starts. His winnings for the season aggregate $6250 and he has won thirty heats in time from 2:04 to 2:11½. Last year, his first on the turf, he won nine races, three second moneys and was once unplaced, so that in his entire career he stands credited with sixteen victories, five second moneys and twice unplaced, out of a total of twenty-three starts. He is of rather obscure breeding being by Roadmaster out of Little Bell by Brown Dick, grandam by Rooker.

CAPTOR, the horse that Charles Marvin brought out of the green class this year and gave him a record of 2:10, gives Beautiful Bells another son that has sired 2:10 speed. He is by Electric Bell, one of the youngest of the Electioneer-Beautiful Bells tribe, out of Eula Lee by General George H. Thomas, and is six years old. Beautiful Bells has six other sons that are sires of speed: Chimes, the sire of seven, the dams of two and grandsire of one in 2:10; St. Bel, the sire of Lynne Bel 2:10½ and the dam of Cornelia Belle 2:10; Bell Boy, the grandsire of one in 2:10; Belsire, the sire of Furl (2) 2:15½, and Adhell, at eight years, the sire of Rowellan (3) 2:15½.

Why Whitney Withdrew From England.

Mr. W. C. Whitney last week addressed the following letter to the New York Sun, explaining his withdrawal from the English turf:

I think it necessary to ask sufficient space to state, in my own way, my reasons for withdrawing from racing abroad. The publication of the fact was made without my knowledge and during my absence from town at October Mountain. It was premature and has given rise to incorrect inferences and conjectures.

The dominating reason for withdrawing my stable from England is the success of the efforts of late years to raise the standard of racing in this country. Certain gentlemen have devoted most of their time to this work and I considered it my duty, as one who derives great satisfaction from horses, to second their efforts in every way. It was for this reason that I co-operated with them to revive the Saratoga association and abandoned a contemplated trip abroad this summer.

The sending of our best horses abroad depreciates the quality of the sport at home and diverts needed revenues which should be contributed to enrich our own stakes and encourage breeding here. I make an exception in my own mind of the case in which one has an eligible horse likely to win one of the classic races like the Derby, the Oaks or the Leger. Winning one of these races reflects credit on our breeding and is properly a matter of pride to Americans. It is not at all unlikely that I may be found trying for one of these again.

The intimation has been made that my reason for withdrawing from racing abroad was dissatisfaction with the treatment my horses received. My main purpose in making this statement is to give an unqualified denial to that intimation. Nothing could be further from the truth. I have received nothing but courtesy and fair treatment abroad.

We Americans have invaded England with new methods of training and riding and with American bred horses have won a fair share of stakes. It would have been perfectly natural if these successes had given rise to some jealousy in sporting circles, but I have never had evidence of the existence of such a feeling. Under these circumstances, I can think of nothing more unsportsmanlike than the criticisms those suggestions impute to me, of conditions and discretions to which all competitors are alike subject, be they native or foreign.

I think I can make my sentiment on this point clear, by stating that some months ago I announced my intention, as a mark of appreciation of the courtesy which I, a single American, have received and also as an expression of my esteem for Lord William Beresford, to ask the stewards of the Jockey Club to place with some benevolent racing fund the £6000 I won as a stake incident to the Derby. Lord William Beresford (my partner in the Health House Training Establishment), took Volodyovski as a yearling and developed and raced him to a two year old. Death alone deprived him of the distinction of winning the Derby, so highly valued by every true sportsman and racing man in England. Some months ago I communicated this intention to Lord Marcus Beresford and the delay in executing it has been caused only by uncertainty as to the most effective method of associating Lord William Beresford's name with the fund.

Yours truly, W. C. WHITNEY.

There are seven entries for the purse offered by the Stockton Driving Club for horses owned by members of the Golden Gate Park Driving Club of this city, the race to be held at the Stockton club's meeting next week. The entrance fee to this race is $10, to which the Stockton club will add $250, making a purse of $320 to race for. The entries are C. E. Parks' Imp, Harry F. Patrick's Lena Holly, James O'Kane's Al Sandy, Dan Lieglinger's Sable Le Grand, W. M. Van Keuren's Mattie B., Albert Joseph's Durfee Mac and H. H. Dunlap's I Direct. This ought to furnish a red hot contest.

Archie Stevenson, who has been identified with running horses on this Coast for many years, died at Santa Rosa, October 5th. He had an affection of the heart and kidneys and during the races at Santa Rosa in August last was taken sick and had to remain there. He fell in an unconscious condition on the street at Santa Rosa last Saturday and was taken to the county hospital, where he died the same evening without regaining consciousness.

Strike!—if they don't give you Jackson's Napa Soda when you ask for it.

Los Angeles Meeting.

While it cannot be claimed that the meeting which closes today in Los Angeles has been a great success, it has been very far from a failure and there will in all probability be a balance on the right side of the ledger when the accounts are all made up. From a harness horse standpoint the meeting has not furnished anything particularly sensational thus far, although Sir Albert S. paced three heats last Saturday in 2:11½, 2:09 and 2:12 completing a triumphal tour of the circuit without losing a race or a heat. Of the eight harness races which have been decided since our last report and up to Wednesday last, six were won in straight heats. The 2:15 class trot was won by Thomas R. on Saturday after Alta Vela had taken a heat, and on the day previous a race for Los Angeles gentlemen drivers took four heats to decide.

The running races have been very well contested and there has been considerable betting on the results. The Los Angeles association has made every endeavor to make it pleasant for visiting horsemen, President Wright and Secretary Teed being especially active and attentive. The summaries of the events from October 3d to 9th inclusive are as follows:

Foot-Sore Horses.

My attention was drawn to the Lackey method of shoeing horses some ten years ago by seeing old sore trotters and others with apparently incurable lameness get well and make useful animals. I was very skeptical at first, but when I saw the results accomplished I was induced to try it on my own horses with most gratifying results, after having tried almost all the other approved methods of shoeing, such as bars, tips, rubber pads, etc. The system is simply this: A piece of soleleather reinforced at the heels and riveted firmly and flatly onto the shoe to prevent sagging or bulging; this you will see gives a firm but somewhat elastic support to the sole of the foot. The foot is prepared in the usual way, only care is taken to remove the prominent parts of the bars and point of frog, and the sole is cupped slightly at the toe. The fitted shoe is then placed in position and one of the toe nails driven. This insures it against slipping and keeps it in perfect position. The shoe is then pried off at the heel and the sole anointed with a coating of an oily resin soap. A piece of wet sponge is then laid over the frog and bars well back, so as not to cause undue pressure at the point of the frog. The shoe is then brought back in place and the fastening completed. On examination of the sole you will find firm pressure at the heels and the rest will be soft and elastic over the center of the foot. Horses shod constantly in this manner retain the softness and toughness of the horn of the foot, which may be pared without difficulty, and the shavings will be tough and elastic. The heels widen and become full and the animal moves with a freedom and a conscious indifference to the kind of road he is likely to encounter, which it is a pleasure to contemplate.—From paper by Dr. Charles Williams before Pennsylvania Veterinary Medical Association.

Answers to Correspondents.

W. H., Walla Walla—The age of the colt Temperance by Take Notice out of Early Rose is four years, he having been foaled in 1897.

H. T., Sacramento—Location and Alta Vela are one and the same horse. He is by Electioneer out of Lorita 2:18½ by Piedmont. He was bred at the Palo Alto Stock Farm, and was first called Location, but when registered was given the name he now has, Alta Vela, and under it got his record of 2:15.

It is usually fancied that pacers go very light shod, and that mere tips suffice to balance them. Take the fast filly Onoto 2:10½, fastest of the four year olds of the season. Her former trainer told me recently that he feared to break her down by adding sufficient weight to render her really at her best, and sent her home for that reason, believing that perhaps in her five year old form she might pace in fairly light shoes, writes Percy in the New York Telegraph. The day Mr. Curry marked her at Brighton Beach Onoto wore about twenty-six ounces on each forefoot. Ordinarily that much weight would make the average pacer trot, but it was necessary to get Onoto to the 2:10 line. At Providence, timed separately, Onoto paced in 2:06½ with all that weight. It was a case where either the hoppers or the weight had to be introduced, and Mr. Curry chose the weight.

FAIR GROUNDS, SALEM, Or., Oct. 5, 1901.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—A match race for the gate receipts and a side bet was decided to-day over this track. The starters were Stamboul Bell, trotter, by Stamboul, and Al Me, pacer, by Memo. The race was best two in three heats. Mr. J. Connor, owner of Stamboul Bell drove her, and W. O. Trioe was up behind Al Me. In the first heat Al Me stepped the first quarter in 32½, reached the half in 1:05½, made a bad break at the five-eighth pole and won the heat in 2:20½. In the second heat Stamboul Bell took the lead, trotted to the quarter in 35½, got to the half in 1:10½ and finished the mile in 2:18, reducing her record three seconds. Mr. Connor, her driver, is an amateur and now holds the amateur record of the northwest. The third heat was won by Al Me in 2:15½, Stamboul Bell making a bad break at the first eighth pole, which was reached in 15½ seconds, a clip that was a little too fast for her. The day was perfect, there was not a breath of wind and the track was very fast. The judges and timers were I. C. Mosher, J. W. Shanon, R. H. Huston and Geo. T. Beckers. Stamboul Bell and Al Me were both bred to Zombro this season.

HOOF BEATS.

Entry blanks for the Pleasanton meeting can be had at this office.

James Dwain, the well known harness horse trainer of Salinas, is at Tasajara Springs for the benefit of his health, which has not been good since his return from the State Fair.

Albert Pratt, of Aurora, Oregon, has sold his mare Scapoose 2:16½ to I. C. Mosher for $1000. The mare has been bred to Zombro and Mr. Mosher will take her to Los Angeles with him. He says he has been trying all his life to raise a 2:10 performer, and thinks he is on the right road now. Scapoose is by Roy Wilkes.

Fred W. Perkins, of Oakland, who is a lover of a good driving horse and has owned and bred a few, has moved to Sacramento, where he now manages the hardware department of the American Cash Store. In a letter to this paper directing the change in his address, he states that he sees more good driving horses on Sacramento's streets than in any place he has ever been.

Peter Sterling is the greatest three year old of the year. He won the sixteen thousand dollar Kentucky Futurity last Tuesday at Lexington in straight heats in the remarkable time of 2:13, 2:11½ and 2:14. Walnut Hall, winner of last year's two year old division was second, Hawthorne was third and Mary P. Leyburn the filly that Thos. W. Lawson purchased a short time ago for a big price expecting to win this stake with her, was fourth. There were seven starters. Walnut Hall and Hawthorne compelled Peter Sterling to do his best and the three were lapped in each heat nearly all the way round. Peter Sterling is a bay gelding by Baronmore 2:14. Baronmore is by Baron Wilkes out of May Wagner by Strathmore, grandam Mary S. by Alcantara, great grandam Lady Carr 2:28 (dam of four including the producing sires Ambassador and Alcantara) by American Clay 34, next dam Kate by Sir Wallace. The dam of Peter Sterling is the great broodmare Medio (dam of the two trotters Black Robert 2:13½ and Marble 2:14) by Cooper Medium, a son of Happy Medium. Medio's dam is Topsey by Mambrino King. It will be seen that Peter Sterling comes honestly by his speed and his right to trot is inherited from "the royal families," as Sam Gamble would say.

Los Angeles Bench Show.

The initial bench show of the Sixth District Agricultural Association held at Los Angeles last week must go on record as the most successful show ever held in this city. The entries numbered 211. The largest classes being Fox Terriers 50, Cocker Spaniels 25, St. Bernards 24, Collies 20, Great Danes 17, Bull Terriers 15, and Greyhounds 15. The quality of the dogs show a great improvement over the old shows held here. The show proved a drawing card and will undoubtedly become a fixture of the annual fair.

The bench show committee consisted of Martin C. Marsh, C. E. DeCamp and G. B. Barham, but the credit for the success of the show is due to Freeman G. Teed, the Secretary, D. J. Sinclair, the superintendent, and J. L. Eigholz, the ring steward. John A. Edmonds, D. V. S., officiated as veterinary. The judges were C. A. Sumner of Los Angeles, Fox Terriers, S. Tyler of Pasadena Greyhounds, A. Russell Crowell of Los Angeles, Setters, Pointers and Spaniels, L. A. Klein of San Francisco all other classes.

The Los Angeles merchants donated sixteen elegant silver cups and many medals. Cash prizes of $5 and $3 were given in most classes. All of the prize money and most of the specials were paid on Friday night of last week.

The show was held in a canvas roofed building near the entrance to the fair grounds and was not open evenings. The attendance was very large, at times the crowds being far too large for comfort.

Among the well known fanciers that attended the show from the North were: Mr. and Mrs. Phil C. Meyer, Mr. John L. Cunningham, Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Albee, Miss F. J. Hatje, G. T. Blight, John Bradshaw and Cbas Dresser.

The judging commenced at 2 P. M. Wednesday with Mr. Klein's classes, Mr. Crowell following on Thursday morning, Mr. Tyler at noon and Mr. Sumner in the afternoon. The judging was out in the open under the trees, the light might have been better but it was certainly very pleasant. In addition to the dogs mentioned in the following comments Mr. Klein had on exhibition, his well known winners, The Dachshund Venlo Forever and the Bulldogs Champion Ivel Rustic and Beaumaris Fortune. J. B. Martin's Champion Aldon Swagger, looking fine as a fiddle, was one of the attractions on the Fox Terrier benches. He was entered for exhibition only.

MASTIFFS—In novice bitches, Smut, the only entry, was given a blue ribbon. In comparison with Eastern winners she is a poor one, but as there are none on the coast that can be called really first class, the judge was right in not withholding prizes in this class. Smut is too long in muzzle, throaty and light in bone. California Queen, the winner in limit, open and winners classes, has better bone and better legs and feet and won rightly enough, but is a long way from being up to the standard.

ST. BERNARDS—The entries in these classes, both rough and smooth, were far and away the best in quality ever shown in Southern California. They were well judged and with one exception only I should have placed them exactly as Mr. Klein did. Leo Prince, the winner in rough coated puppies, is small, lacks collar and has a poor head. Golden Lion Jr., the winner in novice dogs (rough coat), has a good massive head, perhaps a little too much domed, but full of character and expression. He has excellent bone and feet, stands well in front and is of good size. He was shown thin in flesh and slack in loin and might be better behind. Caesar W., second, shows good character, fair head and muzzle and good bone. Donald, third, has a black face, lacking blaze, good skull and fair muzzle, but loses to Caesar in expression and markings and is too straight in stifles. Nero S. reserve, has the second best head in the class, a grand skull of the Swiss type, very broad muzzle, but lacking in depth below the eye. He is only half marked and mostly white in color. He has excellent bone, but is bent too much in second thighs and is a trifle weak behind. Shown in good condition and well handled he would have been a good third. Barrymond, v h c, is a good small one, too too long in muzzle and lacks in depth below the eye, has good skull, good bone and is well proportioned.

When Le King met Omar Khayyam in limit dogs, the troubles of the judge began. Mr. Klein placed Le King first and in doing so followed his type and was consistent; that I do not quite agree with him is merely a question of personal judgment. Omar was shown in good condition of coat, but too fat. He is without question the soundest and best St. Bernard that I have seen in California, in shoulder, loin, chest, spring of ribs, legs, bone and feet. He is rather short coupled, his skull is the largest and best of the two. His muzzle is short and the widest of the two, but lacks in depth below the eye. He is well marked and has light shadings, eyes too open and expression rather sour. His head favors the Swiss type—rather blocky. His general massiveness gives the impression that his head is not in proportion to his body, but the measurements will not bear out that statement. His coat and color are much the best of the two. Le King is more typical in head, character, eyes and expression. Has good depth below the eye, but is not as massive or well proportioned in skull as Omar. He is equal in bone, but not as good in hind quarters, loin, ribs, chest or coat. Le King was shown thin. Shown in equal condition I think Le King should win. As a dog to breed to I prefer Le King. As they stood in the ring on Wednesday I consider Omar the better dog. The same pair were alone in open dogs, Eboracum absent.

In novice bitches, Palace Queen, the winner, was an easy first. She is half marked and mostly white, too long in muzzle and lacks the stop, but is much above the ordinary. A very even bitch, well proportioned and good in body, bone and general character. Queen Jennie, second, lacks shadings and character. Lady Clara is only fair; she lacks massiveness and is sadly lacking in stop. In limit bitches, Princess Nairod was alone. She lacks blaze, eyes too large, expression poor, fair bone, good skull and good in body. In open bitches, Alta Rachael had an easy win over Princess Nairod. She is a hit short from eye to ear, ears much too large, but her markings are good, expression excellent, nice shadings, good bone, well proportioned and, in short, the best bitch I have seen on the Coast.

In winners classes rough coat dogs, Le King took first and Golden Lion Jr. reserve. In hitches, Alta Rachael first, Palace Queen reserve. The latter decision was unquestionably correct.

In smooth coats, the winner, and only entry in limit dogs, Duke Russell, is a good one, nicely marked and shaded, good skull and fair muzzle, good coat and color, splendid body and limbs and shown in superb condition. In limit bitches, Miss Barry was an easy first; she is a very well proportioned bitch, excellent in body and bone. She has a good skull and nice depth of muzzle. She lacks a little in stop, and shadings would add greatly to her expression. Lady Monona, second, is small in head, light in muzzle and lacking in stop, but good in body and bone. Miss Barry was alone in open bitches and the winner in winners bitches.

Barrymond won the special for best under two years. Golden Lion Jr. best in novice and Le King best in open. Duke Russell, best of any breed owned by a lady, south of Tebachiapi.

GREAT DANES—In dog pups, Ruy Blas was alone. He has good quality and character, good length of neck and a very fair head. In novice dogs, Ruy Blas was again the winner. St. Leonard, second, was shown in poor condition. His ears are wretchedly cut; he has good length of head but is sadly lacking in character and quality. In limit dogs, Blue Beard, first, is a showy dog with fine front and good head, but light in eye, rather wheel-backed and carries a curled tail. He has good shoulders and neck. Ribaud II, second, is a taller dog than the winner, with good length of head and neck, but lacking in character, shallow in back ribs, too straight in stifles and light in eye. Don Juan, third, has the best head in the show, best bone and straight front. A longer neck would improve his character, but he shows quality. A wide blaze adds to his beauty but detracts from his value as a show dog. In open dogs, Blue Beard was again first, with Don Juan second and Beau Brummel II third. The latter is too squatty, too short, throaty and carries a coarse tail.

In bitch pups, Carlotta, first, won by a narrow margin. She is a beautiful harlequin, shown in superb condition. She shows quality in every line, and if she gets size with age will equal the record of her dam (Juanita). She is best in bone and better behind than Chivie, second. The latter is another promising one, of good head and type, but too straight in stifles. She was beaten by a narrow margin. In limit bitches, Maud S. won. She also is light eyed, has very good skull and muzzle, straight front and better behind than Marjel, second, who has one lop ear, but a better length of head than the winner. In open bitches, Maud S. won again. Juanita, second, begins to show age and should be retired. She holds her years very well, but begins to crouch and show apparent weakness in stifles. In winners classes, Blue Beard won, with Ruy Blas reserve in dogs. Maud S. first in hitches, with Champion Juanita reserve. Maud S. also won the special for best Great Dane.

DEERHOUNDS—Only one entry, a fair, soft-coated one.

GREYHOUNDS—Fifteen entries, and among them some very good ones. We could not follow the judging in these classes, and it is unfair to both the judge and the dogs to comment freely on dogs examined on the bench only. From what I saw in the ring I greatly preferred Max Rosebud for first in limit hitches and Dingwall Die in open bitches.

AMERICAN FOXHOUNDS—Belle II was alone in limit and open, and won rightly enough. She is a very fair bound.

POINTERS—Only one entry. Doctor Bob, in limit and open, a very fair one in the light-weight class, well deserving of his honors.

ENGLISH SETTERS—Two bitches only. Dolly Gray (a Valiente-Rowena product) was entered in novice, limit and open, and won quite handsly. She shows excellent character, has nice head and expression, plenty of lung room, good back and loin and good feet and legs, good coat and catchy color. Vic, another Valiente bitch out of Betsy Mark, is quite a good one also, but is not the equal of the winner in chest, spring of ribs, loin or skull.

IRISH SETTERS—Tom Stevens, the winner and only entry in limit and open dogs, was lucky. The bitches, Queen Mac, winner of the limit class, and Gypsy Queen, winner of the open class, are litter sisters, both show good quality, clean-cut heads, good coat and color and good legs and feet. I fancied Queen Mac the better of the two in head, body and loin, and gave her the decision in the winners class and special as the best Irish Setter.

GORDON SETTERS—The novice dog entry, Jock P., is curly coated, sports a topknot and is very snipey. I withheld first and it was lucky to get second. Tipperary, the winner in open dogs, is a very fair Gordon, too light in tan.

FIELD SPANIELS—Shotty first in novice dogs is a big Cooker and not a good one at that. I should have withheld the prize. Zip, first in open dogs is of the true field spaniel type, wavy coated and with the tail that nature gave him, but a very fair field spaniel.

COCKER SPANIELS—(black)—This class as a whole, both black and other colors was without question the best ever shown in the South and as even a lot in type as I ever saw anywhere. In dog puppies Plumeria Romeo won quite easily from Pro Tem, both were absent when I looked for them in making my notes. Windy Jim was alone in novice dogs. Fernside Pasha being absent. Jim is much above the ordinary and a few years ago would have had things his own way. Reduced a few pounds in weight he will win in present company but is dangerously near the limit of weight. In limit dogs Hampton Promise was given the decision over Glenwood Havoc. They both have excellent character, expression and eyes, good fronts, good bone and feet. Promise has the squarest and best muzzle but is slightly dish faced. Havoc loses to him only in muzzle, coat and condition. He is at present devoid of feather. Pine Hill Cuckoo, third would be a winner in ordinary company. He is a bit lighter in muzzle than those placed over him but excellent in head, expression, coat and feather. Plumeria Romeo was reserve and Windy Jim v h c. All of them are excellent in body, bone, legs and feet. In open class Promise and Pine Hill Cuckoo met again but in winners dogs, the judge selected Glenwood Havoc as reserve to Hampton Promise. In novice bitches, Woodstock Minerva though very light in eye and light in bone was very much better than Lady Belle. Lady Babbie was alone in limit bitches. This is another excellent one. Her eyes are trifle light, but she is a good headed bitch with lots of character. In open hitches Undine was another surprise to the judge, she has a nice skull, good eye, expression, coat and feather. Champion Polly Pastime, had to take second place to her. Polly should be retired. She was not in good condition and her lack of teeth spoils her muzzle. Undine took first in winners bitches with Lady Babbie reserve.

In other than black, limit dogs, Hampton Goldie had an easy win over Rojo. Goldie might be a bit straighter in front, but elsewhere there is very little to find fault with. Rojo, second is much too long in muzzle and has had eyes. In open dogs and winners the same two met again. Plumeria Diana the only entry in bitch puppies is undeveloped but promises well. Little Dorrit was alone in novice bitches. She has excellent skull and muzzle, good character and nice coat. Plumeria Fancy, first in limit, open and winners has eyes a little too large and staring, spoiling her expression but otherwise is an exceptionally good bitch. Little Dorrit was reserve in winners bitches. In competition for kennel prize Mrs. Ralston's kennel took the special, with Plumeria Kennels reserve. Best Cocker other than black went to Hampton Goldie.

COLLIES—In dog puppies, Bob, first, has a nice clean cut head, well carried ears and the best coat. Count Ormonde, second, has very good head, but is prick eared. In novice dogs, Bob won again with Rob Roy XI, second. He has a better skull than those placed below him, but Tillicum, third, has a better length of head, better ear carriage and far the best coat. I rather preferred Tillicum for second. Major B., reserve, has wild eyes, too open; far too much brow and is a bit too coarse in skull, coat excellent for this country. In limit dogs, Ormskirk Emerald Jr. out-classed the rest. His grand head and general collie character are too well known to need description. Major B. was second and Tillicum third. In open dogs, Emerald again won, with Major B. second. In bitch puppies, Ormskirk Ada had a walkover. She has a good straight face, nice expression, well carried ears and good coat for this country. In novice bitches, Ada won again. Miss Southport, second, is coarser in head than the winner and not equal in expression and character. Elsie, third, is pinched in muzzle and heavy in ear. Ormskirk Ada and Miss Southport were placed in the same order in both limit and open.

POODLES—One little white Frenchman, said to be a European prize winner, M'sieur, was alone in the class. He is very typical, a little short in coat from being recently clipped.

BULLDOGS—Judge Klein's entries, Champion Ivel Rustic and Beaumaris Fortune, both not for competition and far ahead of anything ever seen here. They are too well known to need description.

BULL TERRIERS—The advance in this breed during the past four years was a revelation to the writer. Butcher, the novice dog winner, is badly cropped, but has a very fair head, too prominent in brow, too wide in front and out at elbows. Toggles, the other entry, was ordered out on account of a predominance of brindle in his face. Teddy, the winner in lightweight limit, would be better with a little larger muzzle, but is a very likely little one. Teddy Roosevelt, first in heavyweights, could also stand a little addition to his length of head and is wide in front. Teddy won again in open lightweight dog class and Teddy Roosevelt had to be content with second in heavyweights to Woodcote Wonder. Wonder is well named. I have never seen a dog in England or America hold his age as this one has; barring a slight prominence of brow, he is as clean cut as a pup and good for many another win. Lady Smith, first in novice and second in limit and open lightweight, is a very fair one shown in very poor condition. Newmarket Queen, first in limit and open lightweight, is a good-headed one, but not as good as American Belle, who beat her in winner class. Belle has a good skull, fair muzzle, a bit cheeky, nice eye, good body and good legs and feet. In winners, Butcher was reserve to Woodcote Wonder in dogs, and Newmarket Queen reserve to American Belle in bitches.

DACHSHUND—Kaiser, the novice dog winner, has very bad front feet. Flora, the open bitch winner, is somewhat short and coarse.

FOX TERRIERS (smooth)—As good a lot as the Coast has seen in one show. The main struggle was between Vibo and Norfolk Trueman. The latter has the best skull. The former the best muzzle and ear. Trueman, on the whole, may be called the best by a trifle in head. Vibo looks thick in neck, but it is more because of heavy coat there, than actual neck. Vibo is much the best in front, both are of the same type and about the same size and height. Vibo was in the best coat and condition. I preferred Vibo. Judge Sumner preferred Trueman. Woodlawn Two Spot won rightly in dog pups. He has a nice head and good bone. British Foiler, second, has a fair skull, weak muzzle and staring eyes. Fidelity, third, is somewhat lacking in character. Algy, first in novice and third in limit and open, has a good length of head, but coarse in skull. He has excellent front and a good coat in quantity and quality, but is far too big. Sweet William, second in novice, is of the old cobhy type, a good head, well carried ears, but a bit wide in front. Dictator, third, might well have been first. He has a very good skull and muzzle, excellent body and back, good front, and might be better in feet. Vivacity, reserve, has a good terrier eye and expression, a fair head but wide in front. Jack Scrap is bitch headed. Wrinkles is weak in face and light in bone. Bobs, ditto. Endcliffe Resist, placed reserve to Algy in limit dogs, is a little weak in muzzle, otherwise good. These two dogs met also in open class. In bitch puppies, Dot, the only entry, is weak faced and carries her ears poorly. In novice bitches, Legs and Feet, first, is a good, straight limbed, well headed one. Bess Stroller, second in novice, a very good terrier, shown in good condition with very fair head, good eye and every inch a terrier, is withal handicapped with one very badly carried ear. On the bench she carried it very well, but when excited in the ring she carried it straight up most of the time and the award created considerable comment. Powhattan Queen, though a trifle weak in muzzle, is good in skull, body, legs and feet and might well have been higher up in the list. Vina Belle was easily the winner of the limit bitches. Lady Mask has a bad mouth, but the best head and front in the class. In open bitches, Eclipse Blanche, second, is the only one not previously mentioned. She is a good headed one, ears might be carried better.

In wire hairs, British Rally first in dog pups is a fair headed one, a little out at elbows. Cairnsmuir General first in limit dogs, has a good head but badly hung ears, coat soft and thin. Endcliffe Skyrocket, though a bit nearer the ground, and a little cheeky, shows more terrier character and has better coat, better ears and as good legs and feet. In open dogs the two last named met again with British Bounty, third. He is short in muzzle and soft fluffy coated. The bitches were absent. General took the winners class prize with Skyrocket reserve.

IRISH TERRIERS—Two fair specimens the bitch much the better of the two.

PUGS—Endcliffe Venolia was alone. She is a rare good one of the proper size.

The Yorkshires, Maltese, Chow Chows and Chihuahua were fair.

Aftermath of the Show.

A meeting of fanciers was held in the office of J. L. Eigholz at Los Angeles on the evening of the 7th inst., that will prove the nucleus around which an excellent Southern California kennel club will be formed. There was a large attendance, and though nothing of a permanent nature was done steps of great importance were taken. There is a strong feeling that a good spring show in Los Angeles is one of the things that may be expected if a kennel club is formed to handle it. In the preliminary work for the Sixth district show, the lack of an organization interested in the blue blooded dog was greatly missed. Had there been such, it would have simplified the work considerably. The intention expressed at the meeting was to form a club to contain members from all over the southern end of the State. J. L. Eigholz was selected temporary chairman and C. E. McStay secretary. There will be a meeting in the Hollenbeck Hotel, October 11th, to form a permanent association. Committees to look up the matter and stimulate interest in near-by towns were formed as follows:

S. Tyler, South Pasadena; Kenneth Preuss and G. L. Waring, Santa Monica; John P. Brown, Riverside; Col. F. H. Seymour, Redondo; C. C. Seamans, San Diego; E. S. Bahcock, Coronado; N. R. Thomas, North Pasadena; B. H. de Jersey, Long Beach; T. H. Dudley, Ocean Park; Alox Chisholm, Santa Ana; C. A. Loud, Santa Barbara; S. N. Androus, Pomona; C. O. McDowell, Count Jaro von Schmidt, F. D. Chipron, C. A. Sumner, J. W. Mitchell, Dr. Ralph Hagan, Byron Erkenbrecher, Martin I. W. Smith, W. R. Murphy, Mark Jones, John Schumacher and Joseph Singer, Los Angeles.

The Los Angeles Express makes the following statement: It is understood among the dog men in Los Angeles that the Sixth District Agricultural Association is dissatisfied with the dog show, feeling that it is not as much of an attraction as the cost would warrant.

Lovers of dogs do not think so. They claim the association made its mistake in charging the public 50 cents to see the show; also making them pay for the privilege of watching horses, whether desired or not.

The bench show is appreciated in the north, if not by the association here. It was the feature of the meeting.

Butcher G. H., the young Bull Terrier who won first in puppies and reserve in winners at Los Angeles was formerly Lucifer owned by R. H. Rountree of this city. Lucifer was turned out of the ring at Tanforan last year. He was an "ugly duckling" and Rountree was the subject of considerable geying. The dog was sold to Mr. Hadley who in turn presented him to Mr. Ed Greenfield of Los Angeles. Butcher is by Admiral out of Woodcote Baroness and has very much surprised those who saw him last year.

Mrs. Thos. Murphy, of Hollister, has sent her English Setter bitch, a full sister to Buckwa, by Luke C. out of Nancy Hanks, to be bred to Count Danstone (Ch. Gladstone-Dan's Lady). This breeding should make a splendid nick.

All Seen Him.

Have you seen our Izaak Walton,
With his bamboo posed with grace,
And his casting lines and flies around his hat,
But the quarters to huy fish with
Kept discreetly out of sight,
With the pennyroyal to keep away the gnats?

Have you seen his natty creel, too—
A square hole in its lid,
Showing sandwiches and milk and lemonade,
But his flask of Four Crown whisky,
Kept discreetly out of sight—
To prevent the influenza, should he wade?

Have you seen him lug his fish home,
And heard him spin the yarns,
'Bout his fighting them, and pile up lie on lie.
But the hoy who sold them to him
Kept discreetly out of sight,
While he posed a "holy terror" with the fly?

Why, of course you've often seen him.
And you've been there, too, yourself,
And you've done the great prevaricating act,
But the quarters that you've squandered
Kept discreetly out of sight,
As you've passed off lies for solid fact.

A Trip After Swordfish.

Although the following account of a schooner voyage after a catch of swordfish describes a purely commercial purpose, the possibilities for exciting sport are not a minimum by any means:

It was toward the close of a Friday afternoon that we sighted our first swordfish. We had been working our way out toward George's banks against variable head winds for three days, and were lounging about the schooner's deck thoroughly tired of doing nothing, when a cry from the masthead sent every man scurry to his place like the last bell at school.

"Hard up! hard up!"

"Steady her!"

"Keep off a little!"

"Hard down!"

It was all over in a minute. The vessel bore down as true as a whistle for the fish, the striker ironed him securely, the warp whizzed through the cook's hands until it was all played out, and the barrel buoy thrown overboard, a dory was lowered away with a rush, and one of the men rowed off to haul the catch, while the schooner continued her course on the lookout for another.

There were eight of us on board, including the skipper and the cook, and except myself, all "down-East" fishermen who had hunted the swordfish for many seasons. The hold of our schooner was filled with ice, and we had fitted with provisions enough to stay out a month if necessary in order to get a good load of fish. Most of the swordfish that are taken on the New England Coast come from George's Banks, a high ledge about fifty miles each way, covered by thirty or forty fathoms of water, which lies about 300 miles east of New York, and is the great fishing ground of the north Atlantic. The swordfish make this their summer home, usually from about the middle of June to the middle of September.

There are at least six places to be filled on a vessel when catching swordfish, and the average crew contains from eight to twelve men. These must be a mastheadman, who watches for the fish as they swim along near the top of the water, their back and tail fins just above the surface, and whose work it is when one has been sighted to call out directions to the man at the wheel so as to put the vessel close to the fish. Then there is the striker, who stands on a small stand at the head of the bowsprit to iron the fish when it comes within reach. For this purpose he has a long pole with an iron pike on the end of it. To the end of the pike is attached a dart, which, in turn, is fastened to a rope known as the warp. The warp, containing about 100 fathoms, is coiled up on the deck with its further end made fast to a harrel buoy. In ironing a fish the dart is thrust right through him, leaving it buttoned on the other side when the pole is drawn out.

As soon as a fish is struck he heads for bottom, and it is the work of the warp tender, who is commonly the cook, to pay off the warp carefully, and throw overboard the harrel buoy when it is all gone. Then a doryman rows out, picks up the harrel and hauls on his fish until he has tired him enough to pull him alongside of the dory, when he lances him in the gills, catches his tail with a gaff, runs a strap around it and makes the fish fast to the dory until the schooner returns and hoists the catch aboard. In addition to these four places there must be a helmsman and a man to tend sheets. As most boats carry four dories, moreover, there must be hands enough to man all these at once if necessary, the dorymen who are not otherwise engaged staying with the mastheadsman of the foretopmast, which instead of having a sail is rigged with a number of seats, the top one of which is known as the crow's nest.

Although we were always well fed, we ate no fresh meat during the trip. Corned beef, salt-horse, "chicken" alias smoked herring, and slack-salted codfish comprised our bill of fare in this direction. We never cut a swordfish, and indeed, when I asked one of the men who had been catching them for years what they tasted like he said he believed they were a good deal like halibut, but he had never eaten any. Of course there is sufficient reason for never cutting a swordfish, in that the average crew could hardly dispose of one during an ordinary trip. It seemed ridiculous, however, that although we were on the finest cod and haddock grounds on the coast, there wasn't a vestige of a hook or line on board with which we might have had fresh fish whenever we so elected. It was like going to the country to find that farmers have no cream on the table and that their supply of fresh vegetables is often inferior to what you can get in the city.

The mastheadsman and the striker are regarded as the most important persons in swordfishing. They are the battery upon which everything else depends. The work of the dory man is the most novel and exciting, however. A respectable swordfish runs between ten and fifteen feet in length, weighing anywhere from 100 to 600 pounds, and it often takes several hours to tire him out, while there is always a chance that he may come up under your dory and smash a hole through the bottom with his sword, or that you may be lost by the schooner in the thick weather.

There has been a fleet of about twenty vessels running between Boston and George's banks after swordfish this summer. The possibility of carrying their cargoes to New York, which is but little further than Boston, seems never to have occurred to the fishermen of Maine and Massachusetts. When I suggested to one of our party that if they could get some of the New York dealers to handle their wares they would be in the way of larger sales and better prices, he looked at me pityingly, and replied, in the tone of one who believes that what hasn't been done shouldn't be attempted, "None of our people ever goes to none of them Western markets."

Of the total proceeds, or the stock, as it is called, of a trip from a fifth to an eighth goes to the vessel's owner. After the "grub" and ice bills have been deducted the remainder is divided equally among the men. A trip which nets anywhere from $50 to $100 apiece is looked upon as a good one, but it happens rather too often to give it the consolation of novelty that the dollars that remain to each man at the end of a trip could be counted on his ten fingers without the need of overflow meetings anywhere. The skipper, as he is always called off New England, has only an equal share with the men, but gets a commission from the vessel's owner for navigating the boat.

Although we had fitted for a month the skipper concluded to start for market a week short of that time, as our ice was running low, and we already had sixty-eight fish on board. In order, if possible, to get the advantage of a market to themselves it is customary for the vessels in the fleet to leave without warning, dropping off from the rest under cover of darkness. We fetched out slowly from the other boats on a Wednesday evening, as if getting our position to leave to for the night, but when we were about obscured in the distance and the dusk the skipper, who had been below looking over the chart, came on deck.

"Run the balloon jib, boys," he said. "Hoist the staysail," came next. We hauled with a will, and the schooner began to toss the water over her bow.

Fly Casters.

The winners in the fly-casting competition this season between the members of the San Francisco Fly-Casting Club have been announced as follows:

Saturday contests—Long distance, championship class, Brotherton; first class, Grant; second class, Mocker. Accuracy, championship class, Muller; first class, Grant; second class, Brooks. Delicacy, championship class, Mansfield; first class, Brotherton.

Sunday contests—Long distance, championship class, Golcher; first class, Muller; second class, J. B. Kenniff. Accuracy, championship class, Young; first class, Everett; second class, Blade. Delicacy, championship class, Mansfield; first class, Daverkosen; second class, J. B. Kenniff.

In the cast-offs between the Saturday and Sunday men the club medals were won as follows:

Long distance, championship class, Golcher beat Brotherton; first class, Grant beat Muller; second class, J. B. Kenniff beat Mocker. Accuracy, championship class, Young beat Muller; second class, Brooks beat Blade; first class, Everett beat Grant.

Mansfield won both Saturday and Sunday championship medals in the delicacy contests. In the first class Brotherton beat Daverkosen. The medal in the second class went to J. B. Kenniff, who was in the class by himself. Lure casting, C. R. Kenniff beat Brotherton for the championship. The Smyth medal for the member of the club making the greatest improvements during the season was won by C. R. Kenniff.

The club will hold a regular meeting and also discuss an elaborate dinner on the evening of Wednesday, October 16th.

Three thousand black bass are to be planted in the waters of San Joaquin county. This is the outcome of the organization of the San Joaquin Fish Club. Permission has been secured from the Board of Fish Commissioners to take two year old fish from Salt Spring valley reservoir, and cans for the transportation of the fish have been loaned by the commission. Frank Tinsley, a professional fisherman, has been engaged by the club to catch and distribute the fish, and J. W. Simpson of Stockton has agreed to assist him for the good of the cause. The two year old fish are between ten inches and a foot long, and it is the intention to bring them from the reservoir 700 at a time. They will be placed in the waters of Disappointment, French Camp, Walker, Twenty-One-Mile and Twelve-Mile sloughs and Tracy lake. This will make excellent fishing the coming season in the waters mentioned.

County Game Laws in Force.

The present State Game and Fish Laws are in force and unchanged in the following counties:

Alameda.	Monterey.	Solano.
Colusa.	Santa Cruz.	San Joaquin.
Contra Costa.	San Benito.	Sonoma.
Merced.

The following counties have adopted ordinances in regard to fish and game, and which are now in force as follows:

Fresno—Quail, Nov. 1 to Feb. 1.
 Marin—Male deer, Aug. 1 to Sept. 15. Quail, Oct. 15 to Jan. 15.
 Shooting on county roads or in cemeteries prohibited. The use of "pump" gun, repeating shotgun or any kind of magazine shotgun for hunting in the county is prohibited.
 Monterey—Sea gulls and blue cranes, killing of prohibited. Use of guns of larger caliber than 10-gauge prohibited.
 Santa Clara—Quail, Oct. 8 to Feb. 1.
 San Mateo—Quail, Nov. 1 to Dec. 1. Rail, Oct. 15 to Nov. 15.
 Shooting from boats at high tide prohibited.

Game Law Changes in Two Counties.

The following ordinance was last Monday submitted to the Board of Supervisors in San Mateo county. This will materially change the force of the county law now prevailing. This new order will make the county season on quail open December 1st and close February 1st. The rail season will open on October 1st. The open season on deer will hold from August 1st to September 15th:

"The new ordinance regulating the shooting of game in this county was read and laid over until next meeting.

Section 1 provides that the hunting of quail between the first of December and the first of November is a misdemeanor.

Sec. 2. Rail may not be lawfully taken between the first day of October and the first day of November.

Sec. 3. Quail may not be taken between the 22d of October, 1901, and the first day of November, 1904.

Sec. 4. The hunting of rail at any time in a boat or at or near high tide is prohibited.

Sec. 5. Any person who in one calendar day takes, kills or has in his possession, whether taken or killed, more than 25 quail or more than 20 rail is guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sec. 6. Deer cannot be taken nor can anyone legally have deer meat in his possession between the first day of October and the 15th of September."

The ordinance provides a penalty for violations, of not less than $25 nor more than $500 fine, or imprisonment for not less than 25 nor more than 150 days. All previous game ordinances of the county will have been repealed upon the passage of the above.

The Board of Supervisors of Sonoma county on last Monday evening repealed the county game ordinance, No. 42, so that now the regulations of the State law are in vogue in the county. The ordinance among other things prevented the killing of quail before November 1st. The repealing of the ordinance does away with this provision, so that now sportsmen can begin to bag quail without delay. Sportsmen all over the county favored the repealing of the ordinance.

Game Law Notes.

Marin county is probably due for a change in the county game law in regard to quail. The present ordinance defines the open season on quail as between the 15th of October and the 15th of January—it forbids the trapping and sale of the birds and provides that "no person shall kill or have in his possession more than 25 quail on any one day." There is no provision against having the possession of 25 quail any other time between October 1st and January 1st. This makes it necessary for the county officers to catch the game law violator in the act of killing quail.

Another complication brought about by a county ordinance and which same inconvenience and hardship to sportsmen will also be found in the application of the State law, is illustrated in the following case.

On the 13th of September a hunt in the Marin hills brought four bucks to bag—a photograph of the four is now before us and splendid bucks they were. One of the carcasses was offered the express company's agent on the 16th, the venison being intended for friends at Burlingame. The express agent refused to take the buck and deliver, claiming close season in the county was in force and he could not ship legally. This same principle will apply to any game a sportsman may yet legitimately in open season, and further, in the case of the State it will be unlawful for any one, sportsmen included, to have in possession any venison or feathered game one minute after the expiration of the open season on October 1st for deer and February 1st for birds—whether taken or killed in this State or shipped from without.

The only saving clause to get around this irksome feature is a permission to be obtained from the Board of Fish Commissioners to transport for scientific purposes—which in the light here referred to would be a subterfuge.

As the matter now stands the sportsman must get rid of his game immediately upon the close of the season, or he will be subject to arrest for misdemeanor. In the case of the deer shipment above referred to, the lady, had she offered the venison for shipment on October 1st, according to the present law, would have been amenable to arrest.

Discussing the deer law and deer hunting reminds us of an incident concerning one of the staunchest advocates of the present law and a persistent mouther for game protection. The anecdote is told by a prominent sportsman who had invited the "apostle" of game protection, at the latter's urgent request, to participate in a deer hunt on a club preserve. The "apostle" had an opportunity to pump three shots at a running buck 100 yards away from him; he missed the deer, which ran on but was turned back. Our sportsmanly hunter saw the deer coming towards him on a trail, he dropped behind a bush, waited for his meat and when the buck got within ten feet of him, he commenced pumping lead into his devoted carcass. The same sportsman killed a doe last year and exploited the act afterwards as the bagging of a four pointer. This sportsman, by the way, is fighting hard for the appointment of Chief Deputy Fish Commissioner.

Cartridge and Shell.

Ducks are so plentiful down south that the Los Angeles Board of Fire Commissioners have changed the day for holding their weekly meeting, so that the members can have a shoot both at the first and last of the week.

At the meeting of the Santa Clara County Fish and Game Protective Association held last week in San Jose it was announced that the annual meeting of the California Game and Fish Protective Association will be held in that city November 14th. The convention will last two or three days. Each association affiliated with the State organization is entitled to send ten delegates to the convention.

Among the matters to be considered at the meeting will be the proposed constitutional amendment permitting the subdivision of the State into game districts. This question will be voted upon at the next general election and it is thought it will carry. Other game law tinkering will be advocated also; possibly a movement for the appointment of a State Game Warden will be introduced as well as other provisions intended solely to be used for the purpose of providing an individual office and its emoluments for one of the "apostles."

The State association has sent out a printed letter calling attention to the coming meeting and requesting a good attendance.

An inquiry from a subscriber in Meridian, Sutter county, concerning the open and close season on deer we will answer by quoting the section in full of the present game law, which covers the case:

6261. Every person who, between the first day of October of any year and the first day of August of the following year, hunts, pursues, takes, kills, or destroys, or has in his possession, whether taken or killed in the State of California, or shipped into the State from any other State, Territory, or foreign country, any male deer or any deer meat, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

Further, it is a misdemeanor to buy, sell, offer or expose for sale any deer hide or pelt from which the evidence of sex has been removed. The individual limit, during the open season, is three male deer, either by killing or having in possession, whether taken in this State or shipped from without.

It is also a misdemeanor to allow dogs to run or track deer during the close season.

We have not heard of any decision given by a judge in Alameda county which held that the deer season closed on November 1st. If such is the case it is in conflict with the law now in force.

We have another deer shooting incident that is rather a remarkable occurrence. Recently Dr. Lane and F. W. Lane who were enjoying an angling outing on Eel River, started from Weymouth's one morning and walked down stream. A short distance below Grizzly pool they suddenly came upon a large buck that was attempting to get across the river. The buck observed the intruders and made away further down the bank when he again essayed to cross the stream, floundering through the thick tules on the edge of the river. F. W. Lane, who is a fine pistol shot, had his Remington target pistol, 22 calibre, new model, along. Taking aim at short range he fired at the buck's head and from the deer's actions it was evident he had been hit. The deer made off into the brush, the two anglers followed for a short distance and were surprised to find large gouts of blood on the trail—going on 50 yards they were astounded to find the buck in some brush breathing his last. Upon examination it was found that the little 22 long bullet had punctured the neck back of and below the ear and had cut the jugular vein so that the deer bled to death through the mouth and nose in short order. A pretty good and lucky shot with a target pistol.

John P. Babcock, Chief Deputy of the Board of Fish Commissioners, after a successful and valued term of office for the past eleven years, resigned his post this week. Mr. Babcock will leave here to accept a more remunerative and responsible position under the government of British Columbia. He is an eminent authority on the habits and propagation of salmon and trout and has in the past few years accomplished results for this community in the developing of food resources in our waters that will bring invaluable returns. He planned the hatcheries at Olema, Wavona and the immense salmon station at Battle Creek, the largest salmon station in the world. In 1898, its third season, 48,500,000 salmon eggs were hatched. This is the greatest number ever taken in one season at one station. It was more than all the other hatcheries on the Coast combined produced. Since Mr. Babcock assumed charge as chief deputy there has been hatched under the jurisdiction of the Board 105,184,000 salmon and 31,425,000 trout. These have all been distributed in the public waters of the State to supply both sport and food for its people.

Mr. Babcock will make his headquarters at Victoria and will devote, for a year or so, his time to the best possible methods of developing the food fish resources of the Fraser river and other streams. Mr. Babcock is an enthusiastic and popular member of the Fly-Casting Club. A large number of sportsmen and wide circle of warm personal friends are united in wishing Mr. Babcock success in his new departure.

Southern California Shooting Notes.

Reports of the shooters have been coming in all the week, and from all the four cardinal points of the compass comes the same story—game, game everywhere, and more plentiful than for many seasons, says the sporting writer of the Los Angeles Express. Everyone that has been outseems to have found birds.

San Fernando valley has been well patronized, and limit bags have been the rule here. From the tunnel to Burbank and from Cahuenga pass to Pacoima there seem to be bunches scattered everywhere, and notwithstanding the pounding given the quail they are abundant still. There is said to be one flock in Pacoima canyon numbering at least a thousand birds.

Messrs. Simons, Nelsoo, Cooper, Mallory and Keddone have been hunting in San Fernando valley during the week and had excellent sport. Simons killed twenty-five quail and seven rabbits. Nelson got the limit of quail and fifteen rabbits. Robinson shot near Chatsworth and he killed the limit of quail and twenty-seven cottontails. Mallory brought in eighteen quail and a dozen rabbits. Keddone's bag contained twenty-two quail and twenty-five rabbits when he came in, and others who shot over the same cover hear witness to the number of quail in the valley.

Plenty of doves are left for next year's breeding and they are not being molested. Some shooters take a crack at the gray birds occasionally, but when quail are around doves are a secondary consideration.

Judge Graves and J. E. Hannon hunted in the Perris district during the week and they are agreed that the birds are uncommonly plentiful thereabouts. One of the gentlemen said it would be possible to kill almost any number within three miles of the hotel. There are said to be good accommodations for shooters at Perris, and the shooting ground is only three miles away. In addition, there are plenty of ducks on the reservoirs. Graves and Hannon each killed a few.

Shooting on and around Lake Elsinore is good at present. It is necessary to obtain a permit before killing ducks at Elsinore, though shooters can hunt quail at their pleasure on surrounding hills.

The birds are numerous in San Bernardino county, but they will be well taken care of by sportsmen from Riverside and other nearby towns. Closer to Los Angeles, the hills above Glendale and Verdugo contain many quail and there will be many hunters after them tomorrow.

Messrs. Jenkins and Burke were out on the first day of the season, having driven over the hills into a potrero back of Verdugo. They refuse to disclose the location of the place, but, as Burk puts it, "The birds are thick," and can be killed in any number. The gentlemen say it is necessary to fly up the side of one mountain and slide down the side of another in order to reach their favorite ground, unless the location of the trail is known.

Many shooters know of such spots not far from the city. Some of them are so inaccessible that the birds are not molested until some one stumbles on them by accident. When a shooter strikes such a bonanza, eight miles or so from town, he naturally objects to disclosing it.

In the San Dimas wash and the other dry river beds to the east of Pasadena there are many quail and rabbits; in fact, a dry wash is about as good a place for upland game of all sorts as can be found, if it be covered with chaparral.

Back of Redondo on the sand hills there are a few quail, and in the vicinity of Gardena birds are to be found, but at the first fire they fly into the blue gum and hedges and refuse to be driven out. To the south-east, in the vicinity of Artesia, the river beds are alive with the blue birds, but it is not only difficult to start them, but almost impossible to retrieve dead ones, so not many hunters will go there. In the Artesia county there is a fair chance of killing a duck or two while after quail. Many snipe are to be found in the low country thereabouts.

The Cerritos lake is as full of birds as ever. On the fresh water lake of the Alamitos club there are many ducks, many of them being sprig.

E. T. Earl and fifteen other gunners were shooting on the Bolsa Chica the first day. Most members of party killed the limit. Bird were not only numerous, but in excellent condition. They have had a chance to get fat on the grain scattered about. The Bolsa Chica has always been liberal in this regard and its members desire to give the birds a good time before they die.

The Recreation Club was the only one that shot at Ballona, last Sunday. All the others are still having trouble as to water. The Alla and Centinela Clubs will be shooting by to-day, but there is not enough water to allow of much sport as yet. The Alla has always had grand sport, and so has the Centinela when the birds have been taken care of properly.

Speaking of the sportsmen who were to hunt on last Sunday the writer noted: Harry Slotterback and Frank Davis are preparing to go to Perris after quail tonight. W. H. Homas, James Matfield and F. Notman will leave for Fernando tonight. They expect to bag the limit of quail on Charles Alexander's ranch tomorrow. Frank Hicks, W. L. Valentine and Messrs. Post and Watkins of Pasadena will shoot over the Cerritos tomorrow. Pembroke Thom and Fred Dolls have been planning to thin the duck crop of Alamitos hay tomorrow. All told, there is excellent prospect for good shooting Sunday, and the day bids fair to be as much of a record breaker as was last Tuesday.

The Santa Rosa Gun Club officers elected for the ensuing year are: O. Frank Leppo, President; James R. Edwards, Secretary and Treasurer. The club house at Schellville and baited ponds are in charge of a keeper. The members opened the season on the club preserves last Sunday.

In hot weather there is no drink like Jackson's Napa Soda—plain in a lemonade.

Oakland Bench Show.

The premium list of the Oakland show will be issued very soon. The members of the bench show committee are—T. Gregory, C. G. Hinds and John Bradshaw. John Bradshaw is the Secretary and Superintendent of the show. Chas. R. Harker of San Jose will judge Mastiffs and St. Bernards. Frank Hall (the manager of the Zoo at the Chutes) will judge Great Danes. W. E. Chute of San Francisco will pass on all hounds, Dalmatians, Pointers, Setters and Sporting Spaniels. J. J. Lynn of New York will distribute the ribbons for Fox Terriers and L. A. Klein will pass upon the merits of all other breeds.

Among the classifications in the premium list will be local classes and a stake class for Greyhounds. There will be mixed classes for Borzois, Deerhounds, Field Spaniels, Yorkshires, Maltese, Toys (except Japanese Spaniels, for which the classification is full), Italian Greyhounds, and Chows. There will be classes each for puppies and open, dogs and bitches, for Pomeranians, Spitz, Esquimaux and Miscellaneous, without winners classes.

There will be mixed classes each for puppies and open, dogs and bitches, for Bloodhounds, Newfoundland, Chesapeake Bay dogs, Dalmatians, Poodles, French Bulldogs, Beagles, Black and Tan Terriers, Skyes and Black and Tan Toys. All other breeds will have a full classification.

THE FARM.

Little Things in Dairying.

If experience in dairying does not make a man or woman wise it counts for but little. We often see cases where people grow gray in the care of cows and only realize meager profits from the business. This is because years ago they decided that they had mastered all there was to be known relative to dairying, and have since tried to get out of the rut.

The most conscientious attention to detail work in the care of cows, care of milk and routine of labor required in butter and cheese making is necessary to success in any or all of these branches.

Don't think that keeping up appearances in these matters is going to do, but go to the bottom and be thorough, or your profit account will prove sadly deficient.

To accentuate what I mean, the milk that shows a sediment in the bottom of the can never came from a farm where cleanly dairy methods were practiced, the butter that leaks milk never passed through the hands of an adept at the art, and gaseous cheese is a stranger to a skillful maker.

The dairyman who, in a quiet, unostentatious manner pursues the even tenor of his or her way, and without flurry or bluster observes all of the little niceties essential to producing a perfect product will win hands down, in the race for merit.

It is not mere sentiment that calls for washing and scalding a milk pail or pan until its every crack is absolutely sterile, but to the ever wise, a certain practical object is in view, a top price to be secured for future butter, the crude material of which must pass through that utensil.

Again, it should hens much for practical reasons as for sentimental ones that the cows are not over-heated prior to milking and that they have their thirst anticipated by constant access to pure water. The humane treatment of milch cattle wisely directed is always essential to the most profitable results.

No dairyman can practice cruelty to animals and expect to obtain a decent price for his milk or butter. This is an inexorable law promulgated by nature.

A good butter or cheesemaker necessarily possesses an educated nose, which he is not afraid to use on any and all occasions. Oftentimes the quality of the manufactured product hinges on the most subtle changes, which the skilled maker, ever on the alert to detect by the olfactory sense, is enabled to guide in the right direction.

The little things of dairying must be observed from day to day, and minute to minute to insure success.

Bill Nye as a Dairyman.

When I was young and used to roam around over the country, gathering water-melons in the light of the moon, I used to think I could milk anybody's cow, but I don't think so now. I do not milk the cow unless the sign is right, and it hasn't been right for a good many years. The last cow I tried to milk was a common cow, born in obscurity, kind of self-made cow. I remember her brow was low, but she wore her tail high and she was haughty, oh, so haughty.

I made a commonplace remark to her. One that is used in the very best society, one that need not give offense. I said "So"—and she "Soed." Then I told her to "Hist"—and she "Histed." But I thought she overdid it. She put too much expression in it.

Just then I heard something crash through the window of the barn and fall with a thud, sickening thud, on the outside.

The neighbors came to see what it was that caused the noise. They found that I had done it in getting through the window.

I asked the neighbors if the barn was still standing. They said it was. Then I asked them if the cow was injured much. They said she seemed quite robust. Then I requested them to go in and calm the cow a little, and see if they could get my plug hat off her horns.

I am buying all my milk now of a milkman. I select a gentle milk man, who will not kick, and feel as though I can trust him. Then, if he feels as though he can trust me it's all right.

Entirely too many of our poultry houses are infested with vermin. To be prosperous and profitable the fowl must be at ease and this is impossible where vermin exist. We refer especially to the mite pest. Lice that are on the body are not so frequent, but the terrible mites are everywhere if about the premises at all, and there is no rest for the fowl. A nervous woman would have just as much comfort sleeping in a bed infested with bedbugs as the hen can have roosting in a hen house where mite exist. Our counsel to the poultrymen is to exterminate the mite pest. Instinct teaches him to exterminate bedbugs, but he so often neglects the hen and this is one of the most serious mistakes that the poultry raiser makes. Professional poultrymen look out for these things but the farmer busy with his horses, sheep or cattle, or his crops, too often allows the hen house to go uncleaned. This is a most serious mistake.

According to the reports from the Agricultural Department about 27,450,000 bushels of wheat are exported annually from the Pacific Coast with a total value of about $20,000,000. Of the two millions of barrels of flour annually shipped from the Pacific Coast ports during the past ten years, nearly one-half is cleared at San Francisco. The report says it has taken about 36,000,000 bushels of wheat to supply the foreign markets with Pacific Coast wheat and flour. Of this amount California ports furnish more than 23,000,000 bushels.

Under proper handling it costs little to keep a small flock of sheep on the general farm, and they return enough to more than pay good interest on the investment and something over in the shape of wages for the owner. Then the lambs and mutton, whether shipped to market or killed for home use, must count as clear gain.

The Temperament of Beef Cattle.

In order for a person or cattle to fatten up quickly it is necessary that an even temperament should be had. An excitable, nervous temperament can never produce good beef. The small, energetic, nervous type may be a good milker, but it is hardly satisfactory for beef raising. The beef cattle are always heavy, pblegmatic animals, who seem not to be possessed by any nerves at all. These animals take their food and rest on it, and the process of digestion and assimilation go on without interruption. There is nothing so injurious to cattle as any excitement or fright which will interrupt digestion.

This concerns the dairyman and cattle-raiser in two ways. He should first consider the temperament of the animal very carefully. The temperament decides more than anything else the characteristics of the animal. The high-strung race horse or trotter could no more be fattened than the high-strung, nervous dairy cow whose temperaments have long been characteristic of them. They may be good milkers, but even to do this they must be carefully handled and not frightened or excited, but never good beef producers. The form of the beef cattle is quite well known, but it is even possible to secure an animal that has the beef form and yet possesses too many nerves to be thoroughly profitable for beef. The cattle-raiser should inquire into the temperament of the animal, for in spite of everything else this will concern his welfare fully as much as the question of breed.

The second point which must be considered is the matter of handling the animals. There is nothing in the world so difficult as to handle properly a highly strung, nervous cow, and yet upon the success of this must largely depend the ultimate question of profit or loss. We cannot afford to worry or frighten cattle, especially dairy cattle, but then we cannot afford to mix excitable animals with the ordinary herd in the pasture. It is absolutely essential that the herd should be weeded of all such animals. They must be kept separate while little or no trouble will be experienced in handling them. We may be reaching a higher milk-producing standard in rearing nervous, highly strung animals, but we are also adding to our burdens. It requires higher scientific methods of breeding and feeding to make such animals at all profitable.

Bicycle Tire in a Cow's Stomach.

The Colusa Sun says: We have often heard of very funny things being found in a cow's stomach, but George Showler's butchers Wednesday broke the record when, in killing a young cow they had purchased from John Cheney, they found a piece of the inner tube of a bicycle tire about three feet long. George says he has another cow he bought from Mr. Cheney and expects when he kills her to get the rest of the wheel.

The trouble with most hay, particularly with clover and timothy, is that it is not cut until too ripe. Insist upon getting hay cut early, particularly when the price is as high as it is this year. The cows will eat up timothy hay clean if it is cut just as the bloom begins to appear. The same is true of clover. Corn fodder which was cut moderately early and balanced with bran is an excellent dairy feed.

Why I Breed Berkshires.

The Berkshire is admitted to be the oldest breed of swine in the United States if not in the world, and has been pure bred for nearly 150 years. They have been used in improving most of the improved breeds of to-day that have a black color. They are a hardy, vigorous breed and will stand any climate where swine are grown. Being pure bred for so many years they naturally impress their quality on any breed on which they are crossed, says a correspondent in Breeders' Gazette.

The Ferkshire is a very prolific breed and the sows are the best of mothers. Only the past week three of our sows farrowed as follows: One had twelve pigs, one thirteen and another twelve. The last sow did not move from the time she commenced to farrow till after she was all through. This was about six o'clock in the evening, and the next morning at seven she was lying just as she was when we left her the night before, and I do not think she had turned over or gotten up during the whole night. Her whole twelve pigs were all alive and smart as could be in the morning. We are not claiming this as anything uncommon, but it is one of the peculiarities of the Berkshire, that they almost universally raise good-sized litters and raise them well.

There is no breed of swine that will give a greater flow of milk. I watched a sow that is suckling twelve pigs this morning at the trough eating, and the milk flowed from her udder as she stood still at the feed. The Berkshire sow is very careful of her litter and will let herself down in the bed as carefully as she can do so, seldom hurting a pig. They are quiet and can be handled at farrowing time without their getting excited in the least.

The pigs come strong and active if the sows have been properly fed and handled. Three pigs of our last litter farrowed were so strong that they never got off their feet till they reached the teat, and then were fighting for something to eat. This shows vitality and energy, and a pig of this kind will not have to be taken from the sow and put back every hour for its dinner, but will look after that matter itself. The Berkshire is not excelled by any breed in its grazing qualities. They are active and yet not wild in any manner.

Cattle feeders will tell you that for pigs to follow cattle they are far the best, for the reason that if a steer touches one of them he will move at once and not get trampled on. He is a pig that is always ready for the market at any age from four months up, and if you wish to carry them on to the age of one year they will outweigh anything of their age or measurements. Stock buyers tell me that they will never guess on the weight of a hunch of well-finished Berkshires, as they invariably outweigh their expectations. There is also a uniformity in appearance of a well bred herd of Berkshires that is very pleasing.

The demand for the Berkshire is increasing in such a degree that the breeders cannot begin to fill all the orders that come to them. While the breeders of other breeds have been trying to see how refined they could get their hogs, the breeders of Berkshires have taken a different tack and have been looking out for all the size and length possible without sacrificing quality and finish. We have now got them fully twelve inches longer than the Poland-China, and yet do not let the back sag, but keep it full, wide and strong. The feet have been improved much in the last few years, the flank is lower, the hind legs much straighter. We have not got them perfect by any means yet, but as a general thing they are constantly being bred more nearly right, and are, taken all in all, grand hogs, admired by anyone that likes to see symmetry in an animal and a blood-like appearance. These are some of the reasons why we breed Berkshires, and for these we will continue to breed them as long as we breed anything in the swine line, believing that a test of twenty-six years is long enough to prove that we have made wise selection.

ASTHMA CURE FREE!

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent Cure in All Cases.

Sent Absolutely Free on Receipt of Postal.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

We want to send to every sufferer a trial treatment of Asthmalene, similar to the one that cured Mr. Wells. We'll send it by mail POSTPAID, ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE, to any sufferer who will write for it, even on a postal. A NEW CLIPPING MACHINE.

THE "1902."

THE BEST YET.

PRICE $15.

A REVOLUTION IN CONSTRUCTION.

Undoubtedly superior to anything previously manufactured by us or any others. Surprisingly SIMPLE, STRONG, DURABLE, and costs but a fraction of the price of antiquated machines and does better work. We are confident in presenting our "1902" machine that it embodies every desirable feature of a perfect Horse Clipper. This machine has a large cut gear which engages a small hard steel pinion on a shaft which is connected with a universal joint, which is covered; this joint being attached to a flexible shaft. The handle is very long, so that it may be turned with either hand, and unlike other machines it is not necessary to hold one hand on the standard to steady the machine. The "1902" is furnished with a seven-foot flexible shaft and one knife, and is recommended with the fullest confidence that it will do the work in a rapid and satisfactory manner. They are guaranteed to do more work than any other machine made by us or any other manufacturer. Drop us a postal card to-day and we shall send you free a beautifully illustrated Catalogue containing numerous half-tone engravings of every type of a clipping machine that is worthy of the name, whether operated by steam, water, electricity or gas power.

Orders for machines to be sent C. O. D. by Express must be accompanied with $5, the balance to be collected on delivery.

JOTTINGS.

I HEARD A MAN who owns a trotting bred stallion say the other day: "My horse is as well bred as McKinney and would be just as good a sire if he had the opportunities, and yet he had but half a dozen mares bred to him this year." It may be that all these statements are true, but it is certain that the speaker will never help his horse to get the reputation McKinney has earned. I know the stallion in question is a good individual, that he is from producing families on both sides and that he has great natural speed, yet he was never given any training, never started in a race, has never been advertised and is not likely to be as long as he remains in the same hands he now is. He is buried, in a sense, and his present owner will never make an effort to resurrect him. McKinney is a great horse—he has proved it year after year, but had he been in the hands of the other owner instead of C. A. Durfee he would not have been the leading sire of 2:15 performers, at his age, in the world. Mr. Durfee believes in his horse and works for him. He devotes his time and his energies to securing the best mares to breed to him, and induces the owners to develop the produce. He has bought many a McKinney colt, paid a big price for it, and spent money on its training. He spends more money for advertising than any stallion owner in California, and never stops. Many men with a stallion having McKinney's reputation would sit down and expect breeders to come to him without solicitation. But no stallion ever made a great name without work on the part of his owner and Mr. Durfee realizes this. I suppose every reader of this journal has noticed that more mares bred to McKinney were named in the Breeders Futurity than were named from the hooks of any other stallion, and that his son Zombro 2:11 came next in the list. This was because Messrs. Durfee and Beckers wrote letters, sent telegrams and requested everyone who sent mares to their horses to enter them in this stake. Both have faith in their horses, and know that faith without work does not amount to much. Any active business man who owns a good stallion can make his horse earn a large sum each year if he but advertises him properly and works for him energetically. An advertisement in the best newspaper in the world will not do it all, but it is a great help and is worth more than its cost. The most perfect gun in the navy must have a man behind it to do the work or it is useless. The best stallion in America will be a failure unless he is properly managed.

Three years ago Samuel Gamble brought out from Kentucky seven handsome and elegantly bred fillies which he had purchased there for Mr. W. E. Lester of this city, Mr. Gamble having an interest in them also. The fillies were by such sires as Bow Bells, Simmons, Kremlin and others and were in foal to Grand Baron, Axtell and other great stallions. Since their arrival here these fillies have been bred to McKinney, Nutwood Wilkes and other horses of merit and although several of the foals have died or been killed accidentally, the mares and fillies now number eleven of as royally bred a lot as ever got together. Mr. Gamble has just purchased for S. Gamble & Co., Mr. Lester's interest in these mares and fillies and they will be placed on a farm, the youngsters trained and developed and the mares mated with the best stallions in this State. There is also a colt in the lot by Axtell out of a mare by Simmons, that will be three years old next May which is a very promising horse for a sire. With Mr. Gamble's knowledge of the blood lines in trotters and his practical experience, these mares should produce some high class performers under his management. No breeder in California has selected and brought as many producing mares to this coast as Mr. Gamble and among these fillies are several that will have their names in the great broodmare list as sires as their produce is trained.

No announcement ever received a more hearty reception and endorsement among horsemen than the one made last week wherein it was proposed that the Breeders Association hold a meeting at Eureka, Humboldt county, next year in June or July. I think at least a dozen owners and trainers have spoken about it in my hearing the past week, and not one has expressed anything but approval of the scheme. It takes but twenty hours to make the trip from San Francisco, and if the meeting should be held the steamship company will make a rate of $10 for the round trip for horses entered at the meeting. No better place could be selected in which to open the season, and the big purses offered by the Breeders will certainly draw all the best trotters and pacers training next year in California.

The veteran horseman and old time pool seller Mr. S. B. Whitehead paid us a visit last week and a more entertaining visitor we are seldom honored with. Mr. Whitehead has retired from all connections with racing in any form either as driver or pool seller still he takes a lively interest as he tersely puts it in "five things" and no great event in the sales ring or on track that escapes his notice and fails to call out his full measure of praise or censure. Mr. Whitehead has just returned from a visit to the East and whilst in Chicago had the pleasure of seeing Robert Waddell win the great American Derby at Washington Park. As he puts it he was only one of some 45,000 persons present and thinks he might have been overlooked. He saw the first American Derby run on the same track and naturally had to see the last (until the next) one. He says that one cannot be in Chicago without catching the race fever any time within a fortnight before the opening of Washington Park's twenty-five (and no more) days meeting. One cannot look into the windows of Marshal Field & Co., Rothschild & Co., Sigel Cooper & Co. or any of the first class dry goods establishments without being reminded of the great event, stores decorated, windows gaily draped, life size wax figures wearing either the colors of the favorites for the Derby, or appropriate garments to be worn on the occasion. In fact the solid men of Chicago are its staunchest supporters and patrons, while to the exclusive society guild it is hailed as a high social function. Visitors from New York and the Atlantic seaboard cities vie with visitors from neighboring cities in making it a gala time. The grand stand is a sea of beauty, wealth and dignity combined and the infield a sight to be long remembered. Tally Hos, barouches, phaetons, in fact every description of stylish turnout including the latest thing in automobiles. It costs something to hire a rig for "Derby day" as one of the leading liverymen told Mr. Whitehead that he rented everything in his stable for that day at prices for the cheapest at $40 and $300 the highest. Mr. Whitehead gave us a graphic picture of the grand sight and thrilling race on that occasion and certainly the management of Washington Park is to be congratulated in having so enlisted the interest of the better element of Chicago's business and social set in its annual meeting. Liberal, conservative and thoroughly honorable in all their dealings with the public coupled with the fact of scientific and skillful management are characteristics of Washington Park's meetings and we sincerely wish them the success they so richly deserve. Mr. James Howard, the efficient and courteous Secretary, by his untiring efforts and coupled with executive ability of a rare order, has done more than anyone else to render these meetings the success they have attained. Mr. Howard was formerly a resident of California and on the opening of Washington Park assumed the position of assistant secretary which position he filled until the death of Mr. Brewster when he assumed the secretaryship. He is most ably assisted by John Kelsey, Esq., and the two combined working in harmony neglect no opportunity and spare no expense to make Washington Park's meeting the meeting of the country.

Successful Meeting at Stockton.

The Stockton Driving Club, under whose auspices the fair and race meeting now in progress at Stockton is being given, is giving evidence every day to prove that energy and intelligence can make a success in spite of adverse conditions. This organization is composed of well known and popular young business men who have the confidence and command the support of the entire population of the San Joaquin metropolis, and are holding a fair which is not only drawing good crowds each day, but is being spoken of in the most enthusiastic terms by the press and the public. It seems that the "knockers" have all been knocked out of Stockton and every one is doing what he can to make the meeting a success. The racing has not been of any higher class than prevailed at other meetings on the circuit, but the people are satisfied that the sport furnished is worth the money and are turning out in large numbers to enjoy it. On Tuesday, the crowd was the largest seen at the track on an opening day for years. During the first three days not a heat had been trotted or paced as fast as 2:15, but there have been more close finishes than usual and it is the general belief that in every race every driver has been trying. President Catts, Secretary Willy and Directors Adams, Neumiller and Cobb, have devoted their entire time and all their energies to make the meeting successful and have succeeded. When the fact is considered that the number of harness and running horses in training in the State this summer is very small, and that not one of the original purses offered by this association filled, the amount of work done by the officers above named to make up the excellent racing program which has been given may be imagined. The pavilion has a very handsome display this year and is crowded nightly. In short, the Stockton Driving Club is holding a fair that is worth attending and it is a pleasure to announce that its efforts are being appreciated by the public.

The racing summaries of the first three days are as follows:

Hank Gideon, one of the veteran trainers and drivers of California is handling several colts and fillies for Ben Griffin of Winters, Yolo county, and has two or three that will be good enough to go to the races with. Besides the colt by Bayswater Wilkes out of Claribel by Privateer, mentioned elsewhere in this issue he has one by Nevada out of Del Paso Maid by Imperious that is a very promising trotter, and a filly by a son of Guy Wilkes that is also a trotter. All these youngsters were foaled in 1900 and will be worked with the idea of racing them as three year olds. Hank is a very careful man with colts and it is certain they will all act well when he has them ready.

The carriage trade is picking up by leaps and bounds now that the season in the country is rapidly drawing to a close, according to New York reports. Broughams and cabriolets have taken the place of light open work to a great extent in the handsome displays everywhere seen, and it may be said that the fall season is now in full swing, with prospects pointing so a continually increasing trade until after the holidays.

Elias Williams is handling a pacing mare at the Alameda track that is for sale. "She is by a son of Electioneer out of a granddaughter of Director. She shows speed enough to warrant training for racing purposes and is a handsome high spirited animal that is worth much more than the price asked for her. See Mr. Williams about her.

It is stated that Scott Hudson won $5950 at the Terre Haute meeting. He claims to have the largest money winning stable of the year. He won over $7000 at Providence, R. I.

In hot weather there is no drink like Jackson's Napa Soda—plain in a lemonade.

Close of Los Angeles Meeting.

Some good harness racing during the last three days of the Los Angeles meeting was enjoyed by those in attendance. On Thursday the 2:20 pace, in which but four horses started, resulted in a contest of seven heats. The dapper little Stockton horse, Toppy, seemed to have the most speed, but he expended so much of it in the first and second heats that he was beaten in the others in slower time. Dr. Le Moyne Wills' horse, Cœur de Lion, raced with Toppy in these two heats and was only beaten a head the first time in 2:11½, a new record for Toppy. A bad break caused Cœur de Lion to get the flag in the third heat which was won by Our Boy's Sister. She took the fourth heat also, and was then played as the sure thing in the race at $10 to $3 in the auctions. Bad acting and hobbles made her lose the fifth to the steady going Midnight, and caused her to be distanced in the sixth. Midnight was able to defeat Toppy in the last heat in the slow time of 2:22.

Three McKinneys had a duel on Friday in the 2:20 class trot. Nora McKinney got the first heat in 2:16½, and McKenna the next three in 2:17½, 2:17½ and 2:20, with Una K. and Nora whipsawing for second and third position each time.

Saturday, the closing day, had three harness events carded. In the 2:10 pace there were but two starters and they, according to the conditions, had to walk over for the entrance money. Floracita came in first in each heat, best time 2:20.

In the 2:19 trot What Is It defeated "the three McKinneys" and redeemed his good name. He trotted the last heat in 2:17 and presented every appearance of a horse that could make the circuit of the track in 2:12 if necessary.

The free for all trot was a hot race throughout the five heats. The Guy Wilkes stallion, Santa Anita Star, won the first two heats in 2:16½ and 2:16 with Iran Alto's son, Thomas R., close up. In the third heat Bunch's horse trotted like a demon and won in 2:16 flat with Neernut second. These two fought it out in the two succeeding heats, but the gelding from Veudome Stock Farm was in better condition and more steady than the son of Albert W. and won. The race was remarkable for the time, which varied but one second during the five heats.

The summaries of the races for the last three days of the meeting follow:

Sacramento Club's First Matinee.

[Record Union, October 12th.]

Several hundred people assembled at Agricultural Park yesterday afternoon to witness the driving matinee given by the Sacramento Driving Club, and were well repaid for their attendance.

While the time made is not equal to that made at races by the Jockey Club and the State Fair, there was far more interest taken, from the fact that all the drivers were out to win if the speed of their horses and the best efforts of the drivers would effect that end.

Several of the races were very close, and the crowd heartily applauded when a good finish was made, John Morrison received an ovation after an exciting struggle at the finish, in which he beat Frank E. Wright's mare, which broke just before reaching the wire.

The first race in class E brought out three starters, Gray Bird, owned and driven by Frank E. Wright; Toots, owned and driven by Charles Paine, and Zulene, owned by Albert Elkus and driven by Frank Ruhstaller, Jr. The race was well contested from start to finish, and was won by Toots, Zulene second, Gray Bird third. Time, 2:42½.

The second race in class B also showed three starters—Silver Bee (a blood relative of the Groat Cresceus) owned by W. O. Bowers, and driven by William Harris; Captain Hackett (who has started in many races and never won a heat), owned and driven by John Batcher, and Elevator, owned and driven by E. J. Weldon. This was a very exciting event, as Elevator pushed Silver Bee well into the stretch, and would have won had he not lost his feet after passing the sixteenth pole. As it was, Silver Bee won, Elevator second and Captain Hackett (who upheld his record) third. Time, 2:24.

The third race in class A only brought out two entries (Regina F. withdrawn on account of sickness). These were Baby Button, owned and driven by F. E. Wright, and Monroe B., owned and driven by F. J. Ruhstaller, Jr. This was by long odds the best race of the matinee, as the animals made a team race of it all the distance. Nearing the finish Monroe B., superbly handled by his owner, nosed out and won by a head. Time, 2:24.

The fourth race, in class C, showed three starters—John First, owned and driven by F. M. Ennis; Charles S., owned and driven by C. Silvey, and Careless Man, owned and driven by William Irwin. When the horses scored down the first time and were recalled Irwin kept right on and made the circuit. When they scored again the flag fell, and when the distance had been stepped they finished with Charles S. first, John First second and Careless Man third. Time, 2:36½. Irwin created a world of merriment by sending his animal around the course again before sending him to the stable.

The fifth race in class D was a very warm affair, and showed three starters—Hoot-Mon, the celebrated Scotch horse owned and driven by John Morrison; Pearl St. Clair, owned and driven by F. E. Wright, and Gladys H., owned and driven by M. N. Winans. The horses got away to a good start, and in the opening to the hack stretch Pearl St. Clair had a very comfortable lead, with Hoot-Mon coming fast. Entering the stretch the canny Scotchman passed the mare like a white chip and won, Pearl St. Clair second, and Gladys H., who was lost in the shuffle, third, and twenty lengths to the bad. Time, 2:56½. This ended the day's sport, and, taking everything into consideration, the time made was excellent, and the matinee more than a success.

A prominent horse dealer of New York, in an interview in the Herald, says: "The season which is now drawing to a close has been the best I have ever known. The aggregate of my sales has so far exceeded expectations. I have not only disposed of more horses than ever before, but have obtained higher prices for them." The demand for strictly choice carriage, road and saddle horses is greater to-day than it was before the automobile and the bicycle were heard of, and I predict that it will continue to grow until after the automobile as a pleasure vehicle is as dead as the roller skate. In the sale of carriage horses I flatter myself that I broke the world's record this season by disposing of 41 trotting bred high steppers in one evening at an average of more than $1700. I have been more than impressed with the extraordinary demand for saddle horses and for combination saddle and harness horses. For one firm of shippers I held no less than five special sales of such horses, and the last sale was the most successful of all.

Ringers in the show ring are becoming as numerous as they are on the trotting tracks. At one of the recent exhibitions a horse that won a championship at Providence a few years ago turned up in a novice class and got the blue ribbon.

Racing at Santa Maria.

A race meeting was held at the track in Santa Maria, Santa Barbara county, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, October 3d, 4th and 5th. The weather was poor for racing, as a very strong wind prevailed, filling the air with dust and making it very disagreeable for everybody. Still there was a large attendance on the last day of the meeting.

On Thursday there were three races.

The first, a 2:24 trot, was won by Leader, Liorely's speedy animal taking the first three heats in succession. L. W. was second and Maud Alameda third. Best time, 2:26.

The second race was a half-mile dash. It was won by Detective in 0:51 and Bruce Jr. second.

The third was for horses owned in the district only, a quarter-mile and repeat. Henry Bonnetti's Countess won, John L. second and Favorita third.

But two races were on the program for Friday.

The first was a 2:27 trot, won by Blosser's L. W. This horse took the three heats, Santa Rosa, belonging to Sheriff Ivins of San Luis, second, and Frank Trainor's Lady Mack third. Best time, 2:30½.

The next race was won by Jeff Anderson's Oma A., Sam Carson's Morris A. second, and Robiscioti third. It was a race for the 2:40 class, and the best time made was 2:32.

Saturday, the last day, was favored by better weather and a large crowd turned out to see the sport.

The first race was free for all trot, in which Leader took three straight heats, winning the race and first money; Lady Mae, second; L. W., third. Time, 2:25.

The race for buggy horses, to be driven by their owners, was an interesting one, creating both amusement and excitement. The entries were T. H. Martin's Spud, Geo. Gaster's Nellie G., Mike Donovan's Del Sur, and Henry Bonetti's Don Patricio. The race was taken by Spud in 3:01.

The novelty, or mile and a quarter running race, in which Detective, Bruce Jr. and Countess participated, was won by Detective, this horse being in the lead of the entire five quarters and winning all the money.

North Yakima Races.

The Washington State Fair held at North Yakima began October 1st and closed October 5th. The feature of the racing was the wonderful showing made by Diodine a mare by Diahlo, who won two races in straight heats, four of the heats being below 2:12. She must be of the same class as that other pacing whirlwind, Sir Albert S. 2:08½. Following are the summaries of the harness races at the meeting:

Pacing, 2:20 class, purse $1000—Diodine, by Diablo 1 1 1, Hassall 3 2 4, Sam Bowers 5 3 2, Harry Hurst 4 4 3, Le Roi 2 5 dis, Francisco 6 dis. Time—2:10½, 2:11½, 2:11½.

Trotting, special, two year olds, purse $100—Belladi 1 1, Flaxie D 3 2, J. S. 2 3, Bernhardt 4 4. Time—2:57½, 2:48½.

Trotting, 2:20 class, purse $1000—Mt. Hood by Westfield 1 1 1, Saxaline 3 2 2, Mack Mack 3 4 3, Babe Chapman 5 3 4, Zoo Zoo 6 6 6. Time—2:25, 2:21, 2:21.

Pacing, two year olds—Ollie M., by Westfield 1 1, Miladi 5 2, Oregon Sunshine 2 5, Dr. Luhn 3 4, Haydee 4 3, Dr. Newland dis. Time—2:21½, 2:19½.

Trotting, 2:20 class—Oveta, by Caution 1 1 2 1, Phil N. 3 4 1 4, Mt. Hood 2 2 4 2, Kitty Caution 5 3 5 3, Bob Kirk 4 5 4 5. Time—2:16½, 2:15½, 2:21½, 2:17½.

Pacing, 2:15 class, purse $1000—Diodine, by Diablo 1 1 1, Starkey 2 2 2, Pathmark 3 3 3, Alta Norte dis. Time—2:10½, 2:15½, 2:14½.

Trotting, 2:40 class, purse $300—Zoo Zoo 2 1 2 1 1, Jupiter 1 2 1 3 2, Mack Mack 3 3 3 2 3. Time—2:22½, 2:23½, 2:24½, 2:25, 2:23½.

Trotting, free for all special—Ned Thorne, by Billy Thornhill 4 1 1, Bob Kirk 1 3 2, Phil N 2 2 3, Oveta 4 4 4. Time—2:16½, 2:16½, 2:18½.

A good trainer is as necessary to the success of a stock farm in the production of race winners as is a good sire and a good lot of brood mares, says the Horse World. The value of a good trainer was shown during the last two weeks when John Hussey was shown two green performers from the Patchen Wilkes Farm went out and won races in Grand Circuit company, and made the farm from which these performers came, better known by so doing than could have been done in any other manner. With the green trotter Prince Selma, Hussey won an excellent race at Cincinnati, giving him a record of 2:16, and at Terre Haute last week with the green pacer Nathan Straus he won a sensational race, giving that horse a record of 2:09½. General Tracy's Marshland Farm, too, came prominently before the public last week at Poughkeepsie, through the efforts of that good trainer, John Dickerson, who won a good race with the four year old trotting mare, Adaria, giving her a record of 2:15½. The lesson is plain: A good trainer will make a reputation for a stock farm that has been breeding in the right lines.

Strike!—If they don't give you Jackson's Napa Soda when you ask for it.

SULKY NOTES.

Cresceus will be in California next month.

Pleasanton meeting November 1st and 2nd.

Reka Direct 2:14½ is a new 2:15 pacer for Direct 2:05½.

Sir Albert S. is the greatest money winner of the year in California.

Every agricultural district in the State wants to hold a fair next year.

The Sacramento Driving Club's matinee last Saturday was a great success.

Lady Rowena 2:28½ is a new performer for Pilot Prince, son of Dexter Prince.

The Pacific Breeders Futurity is one of the most successful stakes ever opened.

Dr. J. J. Summerfield of Santa Rosa, has a prize winning coach stallion for sale.

Village Farm will consign about one hundred horses to the Chicago sale next month.

Hollister's fair and race meeting will open Wednesday of next week and continue four days.

Durfee Macis doing well. He won again at Stockton last Tuesday, his fastest heat in 2:17½.

Nutwood Wilkes has four new ones in the list this year, headed by Stanton Wilkes 2:10½.

Stockton's very successful meeting closes to-day. The attendance has been good throughout.

Cresceus 2:02½ will attempt to beat his own peerless record over the Minnehaha track October 31st.

It is reported that the books managed by Caesar Young cleaned up $5000 at the Los Angeles meeting.

Hollister's fair and race meeting will begin next Wednesday. Everything points to a successful program.

J. M. Nelson was in front in two races at Stockton last Wednesday, winning both harness races on the card for that day.

I. C. Mosher left Salem, Oregon, with his horses on Thursday of this week for Los Angeles, where he will make his home in the future.

See Flying Jib at Pleasanton, November 1st and 2d. He can brush as fast as he ever could and it is worth the trip there to see him do it.

Second payment of $5 is due Saturday, November 1st, on entries to the Stanford stake of 1903, which closed June 1st, this year, with 89 entries.

Petaluma has one of the best tracks in the State, and should make a strong effort to have the Sonoma and Marin district fair held there next year.

Pleasanton's meeting, which opens next Friday will be one of the most enjoyable of the entire circuit. The celebrated track was never in better shape.

Algregor 2:11 is dead. He got mixed up in a runaway a few weeks ago and was badly injured. He never recovered from the effects of it and died last week.

McKinney 2:11½ will probably lead all sires in the number of new standard performers for 1901. We can count no less than fourteen up to the present time.

Those who enjoy looking at handsome horses should be at the Pleasanton meeting, November 1st and 2d. The display will be the best ever seen in Alameda county.

There will be quite a number of Eastern buyers in California this winter looking for good trotting and pacing prospects, but they will have to see the speed before they will pay for it.

S. H. Hoy of Winters has been in the city this week. He has taken up a few colts by his horse Bayswater Wilkes that he will get ready to train in the spring. Kelly Briggs 2:10½ is in fine shape.

Napa will give one of the best meetings on the circuit next year. It is proposed to have the track in the best possible condition and that means that it will be as fast as any mile track in America.

It was never intended by those who drew up the appropriation bill which provides for the district fairs, that hookmaking should be among the industries whose growth should be encouraged.

Ketcham and Cresceus will eat their Thanksgiving dinners at Sacramento this year. California turkey will be new to Mr. Ketcham, but the best of California oats and hay are very familiar to the champion trotter.

Washington McKinney, a son of the champion sire of California, has had a number of good mares bred to time this year, and will be among the stallions in the Great Trade as soon as his produce are old enough to race.

Dolly Dillon 2:07 was at herself again when she started in the 2:10 class trot at Lexington last Tuesday. She won in straight heats with Onward Silver, Torgles and other fast ones behind her. Her fastest mile was 3:10½.

The total paid attendance at the Minnesota State Fair this year was 181,105 for the six days, an average of a little over 30,000 each day. An order has been given for a new grand stand to seat fifty thousand people.

Prince A. Poniatowski of this city owns a high stepper by Silver Bow 2:16 that is said to be one of the greatest prospects of horse show prize winner ever seen in this country. It is reported that $5000 was recently refused for this horse.

McNally 2:15 by McKinney is now used as a roadster by Mr. J. S. Bransford of Salt Lake City, who purchased him from S. H. Hoy of Winters in September last. McNally is one of the most stylish horses that is driven over the roads in the city by the great inland salt sea.

Goff Topsail, by Diablo, in addition to making a new record of 2:16, and reducing the Concord track record to 2:16½, has shown himself a much improved horse this year in Jos. Smith's care, and should be able to pace to a mark close to 2:10 next year, and perhaps to beat it.

John Blue started Ed Gaylord's Yarrum in the 2:20 trot at Lexington last week and got third money. The race was won by Galbater in 2:12½, 2:13½ and 2:12½. There were seven starters in the race and Yarrum made a good showing, as the time was pretty fast for the class.

Peter Sterling is one of the greatest three year olds ever produced. His performance in the $10,000 Louisville Prize, where he won in straight heats, was evidence of his great ability as a trotter. His best heat in this race was in 2:12, but he could have beaten even that fast time.

Ollis McKinney 2:21, the mare by McKinney 2:11½, out of an Electioneer mare, that has been racing through the Mississippi valley circuit this year, is a very handsome mare according to a photograph of her which recently appeared in the Chicago Inter-Ocean. She won six straight races.

One hundred and seven horses won over $1000 each on the Grand Circuit this year. This does not include the meetings at New York, Lexington and several other places. When the Memphis meeting is over the winnings of the year will show that many more than this number earned more than a thousand dollars.

C. P. Ferrell of Reno, Nevada, brought his handsome mare Peggy 2:17 over to the Stockton meeting this week and started her Wednesday in the 2:17 pace, where she made a good showing but did not win. Peggy was second in the first, third and fifth heats and third in the other two, all the finishes being very close.

Two three year olds by Nutwood Wilkes entered the standard list at the Stockton meeting last Wednesday. One was the bay filly Rosie Wood, the other the young stallion T. C. The latter trotted the first heat of the race in 2:30, but was beaten the other heats in faster time by Rosie Wood, the filly getting a record of 2:22½ in the fourth heat.

Ed Geers marked Athanio and always fancied he would be a great sire at Village Farm. The Hamlins, however, having so many stallions, sold the great trotter for $10,000 to the foreigners. The few he left here in America are nearly all very fast as youngsters and a few at Village Farm will some day make turf history of brilliant character.

Zomhro's list of mares bred to him this year is now 101, as two more were mated with him last week, one of them Kittie Lee 2:29½ by Rockwood, dam by Kisber. He stands second in the list of stallions represented in the Pacific Breeders Futurity this year, McKinney leading with 36 of the mares bred to him, Zomhro coming next with 24 and Nutwood Wilkes third with 20.

A match race between the pacer 1 Direct 2:12½ driven by H. H. Dunlap and Lynam 2:16 driven by Geo. Kingsbury, came off over the speedway in Golden Gate Park one day last week. 1 Direct won in three straight heats, the best time 2:20½. It is thought by many horsemen that this handsome little son of Direct will be able to lower his record whenever he is carefully prepared for the attempt.

Bet Madison made a good showing at Los Angeles even though she did not win. In the 2:25 trot won by Thomas R. she was a good second in the third and fourth heats in 2:16 and 2:18, although she was not in condition for a bruising race. This daughter of James Madison is not only fast, but is a large, well proportioned mare whose individuality and breeding should enable her to achieve fame in the broodmare ranks.

The Mendocino County Fair held at Ukiah during the first week in this month was a splendid success. Secretary Donohoe reports that the gate receipts on Saturday, the last day, were $425, which shows that the people of Mendocino county are sufficiently interested in their district fair and race meeting to give it a generous patronage, and is also evidence that the Board of Directors prepared an exhibition that the public gave its endorsement to.

Geo. H. Ketcham, owner of Cresceus, made the following statement to a press reporter at Toledo, Ohio, last Saturday: "I have taken off thirty pounds since the first of May, and if I could only get to 135 pounds I would drive Cresceus in two minutes. I will take the horse to Columbus Monday and will try to reduce his record next week on that track. I will take him from Columbus to Kansas City and will visit Minneapolis, St. Paul, Pueblo, Denver, Salt Lake City, Sacramento, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Las Vegas, El Paso, Albuquerque and the City of Mexico, which will make a very pleasant and profitable trip. I shall not consider the offer to exhibit Cresceus on the vaudeville stage, as he is booked solid until the stud season will open."

Ben Griffin of Yolo county is the owner of a colt that will not be two years old until next April that can pace an eighth in 17 seconds any day over the half mile track on Mr. Griffin's place. This colt is by Bayswater Wilkes out of Claribel, the dam of G. W. W. 2:23½, by Privateer. This is one of the most promising youngsters we have heard of this year.

Not a week passes but some person who desires to buy a trotter or pacer comes to this office and asks to look over the Year Book or the files of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN to see how some horse that has been offered them performed when he raced. We know of several instances where a horse with a fast record has been passed up by buyers who liked his appearance, for the reason that the record of his races showed a painful repetition of "1-9-dis" or something very similar.

President H. J. Curry of the Contra Costa Fair Association paid this office a pleasant call last week. He tells us that it is the intention of the Directors of District No. 23 to make the fair of 1902 more attractive and successful than any of its predecessors and that the entire Board is unanimous in this. There has not been a better fair held in California in years than the one given by the Contra Costa Association at Concord last month, and if the directors improve on it next year they will do well.

Quite a large number of entries were made to the Pacific Breeders Futurity that could not be received owing to the fact that they were mailed too late. Had these nominators not neglected to post their letters on October 1st, the stake would have had a dozen more entries. There are quite a number of applications in already for substitutions in cases where mares may die or fail to be in foal. There has not been as much interest among California breeders over any stake in recent years as this one.

John A. Lafferty, father of the well-known trainer, Ed. Lafferty, died suddenly at his home in Pleasanton on Thursday of last week. For several years Mr. Lafferty has been an invalid, suffering from fatty degeneration of the heart. He was taken so suddenly, however, that his death was a surprise to all. Mr. Lafferty was born in Richmond, Virginia, sixty-seven years ago. He was a widower and leaves a daughter, Mrs. C. L. Alderson of Pleasanton, besides his son Edward to mourn his loss.

William's G. Layng's great pacer, Sir Albert S. 2:08½, retires from his first campaign with a record which no other horse in America has equalled this year. He started a green horse, and has won every heat of the six races in which he took the word. The slowest of the eighteen heats was 2:13 and in not one did he lift his head or even attempt to make a break. He is as sound and clean as a new milled dollar and the only question in the minds of horsemen is, how fast can he pace when he is driven to his limit?

A correspondent writes to ask when Sunol raced at the Oakland track against Margaret S. It was at the meeting of the Golden Gate Fair Association in 1889. The race was trotted September 5th. Sunol won in straight heats, with Margaret S. second each time and Lillian Wilkes third. There were no other starters. The time of the three heats was 2:21, 2:24½ and 2:20. The purse was $800 for three year old trotters. Marvin drove Sunol, Andy McDowell piloted Margaret S. and John Goldsmith held the reins over the Wilkes mare. Sunol's record of 2:08½ was made at Stockton, Cal., October 20, 1891.

Thos. Lawson has a mighty good two year old in Oxford Boy, winner of this year's two year old division of the Kentucky Futurity. It took four heats to decide the race, the bay filly Patty Mac winning the first heat in 2:20½, Oxford Boy getting the second in 2:22, Marvin's Grace Eldred winning the third in 2:17, the fastest mile for a two year old this year, and Oxford Boy outlasting the others and taking the fourth heat in 2:20. Oxford Boy is by Red Clute and is certainly a very game colt, but Grace Eldred, who was second in every heat she did not win, is also a game one.

Horse owners who wish to sell their trotters and pacers this winter will have plenty of opportunities, as there are certain to be a number of Eastern buyers here looking for good racing prospects and high-class roadsters. It would be well, therefore, to keep horses that are for sale in training, so that speed can be shown, as few purchasers now pay any money out on stories. If an owner has an animal that he claims can trot in 2:25 and is sound, he must show a mile in that time on the track while the prospective buyer holds the watch, and must then be willing to submit the horse to a veterinarian for examination. Otherwise there will not be many sales made.

The following written by Edward Cogswell of the Boston Traveler shows that some of the conditions that prevail in California also prevail on some of the Eastern tracks: "I have heard secretaries say that if not a single dollar was taken in at the gate the association would lose nothing. That would show what it is that maintains trotting racing: it is the pool seller, the privilege man, and the owner; the public can come if it likes, and when it does come must look after itself, and in consequence of this there are many instances where the racing itself was so conducted that the hookmaker is pleased and the spectators disgusted. All this is true, and what is more the pity, there is no prospect that there will be any change in conditions, because the horse owner and the track manager both seem to be supremely satisfied to have things just as they are. If the owner is satisfied to pay the bills, and the track man can rely upon his doing so, they can snap their fingers at the public. The sale of privileges and the admission fees are the legitimate sources of income to a race track, and they should pay all the expenses, but they do not, by a long ways."

EASTERN NOTES AND NEWS.

The net profit of the Indiana State Fair is estimated $16,000.

Six of the new 2:10 pacers of the year are out of developed mares.

Hal McEwen 2:10½ was recently sold at auction in Philadelphia for $600.

Hazel Pointer 2:14½ is another good one credited to the champion Star Pointer.

It is reported that the Whitely Stable has been offered $12,000 for Edith W. 2:05.

Seven races with a total of 26 heats were finished in one day last week at Burgettstown, Pa.

Harold H. 2:04½, 2:06½, 2:04, at Terre Haute—fastest three consecutive heats paced this year.

Edith W. 2:07½ at Portland, Ind.—world's fastest mile by a pacing mare on a half-mile track.

Harold H. 2:04 is by long odds the fastest harness horse ever bred outside of the United States.

Excepting Cresceus, Dartmore 2:11½, at Terre Haute, is the fastest trotter by Robert McGregor 2:17½.

Men are busily engaged in searching the country over for fast trotters and pacers to race next year.

It now looks as though more trotters and pacers would earn over $10,000 this season than ever before.

The Abbot trotted the last half of his 2:04½ mile at Terre Haute in just one minute and made a break in the stretch.

It is stated that the hearing-rein has been abolished on all the horses of Her Majesty the Queen of the Netherlands.

Axtell has three new 2:15 performers—Ozenam (4) 2:11½ and Axtellion 2:14½, trotters, and Home Circle 2:13½, pacing.

The Hamlins say they have agreed to sell Lord Derby to a New Yorker when Geers brings his horses north from Memphis.

Dan Patch is the only "unbeaten" horse that has come through the Grand Circuit. He has ten victories attached to his girdle.

Eleata 2:08½ is reported booked to Cresceus. After her hard campaign this season it does not seem good judgment to breed her.

Dick See, the bay stallion by Tennessee Wilkes, won the $1,000 2:18 pacing stake at Baltimore last week pacing two heats in 2:10½.

George Ketcham thinks that Cresceus' mile in 2:04½ at Belmont Park was, track considered, about the best mile that he ever trotted.

Director 2:17 gets another 2:10 performer in the pacer Nathan Straus 2:09½. This fellow is out of Mary Marshall 2:12½ by Billy Wilkes.

The Bishop 2:07½ by Argot Wilkes was separately timed in the third heat of the 2:07 pace, at Terre Haute, which Harold H. won in 2:04.

It is announced that the Swiss government has under consideration the expediency of summoning a conference on the subject of the sufferings of the horse in war.

The Grand Circuit has been in existence for thirty years, and never in its history has the attendance been so uniformly large and the interest so keen as this year.

The Charter Oak has been raced for sixteen times, and Eleata stands second in the fastest time for the stake, the top-notch being Georgena, who won it last year in 2:07½.

Sagwa 2:13½, for whom Thomas W. Lawson paid $7100 two years ago, made his initial bow as a pacer Monday in the 2:20 class. His unsteadiness put him behind the money.

The American Association of Horse Shows has been organized at Louisville. It included the Des Moines, Louisville, Nashville, Memphis, Kansas City, St. Louis and Denver associations.

The surest way to prevent ringing is to brand the animals that take records. This can be done under the mane without injury to the animal. All the trotters bred at Palo Alto are branded.

Wavelet 2:24½ by Belmont, out of old Waterwitch, is the dam of Marique 2:14½ and Wavelite 2:17½, two new trotters of 1901, by Expedition 2:15½, the son of Electioneer now owned by C. W. Williams.

Mr. Hiram P. Mills of Mt. Morris, N. Y., aged 95 years, has just bought a $400 pair of high-steppers and may be seen taking his constitutional drive any fine day. He has been in business eighty years.

A company of capitalists is being organized in Toledo, O., to build a splendid mile track, as fine as money and science can make, and then Toledo will make a bid for entrance to the Grand Circuit.

W. P. Ijams uses Axtell (3) 2:12 on the road when out of the stud. The $105,000 horse is a perfect roadster and always excites comment when he appears on Terre Haute's streets. Mr. Ijams says that Axtell owes his owners nothing, as his hook has been full and mares turned away every year since his purchase.

It looks now as though Lord Derby's chances of lowering the world's trotting record are better than those of The Abbot 2:03½. He is bred right to equal the other in courage and surpass him in endurance.

Arrangements have been completed for disinterring the bones of George Wilkes 2:22, the renowned trotting horse sire, and they will be mounted and placed in the museum of the Kentucky State College at Lexington.

The great trotting stallion Pilatus 2:09½, formerly owned in this city, now the property of J. J. Douglas, Louisville, Ky., captured third prize at the Louisville Horse Show after hot competition. There were twelve candidates.

J. L. Butt of Gettysburg, Pa., drove his mare Dolly Wilkes by Red Wilkes, dam Dolly Smith by Fisk's Mambrino Chief Jr., in 2:24½ in an effort against time at the Pimlico track, Baltimore, on Thursday, October 3d. This gives the good mare Dolly Smith seven in the standard list of performers.

A Western correspondent states that "Warren Lewis (a Grand Circuit) auctioneer of Ypsilanti, Mich., sold thirty-one head unbroken Western bred horses at public auction at Saline, Mich., Saturday, October 5th. Prices $46 to $76 per head. The highest prices a hand of Western horses have ever sold for in southern Michigan.

Dan Patch 2:04½ and Harold H. 2:04 are to meet in the 2:08 pacing stake at Memphis. The race has been much talked of and opinions are divided as to the outcome. Harold H. is the hardest proposition McHenry's bread-winner has been asked to meet this year, and Dan's most ardent admirers admit that "fur will fly," as the Canadian horse is the real thing.

Hon. Frank Jones said recently he would pay Ed Geers any amount of salary he should demand, if he but could secure the famous trainer to take his Maplewood Farm horses. Mr. Geers will hardly leave the Village Farm, however, at least while C. J. Hamlin lives. He has been there now since January 1, 1892, and his success with the Hamlin bred trotters and pacers has been marked.

There is one thing very old fashioned and familiar in connection with all of the record-breaking miles by American trotters. The track is anywhere from one to five seconds slow; it is either too wet or too dry, and a high wind always blows up the home stretch. I am sometimes led to wonder just how fast a horse could trot a mile if all the conditions were favorable.—Columbus, in the West Horseman.

The bay pacing mare Twinkle 2:13½ by Mercury, son of Sidney, who was second to Martha Marshall at Columbus in 2:07½ and raced at other points, has foaled a black colt by Archie 2:17½. The youngster was foaled just two months after the Columbia race. Within two months of her time, Twinkle probably made a world's record for a fast mile under the conditions. She is owned by Douglas Boyd, of Griffin, Ga.

The old time trotting mare Lady M. by Hamlet, that took her record of 2:23 in the fourth heat of a seven-heat race she won at Freeport, Ill., in 1886, is represented on the turf by three trotters this year. Two of them have beaten 2:20, Producer 2:17½ by Pilot Medium and Vervian 2:19½ by Sable Guy, while the third, P. D. Q. by Lee's Pilot, has earned a record of 2:20½, and all trotted to their records on a half-mile track.

About $20,000 has been spent this summer in improving the covered track at Jewettville. Most of the buildings have been reshingled, four carriage barns have been built, a 300-foot covered passageway connecting the second barn with the track constructed and the interior of the track and stalls whitewashed. The track surface is also being replenished with tanbark. Horsemen will hardly know the place this winter.

That was a great race which Chestnut won in the 2:11 pace at Terre Haute last Friday. He was known as one of the best and fastest half-mile track campaigners in Indiana, but not many horsemen had thought of him as capable of going three such miles as he did. Even 2:08½, 2:07½ and 2:09 did not seem to distress him in the least. He is owned by L. H. Brown, Danville, Ind., who has received several good offers for him lately.

The way Little Squaw stepped her third heat in 2:06, pulled up, at Terre Haute, made her look like a championship aspirant among pacing mares. She now holds the record for three year old fillies, 2:09½, and is for the first time in her best form since that period—two years ago. She will mix up with Dan Patch, Shadow Chimes, Mazette, Council Chimes, The Bishop and Sir Alcantara in the $3,000 Tennessee purse at Lexington.

The well known Iowa trainer, J. H. Lish, Manson Iowa, writes Spirit of the West, and a postscript which reads: "Tell Tom James that I am handling a three-year-old colt by Barondale 2:11½, out of La Maud, by Adrian Wilkes, that has paced quarters even over our track at Manson in 33 seconds. He is a great colt and a sure candidate for a low mark if trained and driven next season. The colt belongs to Dr. Dunkle, of Glidden, who purchased La Maud of P. S. Kell, of Des Moines."

In an account of the brushes on the New York speedway which took place October 7th, the New York Telegram says: Mr. A. B. Gwathmey and his bay trotter Tiverton 2:23½ proved a winning combination. In his first start Tiverton met the black trotter Equity 2:12½, one of the Buffalo champions that A. E. Perren has in his stable, and beat him handily. Then Mr. Straus, with Freddie 2:16½, made it a three-cornered go, and again Tiverton was the winner. Freddie finished in second place. Then Mr. Straus took the reins behind Belton Jr. and made a persistent effort to take the measure of Mr. Gwathmey's standard bearer, but Tiverton beat him in three straight heats.

The second three year old trotter in the list for Axtell this year is the colt Say Tell. Although a giant, like his full brother, Praytell 2:09½, he stepped around the half-mile track at Brockton, Mass., last week, in 2:23½, 2:24½ and 2:22½, on a trot.

Range horses from Colorado, Wyoming and Montana are winning praise and popularity in England. Broncos of the type that speculators were canning for export three or four years ago are now being used in England for polo and the hunting field. English critics say they are natural jumpers and as handy as cats, in addition to being hardy and of fine fibre.

There is a whirlwind three year old at Terra Haute, according to the Chicago Horse Review, which contained the following last week: Fleming & Son, the well-known Terre Haute horsemen, have a three year old pacer that caused much talk throughout the week in his workouts. The colt wears no leg rigging whatever and worked a mile on Wednesday in 2:08, last half in 1:02, last quarter in 29½ seconds. Tertimen (2) 2:24½ is his title. He is by Jersey Wilkes-Sybil by Abdallah Woodford.

In one of the closing events at the Nashville Horse Show last Saturday, Sure Pop, a big rangy Canadian bred gelding, owned by Crow & Murray of Toronto, broke the world's high jumping record by clearing bars at seven feet and four inches. The horse made a seven-foot jump with ease and his owners instructed the attendants to raise the bars four inches higher. Sure Pop was ridden slowly up to the obstruction in order to give him an idea of the jump and was then allowed to make his run. He made a clean jump at the first attempt.

Cresceus lowered the world's trotting record on a half-mile track one-quarter of a second at Toledo last week. The record was previously held by himself, having been made in the Toledo track a year ago. It was 2:09½. He trotted for the benefit of the charitable institutions of the city and more than 40,000 people gathered to see him. The receipts were $18,000. Cresceus got a very slow start, and with a running mate passed the quarter in 32½. The three-quarters pole was reached in 1:36½. The horses went under the wire in 2:09½, which is the fastest mile ever trotted on a half-mile track.

Says the American Horse Breeder: "While a group of horsemen was discussing the racing problem recently, one who has had years of experience in the sulky and around race meetings remarked that there should be a rule forbidding drivers from carrying watches in their hands while driving in races. It not only looks suspicious, but sometimes makes it dangerous for the other drivers. When a horse breaks or swerves the driver needs free use of both hands to catch him or keep him in line, which is impossible when there is a watch in one hand. When racing for money the attention of the man in the sulky should be concentrated upon his horse."

Harold H. 2:04 is the seventeenth pacer to enter the 2:04 list, a fact that seems quite remarkable, when it is recalled that it was as recent as 1892 when the 2:04 list was started by Mascot, with a record of just 2:04. Five of the 2:04 pacers have records below 2:02, and two others have records of just 2:02, so that the 2:02 list with seven in it has already attained respectable proportions. When a class for 2:05 pacers was announced a couple of years ago by one or two race secretaries, it was almost regarded as the limit to which classes for pacers might be reduced, but now a class for 2:02 pacers might be made with prospects of getting four starters at least. With such an increase in the number of extremely fast pacers as has characterized the last three years, it really does not seem at all wild to predict that within the next ten years a race secretary may announce a purse for two-minute pacers and secure it in a reasonably large field of starters.—Horse World.

The sale of trotters at the Readville meeting brought some very good prices for stock that was bred right. Only four of the get of Bingen 2:06½ were offered and they brought an average of $466, there being two yearlings. The highest priced one was Col. Mosby, dam by Advertiser, which sold for $750; Kaiser Frederick, dam by Imported Meddler, brought $420; a three year old filly, dam by King Wilkes, brought $350; and a three year old grey gelding, dam by Advertiser, fetched $345. Hour 2:17 by Onward, although seventeen years old, sold for $500; Masconomo, a four year old colt in training by Arion 2:07½, out of Hour 2:17, brought $525; a yearling colt by Peter the Great 2:07½; a four year old mare by Larabie the Great 2:12½, $135; a yearling gelding by Arion 2:07½, dam by Prodigal 2:16, $300; a three year old bay filly by Prodigal 2:16, $350; a four year old mare by Larabie the Great 2:12½, dam by Electioneer, $260; a three year old colt by Robert McGregor, $460; Juno T. 2:13½ (7) by Iowa Chief, $925.

Paronella, dam of Country Jay 2:10½, is comparatively a young mare, having been foaled in 1892, and the chances are that her name will be found in the great brood mare table by the time she rounds out the first decade of her existence, as two or three of her produce have shown exceedingly well in their work. She is a black mare by Parkville, son of Electioneer, dam Minnie Merrill by Young Jim, grandam Minnie West by Allie West, and was bred by R. C. Estill, near Lexington, who still owns her. Her son Country Jay has been one of the largest money winners of the season and a very consistent race horse with it, and the fact that he was got by Jay Hawker probably led the owner of Paronella to mate her with Jay McGregor, one of the handsomest colts from the loins of that stallion. Jay Hawker's early death was a serious loss to the breeding interest, as he would certainly have made a brilliant success in the stud, if one may judge by the qualities displayed by Country Jay 2:10½, Suste J. 2:12½ and Jay McGregor 2:25½, trial 2:15.

San Francisco, Saturday, October 19, 1901.

ROAD HORSES ARE IN DEMAND from Maine to California and there is not a sound roadster in the whole country to-day that will not bring a fair price. There are many horses, however, that are called roadsters by their admiring owners which will not bring a road horse figure because they are not in the class for which the demand exists. Looks, speed and good manners are necessary qualifications for a twentieth century road horse. Too many enthusiastic owners who have horses possessing these qualities get the idea in their heads that their animals are too good for the road, are race horses, and therefore worth a race horse price. Hundreds of men are paying out money each month on animals that they are anxious to sell, but cannot because their selling price is too high. There will, without doubt, be quite a large number of Eastern buyers in the California market during the next six months, who will come here for the purpose of buying roadsters and harness race horses that they can make some money out of, and they will meet the sellers and fail to trade because they find the prices as high or higher here than in the East, consequently will go home empty handed and ready to spread the information that Californians do not want to sell. There are hundreds of men in the State to-day who have old and outclassed horses on their hands because they have always been unwilling to accept a price that will enable the purchaser to make a profitable turn. In other words, they insisted on getting the very highest value for their horses and begrudged they buyer a chance of making a profit on his investment. This plan is suicidal and will eventually wreck any business. If an Eastern buyer can come here this winter, pick up a carload at $200 per head and get $500 for them after reaching home, he will in all probability come again and again as long as he can make a profit that will pay him for his time and expense. But if he finds that he must pay two hundred dollars for horses that will not bring more than two hundred and fifty at Chicago or New York, he does not care to invest again and seeks other fields for operation. So we would advise all California horse breeders and owners who want to sell to place reasonable prices on their animals. It is far better to sell a horse for $200 in November than to keep him through the winter and only get $250 for him in May. Another thing: Don't imagine that every horse you own is a prospective record breaker. Two really valuable horses, the ones that bring the big prices and are worth it, are as scarce as high class statesmen in the human family. Every horse that can show a quarter in thirty-five seconds is not a 2:20 horse by any means. Probably out of fifty trotters raced this year in California that failed to trot a heat in 2:20 and were beaten in slower time, forty-nine of them showed quarters in thirty-five seconds last spring. The country is full of men who are willing to pay reasonable prices for prospects, but the ranks of the "sucker" buyers are growing thinner every day. The school of which that expensive professor, Experience, is the head, has been crowded with pupils for the past ten years, and a very large proportion of the graduates took a course in horse buying for profit. It cost them a big sum to graduate and they now fully understand that everything that trots does not race. There can be a large business done this winter in the horse markets of California if the prices are not boosted too high by those who want to sell. Buyers are ready to pay fair figures, but extravagant ones will prevent transfers being made. A word to the wise is sufficient.

THE CONTROVERSY between the "developed" and "undveloped dam" theorists (no profanity intended) is still pursuing the even tenor of its way. The Western Horseman gets in a pretty good straight arm blow as follows: "While it is true that the produce of some broodmares who, in their day, 'wont and did it' are certainly having a great season, it is also true 'there are others' which are constantly 'in it,' through their produce, who themselves never 'took a trick' in the turf game. For instance the dams of Cresceus 2:02½, Boralma 2:07, Dolly Dillon 2:07, Country Jay 2:11½, Onward Silver 2:08, May Allen 2:09½, Anaconda 2:01½, Prince Alert 2:02, Dan Patch 2:04½, Edith W. 2:05, Audubon Boy 2:06 and a few hundreds of others, including the dams of the smart youngsters, Carrie Bell (3) 2:14½, Gavatta (3) 2:15½, etc. Developed dams are strictly all right, but they are not the 'whole thing,' by any sort of means."

HENRY T. COATES, of Philadelphia, has lately published a book entitled "A Short History of the American Trotting and Pacing Horse" which is worth reading. A large portion of it is devoted to descriptions and performances of the early record breakers of the trotting era from 2:30 to 2:10, and some graphic descriptions of old time races from the pens of witnesses are given. There is a chapter of cullings from the experience of practical horsemen in driving, shoeing and doctoring horses, and the last pages of the book are occupied with tabulated pedigrees of many of the prominent trotters and pacers of America. Mr. Coates is the owner of Saladin 2:05½, one of the hand-somest, as well as one of the fastest horses ever bred in California.

HERE IS A RECORD that George Castle, a well known Eastern trainer, can well be proud of. Up to the 1st of October, the horses in his stable this year had made seventy-two starts, winning thirty-seven first moneys, fifteen second moneys, eight third moneys, five fourth moneys and seven times unplaced.

Two Days of Enjoyment.

Would you forget your ills and cares, your troubles and anxieties?
And leave behind you woe in all its infinite varieties?
Just jump aboard the train upon the first day of November
With a ticket in your pocket—(this you surely must remember)
Make your destination Pleasanton, for right in that community
From all your tribulations you can find complete immunity.
Your mind will there be free from thoughts of business gains and losses,
And you'll revel in a sea of bliss as you contemplate the "hosses."

Frank S. Smith writes as follows in the Horse World: "Buffalonians are delighted because Mr. A. H. Miller's good horse Council Chimes 2:07½ is in winning form. This son of Chimes captured another great race at Terre Haute, and is certainly one of the brightest pacing stars of 1901. Mr. Miller has been a liberal purchaser of high class horses for several years, but Council Chimes is the only campaigner that so far has proven himself to be a real crackerjack. The popular Buffalonian has stuck to the game steadfastly, like a true Sir Thomas Lipton sportsman, and it is for this reason that his many friends are glad to see him own a winner." Mr. Miller is a cousin of C. A. Winship of Los Angeles and owns quite a number of California horses, among them Agitato 2:09, Mamie Griffin 2:12 and Lolita 2:17.

This has been the greatest pool selling year in the history of trotterdom, writes an Eastern correspondent. Frank Hordic alone has auctioneered fully a half million dollars more in tickets this season than ever before. This is accounted for from the fact that a greater number of gentlemen of large wealth are engaged in the popular pastime than heretofore, and when the plunging bulls and bears get to going their limit makes the ordinary man's hair curl. Nobody but a millionaire has any right to campaign a stable nowadays. There is more money in staying at home and sawing wood.

This is the second year in succession that the Kentucky Futurity has been won by the get of sons of Baron Wilkes, Fereno, last year's winner, being by Moko (brother to Bumps 2:03½) by that noted sire. In nine years the stake has been won but twice by other than descendants in the direct male line of George Wilkes; in 1898 by Peter the Great, son of Pilot Medium and in 1899 by Boralma, a descendant of Electioneer.

Walnut Hall took Peter Sterling to the half in the second heat of the Kentucky Futurity in 1:05½, the second quarter in 30½ seconds and was lapped on him to the distance flag, where the gelding drew away and won by a length in 2:11½.

Col. W. C. Cornwell, President of the Hawaiian Jockey Club, and a wealthy business man of Honolulu is up from the islands on a visit.

Lord Derby and John A. McKerron.

[Chicago Horseman.]

Outside of the most important of the stake events interest at the Lexington meeting will center in the effort of Lord Derby against the watch. The announcement which came from Buffalo last week regarding the future movements of this noted horse was the most important happening of the week in turf circles. Brought about by the effort of Secretary Wilson on behalf of T. W. Lawson for another go against Boralma for $5000 a side, and later for $10,000 a side, both of which were rejected, Harry Hamlin announced that he had instructed Mr. Geers to drive Lord Derby to the fastest record possible and to bring the horse home sound, preparatory to a sale of the trotter to a New York horseman. Good day and track, Lord Derby is likely to place his record at a lower mark than was ever trotted to by a gelding excepting his stable companion, The Abbot 2:03½. There are people who believe he will improve on the record of the son of Chimes.

A year ago it seemed as if it was only a question of remaining sound for Lord Derby to become the world's fastest trotter, judged by the career of this horse and his companion. Hope in him was lost early in the campaign somewhat, but he came on this fall and accomplished all that was expected of him in races by his friends, and accomplished more than was expected by others when he twice defeated Boralma decisively. The public will await the result of his trial with anxiety, since it is not clearly known just what he can do in a performance against time. Without exception he is the greatest trotter in training, the length of his career considered. He defeated three great horses in six weeks from the time he first heard a bell ring, when he stepped around Gayton, Gratton Boy and Charley Herr at New York in 1900. He defeated a very great horse when he won from Boralma, and on that day would have given Cresceus the race of his life. His gameness has never been questioned, and considering that he has trotted the last half of the race in 1:00½ over a poor track it does not seem as if his ability is overestimated when prediction is made that over Lexington's good track he should beat all gelding records but that of The Abbot. If we figure that Cresceus and The Abbot have reached their time limit, Lord Derby is the best of the actively campaigned horses in sight.

In the class with Lord Derby must be considered the Cleveland stallion John A. McKerron. Whether the campaign of 1902 will see him a candidate for the fastest of turf honors is a question since he was purchased solely for matinee purposes and having won the Boston challenge cup twice, he will be trained again next season for the purpose of winning it a third time, as the honor of bringing the cup to a permanent home in Cleveland will be greater to the owner of the stallion than if the horse trotted to a world's record. Since his mile in 2:06½ the horse has a firmer grip on the cup than ever before, as of all the trotters in training none but Cresceus, The Abbot, Lord Derby and Boralma would be counted as having a chance against him and it is not likely that any of these will be asked to compete for the trophy. When John A. McKerron hauled the wagon in 2:06½, trotting the last half in 1:02 and the last quarter in 30½ seconds, he was asked to trot for the first time near his limit since he became Cleveland property. It is a well known fact that as a three year old and early in July, the colt trotted a half in 1:03 and a quarter in 30 seconds. Whether he improved in speed in the three succeeding years was known to nobody, since he did all that was asked of him without approaching the wonderful brush which he possessed as a colt.

His trainer, Charles Tanner, and his owner, H. K. Devereux, always maintained that McKerron could beat the 2:05½ of Directum when that was the stallion record. They have also maintained that in whatever time the stallion went to the half he would come home in, as in the long time in which he has been owned at Cleveland and been so carefully trained, he has been tested on more than one occasion and has been found always true blue as to courage, and as he trotted the last half in 1:02 and was not at his limit it can well be imagined how good a mile his owner and driver believe he can trot to a sulky when stretched to the last ounce.

On the day on which the mile of 2:06½ was trotted, the owner thought a mile in 2:09 would be a creditable performance and never anticipated that he could beat his former record of 2:07½. As old and experienced a horseman as C. F. Emery declared it to be the greatest mile trotted by any horse; he saw Cresceus trot in 2:02½. Later on John A. McKerron worked a mile in 2:09 and repeated in 2:08½. He jogged home in both heats and actually played after his last heat of the afternoon which was the seventh of a workout. With all these facts considered it must be conceded that John A. McKerron is one of the best of the future trotters. His owner owes the horse the opportunity of showing his gameness and his speed in actual contests.

Starting Gates Are Ancient.

Interest in and argument over the merits of the several varieties of race track "starting gates" or "barriers," have been revived by recent experiments with the several machines in vogue on the New York course, which have been instituted since the return from England of H. K. Knapp, one of the Stewards of the Jockey Club, who has been converted into an enthusiastic supporter of the starting machine he saw abroad, says the New York Times. It was somewhat singular, however, that turfmen generally regard the "starting gate" as something new. Modern turfmen, taking that view of the matter, insist on speaking of the barrier as a recent invention, and usually style it the "Australian method" of starting.

As a matter of fact the starting gate is older by a century or two than the Christian era, and in addition to that, was known as the "barrier" in the days when Rome ruled the then known world. That was a time when the judges of the racing, which then was exclusively "in harness" to chariots, were styled "hallonides," and had the power to punish fraud on the part of chariot drivers by bodily punishment, which took the form of slow torture when the offense was aggravated.

Pausanias of the year 479 B. C. has left the following description of the method used to start the chariots fairly and without favor:

"This course (that used for national Grecian games) was divided into two parts, the stadium for foot races and athletics, and the hippodrome, as the name implies, for equestrian trials. The barrier or starting post, was in the shape of a prow of a ship, with the beak toward the course. At the other side, where it became broader, it was connected with the Portico Agnampstus, as it was called, from the name of the architect. A bar appears to have stretched across the course at the extremity of the beak, and upon this was affixed a brazen dolphin. The space on either side of the beak extended 400 feet in length, and in it were various tracks, both for the horses and the chariots, these selected by lot for the various competitors. In front of these was suspended a rope. About the middle of the prow stood an altar of unburned brick, which was fresh plastered after each renewal of the games. Upon this was a brazen eagle, with outstretched wings, which at a fixed moment, operated by some ingenious mechanism, flew upward, while at the same time the dolphin before mentioned sank below the surface of the track. At this moment the barriers were let down and the chariots, each in its own particular booth, and on its own track, according to the order of the lot, moved forward, till they were past the point of the beak, whereupon the race began."

At this point likewise it is probable that the Grecian and Roman equivalent of the stereotyped "They're off," was roared out by the watching and betting crowd, and the "rooting" began just as it does to-day. From the description of the historian of the barrier of the hippodrome the machine in use then was somewhat more ornate than the flimsy thing of reeds or webbing in use nowadays, but the idea was almost identical. It is probable, however, that the "halloides" were not so lenient to the obstreperous charioteer who broke through the barrier, as are the stewards of these times with too eager jockeys, and it is quite likely that the punishments savored of the lash and the branding iron more than of the light fines that are common in these days of the resurrected "starting machine."

Spokane Interstate Fair.

SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 10, 1901.

The race meeting held in connection with the Spokane Interstate Fair, September 10th to 21st, was in every respect an unqualified success. Purses amounting to over $10,000 were offered and promptly paid by the management. About 150 harness and running horses faced the starting judge during the meeting and not an unpleasant incident occurred to mar the harmony of the occasion. To Mr. Robert Leighton, of Vancouver, B. C., senior judge, and to C. D. Jeffries, of California, the starting judge, is largely due the credit for those happy results. The new track of the association with its four-inch base of shingle shavings was pronounced by all concerned to be one of the very best, if not the best track, to be found anywhere on the Pacific Coast. It was fast for a new track and yet springy and most satisfactory, especially to those who had overworked a little in previous campaigns. This association next year expects to hold two meetings, the first for about five days, running into July 4th, and a second in conjunction with the fair, about October 1st. The following is a list of the harness events held during the recent meeting showing the winners and the time made:

Two year old pace, $300—Haydee won, Jack Wilmot second, Dr. Newlan third, Dr. Luhn fourth. Best time, 2:34.

Special pace, $300—Lady Amon won, Dauli J. and Lillian M. tied for second place. Best time, 2:24.

Pacing, 2:30 class, $400—Le Roi won, Daniel J. second, Sam Bowers third, Klamath Maid and Harry L. tied for fourth place. Best time, 2:19.

Trotting, 2:40 class, $400—Saxaline won, Zoo Zoo second, Babe Chapman third, Nancy Codi fourth. Best time, 2:24.

Trotting, 2:20 class, $1000—Mount Hood won, Montanas second, Altenas third. Kitty Caution fourth. Best time, 2:20.

Pacing, 2:50 class, $250—Lady Amon won, Lillian M. second. Best time, 2:24.

Pacing, free for all, $700—Hassalo won, Al Me second, Chub Wilkes third. Best time, 2:15.

Gentlemen's Driving Race, $250—Mr. Cosgrove's George won, Mr. Coyne's Babe Chapman second, Mr. Peel's Hazel May third.

Special pace, $300—Le Roi won, Chub Wilkes second, Almota third, Lady Amon fourth. Best time, 2:18.

Trotting, 2:35 class, $300—Saxaline won, Nancy Codi second, Juniper third, Babe Chapman fourth. Best time, 2:24.

Pacing, 2:24 class, $200—Klamath Maid won, Arab second. Best time, 2:25.

Trotting, 2:24 class, $400—Mount Hood won, Montanas second, Kitty Caution third. Best time, 2:20.

Pacing, 2:15 class, $1000—Hassalo won, Sam Bowers second, Al Me third, Le Roi fourth. Best time, 2:15.

Trotting, 2:50 class, $250—Saxaline won, Juniper second, Zoo Zoo third.

Special trot, $150—Staccata won, Hazel May second, Doc Bunnelle third, Antrim fourth. Best time, 2:29.

Origin of the Broncho.

We have occasion occasionally to refer to the History of the Horse of America, by the venerable Mr. Wallace of the Trotting Register. It is a valuable publication, but is somewhat marred by historical inaccuracies, to use a mild term. In his chapter on the wild horses of America, Mr. Wallace indulges in an argument to prove that the wild horse is not a native of this continent, but a lineal descendant of the Spanish horses, imported from Spain by the ruffian adventurer, Hernando Cortez, who first invaded Mexico in 1515. We cannot prove by any tangible evidence that Mr. Wallace is wrong, but he probably is. We prefer to embrace the theory of all the learned archaeologists that the primeval horse, like the buffalo, coyote and elk, was a native of this continent and a companion of the prehistoric man, and that he was kicking up his heels and switching his woolly tail all over the western continent thousands of years before either Christopher Columbus or Cortez or De Soto was born. And the broncho is only a branch of the wild horse tree. The wild horse, like the Indian, the panther, the monkey and the buffalo, never had an ancestor, however remote, on any other continent. But the American trotter, like his master, can trace his ancestry across the Atlantic. Mr. Wallace, in his history, evidently has not studied Mother Nature in all her infinite variety. —American Sportsman, Cleveland.

We are inclined to think that the editor of our esteemed contemporary has formed a wrong idea of "the theory of all the learned archaeologists." It is true that they believe the primeval horse was a native of this continent, and the fossil remains discovered in late years prove their theory. But this primeval horse was not the broncho by any means, nor the wild horse of the plains. The primeval horse was not larger than a fox and archaeologists believe became extinct on this continent thousands of years ago. That the wild horse of Asia descended from him many scientists hold, and they theorize that the little "eohippus" crossed from America by way of the land that once connected the continents where the Aleutian islands now are. But these scientists all admit that the broncho or wild horse of America is a direct descendant of the horses brought here by the Spaniards and others after Columbus showed them the way over, and that the horse had become extinct in North and South America prior to the Columbia era. Mr. Wallace's argument that the wild horse is a descendant of the Spanish horses is a good one, and we think it is the editor of the American Sportsman who has failed "to study Mother Nature in all her infinite variety."

Mendocino County Fair.

UKIAH (Cal.), Oct. 11, 1901,

ED. BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, S. F., Cal.—Dear Sir: The First Race Meeting held under the management of Agricultural District No. 45 was given at Ukiah and began October 1st, continuing five days. Never before in the history of the county has so much interest been shown in racing as in the meeting just closed. About 55 horses were in training and every stall on the grounds was occupied.

Following is a list of the events of the week:

Tuesday, October 1. Half mile dash for saddle horses, purse $40—H. B. Bowman's h g Laytonville won, J. J. Duncan's Philo second. Time, 0:55.

Trotting, 2:45 class, district, purse $150—F. Dartt's

Rodwood Jr. 1-2-1-1, M. Barker's Venus 2-1-2-2. Best time, 3:03.

Running, one-quarter mile and repeat, purse $80—P. Handy's Telegram won in straight heats, B. Haydon's Lady Smith second, J. Taylor's Gray Bob third, F. Asbill's Mollie A. fourth. Best time, 0:25.

Wednesday, October 2. Four and a half furlongs and repeat, purse $100—G. Delehanty's Magnus won in straight heats, W. J. East's Cora L. F. second, J. Hughes Bellola third. Best time, 0:58.

Trotting or pacing, special, purse $120—J. Charlton's Black Bart, trotter, won in straight heats, F. Mc. Gregor's Cock Robin, pacer, second, D. McGovern's Belle H. third. Best time, 2:33.

Running, three furlongs and repeat, purse $80—B. Haydon's Roadwarmer won in straight heats, P. Handy's Telegram second, G. Moore's Ladysmith third. Best time, 0:38.

Thursday, October 3. Five furlongs, purse $80—J. Taylor's Gray Bob won, D. Johnson's Tyleta second, R. Cleveland's Dr. Hart third. Barney Schreiber and Bantam also ran. Time, 1:07.

Three furlongs and repeat, purse $80—F. Asbill's Mollie A. 2-1-1, W. Hayden's Ironbrew 1-2-2. H. B. Bowman's 2-3-r. o. Best time, 0:38.

Match, three furlongs and repeat, purse $100—G. Shaw's El Sobrina 2-1-1, D. Johnson's Umatilla 1-2-2. Best time, 0:39.

Three-quarter mile dash, purse $80—G. Delohanty's Magnus won, Cleveland's Dr. Hart second, J. Burrough's Diamond third. Time, 1:21.

Trotting and pacing, two year olds, purse $60—W. J. East's May Smith 1-1, A. Layton's Before Taking 2-2, J. Robert's Dewey 3-dis. Best time, 3:40.

Friday, October 4. Three furlongs, purse $75—F. Asbill's Mollie A. won, Haydon's Ironbrew second, Moore's Ladysmith third. Time, 0:37.

Trotting, buggy horse, half mile heats, purse $80—J. H. Smith's Pedro won in straight heats, G. Lucc's Cyclugas second, A. Layton's Cricket third. Best time, 1:37.

Half mile and repeat, purse $100—W. J. East's Cora L. F. won in straight heats, J. Burrough's Diamond second, D. Johnson's Umatilla third. Time—0:52, 0:51.

Match race, five furlongs, purse $100—D. Johnson's Tyleta won, Dr. Hart second, Landlord third. Time, 1:02.

Saturday, October 5. Three furlongs, purse $70—H. Hamilton's Jennie Gibb won, D. McGovern's Barney Schreiber second. Time, 0:38.

Trotting and pacing, free for all, purse $50.
Black Bart by Robin.....(Charlton and Quinn) 1 2 1 1
Cock Robin by Robin.....(McGregor) 2 1 2 2
Ole by Silas Skinner.....(J Quinn) 3 w
Time—2:27, 2:38½, 2:27½, 2:38½.

Novelty race, one mile, purse $60—Telegram first at first quarter $20, Dr. Hart first at second and third quarters and at finish, $40. Time by quarters—0:25½, 0:52, 1:22, 1:49.

The attendance during the week was very good. On Saturday there were about 1800 people, and gate receipts that day $425.

The fair was a success in every way. As Agricultural District No. 45 is composed of only Mendocino county, a fair and race meeting will be held every year.

Yours truly, R. E. DONOHUE, Sec'y.

On a hot day drink Jackson's Napa Soda lemonades and be refreshed.

Doings in Dogdom.

Glenwood Kennels will probably enter a double kennel of St. Bernards and Cocker at Oakland.

H. A. Wegener, we are very happy to note, is now on the rapid mend to complete recovery from a recent attack of facial paralysis, which illness was brought about by exposure to a strong draft whilst suffering from a slight cold.

Several quarts of wine were used to test the irrigation virtues of the loving cup won by Chas. Newman's Golden Lion Jr. Among those present at the Riche-lieu were Chas. Newman, L. A. Klein, Jack Bradshaw, N. H. Hickman and Billy Chute.

It would be interesting to learn what is to be done with all the swagger Bulldogs that are coming over from England. Another is now on the way, Garrison King, said to be a noted prize winner. He is on the small side, but it is understood brought a big figure.

In giving the list last week of judges announced for the Oakland show we should have stated that John Bradshaw will judge Cockers. This selection has the endorsement of the California Cocker Club. W. E. Chute will pass also on Field Spaniels as well as Pointers, Setters and Dalmatians as already announced.

The following interesting story is related by the Record-Union concerning a Sacramento sportsman's dog: Frank Newbert's liver colored Pointer "Dick" nearly accompanied J. Frank Brown on his shooting trip Monday. Frank had tied up in front of Kimball & Tyson's gun store, and while in the establishment collecting his traps, Dick quietly sneaked into the huggy and secreted himself under the seat. Mr. Brown discovered his presence when he got into the buggy, and Dick was dragged out by main force and sent into the store in disgrace. Dick is a knowing dog and was looking for a chance to go hunting and accepted the first opportunity that offered.

Bulldog purchasers, and in fact all intending importers of dogs from England, should bear in mind that the tight little island has a big show world and that many a dog may win an imposing list of prizes without meeting a real tip-topper, as it would more than likely, if exhibited at any of the classic shows. This lack of geographical intimacy, as one may term it, has in the past led to much disappointment over here, for naturally, when a dog has so many firsts and specials to its credit, probably most of which were won at little Saturday shows, the American purchaser, who buys no record, feels a little upset when his treasure drops to his right place in good company.

Our Boston contemporary makes some very pertinent suggestions in regard to a four day show. On the Coast there is no occasion for holding a show that will run for more than two days. A discussion of this subject with a number of local fanciers has resulted in an almost unanimous expression of dissent against the unnecessary number of days consumed and useless additional expense and time wasted in adhering to the stereotyped custom of allotting four days out here to a show which may have as few as 100 entries or as many as 600. The sooner the change is adopted here, we believe, the better it will be for all in the fancy concerned. We naturally expect to hear some opposition from the rake-off contingent however.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Pacific Field Trials Club was held this week and a sub-committee appointed who will select the ground where the January trials will take place. The gentlemen having this matter in charge at present are John Schumaker, W. S. Tevis and Henry M. Keller. Among those also present were Messrs. Kilgariff, Betz, Worden, Post and Van Arsdale.

It is not improbable that the club will in the near future make arrangements for securing territory that will eventually prove an ideal field trial district. This matter has been under consideration for some time and meets with the favorable support of all the sportsmen interested in developing the best traits and qualities of a good field dog.

The following list of judges for the show commencing October 15th, at the Crystal Palace, London, Eng., has been announced:

Bloodhounds, Mastiffs—Mr. W. K. Taunton.
St. Bernards, Newfoundland—Mr. W. Baker.
Great Danes—Mr. Reginald Herbert.
Irish Wolfhounds, Deerhounds, Borzois—Mr. W. Herbert Singer.
Chow Chows, Foreign Dogs—Mr. J. Sidney Turner.
Otterhounds, Greyhounds, Retrievers, Bulldogs—Mr. Harding Cox.
Pointers, English Setters, Gordon Setters—Mr. F. C. Lowe.
Irish Setters—Mr. Hubert M. Wilson.
Irish Water Spaniels—Mr. Trench O'Rourke.
Spaniels—Mr. H. E. Gray.
Collies—Mr. A. H. Megson.
Old English Sheepdogs—Mr. W. G. Weager.
Beagles—Dr. C. C. Bullmore.
Basset Hounds—Mr. C. C. Garnett.
Dalmatians, Black and Tan Terriers, Toy Terriers (smooth), Bedlington Terriers, Pomeranians—Mr. Frank Gresbam.
Poodles, Griffins, Bruxellois—Comte Henry de Bylandt.
Toy Bulldogs—Mr. B. Marley.

Schipperkes—Mr. G. J. Ross.
Pugs—Mr. T. Proctor.
Toy Spaniels—Mr. S. Millin.
Italian Greyhounds—Mr. Richard Budgett.
Yorkshire and Maltese Terriers—Mr. C. H. Lane.

California Cocker Club.

An enthusiastic meeting of the California Cocker Club was held Monday afternoon. Secretary Plume informs us the club will offer for contests between the members only the following special prizes:

W. C. Ralston offers the President's Cup for the best Cocker Spaniel.

Mrs. P. C. Meyer offers a silver cup for the best Cocker Spaniel, the opposite sex to the winner of the President's Cup.

Plumeria Cocker Kennels offer a silver and cut glass trophy for best pair of Cocker Spaniels (dog and bitch).

Mrs. W. C. Ralston offers a silver trophy for best puppy.

For Cockers (black)—Club medal for best dog; club medal for best bitch; silver medal for best puppy dog; silver medal for best novice dog; silver medal for best limit dog; silver medal for best open dog; silver medal for best puppy bitch; silver medal for best novice bitch; silver medal for best limit bitch; silver medal for best open bitch.

For Cockers (other than black)—Mrs. E. C. Plume offers a Battenberg table cover for best puppy; silver medal for best puppy dog; silver medal for best novice dog; silver medal for best limit dog; silver medal for best open dog; silver medal for best puppy bitch; silver medal for best novice bitch; silver medal for best limit bitch; silver medal for best open bitch.

Club medal for best dog; club medal for best bitch.

From a Fox Terrier Fancier.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.—I understand that the owner of Norfolk Trueman has made the assertion that Vibo has never beaten Trueman in the East. For the benefit of the Coast fancy I would like to make the statement, which can be verified by reference to the American Kennel Gazette and the catalogues of hench shows held last year that Vibo has beat Trueman repeatedly under the following judges, James Mortimer, Chas. H. Mason, Theo. Marples and L. P. C. Astley. Norfolk Blue sired by Vibo won over Norfolk Richmond and Mainstay at the recent Toronto show. James Mortimer judged. It will be remembered that Richmond and Mainstay captured all the ribbons and specials at the last May show in this city.

Pacific Fox Terrier Club.

At a meeting of the Pacific Fox Terrier Club last Friday, John Bradshaw, of this city, and John A. Murphy, of Fresno, were elected members. The club decided to offer cash prizes at the Oakland show as follows: Five dollars each for the best dog and bitch puppy and five dollars each for the best dog and bitch. Competition to be among members only. There were present at the meeting, Messrs. N. H. Hickman, J. B. Martin, W. J. Foster, E. Courtney Ford and W. W. Moore.

Condition.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.—What should condition count in judging? During the last ten years I have often heard Eastern judges severely criticised for paying so much attention to condition. At Eastern shows the professional handlers bring their dogs into the ring with coats shining like silk hats. The amateur or one dog man, being the one whose dog is not in condition. Here on this coast the situation is quite often reversed. Frequently the best conditioned dog in the show will be one owned by an amateur that never showed before.

To me condition counts for much more than simply the condition of the dog's coat. Condition means health, good care, careful rearing, stronger, better progeny, etc.

To the judge it is something that he can't overlook if he tries. It will influence his judgment even when he is not aware of the fact. A well exercised animal, in "condition," has better developed muscles, a brighter, healthier coat, a more active, vivacious movement; all these count in the judging ring. A dog in superb condition catches the eye of the judge even if it be a poor specimen. There is no excuse for bringing a Pointer, Setter, Spaniel or any other soft coated dog in the ring with a dull, harsh, lifeless coat. The Setter or Spaniel's feather may get whipped off in the brush, but his coat should be like silk. If the owner cannot afford to purchase regular dog brushes and cbamois leather, he always has ready for use the best of all coat polishers—his hands. Hand rubbing will put a polish on a Spaniel's or Setter's coat that no amount of "faking" would ever get there.

There are other forms of condition besides the mere condition of coat. An underfed or improperly fed animal that shows every rib and joint is out of condition, unfit for either service or show, an overfed one is just as bad. A bitch in whelp is out of condition in the showing (as well as out of place). She is more sway backed than she would naturally be, appears abnormally developed in hack, ribs, etc., and so I might go on ad libitum but if I have impressed any of your readers that it is folly to show dogs that are badly out of condition my letter has accomplished its mission.

Respectfully,

A. RUSSELL CROWELL.

Words of Wisdom.

The four days show is too long. There is no reason why a show, unless of the very first importance, like New York, should extend that length of time. The tendency in England has been toward one and two days show and now it is intimated that in future the one day show with a good classification and prize list will be the show of the future. Spasmodic suggestions have been set forth that our show committees should get out of the old rut. Who ordained the four day nuisance is a question shrouded in tradition but we voice the sentiments of nine-tenths of exhibitors in again suggesting that shows, excepting, perhaps the very largest should be restricted to three days, in many cases to two, and in some instances, one day. In general, the four days show is a monotonous drag during the last two days. There is no doubt that exhibitors do not send their dogs to shows as much as they might for this reason. Americans, and in fact most fanciers like to get through their business quickly and turn their attention to something else. There is a gradual passing of the second class show on the part of principal exhibitors. The very life of our exhibiting system is the attendance of owners and the fun of exhibiting one's own dog, but it has to stay on its bench two or three days after the owner leaves the show, interest wanes. Had the Wakefield show, for instance, been a two days fixture, the entry would have been doubled, we believe. The professional does not constitute the main body of exhibitors and it cannot be gainsaid that the four days hugaboo deters many a novice from showing his dog. On the part of the show people it may be suggested that, given a two days show in a good town, a good prize list with a classification built upon sound judgment as to breeds that draw, the increased entry will surely make up for any little deficiency there might be in the aggregate four days attendance, when extra expense of the hall, etc., is considered. Those who attend shows would have there expenses lightened and a $10 first prize at a two day show, would in many instances, be worth much more than at a four days show, when the extra hotel bills and other incidentals are counted up. It is this heavy expense which exhibitors grumble at, whether they employ a handler or send their own man, for after the novelty of winning has worn off, even the wealthiest stop now and then to consider the quid pro quo of the business. Any scheme which may be evolved to lighten this burden will surely be popular and the shows that adopt it will have their recompense in increased entries and better dogs. It is worth trying, anyhow.—American Stock-Keeper.

County Game Laws in Force.

The present State Game and Fish Laws are in force and unchanged in the following counties:

Alameda.	Monterey.	Solano.
Colusa.	Santa Cruz.	San Joaquin.
Contra Costa.	San Benito.	Sonoma.
Merced.

The following counties have adopted ordinances in regard to fish and game, and which are now in force as follows:

Fresno—Quail, Nov. 1 to Feb. 1.

Marin—Male deer, Aug. 1 to Sept. 15. Quail, Oct. 15 to Jan. 15. Shooting on county roads or in cemeteries prohibited. The use of "pump" gun, repeating shotgun or any kind of magazine shotgun for hunting in the county is prohibited.

Monterey—Sea gulls and blue cranes, killing of prohibited. Use of guns of larger caliber than 10-gauge prohibited.

Santa Clara—Quail, Oct. 8 to Feb. 1.

San Mateo—Quail, Nov. 1 to Dec. 1. Rail, Oct. 15 to Nov. 15. Shooting from boats at high tide prohibited.

A Century of Shooting.

The change that the last quarter century has brought in firearms is something marvelous. Scarcely had the breech-loading shotgun, using centre-fire ammunition, ousted the muzzle-loader than the hammerless arm became popular. Then about the time the majority of shooters were supplied with hammerless weapons, the ejector gun, which threw the empty shell clear of the barrel, came into vogue.

The latest improvement for breech-loading shotguns on which gunmakers have been working with more or less success, is an arrangement which will enable one to fire either barrel at will by means of a single trigger. The advantages of such an arrangement lie in the celerity and pleasantness with which it enables one to shoot. With guns fitted with two triggers, it is necessary after firing one barrel to bring the index finger back into position to operate the second. This means generally, not only a loss of time between barrels, but also an appreciable difference in the feel of the gun, the length of the stock being measured from the butt-plate to the front trigger. Therefore, when one wishes to fire the second barrel, usually the left, he is shooting what is practically a short stocked gun. We know several shooters however, who invariably use the left barrel first, both triggers being pulled by the one finger. The recoil of the first discharge "jars" the finger forward into position on the right barrel trigger quicker than the shooter can make the change voluntarily. This minimizes the loss of time.

An English gunmaker is now attaching to some of his weapons a device by which a single trigger will fire both barrels, and it rests with the shooter to determine by the adjustment of a small button on the trigger plate whether the right or left barrel be fired first. Of course, it is, like most novelties, an expensive luxury at present, adding from $15 to $20 to the price of a gun, but in a short time it is likely that the cost will be brought down to a reasonable amount, the same as in the case with the ejector mechanism, which at one time cost from $15 to $20 extra, and may now be had for an additional $5.

Many sportsmen believe that a proper working single trigger device, in which the precedence of firing the barrels may be altered at will, will be found to be as great an improvement in shotguns as the hammerless has proved.

The utility of the device is obvious, but there arises in this connection the possibility of weakening the stock by the introduction of the parts composing the single trigger mechanism and the consequent cutting away of the wood to accommodate the single trigger action.

An interesting retrospect on this subject is given by a writer in Land and Water, and is applicable in a general way to contemporaneous sportsmen in this country:

In the autumn of 1801 country sportsmen went out game shooting with double barrel guns, and hit or missed their birds very much after the fashion which obtains to-day. At that distant period sportsmen were enjoined to dress in green so long as the leaves remained upon the trees, but as autumn advanced russet brown or dark grey became the only wear. The literature of the period says little about hats, except that discs cut out of them are good for wadding, but contemporary prints show that "chimney pots" were the approved head gear. It may not always have been convenient to sacrifice a tall hat to provide wads, so a thoughtful writer suggested brown paper or better still: "In countries," said he, "where orchards abound, a very fine moss of a greenish grey color is found adhering to the apple trees, which is extremely proper for wadding."

The gun used was of necessity a flint-lock muzzle loader, which might have two barrels, but usually only had one, as the double barrels in any but the most careful hands were justly accounted prolific causes of accident. At the time shooting as a sport cannot have been very popular, for under game laws only those possessing freeholds of a minimum value of £100 per annum could legally keep game dogs or indulge in field sports. But while the century was still young the game laws were relaxed, and a new era dawned for the pastime. In or about 1820 it came to be recognized that shooting over dogs, although a delightful recreation, was not the best way of filling a game bag. Still earlier the following method of killing game had been mentioned by a writer, who stated that it was commonly adopted in France. "Eight men go in a company, four of them equipped with fowling pieces, and four with sticks only, for the purpose of beating the bushes, furze, etc. This band then ranges in a straight line, the heaters being placed at intervals between the shooters at the distance of ten or twelve paces, the whole forming a front of eighty or one hundred paces, so that in advancing they sweep a great breadth of country. The heaters, in order to raise the game, make a great noise with their voices and sticks. When a covey of partridges spring, if one of the company fires, the rest stop until he has reloaded his piece. Shooting in line, although not singular in that respect, provides the jealous shot with numerous opportunities for exercising his foible." "I have to observe," remarked the author of "The Complete Sportsman"—a little book published in 1817—"I have to observe that two friends of mine, Mr. B. and Mr. S., the former a good shot, the latter a very indifferent marksman in deed, arising from the habit he had contracted of shutting both his eyes when he pulled the trigger, were shooting in company. Upon coming to a point the birds rose, and Mr. S., by one of those fortunate accidents which seldom occur, killed two birds. Mr. B. killed one immediately afterwards, just as Mr. S. opened his eyes, perfectly unconscious of having killed two himself, but observing the fall of Mr. B.'s bird, he instantly claimed it most unequivocally. 'Very well,' said B., 'if you have killed that bird I must have knocked down the other two,' and with good-natured derision he deliberately picked up and bagged them." About the time of the introduction of walking up in line it became a fashion to let English grouse moors by subscription, either the landowner or the tenant permitting casual sportsmen to shoot at a fee of so much for the week or month. On these terms the subscribers shot everything they could and claimed everything everybody else shot. "No person," wrote Captain Lay in 1842, "ought to go on their moors without a Bulldog and a Greyhound, the former to protect person and the latter as a retriever." This must have been quite an exciting sport while it lasted, but grouse shooting was not for long obtainable in so easy and inexpensive a manner.

The year 1844 saw the beginning of a revolutionary change, with the definite introduction of driving. Practically every innovation, both in the manufacture of guns and the methods of shooting, has at first sight had to encounter strong opposition, and nothing has been more thoroughly condemned—or more generally adopted—than the same driving. When stubble was long and turnips sown broadcast small bags, obtained over dogs in the old sportsmanlike way, could generally be relied on, even late in the season, when birds had grown wild, wise and wary. But with the stubble shaven close and turnips neatly arranged in rows the entrance of a gun on one side of a field became the signal for an immediate departure of its feathered occupants on the other. Naturally enough the sportsman, considering these things, began to post himself to intercept the flight, and attained the assistance of beaters to influence it in his direction. The system, proving highly successful, was presently extended and rendered more efficacious. Larger bags were the immediate result, and it has long been manifest that fears of decrease in the stock of game as a consequence were quite unfounded. A fruitful tree is not the worse but the better for judicious pruning. The latter half of the century witnessed a steady and continuous increase in the popularity of driving, and now, whether grouse, pheasant, partridge, or deer be the quarry, its votaries far outnumber the followers of the older and physically more trying methods.

Within the limits of this cursory sketch only the briefest outline of modern developments in the sporting gun can be attempted. Very early in the nineteenth century Joseph Manton and worthy band of somewhat quarrelsome compatriots established the supremacy of the British fowling-piece. When the flint-lock muzzle-loader had reached its zenith, the Rev. A. Forsyth introduced the Forsyth primer, the first practical detonating-lock ever made in England. It was almost immediately improved upon, and ultimately detonating powder found its final resting place in the crown of a percussion cap. Reliable authorities state that the earliest percussion cap was made by Mr. Egg out of a penny-piece, by Mr. Purdey out of the ferrule of an old umbrella, by Mr. Joshua Shaw of Philadelphia out of a steel disc, and also that Colonel Hawker entertained a strong conviction that he himself first made it out of his own head. In truth, the step from the tube detonator to the cap was not a long one, although not until it was taken did the flint ignition become extinct. By 1860 the percussion gun was giving universal satisfaction, but this happy state of things terminated with the advent of the Lefancheux pin-fire breech-loader, a weapon which in turn quickly succumbed to the superior qualities of the central-fire. The nipple, with the copper cap upon it, vanished from the action, and was reproduced in miniature as cap and anvil within the cartridge case. Later, the external hammers also disappear to perform within the lock plates and functions formerly allotted to them in the light of day. Extractors and ejectors, added to the efficiency of the weapon and in details innumerable such improvements have been effected that now it is an open question whether on existing lines very much more can possibly be accomplished. And in this respect reference is made to the sterling and tried merits of such makes as the Parker, Cluhring, L. C. Smith and Remington guns—the four leading selections of modern shotguns in favor with the majority of Pacific Coast sportsmen.

But in conclusion it might be observed that the gunpowder of 1801 shot just as straight as the nitro compound of to-day, and the fowling-piece, if it took a long time to load, was as capable it seems of pulling down a difficult bird as the newest breech loading hammerless ejector of them all.

At a meeting of the Dixon Gun Club held on the 6th inst., the organization of the club was completed and arrangements made to properly protect the club preserve against poachers. Petaluma sportsmen find good shooting in the open waters of the creek. One day last week G. G. Daunt and A. M. Coburn got twenty-five ducks. They were hunting on the bay flats within sight of Point Pedro. They went down the creek in the launch Dauntless, running down in two hours and coming back in the same time. On the flats they found the ducks very plentiful. Many hunters were out. The Petalumas towed a small boat down, but had no use for it as the ducks were out on the open water in numerous flocks.

A Boston exchange in its daily market reports recently had the following paragraph: Fresh native game, all kinds, are coming in very slowly, especially plover and yellow legs. Chicken turkeys are very good this week and are reasonable in price, selling from 20 to 25 cents a pound. Black ducks have been very light this season. A few native quail arrived this week and are worth $4 a dozen. At one of the stalls moose meat is on sale. A steak of it could be bought for 35 to 40 a pound, whole loins of it commanded 33 to 35 cents.

Man's destructiveness is aptly illustrated in the following from the Oregon Morning Astorian. The canning interests have now put the ban on shags. Not long ago a movement was started for the extermination of seals and sea lions with dynamite. It strikes us that Mr. Reed may be amenable to the Lacey Act or other Federal legislation adopted for the protection of sea fowl. "Fish Commissioner" Reed said recently that he was still continuing to look after the duties of the office. At the present time he is gathering shag scalps, and only a few days ago turned over to Secretary of State Dunbar 1456 of these evidences of slaughter. The scalps were taken by one man, who expects to receive 5c apiece for them. Mr. Reed has made a requisition on Secretary Dunbar for the necessary amount, but the claim will probably be disallowed by the Secretary. The next Legislature will be asked to appropriate a sufficient sum to pay the claim. Mr. Reed says he thinks it will be a funny snap if the money is not appropriated."

How the reindeer of Siberia are compelled by the mosquitoes to migrate is told by Hartwig: Millions and millions of mosquitoes issue from the swamps of the tundra, and compel the inhabitants to seek refuge in the dense and pungent smoke of the large heaps of fallen leaves and damp wood which are kindled near the dwellings and on the pasture lands as the only means of keeping off those abominable insects. These tormentors, however, are not without use, for they compel the reindeer to migrate from the forests to the sea shore and the ice, thus exposing them to the attack of the hunters, and they also prevent the horses from straying on the plains and wandering beyond the protection of the smoke. An old Latin writer describes how the numbers of lions are kept under in Asia: "Among the sedges of Mesopotamian rivers and the thickets of underwood, numberless lions prowl—always harmless in the gentle and very mild winters there. But when the summer is inflamed by the sun's rays, they are driven mad by the dogday heat, in those regions burnt up with torrid fever—and also by the bigness of the mosquitoes, swarms of which infest everything in those lands. Now these pests go particularly for the eyes—moist and lucid organs—and, lighting on the quivering eyelids of the lion, bite so that the beast, long tormented, comes to his end thus: either drowned in the streams, to which they flee for relief, or else, losing their eyes, which they dig out by frequently scratching at them with their claws, they go mad with fury. If this did not happen, the whole Orient would be overrun with lions."

A press dispatch this week gives information concerning trapping that, outside of commercial circles will be rather a curious bit of information to many who are familiar with the history of fur trapping in this country in the earlier part of the century and down to more recent years. A thousand men, exclusive of Indians, are engaged in trapping and hunting in the vast extent of fur-bearing country on the Upper Yukon, according to a report received at the State Department from Consul McCook at Dawson, dated September 9th. Dawson City is the central market for this fur country and sends fully 40,000 pelts annually to the great fur markets of London and New York. The industry yields an annual revenue of about $130,000.

In Dawson London quotations govern, being fixed twice a year—in March and August—by a board of principal dealers of the city, and prices are gauged according to that scale in all parts of the world except Russia. The present rates, compared with last year's prices, show an increase on bear, heaver, otter and mink and a decrease on silver gray fox, marten, wolf and wolverine. A wide difference, which is often noted between maximum and minimum figures, says Consul McCook, is due to variations in the shade and quality of the fur and to the time of year in which the animal is caught. For instance, the pelts of bears caught in the spring, just after the hibernating process is over, are worth more than those secured in the fall, because their fur is soft and thick, instead of harsh and thin. In all pelts, winter fur commands often three times as much as summer fur in price, and in most cases dark colored fur is worth much more than the lighter varieties.

As to the variety of furs, Consul McCook says that marten pelts are the most numerous and black fox the scarcest. The latter is the most valuable of all the furs in the Upper Yukon, a good pelt readily bringing $300.

Mr. E. E. Drake will next week, upon his return from the East, assume charge of the Pacific Coast agency of the Union Metallic Cartridge Company, the Remington Arms Company and the Colt's Patent Fire Arms Manufacturing Company. Mr. Drake is well known to the trade and Coast sportsmen, having been connected with the firm of Dunham, Carrigan and Hayden for the past ten years. He was in charge of the sporting goods branch of the business and also had an experience in the road in that line for his house. Mr. Drake is popular with a host of warm personal friends and a strong following of business connections. He is a gentleman of most affable social and personal qualities and a keen, alert and painstaking business man. The large interests which he will have under his charge henceforth are in the keeping of a gentleman who has the confidence and respect of the trade on the Pacific Coast, as well as the executive ability to keep his line of sporting goods in the front.

Mr. Drake recently made the rounds of the Eastern factories and also the headquarters of the firms which he now represents and we are informed has ripened a friendly feeling towards him on the part of the Eastern representatives of his present business connection who can be quoted as being more than pleased with Mr. Drake's genial personal qualities.

"Welcome the coming and speed the parting guest"—can be said more of necessity than in choice. In the departure for the resumption of his Eastern duties the trade here cannot but regret the loss of a most genial and thorough business gentleman, Mr. John Spalckhaver, who for several months past has been at the head of affairs and preparing for the advent of Mr. Drake. Mr. Spalckhaver has won for himself a host of personal and business friends here by reason of the many happy qualities which go far towards the establishment of an individual following that is only gained by a man of sterling abilities and a pleasant personality.

Mars Froment, Jr., has been appointed manager of the sporting goods department of Dunham, Carrigan and Hayden. Mr. Froment has been connected with the firm for the past ten years.

Chas. A. Vogelsang has been appointed Chief Deputy Fish Commissioner by the Board of Fish Commissioners. Mr. Vogelsang has been a deputy commissioner for five years past and won his advancement on merit. The Board announced some time ago that the office will be kept out of politics. Mr. Vogelsang's appointment was made in the face of strong partisan opposition. The selection meets the approval of the business community and a majority of our sportsmen. Mr. John P. Babcock, ex-chief deputy, left for Victoria, the scene of his labors for the next three years. Several of his fly-casting club associates presented him on Tuesday with one of the handsomest rod cases we have ever seen, as a memento of pleasant times in the past and a genial reminder that he will be missed by a host of warm personal friends.

Duck shooting conditions up to the middle of the week were under the ban of the hot weather. The ducks here on the opening of the season were home-bred birds, many of them have gone south. At Los Banos and vicinity and on the Sacramento in the Rio Vista district and beyond ducks are plentiful. The shooting on the Suisun marshes has been of a desultory character. On some ponds the shooting has been poor while on others again, the club members have shot their limit at every day's shoot. Until the weather changes and brings down the northern birds, duck shooting for the present, speaking of the chances for local hunters, will be somewhat indifferent.

English snipe are fairly plentiful. Being erratic in their movements it requires one who understands their habits to get a good shoot.

The quail shooting since the opening day has not been what was desired by sportsmen. The hot weather made the birds lie close and hard to work. When flushed they would take to the trees. A few fair bags were made in Marin county on the opening day, Tuesday. It is now about certain that the Board of Supervisors of San Mateo county will put back the opening day on quail in that county until December 1st, thus shortening the season to one month.

The game laws passed by the last Legislature are not satisfactory to many sportsmen and especially the lovers of duck shooting. From every part of the State come protests against the new law which takes the month of February off the season, making it lawful to shoot ducks from October 1st to February 1st only.

To the Southern California duck hunters this new law seems absurd, says the San Luis Obispo Tribune. They are asking why the legislators took off the month of February in which the very best duck hunting is had, and why the month of October is not taken off if the season was to be shortened. October does not offer good sport while February does. In this county February is the best month in the year as it is not until late that the choice ducks fly this way.

The game laws passed by the last Legislature are not satisfactory to many sportsmen, who claim that improvement might be made in several directions, in the same strain the Red Bluff People's Cause also says. Some advocate the protection of English snipe, which except the bag limit of twenty-five, are unprotected. It is also held that the close season for mountain quail and grouse prevents sportsmen from getting good bags, and much comment is being made respecting the close season for ducks. A special protest is offered against the new law which takes the month of February off the season, making it lawful to shoot ducks from October 1st to February 1st only.

From the standpoint of the majority of the duck hunters of California, this new law is nothing short of absurd.

The idea of shortening this season is, no doubt, a laughable one, but why, in the name of all of the web-feet, an old sportsman asks, did our legislators take from us February, the month in which the royal canvasback is with us in large numbers? Would it not have been far better to have cut out October?

Fly-Casting Medal Winners.

The San Francisco Fly-Casting Club members and invited guests assembled at a downtown hotel on Wednesday evening, the occasion being the regular bi-monthly banquet and meeting of the club. After the elaborate menu had been done justice to, the chairman, Walter D. Mansfield, introduced Judge John Hunt Jr., who, in a happy and humorous vein, presented to the winners four beautifully designed and elegant gold medals. These medals were the initial victories by rod and line manipulation of three of the younger members of the club. The other gentlemen who led in their respective competitions had already scored winning points—the custom with the club being that previous medal winners each year shall win a trophy three times to acquire final ownership of the emblem. The medallists were Chas. F. Grant Jr., who led in the first class long distance; C. Roland Kenniff, second in the long distance first class; Carlos G. Young, championship class in accuracy; C. Roland Kenniff, first in lure casting and who also won the Smyth medal for the greatest average improvement in fly-casting at Stow Lake this season. This latter trophy is to be won outright each year.

Chairman Mansfield, in a brief address, gave an interesting summary showing the improvement in the work of many members since the organization of the club, the general average being from 30% to 50%. An instance of this will be seen when it is remembered that in 1891 the high rod in long distance was 81 feet, the general average of Messrs. H. C. Golcher and T.

W. Brotherton, in long distance for this season, was over 122 and 113 feet, respectively. J. B. Kenniff is looked upon as a coming rival of the top-notchers. The showing of Carlos G. Young in accuracy is regarded as being as near perfection as is generally reached. This work, while not as showy as long distance or lure casting, is effective on the stream and is an accomplishment that falls only to the happy fortune of the expert fly-fisherman. In lure casting the degree of skill shown by Mr. Kenniff is almost equal to that of some of Chicago's crack rod-wielders, where will be found some of the most expert bait casters in the world.

It will be noted in the following summary of averages that Messrs. Edwards, Everett, Golcher and Skinner, who classified, failed to complete their scores in one of the Sunday events. Mansfield did not complete his score in accuracy, and Smyth and Mansfield did not enter in the distance events. For the Sunday events Messrs. Reed, Turner, Heller, T. Kierulff and W. Kierulff, all of whom had classified, failed also to complete their records and did not qualify in any of the events. Haight did not finish his score in distance, nor did Mansfield complete his score in accuracy.

The class averages for the season are noted below, the fractions being 120ths:

Striped bass fishing is at present uncertain, although during the week some good catches have been made by the experts. Al Wilson, A. W. Jackson and W. R. McFarland have all caught fish in San Antonio slough. The two latter anglers will troll Raccoon straits to-day for bass. A fifteen pound striped bass was caught this week in the estuary at the outlet to Lake Merritt. It seems that it is not a question whether the fish are scarce or plentiful. It is a necessary and lucky condition that the angler should put out his line in a locality where the fish happen to be at the time. The bay waters are many, many miles in extent and the fish find the conditions of food, etc., favorable as much so at one place as another.

Smelt fishing with a light trout rod and flies is not only a pleasant salt water diversion, but the fish make a good fight against light tackle.

The season for stream and lake fishing will close on the first day of November. Steelhead trout may be taken in tide water until February 1st. A number of local anglers will try the Paper Mill Creek.

Sonoma creek, from Glen Ellen down, is still in good condition, several baskets of nice sized brook trout having been booked in that water recently.

Jackson's Napa Soda is sold in every city, town and hamlet in the State.

THE FARM.

Value of Oiled Roads.

W. C. Ambrose, in a letter to the Bakersfield Echo, says on the subject of oiled roads:

"The question whether oil should be heated or not is often asked. The answer seems to depend on the thinness of the oil and the rapidity with which we want it to run out of the sprinkler. If the oil is so thick that it runs very slowly, it must be warmed; but if it flows readily no warming is needed.

"In Kern county excellent results can be seen both where the oil is heated and where it was not. So it appears that the matter of temperature is of little or no importance.

"The result toward which all efforts must be directed is the complete saturation of the shifting road material with oil in whatever way that end may best be attained.

"One objection to the use of oil is that when first applied the volatile matter gives off an odor which, to some people, is offensive; and that the oil may be thrown by buggy wheels on the traveler and damage his clothing; and a third is that the oil is bad for rubber tires. All these objections apply to newly oiled roads and for a few days only while the volatile matter is escaping, and they are all overcome by oiling a portion of the road at a time and leaving it to dry before using; or by harrowing the oil into the sand.

"In the matter of cost, it is safe to say that a road can be thoroughly oiled during a series of say three years for less than sprinkling with water would cost in one year. And after those three years no oiling will be needed except on account of foreign matters added to the road mentioned.

"A total of $300 to $350 a mile in three years, of which say one-half the first year and one-fourth in each of the following three years, will, at present prices of oil, make a good job on an ordinary county road.

"It seems clear that as soon as the people realize the great economy and great comfort to be attained by oiling the roads, the amateur roadmaker filling the chuck holes which never become filled will cease from troubling and the water sprinkling wagon will be at rest."

When the Hogs Die.

The time of the greatest fatality among hogs is where they are compelled to subsist for any considerable time on the dry and concentrated foods, says the Indiana Farmer. In all experience that is the condition of the greatest ailment in animal life. When the hogs are turned into the autumn stubble fields and left to glean on the dry, concentrated food there obtained, if ever hog cholera or any other disease occurs that is the time, at least this is so generally speaking. It is not so much because the seeds of the disease are more prevalent then, but because the hog is forced into a condition which makes him most susceptible to the seeds of disease more or less always prevalent. No animal, not even man, was ever intended to subsist alone on dry, concentrated food, and the human animal knows too much to risk his health on such conditions. What the hog needs along with these concentrated foods is an occasional succulent ration. With the abundant opportunity to provide for him clover and rape and beets, artichokes, and even slage, etc., there is no reason why he should be abandoned to the conditions which invite disease and death. There is not a month of the year when an occasional succulent ration could not be provided for the hog. This, with pure water, would enable him to resist and throw off the germs of disease always prevalent, and sufficiently frequent to kill when subjected to conditions inviting death.

Feeding Wheat to Hogs.

In very many localities where Wallace's Farmer circulates wheat is of good quality and cheaper pound for pound than corn. We are receiving inquiries from some of our readers as to the comparative value of corn and wheat for hogs. This question has been investigated by a number of the different experiment stations and without quoting the detailed figures from these different experiments we will say that the average result of all of them shows that 469 pounds of corn meal were required for 100 pounds of grain, as against 463 pounds of wheat. That is, wheat is as valuable, pound for pound, for hog feed as corn. On this subject Prof. J. T. Willard, of the Kansas experiment station recently sent out a bulletin in which he says:

"In feeding wheat satisfactorily, a number of considerations must be kept in view. The kernels being much smaller than those of corn, there is much more danger of their escaping mastication and passing out undigested. Many farmers who regard it as unprofitable to feed wheat whole find on crushing or grinding it that all difficulty disappeared. It is scarcely of roughage it may not be amiss to inject a word of suggestion that wheat straw is much better than nothing, and the wheat belt can contribute to the needs of their less fortunate fellow-citizens, and add to their own profits by preserving, baling and marketing their straw instead of burning it as usual."—Wallace Farmer.

Cost of Keeping a Cow.

The cost of feed varies greatly in different seasons and in different localities, and it would be impossible to lay down any arbitrary figures in dollars and cents. It is no more than right, however, to charge the cow with feed at the price at which it would be sold on the local market minus cost of hauling. This, of course, does not include any fertilizing value where the feed is consumed on the farm. Where common cows are fed a balanced ration and given practically all they will eat the Kansas State Agricultural College found that the herd of twenty-eight cows consumed an average of 2350 pounds of grain, and 6166 pounds of roughness per cow per annum. At the prices prevailing in Manhattan during the year 1898 and 1899 the Adding together the cost of labor, the interest on the money invested, the loss from the failure of the cow to breed and the loss of calves by death, and the cost of raising the calf until six months old, we have a total of $27.45. Subtract from this the value of the calf ($20), and we still have $7.45 charged up to the cow; that is to say, a dairy cow, to be really profitable, all things considered, must produce dairy products to the amount of $7.45 above the cost of feed.—D. H. O., in Kansas Farmer.

Stock Notes.

Lakeview Examiner: We hear that J. Churchill made a sale of 1200 head of fine beef cattle last week, at the Wadsworth ranch in Shasta Valley, at rate of 7 cents for steers and 6 cents for cows. They were all shipped below to supply the San Francisco market.

T. C. Mitchell & Co. of Gazelle are gradually shipping below large bands of cattle procured in Southern Oregon and this county, which bring good prices, and will keep on sending train loads as long as the weather remains favorable for driving into the feeding grounds at railroad stations from outside ranges.

The Type of Horse that Always Brings a Good Price.

especially necessary when fed to steers or milch cows. In animals with smaller mouths there is less waste than with cattle, and some have observed a positive advantage with sheep in feeding it whole. This was due, however, to the greater consumption of whole grain than ground. Ground wheat has an important disadvantage in feeding, in that it is apt to form a gummy mass, which adheres to the teeth, making it difficult and disagreeable to handle by the animal. This fault has been the source of some of the poor results in feeding it, and is best obviated by feeding it mixed with some other grain, as corn, oats, or Kafir corn. Animals fed upon a mixture are less liable to become cloyed than when fed on wheat alone.

In brief, the nutritive value of wheat, as shown by its composition, is greater than that of corn, it can be best utilized by feeding it ground or crushed, and mixed to a certain extent with oats, corn, or Kafir corn; it may be fed advantageously to horses, cattle, hogs, sheep or poultry.

"In discussing the feeding value of wheat, the grain only has thus far been in mind. In this year of extreme average cost of this feed was $29.86.

But the cost of feed is not the only item to be considered. Labor is an important factor. In reply to a number of requests sent out by the Kansas experiment station to practical dairymen, asking for information upon the number of cows kept and the time it took to milk, feed, clean the stables and wash milk utensils, it was found on the average that it took 125 hours per cow per annum. Figuring this time at the low price of 10 cents per hour, it will cost $12.50 per annum to care for a cow. The value of the dairy cow is at least $40, the interest at 8 per cent. would amount to $3.20. In averaging up a herd account must be taken of the risk of failure of cows to breed and the loss of calves by death. In the absence of records on this point from dairymen we will call this cost $2.75 per annum, the estimated loss in raising beef cattle, as given by J. D. Gillet, the king feeder of the last generation. We will assume that the calf is worth $20; figuring skim milk at 15 cents per 100 pounds, grain at one-half cent per pound bay at $3 per ton, labor at $2.75, we have found at the agricultural college that it will cost $9 to raise a calf until it is six months old,

Klamath Falls Express: I. D. Applegate sold last week to Hank Meiss 1435 head of mutton sheep at $3.25 per head. They were a fine lot of sheep and were driven through here Thursday on the way to the railroad for shipment.

Red Bluff Sentinel: The loss of from two to four thousand hogs in Tehama county, from a disease that has appeared in Humboldt, Mendocino, Trinity, Shasta, Glenn and other northern counties has caused much anxiety among owners whose herds have not yet suffered. The remedy of Clinton Gregory of Cottonwood creek, is declared to be partially successful, and it was decided to hold a meeting of hog owners in that place last Saturday to discuss the matter.

The Chewaucan Post says a Mr. Anderson, buying horses for the government, was in Silver Lake last week. He bought 11 head from George Small at $35 per head, and a few scattering paying from $30 to $40.

High-Grade Milk.

[Extracts from paper by H. B. Gurler before Illinois Dairymen's Convention.]

You can't feed moldy hay, bad silage, musty corn fodder, that has been put into the mow when it was not in a shape to go there, and get good milk. The use of any such materials will get you into trouble and will of themselves prevent you from making high-grade milk. No feed that has an odor should be permitted to remain about the stables. You may set a vessel filled with milk in the silo for an hour; then if you take it out and heat it, you can tell by the nose it has been in the silo. At the Vermont station we could heat the milk up to 110 degrees and by the smell tell whether it had been near a hog pen or not. In one case where the smell revealed the hog pen, we called for the man and told him that his milk smelt like a hog pen. He answered that he had to do his milking in a yard within fifty feet of a hog pen. He at once discontinued that practice. Now most of us do not realize the force of these points. It is hard for us to believe that milk will be contaminated in that way, to that extent. We can't make good butter with faulty milk. If we could only get the right kind of milk we could always make a butter that would score high.

Now as to silage. I think that wherever there is an odor of silage in the milk it shows that silage has been near it, that the odor has not come from silage eaten by the cow, but from the silage smell in the atmosphere of the stable. When I first began shipping milk to Chicago, I did not dare to feed silage to the cows. Then I tried feeding some lots on grain feed and others on part silage. I tried the milk on my family and found they could not distinguish the difference. When I asked them to point out the best milk, they selected the silage milk.

One of the essential points in the production of good milk is to have good ventilation in the stables. Light and other sanitary conditions are also essential. The stable should be as well ventilated as the dwelling house, and even more so, for there are more complications in the ventilations of the barns. In the house there are but few to use up the air, and we have the doors open often; the stables are fuller of living beings and the doors are seldom open. The cow stable should be so built that it will give a constant change of air. A Chicago professor said that he could lead a blind man through my stable and he would never know that he had been there. Now, in most stables the air is so laden with odors that your clothes are filled with them as soon as you go into them. What must happen to milk drawn in such an atmosphere? We consume more filth in our milk than in any other article of food we use.

Do not let the dogs chase the cows; for it will stop the flow of milk and the production of fat. I can take a sow and so handle her that all her pigs will be set scouring, and yet not harm the sow herself a bit. That shows the effect on the milk of disturbed conditions in the mother.

Milking. How many farmers when they go to milk, ever think of washing their hands? Now, what would we think of our wives going to milking and then coming into the house and beginning cooking without washing their hands? I remember once boarding with a family. One day I saw the woman come in from milking and go to getting breakfast without washing herself. Well, after that I ate potatoes that had been cooked with their skins on and eggs that I could pick from the shells myself. We should not only wash our hands, but should also cleanse the parts of the cow that can contaminate the milk.

Last spring I was asked to send some milk to Paris, France, with the idea of seeing if it could be so perfect that it would remain sweet without being sterilized and without having preservatives added to it. I did not think I could do it, but I tried. August 28th I put up the milk for the trial, taking it from the rest of my milk and giving it no special care. I took it just as it came into the bottling room, without knowing what cows or milkers it came from. I took it from the bottling machine. I cooled that milk just as rapidly as I could and placed it on ice. The next morning it was packed and shipped to New York, and there put into a steamer's refrigerator. It reached Paris, Sept. 15th, in fine condition and perfectly sweet; it was acid on the 19th. Just when it changed is not known—some time between September 16th and 19th. That shows what is possible as to keeping milk.

I was induced to go into my present milk furnishing business by some friends in Chicago. The first thing I did was to put into operation the Bahcock test, but we will not talk about that. We have our cows in the stable lined up on a gutter so that all the droppings go into gutter and the cows do not get dirty. The stables are scrubbed out every day with water and scrubbing brushes. Now when we come to milking time, the milkers have to cleanse their hands and put themselves in proper condition and put on their white suits. The first few streams from every teat are discarded. We milk through absorbent cotton, and the milk is poured out through a covered spout. So the milk is not exposed to the air of the stable at all. After it is drawn the milk is taken to the milk room and put through a centrifugal separator, after which we remix the cream and milk to make the percentage the same in all.

Wool and Mutton.

Farmers who keep common sheep and depend upon wool do not know how specimens of some breeds may be made to reach great weights. A two year old grade Lincoln wether in England was slaughtered, its live weight being 434 pounds. The carcass weighed 304 pounds, the loose fat thirty-four pounds, the skin, blood and entrails, ninety pounds, and the waste six pounds. Sheep weighing 300 pounds live weight are numerous in this country. A sheep of the mutton breeds is worth more now than both a sheep and its wool twenty years ago. Farmers saw nothing in sheep but wool; hence the sheep sent to market were very inferior. Now the choice carcasses sent to market weigh heavily and give good profits independently of wool. Seventy-five sheep will produce as many pounds of wool fiber as an acre of land will of cotton fiber. Today the wool is worth 15 cents and the cotton 10 cents, which proves that if it were not for the mutton value of the sheep and the increase of the flock the colored man with his mule and rope harness and cottonfield would have the better of the northern sheep owner. Then it should be said that the longer cotton is raised on the same piece of ground the poorer will it become, while the longer sheep are kept on the farm the more fertile will it become.—Montana Stockman and Farmer.

Soaked Corn for Pigs.

Our experience in feeding soaked corn has been limited. The first to speak of was last season, when we were obliged to buy corn, and we bought it already shelled, says a correspondent of Swineherd. Being dry and hard, as it always is during the summer, we placed it to soak from one feed to the next, thinking it better to feed. We fed in troughs, and the soaking kept the pigs from kicking it out of the troughs to any considerable extent. We mixed and soaked oats with the corn and received as good results as if oats had been ground or fed otherwise.

The pigs do not tire of the soaked corn, as we have seen them do on hard, dry corn, and they would leave dry corn any time to eat the corn that had been soaked. They did not eat any more greedily in this way than otherwise, and seemed to relish the soaking. We think soaked corn a good thing for the pigs, as their power of mastication is found wanting compared with that of the hog. One can notice that the pig grinds dry corn with difficulty. We were pleased with the results and shall continue to soak corn this season. We shall shell all the corn we soak, and we do not think it a good idea to feed soaked ear corn on the ground in the dirt.

The Cornell University herd of cows (mostly grade Jerseys and grade Holsteins), in the year 1874 averaged a little more than 3000 pounds of milk per cow. The descendants of these same cows now average over 7500 pounds of milk per year. This remarkable improvement has been secured "by the use of pure bred bulls and a rigid selection of the best heifers."

The bulletin which gives the history of the herd says this increase of two and one-half times in the milk product "is the result of judicious selection of sire and dam, together with careful feeding, and is a result which every farmer can obtain by following a similar course."

If you make mutton the main object put as much wool as possible on the back of the sheep.

Feeding for Rich Milk.

The belief that milk varies in richness according to the food the cows eat still obtains among dairymen whose observation are based upon little practical testing in that direction. Experiment station workers after long and exhaustive tests have decided over and over again that food does not increase richness but that the fat quantity depends upon the individuality of the cow, though from day to day varying as the result of different causes that work on the cow's system, such as exposure to cold, being tormented by dogs, etc.

Prof. E. H. Farrington in Farmers' Review writes again on the matter as follows:

In England the dairy authorities seem not yet to have awakened to the fact that the food fed a cow does not affect the richness of her milk. We can forgive the English for this ignorance, for they have little help from the government in the way of experiment stations. But what shall be said of the ignorance of Ohio legislators, who, having the fullest access to reports of our experiment stations, yet have passed a law virtually declaring that the fat in milk is increased or decreased according to the components of the feeding material. A law is actually in force reducing the necessary and legal fat limit .5 per cent. during the months of May and June. They did this under a belief that during those two months the succulence of the feed is such that the fat content is lowered in the milk. It is evident that the Ohio law as made is 'not according to knowledge.'

Twenty years ago nearly all farmers and educators believed that feeding a rich food made rich milk, and feeding poor food made poor milk. But since that time experiments in Europe and the United States have clearly shown that the well-nigh universal belief was wrong and that milk cannot be made to contain more fat by the feeding of fatty foods. When a large amount of fat is fed, the cow economy takes a certain per cent of it and elaborates it into milk. All the fat in the food, in excess of the certain per cent, is discarded and goes off in the excrement. Therefore if they feed a food too rich in fat let them know that they are enriching the manure and not the milk. The "certain per cent" spoken of varies in different cows, and refers to capacity to elaborate butter fat, which capacity can be measurably increased only by judicious selection and feeding. To what extent blood and milk are identical we do not know, though some investigators have expressed the opinion that milk is merely blood held in suspension. Whatever may be the truth regarding this it remains true that both tend to show constancy in their composition. This constancy is very necessary; were it not so the blood might so vary within a short time as to cause a complete collapse of the whole system.

Soher up on Jackson's Napa Soda.

If pedigree does not count for anything in live stock breeding why have Shortborn breeders published 40 or 50 volumes of pedigrees, and other breeders in proportion? Why does pure bred stock that has a full pedigree sell for so much more than grade animals that can show no pedigree? Because the pedigrees furnish a history of the ancestors of the animal in question, says the Texas Stockman. If the majority of them have made good records and have been good breeders the chances are that the present animal will make a good breeder. With the grade animal that can furnish no history we must judge his breeding qualities from his looks and this is by no means a sure method. A careful breeder of pure bred live stock will attach as much importance to a pedigree as to the animal itself. By this we do not mean that every animal that can show a pedigree will sell for a fabulous price or that it will be any better than some other animal that has no pedigree. But the animal that is only a fairly good animal and has a pedigree that shows much of the best blood of the breed will be preferred to the one that in itself is of great excellence but has nothing in his pedigree that is more than ordinary.

ASTHMA CURE FREE!

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent Cure in All Cases.

Sent Absolutely Free on Receipt of Postal.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

We want to send to every sufferer a trial treatment of Asthmalene, similar to the one that cured Mr. Wells. We'll send it by mail POSTPAID, ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE, to any sufferer who will write for it, even on a postal. Never mind, though you are despairing, however bad your case, Asthmalene will relieve and cure. The worse your case, the more glad we are to send it. Do not delay. Write at once, addressing DR. A NEW CLIPPING MACHINE.

1902 CHICAGO

PRICE $15, F. O. B. SAN FRANCISCO.

"STEWART'S PATENT."

THE MOST PERFECT EVER MADE

A Revolution in Clipping Machine Construction.

INCOMPARABLY superior to anything previously manufactured at any price by any one. Surprisingly simple, strong and durable. No belts to slip, positive power. The teeth in large gear are cut out of solid metal (no cast) which must run easily and will wear forever. It has a rigid base, tubular upright, with a fine, strong crank handle, and unlike any other machine made it can be turned with either the left or the right hand. Each machine is furnished with the '99 Improved one-nut balance tension knife, which cannot get out of adjustment.

One of our customers writes us, after receiving the new machine: "Life is too short to fool away with my old belt machine. I can clip two horses now in the time it formerly took to clip one and I am not half as tired."

JANICE, the mare bred by H. W. Meek of Haywards, and sold last year to the Santa Rosa Stock Farm, won a race on Murray Howe's famous Memphis plan at the Memphis meeting last Tuesday and took a record of 2:09. As all horsemen know, the Memphis plan provides for a three heat race, the first heat at one mile, the second at a mile and an eighth and the third at a half-mile. There were seven starters in the race, the others being Lita W., Wauban, Miss Whitney, Charley Mac, Palm Leaf and Dolly Bidwell. Janice won the first heat in 2:09 and the second in 2:24. This was certainly a remarkable heat, as it is at the rate of about 2:08 to the mile. The last heat at a half-mile went to Lita W. in 1:04. Janice won $1500 in the event. The Santa Rosa Stock Farm should be well satisfied with the showing made this year by their two mares, Dolly Dillon and Janice. The former has won very near $8000 since leaving California and taken a record of 2:07, the fastest mile made by a trotting mare this year. On the Grand Circuit, which does not include Lexington and Memphis, she started eight times, being twice a winner of first money, once second, twice third and once fourth. Nearly always an unsteady mare in a race, she has shown her ability to trot as fast as the fastest of the horses racing this year when right, and when she won her Readville race, where her mark was made, was as steady as a clock. At Lexington, she beat Onward Silver handily after he had defeated her in the Transylvania, and although Geers brought the white-faced horse up with his usual rush in the stretch in two heats, Dolly Dillon beat him on her merits. Janice has won about $2500 on her Eastern tour and is just getting into form, having been off during all the early part of the season. She can probably trot three heats in 2:10 or better when right, and is much more level headed, but not as speedy as Dolly. They are two great mares.

Alix 2:03½, the fastest trotting mare ever bred, was put to death by chloroform last week. She was paralyzed a short time ago and her owner, Mr. Sayles, put her death to end her suffering. Alix was by Patronage out of Atlanta by Attorney and made her record in a trial against time at Galesburg, Illinois, September 19, 1894. This record stood as the champion trotting record until The Abbot beat it last year. It is still the record for mares. Alix was bred by Daniel Hayes, of Muscatine, Iowa. She was driven to her record by Andy McDowell.

Of the California horses that were taken East and raced on the Grand Circuit (this does not include Lexington and Memphis), the following trotters won money: Toggles $8125, Dolly Dillon $5275, Charley Mac $4275, Dr. Book $2000, Janice $975, Algonetta $800, Vic Shellar $300, Eula Mac $225, Venus II. $225. The pacers that won on the Grand Circuit were Harry Logan $1250, Bonnie Direct $675, Stanton Wilkes $500, Goshen Jim $250 and Thornway $120. These figures are from a compilation published by the Chicago Horseman. There were 176 horses that won money on the Grand Circuit and the total amount won by them was $213,855. The trotters that won $10,000 or over were Cresceus $19,875, Eleata $19,266, Country Jay $17,313, The Abbot $15,000, Nera Simmons $12,772, Lord Derby $11,875, Onward Silver $10,275, and of the pacers that won $10,000 or over were two in number, Audubon Boy $13,850 and Dan Patch $10,500.

Milo Knox has opened a horse clipping shop at 1309 Fulton street in this city and will clip horses neatly and with despatch. He uses one of the new Chicago clippers advertised in this paper and reports that it is the best machine he has ever tried and does its work easily and perfectly.

That Laying Up Case at Readville.

The following from a recent issue of the Chicago Horse Review will interest everyone identified with harness racing:

All remember the Alecy case at the Breeders' meeting at Readville, when both that horse and his owner were expelled and driver M. T. Sayles was fined $100. At Brockton I got Mr. Sayles' version of the affair, which is as follows: "Five days before the race I worked Alecy a mile in 2:04 and he pulled up lame from a quarter crack. I had Dr. C. H. Perry attend him, and though he did everything possible, yet the evening previous to the race Alecy was so lame he could barely step on the foot. James Carpenter and others who saw the horse that evening declared he hadn't a chance in a hundred to win his race. After warning Alecy up, Mr. W. L. Ripley, Dr. Perry and myself had a consultation, and we all agreed that it was impossible to expect so lame a horse to win, and that Mr. Ripley had better play the field against him.

"When it came to racing Alecy was so game he out-trotted his lameness and acted the race horse he is.

I won the first heat and saw that I could win the race. We then decided it was better for me to drop the second heat so as to allow Mr. Ripley to back the horse, and in this way get out the first money played and win something on the race. I had to drop a heat because Nick Huhinger and other heavy plungers were buying all the pools and Mr. Ripley was unable to buy a single one on his horse.

"As you know, after losing the second heat the judges took me out without giving me a chance. My intention and orders were to win the next two heats, and I so told the judges, but they wouldn't listen to me. I had Dr. Perry constantly with the horse and he was filling his quarter-crack with cocaine, laudanum and ether. If we hadn't wanted to win we would hardly have done everything possible to make Alecy race sound. After the race I truthfully told the judges the whole story; the condition of the horse; how we were two days shoeing him, he was so sore; that we went to Mr. Jewett the forenoon of the race to draw the horse and he refused under Rule 17, for not drawing the night before, and that I purposely dropped the second heat, why I did so, and that I would have won had they allowed me to finish the race. The judges fined me $100 and expelled Mr. Ripley and Alecy.

"As Alecy was entered in stake races at Lexington, Ky., and Memphis, you can readily see how great the punishment is on Mr. Ripley and me. I have worked Alecy a mile over a half-mile track in 2:12½ and his mile at Readville in 2:08½ both show what a great trotter he gave promise of being."

On the testimony of Mr. Sayles himself the decision of the Readville judges was none too severe. Sayles laid up a heat that he was certain he could win for the purpose of winning money in the pool box. It is these cases that should be dealt with in the severest manner. There is absolutely no legitimate excuse for laying up a horse under the conditions stated by Mr. Sayles in this case.

Close of the Stockton Meeting.

The five days race meeting given by the Stockton Driving Club closed last Saturday with a good attendance. The gate receipts on Friday were in excess of $600 which shows that at least two thousand people attended that day as there were a very large number of complementary badges out. While the racing was not very high class during the week, it furnished good sport for those who attended and some good contests resulted. Owing to the fact that about twice as many horses went to Stockton as were expected, and the owners demanded races for them it was decided after consultation with the horsemen to give two harness races each day for $150 each, instead of one a day at $250. There were a few owners who criticized this action, but nine-tenths endorsed it, and expressed their satisfaction with the program.

The officers of the Driving Club were energetic in their endeavors to make the meeting a success and agreeable to all. The pavilion display was very fine and was continued all this week, being largely attended. The summaries of the races held on the last two days of the meeting are as follows:

Friday, October 18.—Trotting, 2:24 class.

Geo. S. McKenzie of Hilo, H. I., will enter his horse General Cronje by imp. Martenhurst-Songstress in the Burns Handicap and Thornton Stakes to be run at the winter meeting of the California Jockey Club.

In hot weather there is no drink like Jackson's Napa Soda—plain in a lemonade.

Cresceus is the Greatest.

No other trotter ever has kept his high form all season or trotted as many extremely fast miles as has Cresceus during the season of 1901, writes Percy in the New York Telegraph. As he is to continue exhibiting till winter sets in on the California shores, he will have several more miles approximating 2:05 to his credit.

Some may have compared his Thursday mile, 2:05½, at Columbus, Ohio, with the 2:02½ mile trotted in August over the same track on a warm, fairly favorable day; others doubtless did not note the fast fractions early in the mile. It must be borne in mind that the mid-October in the north is bordering on winter weather, the earth is affected by the atmosphere and is not as elastic as during warm, stationary weather, consequently the majority of Northern trackbeds are "dead," as experts term it.

At Columbus, in his 2:02½ mile, he trotted to the half in 59½ seconds, the fastest half on record for a trotter. Thursday he went the same ground in 1:01½, the first quarter around the lower turn in 30½ seconds—a 2:03 clip. At the three-quarter post the time caught him in 1:34½, this making the final quarter 31 seconds, which is wonderful stamina and a terrific finish, facing a heavy and cold wind as he did.

Last season at Cleveland, in October, he trotted in 2:04, but on a fairly favorable day. He had not been so extensively shipped about nor so numerously tried against the record, consequently was fresher.

He trotted at Philadelphia in 2:04½, at Baltimore in 2:05½, was shipped to Lexington but not raced or started, thence to Toledo, where on a half mile track he trotted in 2:09½ to harness, and 2:12 to wagon the same day.

A brief resume may be of interest at this time. Cresceus has trotted a mile against time in 2:02½, one in 2:02½, a first heat in 2:03½, a world's record; a second heat in 2:05, another record; a third consecutive mile in 2:05, another best of record performance; a half in 59½ seconds, still another star in his crown; a quarter in 29½ seconds, but this has been equaled; a mile to wagon over a half mile track; the world's wagon record for stallions, and has defeated all comers throughout two seasons.

Since early July Mr. Ketcham has driven him a mile around 2:06 nearly every week, and, too, over a variety of trackbeds. Were he shipped to Memphis and given a series of fair trials, I think he would stand a chance to at least tie the record, or if tried to wagon would lower The Abbot's champion record, 2:05½, made at Charter Oak track in 1900.

The western climate is favorable, but their tracks, save at one or two California points, are not as fast as our tracks this side of the Rockies.

Some idea as to the place the Saratoga Association means to take in the racing world can be gathered from the many rich stakes it has offered to the horsemen. Money has been added to all of them lavishly, and if the racing at the Springs next season and those to follow is not up to the highest standard, it will not be for the want of encouragement on the part of the association of which Mr. W. C. Whitney is the head. That things are not to be done by halves can be gathered from the fact that an aggregate of $149,000 has been guaranteed by the association for seven stake events. Chief of these is the Great Republic, the gross value of which will be $50,000. Of this the second horse will receive $5500 and the third one $2500; while the nominator of the winner will be $2000 better off. Surely this is sufficient to attract the attention of horsemen and the entries close December 22 of the present year. The next in point of value is the Hopeful Stakes. It is estimated that the value of this event will be in the neighborhood of $40,000. It is one of the regular subscription and forfeit affairs, to which the association will add $5000. These second and third horses will divide $5500, and it has the usual penalties and allowances attached. The Spinaway Stakes will be worth to the winner $14,000, that being the amount guaranteed by the association. The Hopeful Stake which will be run in 1903, will be of the value of $25,000. To this end a guarantee has been given, and it is calculated to make all those having horses eligible enter them. Of the other stake events, entries for which will be accepted up to and including December 2, 1901, are the Travers, for three year olds; the Kenner and the Alabama, for fillies. The first named has a gross value of $10,000, while each of the others will net the winner $5000. Events to be run next season, and for which entries close November 11th, are the United States Hotel, of $10,000; the Grand Union Hotel, of $10,000; the Flash, of $5000; the Spinaway, of $5000; the Travers, of $10,000; the Kenner, of $5000, and the Alabama, of $5000.

The famous sprinter, Voter, has been retired to the stud permanently by J. R. and F. P. Keene. The horse was sent to Castleton Farm, Kentucky, for a rest at first, but later it was decided to leave him there.

THE SADDLE.

THE CALIFORNIA JOCKEY CLUB has announced the list of entries received for the first ten stakes to be run between November 2d, the opening day, and January 1st. It is the largest list ever received by the club and presages grand racing on the Coast during the coming season. Among the nominators are Wm. C. Whitney, August Belmont and other distinguished earnest racing men whose advent in Pacific Coast racing has been so often predicted heretofore and as often failed to materialize. This year, however, their stables will be represented and the horses have been named. In the opening handicap there were 52 entries; Produce Exchange handicap, 67; Golden Gate selling stake, 69; Crocker handicap, 64; Thanksgiving handicap, 57; Burlingame selling stake, 60; Truxton Beale handicap, 66; Junior stake, 63; Christmas handicap, 59 and New Year's handicap, 73. The program for the first two weeks racing at Oakland has been issued. The purses are $400 for over night events and $600 for the handicaps. There is not a stall at the Oakland track but is already taken and a gang of carpenters was put to work this week constructing fifty new ones. Besides the horses stabled at the track, there will be two or three hundred stalled on the outside in private stables. There will be no accommodations for the "hodge" horses at Oakland or Tanforan this season and the result will be beneficial to racing here. From all appearances it looks as though the season of racing about to open will bring out a higher average lot of horses than have been seen in California heretofore.

Among the persons that will wear an owner's badge this year at the local track is Mrs. Madeline Cone, formerly of Denver, who has a string of seven thoroughbreds stabled at Oakland. They are under the charge of Johnny Coleman. Mrs. Cone has rented a cottage close to the track and is at the course every day watching the workouts.

A movement is on foot in New York, backed by some of the leading members of the turf, to stop, as far as possible, the transfer of stable secrets to plungers. It is a well known fact that the gamblers and turf advisors have trainers, jockeys and grooms in their pay, and that the plungers know more about the horses when they go to the post than the owners do. If the movement amounts to anything it will be a wonder, as the gamblers are a hard crowd to defeat.

Castleton, the magnificent stock farm belonging to the estate of A. J. Ford, will be legally transferred to James R. Keene, the famous horse breeder of New York, in a few days. The sale was made by General Edgar Allan, attorney, who, with Judge Edmund Waddill, Jr., gave authority to dispose of the properties of the estate and re-invest the proceeds. The price received for Castleton was $85,000, and General Allan will leave to-morrow for Lexington, Ky., to make the final arrangements of transfer. The farm contains 614 acres of land and is in the heart of the great blue grass region, the Utopia of the stock breeder.

The two year old bay colt, Duke of Westminster, by Orme out of Gautlet, has been purchased by G. Faber, of London, for $21,000, which is the largest price ever paid in England or elsewhere for a two year old.

Papinta, the danseuse, who a few years ago established a thoroughbred breeding farm near Concord, Contra Costa county, in this State, will send to the auction ring in this city during December, a consignment of handsome and well bred two year olds, all by El Rayo and out of select mares. Papinta, who is Mrs. Lorena V. Holpin in private life, has made a beautiful home of her stock farm, and greatly enjoys the time spent there among the horses and colts. The lady is an excellent whip and handles one, two or four horses as if to the manor born.

Jockey Jobuny Woods will reach here in time for the opening of the season and will ride for Johnny Schorr.

Sam Doggett, the jockey who went to Austria with Fred Taral a year ago, is back and says: "My experience in Austria was an extremely pleasant one, but I made no money. I know of no American Jockey on the Continent that has, excepting Taral, and he is riding in fine form and taking things by storm. He will be back home about the middle of next month. I witnessed the St. Leger in England in which Volodyovski was defeated, and think Volodyovski would have surely beaten the other horses if he had not been interfered with. About a furlong from home he had plenty of room to come through, but he lacked the necessary burst of speed. He did finally get through, but in doing so all the bumping occurred. The field he met on that occasion was not thought to be of the biggest class. I saw and talked with Rolff, and from his conversation judge they have been nagging at him for some time. He told me he had been called before the stewards on several occasions, but had always been able to explain satisfactorily. By others I was assured that Reiff was looked upon as being the proper thing in the jockey line, and while I did not see the race about which all the fuss was made I did hear many taking Reiff's part."

Will Langford will have the combination book at Oakland and Tanforan this winter. Mr. Langford is one of the fairest and most gentlemanly men in the bookmaking business and has never yet refused to "take a chance." He is ready to give and take where there is a fair field and no favor. His health is better than for some years.

Lucky Baldwin will have the best stable of runners this season that he has had for years. La Goleta is in good shape and will get her share of the purses and stakes in which she is entered. She has more speed than ever.

The Crescent City Jockey Club of New Orleans has been assigned dates for 100 days, beginning on November 28th, and the officials to serve are as follows: James H. Rees and H. M. Johnson, stewards; Clarence McDowell and R. W. Simmons, judges; C. J. Fitzgerald, starter; Sheridan Clark, handicapper and clerk of scales; Alexander Brewster, patrol judge; J. L. Hall, paddock judge; C. S. Bush, representative steward of the Western Jockey Club.

Walter Jeunings has seventeen horses in training at Sacramento aside from yearlings. The list includes Vesuvian, Andrisa, Dunblane, Canderos, Redwald, The Scot, Modder, El Bano, Milas, Prestano, Quiet, Lapidus, Bassezo, Minerva, Sister Jeanie, Jacqueminot and Evander.

Geo. Covington says that the hot weather in Chicago greatly affected Brutal, and another horseman says there were not enough high weight races for the son of Brutus. According to this dope Brutal should break a record with about 130 pounds on his back when the thermometer registers zero.

A chapter of accidents marred the racing at Morris Park last Wednesday. Alexander Olsen, one of the jockeys, received injuries which resulted in his death a few hours later; two horses were killed outright, another was so badly hurt that it had to be shot, and three other jockeys had narrow escapes. In the first race King T. fell at the water jump, directly in front of the grand stand, and broke his neck, Jockey Barry escaping injury. It was in the fifth race that Olsen met with his fatal mishap. When he was picked up it was at once seen he was most seriously hurt, and when he was taken into Fordham Hospital the surgeons found his skull badly fractured. Olsen was 18 years old and was riding Timotby Foley for K. L. N. Anderson. Just after the start Timothy Foley was crowded into the fence and went down. The field went on, and when entering the far turn Johnny of Navarre, with Cochrane up, overstrode himself and turned a complete somersault. Councilman Tom (J. Callahan riding) fell over Johnny of Navarre. The latter horse was killed and Councilman Tom was severely hurt and had to be shot. The jockeys marvelously escaped and walked back to the stand.

Tod Sloan is going back to France. He has hooked his passage on the steamship which leaves to-day. The racing season has commenced in Southern France, and Sloan is interested in a stable there which includes the California bred jumper Boots.

No. 13 of Goodwin's Official Turf Guide is out and no follower of form can get along well without it.

W. C. Whitney has purchased through J. E. Madden, from John W. Schorr, the bay filly Endurance by Right, 2, by Inspector B., dam imp. Early Morn. Price said to be $40,000. Endurance by Right is the best filly of the year as well as the champion two year old of the season. She has started this season seventeen times and won fifteen races.

Jockey Michaels is in serious trouble with the New York Jockey Club officials. The stewards of the Westchester Racing Association last week suspended the boy for the balance of the meeting and referred the case to the stewards of the Jockey Club for further consideration. It is said that the action of the stewards was prompted by Michaels' ride on Wild Pirate in the last race on Wednesday, when, just before the race, a Pinkerton man overheard a conversation between Michaels and his valet, H. Silvers. According to the detective Silvers told Michaels that he was not to win with Wild Pirate. When this information was brought to the stewards they summoned Michaels and asked him to explain. Michaels denied that he had even seen Silvers before the race, much less had a conversation with him.

The horse trainers of the metropolitan race tracks have begun a movement to present to William C. Whitney, as a testimony of appreciation for his efforts for the welfare of the turf, a life-size painting in oil of the great two year old Nasturtium, the most prominent colt in the Whitney barn, and said to be the favorite horse of the millionaire turfman. The painting is by the well known artist, Henry Stull, and is one of his best efforts.

The New York Jockey Club has amended rule 161 to read as follows: "Boys who never rode a winner, and who have of their own free will and with the consent of their parents or guardians, bound themselves as apprentices to owners or trainers for a term of not less of three years by a written instrument, a certified copy of which has been lodged with the stewards of the Western Jockey Club, shall be permitted to claim a five-pound allowance in all selling races, excepting selling handicaps. They shall be entitled to this allowance for one year after being licensed as apprentices. Allowance under this rule must be claimed at the time of entry, and the owner shall not be permitted to waive such allowance, except by consent of the judges."

Redfern, the lightweight jockey, will ride for Burns & Waterhouse in California this season and Spencer will be their heavyweight. Bullman will probably be a free lance.

Dan Dennison, Jr., is training a number of two year olds belonging to Hugh Wilson, the popular honiface of Butte, Montana. The colts were nearly all purchased from the Bitter Root and Rancho del Paso breeding farms.

The class of jockeys to ride here during the coming season will probably be a great improvement over that of previous years. While there may not be as many stars as have been in the saddle at one or two meetings heretofore, they will certainly average better.

Green B. Morris has arrived with his string and states that every horse reached here in good shape. Winnie O'Connor will ride for him during the season.

In the Opening handicap to be run the first day of the Oakland meeting William C. Whitney of New York has named his black three year old gelding Pau Clifford by Lissak out of Trousseau II.

Burns & Waterhouse will have a large number of two year olds of their own breeding in the races after the 1st of January.

Starter Holtman will manipulate the barrier during the first four weeks of racing at Oakland.

Strike!—if they don't give you Jackson's Napa Soda when you ask for it.

SULKY NOTES.

Pleasanton!

That's the place!

November 1st and 2d.

Those are the correct dates.

Every harness horseman should be there.

Reka Direct's record of 2:14 was made over a half-mile track.

Creseus' stud fee will be $500. It is reported that his book is about filled.

The Kings county fair is in progress at Hanford, Tulare county, this week.

Sam Casto will open a public training stable at Vancouver, Washington, this winter.

Peter Sterling 2:11½ displaces Who Is It 2:12 as the world's champion three year old gelding.

But four of the get of Nutwood Wilkes have started this year and all have earned race records in standard time.

Dictatus has another new one in the list. Dictatus Medium took a record of 2:24 at Hollister last Wednesday and won in straight heats.

Pleasanton track will be in fine condition for the races there next week. Seats are being erected to accommodate a thousand people.

Round trip tickets to Pleasanton and return will be sold for a fare and a third and will be good from Friday November 1st to Sunday, November 3d.

Another 2:10 performer for California. Janice, bay mare by William Harold out of Fenella by Fallis, trotted to a record of 2:09 at Memphis last Monday.

The big stock parade at Pleasanton will be held on Saturday morning next at 10 o'clock. It promises to be first class in every way and many high class horses will be paraded.

Geo. Fox, of Clements, owner of the stallion Silver Bow 2:16, has arranged to send the horse to Pleasanton for the season of 1902. Silver Bow will be in charge of James Thompson.

The Stockton track was one of the best on the circuit this year, but was seconds slower than it can be made when runners do not have to be provided for by cutting it up next to the pole.

There is a very prevalent opinion that fairs and race meeting without bookmaking will be more popular and profitable next year than those where this system of betting is permitted.

When Dolly Dillon won the McDowell stake at Lexington last week there were many tickets sold in which Onward Silver was choice at $50. Toggles second choice at $35 and Dolly in the field at $15.

Gambia, the bay mare by Cupid 2:18, dam by Staunton, a mare bred by Mr. A. B. Spreckels and sold East last year, earned a record of 2:20 at Lexington, October 11th, driven by Chas. Marvin.

Durfee Mac's record of 2:17½ which he made at Stockton put him in the 2:18 class for next year where he should be a good money winner if he continues to improve. A mile in 2:15 is within his reach.

Lorita 2:18½ by Piedmont, the dam of Alta Vela 2:15, is now a member of the great brood mare list, her son Palori by Palo Alto having taken a trotting record of 2:26 at Sheldon Junction, Vermont, on September 5th, this year, in a winning race.

At Danbury, Conn., October 10th, Ellalee, bay mare by Dexter Prince, dam Extra, dam of Experto Rex 2:15½ by Electioneer, won in straight heats in 2:19½, 2:21½, 2:21. Ellalee is five years old and looks like one of the coming ones for next year.

The veteran Orrin Hickok was seen in the sulky this year at Cincinnati. The judges there were not satisfied with the way one of the horses in a race was being driven, and took out the driver and substituted Mr. Hickok. The horse did not win, however.

J. T., a California bred horse by Live Oak Hero, dam Ada by Dexter Prince, was one of the starters in the Transylvania at Lexington this year. He finished a good third in the first heat, which was won by Chain Shot in 2:13½, but was distanced the second heat.

Fuinstan, the roan pacer by Dictatus 2:17 that Sandy Smith took east last spring for a Pennsylvania purchaser, went wrong and was turned out. The horse was very sick a couple of weeks before being shipped east and was sick again at Cleveland. In spite of his condition Fuinstan was worked a fourth heat in 2:19 at Cleveland track.

The "big dailies" very often excite a "horse laugh" on account of their bungling way of reporting harness events, but they were never so unanimous in an error as on Thursday morning last when they all reported that Audubon Boy had broken the world's half mile trotting record. Audubon Boy is a pacer and won the third heat in a half mile race at Memphis in 1:00½, but the sporting editors of the San Francisco morning dailies all gave him the world's trotting record with accompanying big head lines of the "sensational" and "break" order.

Creseus trotted a wonderful mile at Columbus, October 17th. The weather was bitter cold and there was a very strong wind, yet he made the mile in 2:05½. Ketcham did not expect to beat 2:10 with the horse and the way in which the champion trotted was a revelation. Had the weather and other conditions been favorable Creseus would have equalled his record.

One of the best investments a person can make in the horse business just now is offered by Hon. Jesse D. Carr, of Salinas. He has a large number of standard bred mares for sale at ridiculously low prices. Anyone who will purchase a few of these mares, breed them in the spring to some of the many good stallions on this Coast, and carefully raise the produce, will be able to make a good profit from this investment.

Crescent Route (3) 2:24½, the first standard performer sired by Creseus 2:02½, is a grand looking horse according to the pictures of him published in the eastern papers. While he has the short, thick neck of his sire, his head and eye are very handsome, and his shoulder, back and hind quarters models of strength and symmetry combined. He is said to be almost a counterpart of his sire except in color, Crescent Route being a rich bay.

Joe Selby, driven by J. M. Nelson, trotted a good mile at Stockton, last Saturday, when he went against his own record of 2:28 and made the circuit of the track pulling a 180-pound road wagon in 2:24½. Joe Selby made the mile without a skip or break, finishing strong. On a first class track, when there is no strong wind, Joe Selby can beat 2:20 pulling the same wagon. He is owned by William H. Grissim, of Vallejo, and was sired by Don L.

Creseus Day, at Toledo, Ohio, when the champion broke the trotting records to sulky and to wagon on a half mile track, was the 80th anniversary of the birth of Mr. Ketcham's mother. It was at her suggestion that Mr. Ketcham decided to trot his great horse against those records, and to donate the entire receipts to charity. The amount taken in was a little over $18,000. The mile to hike was made in 2:09½ and the one to wagon in 2:12.

Nona Y. 2:25 by Admiral is now in the great brood mare list. She is the dam of the pacer Charles David 2:15 and the trotter Lady Rowena 2:28½, the latter having made her record at Stockton last week. Nona Y. is owned by Prof. E. P. Heald, President of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeder's Association, and Lady Rowena is Mrs. Heald's favorite road mare. A very good picture of Lady Rowena appears on our front page this week.

Anita, Geo. W. Coomb's gray mare by Mambrino Wilkes out of Anna McGee, started in the 2:18 pace on the last day of the Stockton meeting, and although beaten made a very good showing. In the third and last heat Anita went to the front at the word, was in the lead at the half in 1:09, and was beaten but a half length at the wire by Mack in 2:23½. As Anita was taken off the road without any training whatever and entered in this race her performance was a very creditable one.

Mr. A. G. F. Stice, who raced a string of trotters and pacers on this coast in 1900, writes to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, under date of October 14th, that he has recently purchased more land at Swan Creek, Illinois, and now has a good large blue grass farm. He is building barns and fitting the place up for a training and breeding farm which will compare favorably with any in that State. Mr. Stice adds: "I will buy several extremely fast mares during the winter and with those I now have think my place will be hard to beat. My young Directs, Colberts, Diablos and St. Vincents all look fine and you should see some of them pace. As I add to my stock I will write you about them. I am going to try and make this the Palo Alto of the East."

At the close of this season the stallion Chain Shot, that ended the year 1900 with a record 2:12½ has put himself right among the champion trotters by winning the 2:11 class trot at Memphis last Wednesday in straight heats in 2:11½, 2:07½ and 2:06½. Onward Silver and Dolly Dillon were behind him. A third heat in 2:06½ is not trotted every day, and the stallion that can accomplish the feat is entitled to a place in the very front row of American trotters. Chain Shot is by Red Heart, he by Red Wilkes out of Sweetheart, a daughter of Sultan and the great broodmare Minnehaha, dam by Beautiful Bells. The dam of Chain Shot is Pique, dam of three in the list, by Kentucky Wilkes, and his grandam is Vexation by Mambrino Dudley.

Two races, one of four heats and the other of six, were trotted at Stockton last week and won by Rosewood, a very handsome bay mare owned by Capt. Horace H. Watson, the well known marine surveyor of this city. Rosewood is a daughter of Nutwood Wilkes out of Ernie, a mare by Linwood. The Captain uses her exclusively for pleasure driving and generally has her hooked double with her dam and they make an elegant road team, being free drivers and quite speedy. Captain Watson let trainer J. M. Nelson take her to Stockton thinking she might be able to get a mark there. She was entered in the 2:20 class trot, in which there were four other starters. The first and third heats were won by the mare Trilby by Mambrino Chief Jr. and the second by Allen, a daughter of Anteo. Rosewood was second in each of these heats and then Rosewood won the next three. The last heat was the fastest in the race, being in 2:22½, which is a remarkable sixth mile for a green road mare that was not in shape for a long race. She took a record of 2:21 in her other race. Mr. Martin Carter, owner of Nutwood Wilkes, who saw her trot in this race, went to Captain Watson and made an offer for her, thinking her a good prospect for a 2:15 performer, but the Captain thinks the mare is good enough for him to keep as he hates to be beaten on the road and likes to ride fast at times. He certainly has a very promising mare in Rosewood.

Prelates, the brown two year old filly by Ponce de Leon, won the Lexington Stake and took a record of 2:15½, which is within a second and a half of the world's record for two year old fillies when she won the second heat of her race at Lexington on Friday of last week. The performance is all the more remarkable from the fact that in the heat in which the time was made Prelates was practically without a competitor and had to race without the help of something to speed beside her. The first half mile was traversed at a heart-breaking clip, as the timers caught it in 1:05½, the second quarter being in 0:32½, a 2:09 clip. But the home journey was a tiresome one and she finished under the whip. It had taken 33½ seconds for the third quarter of the mile and 36½ seconds to get home from the three-quarter pole.

An item is going the rounds to the effect that Secretary Steiner has a standing offer of $100 for the man who can find a rule of the American Trotting Association that does not give the horsemen the same protection it gives a trotting association. How about the rule which makes a suspended horseman pay ten per cent. penalty? No matter whether he pays under protest or not, the ten per cent. penalty must be paid before he can start. If his protest is sustained his money is returned to him—no more. If it is overruled the ten per cent. goes to the A. T. A. as a penalty inflicted on the suspended party for not paying a just claim when due. Now, if the rule gave the horseman the same protection it gives the association would it not require the latter to pay a ten per cent. penalty for suspensions made wrongfully?

Ed Lafferty will have in training at Pleasanton this winter a four year old trotter by Silver Bow, out of Grace by Buccaueer, that is one of the fastest big horses in California. He has a three year old full brother that is not so large a horse but is very promising. Mr. Geo. Fox, owner of Silver Bow, will also send to Lafferty to train a two year old that is about as well bred as anything in the trotting horse line in California. He is by Silver Bow 2:16 out of Kitty Fox by Pancoast, second dam by Dictator, third dam by Mambrino Time, fourth dam by Paddy Burus, fifth dam by Mosely's Copperhead. This colt bears out in looks and action all that one would expect from his royal pedigree, and as Mr. Eox says "should anything happen to 'The Bow' this fellow can take his place." The colt is not for sale, although several tempting offers have been made for him.

The chestnut mare Trilby by Mambrino Chief Jr. that took a record of 2:26 and won two heats and second money in her race at Stockton on the last day of the meeting there last week, made a remarkably good showing. Trilby was cast in her stall at Vallejo two months ago and strained herself so badly that she did not have a harness on until five days before the Stockton meeting. She was jogged four times by her owner, Thomas Smith, at the Vallejo track, and then sent to his son Joe at Stockton in the hopes of getting a record of 2:30 or a fraction better. She won the first heat of her race in 2:26 and the third heat a fraction slower, and got second money in the race which required six heats to decide. For a green mare that never had but three months' track work in her life, but been worked in an order cart since she was three years old, she certainly made an excellent showing and is a credit to her sire Mambrino Chief Jr.

Mr. Geo. C. Hill, of Washington, Kansas, who has recently been visiting California, writes of it as follows to his old friend "Columbus" of the Western Horseman: "Since we met last I have been pretty much all over the State of California, and, of course, visited famous Palo Alto Stock Farm, which is certainly the finest of its kind in the world. I would rather own it than be President of the United States. Senator Stanford was a remarkable man and one adapted to breeding high class horses. That he was well fixed for the business goes without saying, once you have visited this farm. The buildings, the paddocks, the pastures, the tracks, the general surroundings, all unite in making a harmonious whole; a place peculiarly adapted by nature and aided by man to become the nursery of record makers and record breakers. I do not believe that I would mind being a horse if I was assured of such a home. California is a great horse-producing State; it is all that has been claimed for it. No one can appreciate its peculiar advantages until he has thoroughly visited every section. They raise great trotters in the northern portion, about 'Frisco, and in the extreme southern counties. I do not know whether it is the blood used, the air breathed, the food and water taken into their systems, or what. At any rate, they grow horses that are apparently great the moment they are foaled."

"Sandy" Smith, the well known trainer and erstwhile plunger, has returned from his annual trip through the Grand Circuit, having arrived last Sunday evening. Sandy sports a very handsome gold split-second timepiece presented to him by George Ketcham, owner of Creseus 2:02½, and exhibits it with pardonable pride. He says Creseus is the most wonderful trotter the world ever saw, and that Harry Devereux's great horse John A. McKerron 2:06½ is next in rank in his opinion. The best trotter he saw in the races on the Grand Circuit was Chas. Marvin's Captor 2:09, and the best pacers were Harold H. 2:04 and Dan Patch 2:04½, both of which are very high class race horses. Sandy left Mr. A. B. Spreckels' mares Venus 2:11½ and Czarina 2:13½, at Ketcham's farm at Toledo, Ohio, where they will remain during the winter and be bred to Creseus early in the spring. He thinks Czarina should throw a two-minute trotter from this mating, as she has as much speed as any horse that ever stepped around a track. She worked a mile in 2:10 at Cincinnati easier than any mile has been trotted this year and but for a lameness that is not bothering her now, would have reduced her record several seconds. The biggest pool Sandy saw this year was one of $2500, which he saw sold at Lexington. This is far below the size of some of the pools sold there last year, owing to the fact that Lawson, Hubinger, Smathers and several of the biggest plungers on the circuit were not there. Sandy will probably open a public training stable at Pleasanton or San Jose this winter.

EASTERN NOTES AND NEWS.

Ge. A. Fuller, 2:15½, is a new one for Barou Dillon, 2:12.

It is said that an offer of $12,000 was recently refused for Edith W. 2:05.

There were 436 horses in the recent Philadelphia Speedway parade.

Shadow Chimes, that came out green in July, paced in 2:05½ at Lexington.

And now Wisconsin stands credited with the production of a Futurity winner.

Chimes is now the sire of sixty-three performers, with seven in the 2:10 list.

Separately timed Onward Silver trotted the fourth heat at Lexington in 2:08½.

Ketchum thinks that Crescens' mile in 2:04½ at Belmont was the best mile he ever trotted.

In his first heat at Readville in 2:10½ Crescens failed to beat 2:10 for the first time in two years.

The New England Trotting Horse Breeders Association will clean up about $20,000 in the year.

Two of the new 2:10 pacers—Salem 2:09½ and Nathan Straus 2:09½—are out of mares by Billy Wilkes 2:20½.

Oaklawn Stock Farm sold sixty-three head of horses in the Woodard & Shanklin sale for a total of $23,365.

C. K. G. Billings bought the pacer Little Boy 2:01½ to wagon, of Frank Jones, of Memphis, for the sum of $3500.

Trainer Ryerson thinks Athanasio will trot to a record better than 2:07 when he gets him back to this country.

Thomas W. Lawson states that he lost seven million dollars through the recent decline in Amalgamated Copper stocks.

A horse owned in Cleveland was present at both inaugurations of President McKinley, and also at his funeral exercises.

The Merchant, trotting record 2:17½, by the Conqueror, has been put to pacing and promises to take a fast record at that gait.

One of Kremlin's daughters is a producer. Krem Marie, by him, is the dam of Maud Marie 2:20½, a new comer to standard rank.

The gate receipts for Thursday at the Brockton, Mass., Fair were $24,623.25, which was in excess of any previous day by $4041.25.

At Bremen, Ind., William Mc 2:05½ paced the third heat of the free-for-all in 2:07 over the half-mile track there and was not all out.

The pacer Tugboat 2:21½, by Barada, is reported dead. He was a brother of the two faster pacers, The Hero 2:10½ and The Airship 2:11½.

The Monk, 2:08½, is now king of the New York speedway trotters, as he has had no trouble in beating the gallant old trotter, Cobwebs, recently.

Auduhon Boy 2:06, in Scott Hudson's stable, was the biggest money winner among the pacers on the Grand Circuit, his total winnings being $15,850.

It was a common remark at Lexington that it was a pity that Captor 2:09½ was not started in the Transylvania. He would surely have been a factor.

Boralma's three winning heats in the Transylvania last year were trotted in 2:08, 2:09, 2:08½. Onward Silver won the stake this season in 2:09½, 2:11, 2:13½.

In the heat that Harold H. won at Terre Haute in 2:04 the first half was made in 1:04 and the last half in one minute flat, with the third quarter in 28 seconds.

Last year the Tennessee Stake was for 2:09 pacers, and was won by Connor in 2:05½, 2:06½, 2:09½. The race this year was won by Dan Patch in 2:05½, 2:05, 2:07½.

The Grazer 2:10, breeding unknown, was bought out of an Indianapolis sales stable two years ago for $170, and for nearly a year hauled an ambulance in Louisville.

Rowellan 2:15½, by Adbell, three year old, trotted a mile in 2:12½ before being retired for the season. It is reported that a half interest in him has been sold for $4000.

Bettine, the daughter of Anteco, that trotted to a record of 2:14½ at Baltimore recently, is out of Daireen 2:21½ by Harold, grandam the famous old Pilot Jr., mare Dahlia.

Tom Nolan 2:09½ pacing is owned by Master George Carroll, of Cleveland, who is but eleven years of age, and probably the youngest owner of a 2:10 performer in the world.

The directors of the Pimlico track, Baltimore, have voted to ask for admission to the Grand Circuit next season. Besides this mile track, there are three half-mile tracks in Baltimore.

Mr. C. K. G. Billings' great mare, Lucille 2:07, now at Syracuse with an injured hip, was let down from the slings the other day, and without aid, turned about in her box. She was willing, however, to be slung up again, realizing that she is yet too weak to depend on her own resources. Her attending veterinary believes that Lucille will be ready to race again in 1902.

The Futurity winners: Benzetta, Boralma and Peter Sterling are chestnut in color; Oro Wilkes and Ferenó are black; Oakland Baron, Thörn and Peter the Great are bay, and Rose Croix is roan.

Shadow Chimes proved a great disappointment to his backers at Lexington in the 2:06 pace. He was liberally backed at $100 against $36 for the field, and the best he could do was to get third money.

Allen Lowe, who for more than a dozen years has been closely identified with the horse world as writer, owner and driver, has quit the game, and is now business manager of the Park Theater, Boston.

Fred Gerken of New York, owner of The Monk 2:08½, says that unless he sells that famous gelding in the near future he will go back into the bands of his old trainer, Geers, for the campaign of 1902.

Ringers in the show ring are becoming as numerous as they are on the trotting tracks. At one of the recent exhibitions a horse that won a championship at Providence a few years ago turned up in a novice class and got the blue ribbon.

May Allen 2:09, the Indianapolis mare that created such a sensation by dumping the talent at the Grand Circuit Columbus meeting, has been purchased by Mr. Hayes, of Chicago, and will be a star addition to the list of 2:10 performers owned by Chicago horsemen.

E. W. Conant of Loveland, Ohio, owner of the famous son of George Wilkes and Alma Mater, Alcantara 2:23, reports that he is in fine vigor for a horse of almost 26. He served twenty-eight mares this season, and twenty of them are already known to be in foal.

An Ohio gentleman undertook to start a suspended horse at Terre Haute on a "clearance" order of an Ohio court, but President Ijams told the gentleman that the Terre Haute Association was still doing business under the provisions of the American Trotting Association.

Susie J. 2:10½, by Jayhawer, is entitled to rank as one of the greatest four-year-olds out this season. Her owners, Messrs. Barber & Messenger, claim she would have won the Transylvania had Geers not been allowed to lay up Onward Silver in the third heat, when he finished eighth.

Hawthorne (3) 2:14½, winner of the Kentucky Stock Farm purse at Terre Haute, is a daughter of that famous broodmare Lady Ham by Hambrino. A large number of royally bred Hambrino mares will be sold at Grasslands Farm auction sale at Indianapolis, October 31st, November 1st and 2d.

J. L. Butt of Gettysburg, Pa., drove his mare Dolly Wilkes by Red Wilkes, dam Dolly Smith, dam of Phoebe Wilkes 2:08½, etc., by Fisk's Mambrino Chief Jr., in 2:24½, in an effort against time at the Pimlico track, Baltimore, recently. This gives Dolly Smith seven in the standard list of performers.

Dr. G. W. Fisher, of Laporte, Ia., has sold to Durbin Horne, of Pittsburg, the five year old trotting horse William Glen, winner of the 2:16 trot at Lexington, last week. He is by Boyer, dam by Idol, and in fourteen starts has been beaten but twice. Horne paid $3500 for the horse and secured Ed Geers to drive him at Lexington.

Senator Bailey has become convinced that his two year old pacing colt, Brouson Cooper is the making of a great race horse, and will probably keep him over till next year. This colt paced a mile in 2:11½, last quarter in 31½ seconds, several weeks ago. He is in Will Evan's stable, and is eligible to the pacing division of the Futurity.

"The fashion for dark colors, dressy effects and lack of ornamentations in carriages is seen also in the latest styles of harness," says the Horse World. "One of the new things in the harness department of a fashionable New York firm is a single brougham harness in pigskin. It is dead black, with hardly any brass trimmings, and the effect is noticeably rich and elegant."

Edgar Bronk has a very promising horse for next season's engagements in Foreign Prince. His record of 2:21½ will not do him any harm, as he is likely to trot in 2:10 to 2:12 another year. Mr. Bronk has 24 head at Poughkeepsie, all of which will be wintered. He has closed a contract with Jerome McKinney to drive for him next season at a salary of $3000, and he has a first class man.

The great colt Oxford Boy, who won the two-year-old division of the Kentucky Futurity, trotting the fourth heat in 2:20, is by Red Chute 2:24½, son of Guy Wilkes 2:15½, dam Laurine by Stamboul 2:07½; grandam Bon Bon (sister of Brava 2:14½) by Baron Wilkes 2:18; third dam Mary A. Whitney 2:28 (dam of five) by Volunteer. He was bred by T. W. Estill of Lexington, Ky., and is now owned by W. W. Lawson of Boston.

James A. Murphy, who formerly owned Star Pointer 1:59½, has seven fast trotters and pacers on the New York speedway. Albert C. Bostwick shares his private stable in West 157th street with Mr. Murphy, and "Dave" McClary, who drove Star Pointer to his record, and who now trains for Mr. Bostwick, is looking after both strings of harness horses. Rotha J. 2:12½, a new pacer in Mr. Murphy's stable, is expected to cut a wide swath on the speedway.

The Courier-Journal, of Interstate Fair notes, says: "Mr. John T. Hughes, of Lexington, who has shown several winners, is a veteran in making displays of good horselfish. He has been attending the St. Louis Fair for thirty-three years, and has always carried away $1000 or more in premiums. One year he had only received $995, and the association made a special ring, with a $5 prize, so Mr. Hughes would not fall below the thousand mark, and he did not."

Jackson's Napa Soda untangles two feet!

When Jack Curry drove Prince Alert in 2:04½ over the half-mile track at Allentown, Pa., equalling John R. Gentry's race record for a two-lap track, he set a record that no trainer will be likely to beat for a long time, for it was Curry who drove Joe Patchen to his record of 2:01½. No two horses could be less alike than Joe Patchen and Prince Alert, yet Curry seems to have been able to drive either of them faster than any of the other trainers who tried their hands on them.

Mary P. Leyburn 2:16½ will race no more this season. This filly has started in only two races this year, and though she met defeat in each it should be stated in justice to her that she was not just right in either instance. She had been slightly off previously to being shipped to Terre Haute, and was not fully at herself when she started in the Futurity, though the fact was not apparent at the time. She is a filly of class and should make a useful mare in her four year old form.

The Abbot's mile to wagon was a fairly good one, yet does not prove that he can defeat John A. McKerron at that way of going. The latter's mile in 2:06½ was a better performance than The Abbot's, as more speed was shown. The son of Chimes, that has by his poetry of motion bewitched enthusiastic lovers of the light harness horse, is not the horse he once was, and may never again successfully combat with Father Time in the race for supremacy.—Hawley in Kentucky Stock Farm.

Inbreeding to the best of trotting strains is becoming quite popular among successful breeders, and animals of that kind are selling for good prices. The five year old mare Belle of Oakland, that brought $2100 under the hammer at the Woodard & Shanklin sale on the 12th inst., is by Oakland Baron 2:09½, a son of Baron Wilkes 2:18, and her dam was also by Baron Wilkes 2:18, her second dam by Almont 33 and third dam Alma Mater. The purchaser was A. P. Christle, Worcester, Mass.

Boralma was paraded before the grand stand at Lexington and loudly cheered by the 8000 people present. While the gelding was on the track George Bain read a telegram from Thomas W. Lawson announcing that he had sent a check for $5000 to Secretary Wilson with instructions to distribute the money among Lexington's charitable institutions. The money, the telegram said, was a gift from Boralma. The announcement was followed by a mighty cheer, and Weber's hand played, "She was Bred in Old Kentucky." As Boralma walked back to his quarters he wore on his neck a magnificent floral wreath, a gift from Secretary Horace Wilson.

One of the most popular victories at the Lexington meeting was the victory of the veteran driver of champions, Charles Marvin, with Captor in the Walnut Hall Farm Cup race. In addition to winning the big end of the $3000 purse Mr. Marvin was presented with the magnificent trophy given by Mr. L. V. Harkness to the winner of this race. Marvin will present the cup to J. C. Sibley, the Pennsylvania congressman, whose trainer he was for a number of years, and who made him a present of Captor and a number of other trotters on retiring from the turf last winter. Captor's mile in 2:09½ breaks the stake record of 2:11½, held by Nico, and is now the record of the Marvin horse.

Judge Smith of Buffalo says: One of the best green pacers I have seen this season is the chestnut gelding Knox's Gelatine 2:24½, record made at Nazareth, Pa., the past week. This "wiggler" was sired by Prose 2:16½, is owned by C. B. Knox of Johnstown, N. Y., and driven by Sam Earing. He has been a mile in 2:10½, but owing to sickness was declared out of his stake engagements this year. Knox's Gelatine goes without the straps, is a fine actor, and how he can pace. If nothing happens to him he should make things very interesting in the Chamber of Commerce Stake for 1902. He will force the winner to step three times better than 2:10, if all right, and that will make the great majority cough at the draw gate.

Dan Patch 2:04½, the unbeaten son of Joe Patchen, will go into turf history as a winner of every race he started in during the whole Grand Circuit season of 1901, including Cincinnati and Brighton Beach. His ten races and the time of heats in the Grand Circuit are as follows: Windsor, 2:07½, 2:10½, 2:09; Detroit, 2:08½, 2:08, 2:09½; Cleveland, 2:10½, 2:11½, 2:11½; Columbus, 2:10, 2:11½, 2:12½; Buffalo, 2:11½, 2:10½, 2:14½; Brighton Beach, 2:04½, 2:07½, 2:05½; Readville, 2:07½, 2:08½, 2:10½; Hartford, 2:08½, 2:08½, 2:12½; Providence, 2:04½, 2:07, 2:06½; Cincinnati, 2:09½, 2:07, 2:11. In eight of the ten races the son of Joe Patchen beat 2:10, and during the summer he has been nine heats in 2:07 or better, pacing twice to his record of 2:04½. At Lexington McHenry worked him a mile in 2:04 letting him pace the last quarter in 29½ seconds.

Of all the trotters out this season, none has been more consistent than the chestnut gelding Country Jay 2:10½, the second largest money winning trotter of the year, says Raymond in the Horse World. Every week since he started out in the spring and sometimes twice in a week, he has been asked to go a race and whether victorious or vanquished, he has raced courageously and come the next week ready again. He comes from a branch of the Wilkes family that is fast taking high rank among the greatest branches of that family, the branch headed by Jay Bird. This son of George Wilkes lived many years before he attracted much attention, his color, roan, keeping him from getting much public patronage in his younger days. Finally his son, Allerton 2:09½, called attention to his good qualities as a sire, and since the advent on the turf of that horse the Jay Bird family has been climbing fast. His family already contains such good performers as Gayton 2:08½, Eagle Flanagan 2:07½, Charley Hoyt 2:06½, Alves 2:09½, Precision 2:10½, Alamito 2:10½, Early Bird 2:10, Altocka 2:10½, Country Jay 2:10½, Early Bird Jr. 2:11½, and a lot of other good ones, and as Jay Bird is still living and enjoying a better patronage than ever before, his family of noted performers is likely to receive additions for several years.

HARNESS RACING IN CALIFORNIA is not so dead as some of the writers on turf affairs would have us believe. It is true that owing to the fact that nearly all the racing of this character given in this State is under the management of the agricultural districts and that but very few of these districts held meetings this year, the circuit of 1901 has not been a very bright and shining success. Many district boards failed to give meetings this year simply because they wished to draw their entire two years' appropriation next year, having found that it is much easier to give a fair on alternate years with all the money, than to give one every year with half of it. Had there been a general announcement all down the line last spring of harness meetings to be given this year with the assurance that syndicate hookmaking would be prohibited, it is more than probable that the majority of California trainers that went East would have remained at home and the circuit of 1901 been a complete success. The number of trotters and pacers in training in this State since June 1st, this year, has been very small considering the number in previous years. As there were so few chances to earn money, the majority of owners declined to spend money for training expenses and the result has been very ordinary racing in the majority of purses contested for. The Breeders Association give six $1000 purses for its meeting at Sacramento, all of which had good fields of horses and resulted in good racing. The specials, however, were rather poor affairs. Woodland's fair and race meeting was a success in every particular. The racing by the trotters and pacers would have been considered good on any Eastern track, and had it not been that syndicate hooking prevailed would have been still better. The State Fair furnished some good sport in spite of the syndicate hook and but for the death of President McKinley casting a gloom over the country and the closing of the fair on the last day, the fair would have shown a financial profit, something that has not been done for some years. The fairs held at Concord, Ukiah, Hollister, Hanford, Ferndale and in a few of the mountain districts of the State were invariably well attended and very successful. From a harness horse standpoint the Los Angeles meeting was not up to its usual standard owing to the fact that but few of the horses originally entered were fit to race by the time the fair was held and then there were no star attractions furnished, as has been the custom in previous years. With the meagre amount of purses announced before August 1st, this year, in California, it is surprising that the number of harness horses campaigned was large enough to have any sort of racing whatever. The syndicate hook has done very much to ruin harness racing and will eventually kill it if permitted to continue, but the horsemen themselves are also much to blame. A custom has arisen in California among a very large number of trainers and owners who have a poor class of horses, by which the purses are divided equally among the starters. It is true that in these events the very hottest sort of contests sometimes result, but as a general thing racing is very tame owing to the fact that there is just as much money to be made by "going easy" as by driving one's horse out to the limit. With fair purses, a good circuit and no bookmaking allowed under any circumstances, California harness racing can be placed on a successful and paying basis next season, and if the announcements of programs are made early enough to enable owners to train for them there will be no dearth of entries. More mares were bred in 1901 and more interest has been manifested in the harness horse by the people than for years past. Some of the fairs held this year broke all records for attendance, but they were not the ones that were given over to or directed by a syndicate of hookmakers. Harness racing in California is not dead by any means, and will be as popular as ever if rightly managed in 1902.

THE HOLIDAY NUMBER of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN will be issued on December 21st and will be fully up to the standard established last year, which met with a very large sale and was endorsed by horsemen from San Francisco to New York as the most handsomely illustrated of all the holiday journals devoted to the horse. It will contain this year matter of great interest to every horseman and lover of outdoor sports, besides a large number of beautiful half-tone engravings from photographs made especially for this issue. Of particular interest to breeders will be a complete list of the new standard performers of 1901 by California sires, a list of the money winners of this year on the Pacific Coast and a list of the principal money winners in the entire United States. There will be several special articles from the pens of well known turf writers and matters of great interest to the directors and managers of district fairs and country race meetings. Owing to the determination to make this issue of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN one of exceptional literary and statistical merit, the advertising space will be limited and all who desire to take advantage of the extra large circulation of the issue for advertising purposes must notify this office by the 1st of December, to insure space in its columns. No paper published west of the Mississippi reaches as many devotees of the horse, rod, gun and kennel as the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN or offers as great inducements for dealers who desire to advertise the sale of anything in these lines of recreation and sport. Further announcements of the leading features of our 1901 holiday edition will be made from week to week, but we caution advertisers that it will be well for them to secure space as soon as possible, as the space devoted to advertising will be limited.

PLEASANTON, the harness horse centre as it has been called, will have such a congregation of harness horse admirers there next Friday and Saturday that even standing room in places from which a good view of the homestretch at the historical track can be obtained, promises to be at a premium. Every horseman who ever trained there or visited the track has expressed a determination to be there next week, and every person who admires a harness horse, and lives within a radius of one hundred miles will be there also. Alameda, Santa Clara, Contra Costa and San Joaquin counties will turn out en masse to see the sport, while San Francisco will send the largest delegation that ever filled the trains that run from this city to Pleasanton. The two days racing and horse fair are the talk of the whole country in this part of California. It is more than likely that heats better than 2:10 will be shown by some of the exhibition horses among which are Bonnie Direct 2:05½, Flying Jih 2:04 and Rey Direct 2:10. The citizens of Pleasanton are doing everything to have all the arrangements for the entertainment and comfort of their guests completed in time and with good weather in their favor will be rewarded with the largest crowd ever seen in that part of Alameda county.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is an American. He insists that the horses he uses shall not be docked but shall carry the tails that nature gave them. His estimable wife is also a genuine American and when the President purchased three horses the other day and requested her to name them, gave them the plain sensible names of Admiral, General and Judge. It is reported that the king of England has recently expressed his wish that no more of his horses be docked and with the heads of the two greatest nations on earth setting their faces against the cruel and useless habit of chopping the caudal appendages from horses, it is more than probable that the hoh tails will soon be seen no more. Let us hope so.

ACLOSING OUT SALE of all the stallions, mares, colts and fillies belonging to Mr. Naglee Burke, owner of the Pueblo Racing Stables, will be held by William G. Layng, the auctioneer of the Occidental Horse Exchange, in this city, during the latter part of next month. The exact date of the sale has not yet been fixed, but will be announced in due time. By reference to the advertisement in this issue an idea of the many great individuals and grandly bred horses to be sold can be obtained. Catalogues will be out November 1st.

The horseshoe has been hung for ages on the doors of stables of horses and the doors of cottages as a symbol of good luck. In late years it has been worked into all sorts of gold and silver adornments for personal and other use. A New York writer says that one explanation of the use of this prosaic piece of ironmongery as a talisman is that the Russian peasants used to paint outside their doors a picture of the Blessed Virgin. The halo around the head they gilded. The rains and snows washed off the paint eventually, but the gilding remained in the shape of a horseshoe, and the peasants regarded it with the same reverence as they had the whole picture. From Russia the travellers brought stories of the peasants having horseshoes at their doors as a protection against evil fortune, and so the superstition of the horseshoe spread over the world. The other explanation, and probably the true one, is that the symbol is of a far more ancient origin. The Greeks and Romans, who pinned their faith to the goddess Diana, used to wear as a symbol of their loyalty to the divine huntress her symbol of the crescent moon. As the ages rolled on the crescent became a horseshoe. One is at liberty to accept either of these explanations or to reject both of them; but whatever the origin of the belief in the horseshoe as a portent of good luck, whether it be the symbol of the heathen goddess Diana or of the Christian Virgin, there are hundreds of thousands of people throughout the world who would "never take the horseshoe from the door."

The Inter-State Fair.

The Inter-State Fair held at Lewistown, Idaho October 7-12, inclusive was a complete success. The show was better than last year, the agricultural exhibit and the county exhibits being particularly fine, while the display of live stock was highly commendable. The racing was clean and gave great satisfaction to the large crowds that were in attendance. Robert Leighton of Victoria, B. C., and Chas. Jeffries of Montana, filled the positions of presiding and starting judge respectively and their work was received with much satisfaction and highly complimented by the horsemen who were present.

The summaries of the harness races were as follows:
Trotting, 2:40 class, purse $200—Saxaline, by Saxwood 1 1 1, Dr. Bunnell 2 2 2, Juniper 3 3 0, Time—2:27, 2:29, 2:30.

Juniper was killed in the third heat by collision with Dr. Bunnell coming down the home stretch.

Trotting, free for all, purse $300—Ned Thorne, by Billy Thornhill 1 2 1, Kitty Caution 2 1 3, Staccato 3 3 2, Time—2:23, 2:22½, 2:17½.

The Inter-State stake of $500 for 2:20 trotters was declared off and another of $200 hung up instead.

Dr. Bunnell, by Ingraham 4 1 1 1, Babe Chapman, by Ingraham 1 3 3 3, Mack Mack 3 2 2 2, Felix W. 4 4 4 4, Time—2:24½, 2:25, 2:30 2:26.

Trotting, special, purse $200—Phil N., by Bonner N. B. 4 1 1 1, Kitty Caution 1 3 3 2, Oveta 2 2 2 4, Staccato 3 4 4 3, Time—2:22½, 2:24, 2:23, 2:21.

Pacing, 2:10 class, purse $200—Myrtha Whips, by Whips 1 1 1, Starkey 2 2 2, Le Roi 3 3 3, Time—2:19, 2:16½, 2:13.

Special trot between Ned Thorne, Staccato, Oveta. Phil N., Dr. Bunnell and Kitty Caution—Ned Thorne (handicapped by being hitched to a cart) won in straight heats, Oveta second and Phil N. third. Time—2:21, 2:24, 2:19½.

Alma Mater Leads Them All.

That earnest and intelligent champion of thoroughbred blood in the trotter, the American Horse Breeder, contained the following in its last issue:

Alma Mater leads all the great broodmares in the number of descendants that have won heats in 2:10 or better this season. There are twelve of them as follows: Coney 2:02, Sir Alcantara 2:05½, Dariel 2:05½, Auduhon Boy 2:06, Charley Hayt 2:06½, Boralma 2:07, Matin Bells 2:07½, Louise G. 2:08½, Dark Wilkes 2:09, Cinch 2:09½, Dandy C. 2:09½, and Dr. Book 2:10. Green Mountain Maid comes next with ten to her credit, viz.: Shadow Chimes 2:06½, Boralma 2:07, Dolly Dillon 2:07, Carmine 2:07½, Matin Bells 2:07½, Captain Sphinx 2:08½, Sphinx S. 2:08½, Council Chimes 2:09½, Frazier 2:09½, and Captor 2:10. Five of the descendants of Green Mountain Maid and two of those of Alma Mater are also descendants of the great broodmare Beautiful Bells 2:29½, viz., Shadow Chimes 2:06½, Boralma 2:07, Matin Bells 2:07½, Council Chimes 2:09½ and Captor 2:10. The two that are descendants of Alma Mater are also descendants of Green Mountain Maid. This makes six in all that carry the blood of Beautiful Bells, just half the number that inherit the blood of Alma Mater. Green Mountain Maid was foaled in 1862. Alma Mater and Beautiful Bells were both foaled the same year, 1872. This is a surprising showing for Alma Mater. It seems almost incredible that she should outrank Green Mountain Maid that was ten years her senior, and have more than twice as many 2:10 or better performers out this season as Beautiful Bells foaled the same year. It would seem to indicate that the large proportion of thoroughbred element which Alma Mater inherited is an important factor in the production of extreme speed and ability to perpetuate the same, but, of course, opinion differs in regard to this. The fact, however, cannot be changed.

A Good Thing Often Overdone.

Stable care of trotters and pacers in training or racing is one of the greatest adjuncts to success, and yet it is often overdone. Horses, like human beings, must have time to rest and recuperate, and if there is one time more than another when they need to be left undisturbed and to themselves, it is soon after a brisk workout or a hard race. This isolation and rest is not only conducive to their physical condition, but to their mental and temperamental condition as well. Horses have temperaments and mental characteristics, and these need to be understood and catered to. Too much stable attention makes many horses ill-tempered and "sour," besides depriving them of much needed rest and repose. Nervous and positive tempered horses should be "put away," and let alone, as quickly as possible after a workout or race, and not be continually and for hours fussed and fooled with in the way of grooming, reblanketing, mane plating, etc., thus keeping them from assuming that composure and nerve relaxation so essential to the process of physical recuperation. Racing is a nervous and mental strain on a horse, and perfect quiet is as essential to composure with a horse as with a person. Of course, a horse should be carefully and completely "cooled out" after a race, but when that is done he should be left alone in his stall so that composure may be reassumed and the process of recuperation established. "Sour" tempers in race horses as often comes from too much nursing, and consequent annoyance in the stall, as from any other cause. Of course, this is not the case with all horses, as some love company and become calm through little attentions from their grooms. But a horse that is at all disposed to be "sour" tempered should be "put away" as speedily as possible, and given his own company as companionship, for many horses, like many men, are best and most pleasantly entertained when alone, especially after having just passed through a trying ordeal.—Western Horseman.

Peter Stirling 2:11 1-2.

Mr. D. C. Palmeter, proprietor of the River Side Stock Farm at Berlin, Wis., where the wonderful three-year-old, Peter Stirling was bred, has this to say: "I have used Quin's Ointment for several years and it is the best preparation I have ever seen or used, and does more than you recommend. I have given it a thorough trial and it has proven successful every time." Mr. Palmeter is one of the many leading breeders who are giving their unqualified endorsement to Quin's Ointment. For curbs, splints, spavins, windpuffs and all bunches, use this first-class remedy. Only one dollar, delivered. Address W. B. Eddy & Co., Whitehall, N. Y., unless you can obtain it from your druggist.

Doings in Dogdom.

There is a liver colored Cocker Spaniel owned by a Victoria fancier that will give the local dogs a good race should his owner enter him in the Oakland show.

John L. Cunningham, the Great Dane fancier offers today a bargain in a handsome nine months old bitch puppy. She is out of his well known prize winning bitch Champion Juanita and sired by Duke, the magnificent harlequin which won the specials and high honors at the last San Francisco show. This puppy is stylish looking and promising. Her ears are cropped in fine style.

Secretary Plume of the Cocker Club, writes us that the members of this enterprising specialty club are enthusiastic in their ardor for the success of the Oakland show. Besides the specials already offered the following additional trophies have been sent in:

Hugh Mauldin of Sacramento, offers a silver cup for the best black dog.

Mrs. E. Colwell has donated a silver trophy for the best stud dog. The winning dog to be judged by two of his get.

Mrs. J. P. Atkin has presented a cup for the best Cocker Spaniel (donor not to compete).

These specials are for competition among the members of the club only.

Mr. Norman J. Stewart, a gentleman fancier known far and wide on the Coast for his many agreeable and sportsmanlike qualities announces that himself and his estimable lady will depart from our California shores for good, on or about the 1st proximo. Mr. Stewart will re-visit the home of his ancestors in Scotland where he proposes to establish himself, devoting a portion of his time and attention to a model stock farm. Incidentally he will go in for his early fancy—Cotties, a few of which breed and choice ones, we believe, he will raise, thus keeping in practical touch with dogdom.

Mr. Stewart has been a prominent devotee of the interests of the fancy on the Coast and has accomplished much for the betterment of kennel affairs. That we have not among us many others like him in spirit and actions is to be regretted. His departure will create a notable void in the ranks of the fancy and among those of the fanciers devoted to the sport whose names are identified with the goodfellowship and an integrity of purpose in placing doggy affairs on a high standard. We tender Mr. and Mrs. Stewart our best wishes and bon voyage.

We tender our congratulations to Dustproof Harry and the Chalkville delegation. Clipper W. put Peach Blossom out of business at the Northwest field trials.

The trials at Whidby Island seem not to have had very enthusiastic support from the northern sportsmen. Henry L. Botten and John Lucas, each with a string of California dogs, seem to have handled about half of the entries in both the Derby and All-Age. In the Derby, with twenty nominations, ten were from this State and two from Nevada. For the All-Age stake, out of twenty-four entries, thirteen dogs were entered by California sportsmen; one was from Nevada. The Derby was won by San Juan de Fuca Kennels' black, white and tan Setter bitch Val's Belle (Bain's Flash-Val's Lady). Cook Inman's black, white and tan Setter bitch Policy Girl (Dave Earl-Top's Queen) won second and W. W. Van Arsdale's black, white and tan Setter dog Bell Boy (Tony Boy-Lena Belle) won third. The All-Age stake was won by Dr. C. E. Wilson's Clipper W. Second was divided by W. W. Van Arsdale's Peach Blossom and A. H. Nelson's Sport's Destiny. Pearl's Ringo (Young Ringo-Pearl's Datt II.), a Pointer bitch owned by Clinton E. Worden, won the third place. Neither of the Seattle papers had a line descriptive of the trials, which fact is suggestive that there was a lack of local interest and a small entry in the running.

Oakland Show Notes.

The city office of John Bradshaw, Superintendent of the coming Oakland bench show, is located at 36 Geary street, Room 27, one of the office rooms of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. Entries will be received by Mr. Bradshaw at the above address, where all communications should be sent.

The premium list has been issued. The classification embraces 279 classes. In St. Bernards (rough and smooth), Great Danes, American Foxhounds, Pointers, English and Irish Setters, Cocker Spaniels (red and black), Collies, Bull Terriers, Dachshunds, Fox Terriers (smooth), Scottish Terriers, Japanese Spaniels and Italian Greyhounds the classification is full.

There are mixed classes each for puppies and open dogs and bitches, for Bloodhounds, Newfoundlands, Chesapeake Bay dogs, Dalmatians, Greyhounds, Poodles, French Bulldogs, Beagles, Black and Tan Terriers, Skyes, Black and Tan Toys, Poms, Maltese Terriers, Chows and Miscellaneous. Local classes have been cut out. The prizes will be medals to first and second and a diploma to third. A number of elegant specials will be given but are not mentioned in the premium list.

A New Kennel Club Organized.

The impetus given to doggy affairs in Southern California by the recent bench show in Los Angeles has taken a practical turn, with the result that a large and enthusiastic association of Southern California fanciers have come together and the Los Angeles Kennel Club organized last Tuesday night in the parlors of the Hollenbeck Hotel. The prospective members were called to order by J. L. Eigholz, temporary chairman, and at once proceeded to business. Enthusiastic communications received from E. S. Babcock of Coronado, J. B. Brown of Riverside and Byron Erkenbrecher of Los Angeles, were read, in which the writers pledged their hearty support to any action which the new club might take and expressed their desire to become members. Those present then proceeded to elect officers. The election was characterized by enthusiasm and unanimity.

John W. Mitchell was elected President; Colonel G. L. Waring, Vice-President; C. E. McStay, Secretary, and T. H. Dudley, Treasurer.

It is moved and carried that the executive committee should consist of nine members, to include the club officers and five members appointed by the president. The members appointed were J. L. Eigholz, Count Jara Von Schmidt, C. A. Sumner, Byron Erkenbrecher and Martin I. W. Smith. The matter of by-laws was left in the hands of the executive committee to report in ten days. Dues were fixed at $5 per annum, payable semi annually in advance.

It is the purpose of the Los Angeles Kennel Club to hold a bench show in Los Angeles in April or May of 1902, either immediately after the San Francisco show or right afterwards. Most of the members last evening expressed the preference for making the club a stock company as soon as it fairly established. Before very long it is hoped the club will become connected with the American Kennel Club.

J. L. Eigholz, speaking of the matter recently, said: "Prospects for an organization of dog lovers are good, not only in this city but all over this end of the State. Much enthusiasm already is shown, and I believe the people will like the idea. In every large city of the East there is a magnificent club, and bench shows always are conducted under their auspices. So they can be here. We have the blooded dogs, and we have the lovers and breeders of them. What more but a little enthusiasm is needed?"

Active work in taken subscriptions will be undertaken by the members individually and already there is the promise of a membership to exceed one hundred.

Those were present at the meeting J. W. Mitchell, Colonel G. L. Waring, T. H. Dudley, C. E. McStay, J. L. Eigholz, K. E. Preuss, Martin I. W. Smith, C. O. McDowell, E. Greenfield, L. G. Atwood, C. P. Schreiner and others.

The club is evidently destined to be popular and successful. Los Angeles used to have some excellent dog shows, the promise of others in the future looks now to be assured.

The following judges have been invited to pass out the ribbons at the inaugural show of the Ladies' Kennel Association of America: Mr. George Raper for Mastiffs, Bloodhounds, Russian Wolfhounds, Deerhounds, Greyhounds, Old English Sheep Dogs, Dalmatians, Whippets, miscellaneous, and Airedale, Fox, Scottish, Welsh, Manchester, Skye, Bedlington, Yorkshire and Toy Terriers; Mr. G. Muss-Arnolt for Great Danes, Griffons, Basset Hounds, Dachshunds and Chesapeake Bay Dogs; Miss A. H. Whitney for St. Bernards, Newfoundlands and Pugs; Mr. John Davidson for Pointers and English, Irish and Gordon Setters; Mr. Foxhall P. Keene for English and American Foxhounds; Mr. G. Millin Wharton for Beagles; Mr. Henry Jarrett for Collies; Mr. J. R. Buchan for French Bulldogs; Mr. Chas. H. Mason for Irish Water, Clumber, Field and Cocker Spaniels, Corded, Curly and Toy Poodles, Bulldogs, Pomeranians, King Charles, Blenheim, Ruby, Prince Charles and Japanese Spaniels.

Dr. L. R. Gambitz, a prominent member of the dental fraternity of this city, is the owner of a handsome five months old Bulldog puppy. The commission for the purchase of the youngster was placed with the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN and the dog was secured through Mr. Jack Bradshaw from an Eastern breeder. The pup is out of Dinah by Woodcote Don.

Breaking Shot---The Spoiled Dog.

At a certain stage in training it may be advisable to allow a dog to rush in when a bird has been shot, to retrieve the same; this should be encouraged with a timid or otherwise backward dog, to enhance his anxiety in getting game into his possession; but as soon as this is sufficiently accomplished, steadiness to shot must invariably be insisted upon, says Ed F. Haberlein, the noted trainer of field dogs. Breaking shot is not a bad sign in young dogs; it shows the instinctive desire to obtain birds. When breaking shot is permitted beyond a certain limit, it becomes detrimental to the dog, is very annoying to the sportsman, and must be checked by all means. If a dog perfectly firm in this respect, is hunted in company with one that habitually breaks in, the steady dog will quickly acquire the fault from mere jealousy, and will be unsteady henceforth if not promptly corrected. When the occasion presents itself, that the breaking of this fault becomes necessary, it can be as easily done in a similar manner as the breaking in on birds to flush and chase.

Put the force collar on the dog, with a cord eight feet long attached and provided with small ring attend, and let him hunt. The dog stands to point; step up and snap a second section of cord twenty feet in length to first, fasten end of longer piece securely, giving a few feet of slack, flush the bird, shoot, and let the dog get a snubbing. At the moment the cord becomes taut, give the order "Charge!" in a strong tone. Insist on him remaining down a few minutes, during which time move about him in different directions, then return to spot from which shot was fired and call the dog, "Up here!" "Sit down." Now speak kindly to him, pat gently, and order on, resuming the hunt, and repeat the procedure.

Usually a few repetitions are sufficient to steady the dog if care is taken by the handler in working with the dog, by himself being steady to shot, not rushing forward to where bird fell, thereby exciting and alluring the dog into the habit of participating in a race for every bird brought down.

From numerous causes many dogs become spoiled to such an extent as to render them absolutely worthless in the field subservient to the gun. The complaint is often heard that such and such a dog was at one time the best dog imaginable, but has been spoiled by some cause or another until now he is of no use whatever; if his faults could be overcome, this particular dog would be a world beater, etc.

Considering that all his faults are acquired through accidents or lack of proper handling, they can be corrected, just as a dog is trained to perform in a certain manner, and then can be broken from doing so. Any dog otherwise worth the trouble, can be freed of acquired faults, no matter how aggravated these may be, and restored to his former usefulness by beginning with him in the training as would be the case with a perfectly green dog, giving the parts wherein the faults lie special attention, to make quite perfect. Age need not be considered, but time and tact on the part of the trainer, to properly and judiciously apply the methods of systematic training, will be important factors in dealing with such cases. The matured dog has acquired a good deal of intelligence, and his reasoning power is generally well developed. These factors are of great moment when he is again taken in hand by the trainer, who, if he does not blunder himself by letting the headstrong dog have his own will, or to confirm him in his bad practices by improper application of the rules laid down in this manual, will encounter no serious difficulties to conquer and reform the culprit. The eye of the trainer has great influence over the obstinate dog, and in many cases will be found more potent than even the force collar. Special cases require distinct treatment, so that no general rule can be established; but the trainer will fairly well succeed in correcting faults if he refers to the instructions given under proper headlines for training unbroken dogs, having direct reference to the special case in hand.

The judges for the Philadelphia Bench Show, commencing November 27th, are the following: Mr. Chas. H. Mason—Bloodhounds, Mastiffs, Great Danes, St. Bernards, Deerhounds, Greyhounds, Wolfhounds, English Setters, Chow Chows, Poodles, Whippets, variety class; Mr. Edward Wain—Foxhounds. Mr. G. Muss-Arnolt—Pointers and Dachshunds; Mr. G. G. Davis—Irish Setters and Gordon Setters; Mr. H. K. Bloodgood—Sporting Spaniels; Mr. Thos. H. Terry—Collies; Mr. John Caswell—Beagles; Mr. William C. Codman—Bulldogs, French Bulldogs, Boston Terriers, Black and Tan Terriers; Dr. Rnsh S. Huidekoper—Airedale Terriers and Bull Terriers; Mr. William P. Fraser, Fox Terriers; Mr. James Watson—Irish Terriers; Mr. Chas. W. Rodman Jr.—Welsh Terriers; Dr. M. H. Cryer—Scottish, Skye, Bedlington, Dandie Dinmont, Yorkshire, and other Toy Terriers and Toy Spaniels, Pugs and Pomeranians. Entries will close on November 11th. All communications should be addressed to Marcel A. Viti, Secretary, Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia. D. E. Loveland is the Superintendent.

Advices received from San Diego are to the effect that Coronado will not be the chosen ground for the Pacific Coast field trials in January. The committee have not yet selected a location for the trials; an announcement of a suitable district will be made, however in the near future.

There is a strong sentiment in favor of a show at Stockton to take place shortly after the Oakland bench shows. Interest in bench shows seems to be on the boom.

GUN.

County Game Laws in Force.

The present State Game and Fish Laws are in force and unchanged in the following counties:

Alameda.	Monterey.	Solano.
Colusa.	Santa Cruz.	San Joaquin.
Contra Costa.	San Benito.	Sonoma.
Merced.

The following counties have adopted ordinances in regard to fish and game, and which are now in force as follows:

Fresno—Quail, Nov. 1 to Feb. 1.
Marin—Male deer, Aug. 1 to Sept. 15. Quail, Oct. 15 to Jan. 15. Shooting on county roads or in cemeteries prohibited. The use of "pump" gun, repeating shotgun or any kind of magazine shotgun for hunting in the county is prohibited.
Monterey—Sea gulls and blue cranes, killing of prohibited. Use of guns of larger caliber than 10-gauge prohibited.
Santa Clara—Quail, Oct. 8 to Feb. 1.
San Mateo—Quail, Nov. 1 to Dec. 1. Rati, Oct. 15 to Nov. 15. Shooting from boats at high tide prohibited.

Some Large Herds of Captive Bison.

At the lower end of the Flathead valley, on the Flathead Indian reservation, roams the largest herd of buffalo in the world. The herd belongs to a man of mixed Indian and Mexican blood named Pablo, who lives on the reservation and who is estimated to be worth $2,500,000. Mixed with this herd is a smaller one which belongs to Pablo's nephew, Joe Allard, who is also a half-breed. These herds have the freedom of a magnificent range at the foot of the surrounding mountains, where there are streams of clear, cold water, and the rolling land that the buffalo naturally seeks. They are the only herds, owned by man, having perfect freedom, and not one of Pablo's buffalo is for sale. Allard's herd, however, is being raised for profit, and he sells whenever a customer is willing to pay his price.

Pablo is a remarkably shrewd man for one of his race. His government allotment of land and cattle has been doubled many times over, and he now owns 100,000 head of cattle and much valuable land, besides the herd of 180 buffalo, which is his chief pride. These animals are to him a part of the old free life which is now lost to both Indian and buffalo, and he seems to feel for them a sympathy if not an actual love, and with all an Indian's intensity of feeling and tenacity of purpose, he has determined that they shall be free to follow their wild instincts so long at least as he shall live. No inducement that a white man can make, or an Indian, either, for that matter, tempts him to part with a single one.

Pablo is an interesting character in many ways. His wife is a full-blood squaw, and while she lives in a house which Pablo has built, for he owns two, one at the lower end of the valley and one at Selish, the shipping point for the reservation, she will not sleep in them, and a tepee stands beside each, which is used summer and winter. To see Pablo you would not suppose him to be worth $100. His dress is typical of the reservation Indian, the ordinary cowboy outfit, with the blanket to which all the Flathead Indians still cling.

Pablo's nephew, Allard, has not the romantic instinct of his uncle, and is always ready for a business deal which promises profit. Messrs. Burgess & Hanson, who own the famous buffalo ranch at Luana, Iowa, visited the reservation during the past season for the purpose of buying additional stock. They first secured permission from the Indian agent to enter and trade with the Indians; then they took saddle horses, and, accompanied by Allard, rode out to the foot of the Flathead lake, where, roaming along the borders of its outlet, they gained the first sight of the big herd. By taking advantage of Allard's knowledge of the buffalo, they managed to get a good view at close range, and bargained with him for four cows and four calves, which were to be delivered at the railway station at Selish. But to bargain for the sale of eight buffalo and to actually deliver the goods are two totally different propositions, as they found later on.

The next morning a round-up party consisting of about forty Indians and three white men, mounted on the best horses in the valley, was organized to bring in the buffalo which they had purchased. Only nine of the party were out for business; the rest were there for the fun they could get out of it. When the party rode up in sight of the great, massive brutes they lumbered off at a slow gallop which indicated anything but speed, but when two Indians, mounted on fleet horses, were directed to give chase and change the direction the animals were taking their actual speed was shown. There was not a horse in the party that could head any of the two year olds, and it was only by changing and putting fresh men and horses on the trail at intervals of about an hour that they finally succeeded in cutting out a bunch and heading it for the nearest corral. Then the eight for which the bargain had been made were cut out and the rest were given their freedom.

The following morning at break of day nine men mounted their horses for the final chase. As soon as the gate of the corral was opened and the buffalo saw a chance for freedom they came out as though fired from a "long Tom" and every man had to give chase individually, as each cow, with her calf, took a different direction, and by noon they were farther from the railway station than when they started. By "everlasting sticking to it" they at last got them together and started them in a diagonal course from their feeding ground to the shipping point. After their hard ride to the railroad it took three hours to get the buffalo into the car. This had been partitioned off with swinging gates, and as soon as the cow and calf were cut out and run into the car, the gate was closed by a rope run through the end of the car and secured to the railroad iron and held there until it was nailed solid. The buffalo had to be kept in their stalls during the ten days' journey. At every station visitors swarmed over the car, and their owners wondered how it was known that buffalo were on the train until they learned that each station agent telegraphed the news ahead to the next town.

The buffalo in confinement is given the same food and care as is given to ordinary animals, and they eat less. They are a hardy animal, and thrive well. Their ordinary term of life is twenty years. They shed part of their fur every spring, but never shed that of the head and shoulders. The age of an animal is judged somewhat by its general shaggy appearance, but more particularly by its horns.

Buffalo that have been some time in confinement seem as gentle as ordinary cattle unless annoyed, but they are nervous and easily startled, and they are very powerful and quick in their movements when aroused. A visitor is never allowed within their inclosure, and the attendants are always watchful when among them. The buffalo on the Luana ranch are sometimes put in the same inclosure with the cattle and horses, and never show any disposition to molest them. Some of them may be led, but always with a very long rope, since they will not allow a hand to be laid upon them even when they come up to be fed.

Full-blooded cows are scarce and bring about $700 each. For several years owners have been cross-breeding with polled Angus cattle, and by this means obtain an animal which has the fur of the buffalo and the color of the common cow, which is black. The robe obtained is even finer than the buffalo robe, while the head is of splendid quality and commands a good price. The head of a full-blooded buffalo bull is worth more than all the rest of the animal, bringing several hundred dollars. Buffalo have their first offspring at four years old, and after that every second year. It seems to be the general impression that the cross breed are barren, but this is not so.

The buffalo of Pablo and Allard's herd are the genuine prairie buffalo. The secretary of the Smithsonian Institution is authority for the statement that there is only one living specimen of the true mountain buffalo, and he is a member of the herd at Luana. He is called Old Tom, and is very valuable. The hair on his head and shoulders is twenty-two inches long. His body is smaller than that of the prairie buffalo and this makes his immense front seem even larger by contrast. He is darker than the prairie buffalo and weighs about 1300 pounds, while the average weight of the latter is 1800.

Buffalo seem never to outgrow their wild instincts. A shed was built on Burgess & Hanson's ranch with the idea of protecting the buffalo from storms, but they have never been known to go into it, probably because of their fear of being captured. No matter how many years they have been in captivity, they migrate every spring and fall, if it is only across the width of a pasture. In the spring they walk for days back and forth across the north end of the inclosure, and in the fall they take up the same restless pacing across the south end. Even the young, born in captivity, do the same.

The pleasures of hunting on the San Mateo marshes, which have been enjoyed annually by the local sportsmen for many years, are soon to be enjoyed no more. During the present month the entire territory bordering on the bay lying between Burlingame and Belmont, where in former years duck and rail hunters were wont to gather by the score, will have been thoroughly covered by signs warning all concerned that shooting or trespassing in those districts are no longer allowed, and back of the announcement is the expressed determination of the interested parties to prosecute all offenders. The tracts of marsh land where the poor Nimrod is especially unwelcome are the Howard and Bowls properties, recently leased by E. W. McLellan, and the Pond & Whitney reclaimed district, comprising many thousands of acres.

Cartridge and Shell.

E. S. Bahecock of Coronado has under consideration the formation of a club of from twenty-five to fifty members for hunting and fishing. The grounds reserved will be the land of the San Diego Land and Town Company and the Southern California Mountain Water Company and the water owned by both companies. This will be practically 45,000 acres of land and five reservoirs. A meeting of those interested will be called soon.

The Marin county Munchausen is at it again, in a despatch this week from San Rafael to a Los Angeles paper he tells the following unique story:

A peaceful artist and sharp-clawed wild cat engaged in a deadly battle on the hills near San Anselmo. Victory went to the artist who beat the cat to death with his easel. Monday morning the well known artist, Dominick Needham, went to a knoll back of San Anselmo to finish a painting he had been making of Mount Tamalpais. While engaged at this work his attention was suddenly called to a small object playing near him. Closer inspection proved it to be a small wild kitten. Mr. Needham, thinking this a good opportunity to gain a pet, grabbed the kitty. There was a faint cry and then the mother wild cat came bounding upon the scene from the adjacent brush. With a bound she alighted upon the artist, who commenced to battle for his life. Shaking the enraged feline from him he grabbed his easel and with sundry swats that would have been good for the third bag on any diamond, he stunned and ultimately killed it. In the melee the kitten left for parts unknown and could not be found. All that remains to remind Mr. Needham of his exciting experience is his shattered paraphernalia, an assortment of scratches and a spotted pelt some forty inches in length.

Proper and durable footwear is a subject that has been the careful study of many sportsmen. In this respect we are reminded of a pair of elkhide outing gaiters seen this week that had been worn for five weeks "roughing it" in the Kings river canyon and adjacent rough territory. The soles had originally been studded with steel hob nails, these were pretty well smoothed and had torn out in places. The soles were as flexible as pieces of felt, but intact and waterproof. The uppers showed the signs of wear and tear to quite an extent, but the surface of the leather was neither cut nor scraped. The oil tanning finish seemed to give the upper leather the property of softness and toughness combined. These gaiters laced high up on the calf of the leg and were both waterproof and comfortable. On this subject a writer in Shooting and Fishing says: How to avoid wet feet was the problem. In solving it I began with heavy rubber boots, but these I found to be a complete failure, since, being so heavy and preventing, as they did, the free evaporation of moisture caused by the perspiration of the feet, they proved to be the cause of much lassitude and fatigue, and many headaches. After discarding them, there followed a number of other attempts and failures, until I finally discovered that there is nothing better for ordinary use than the customary loose and easy shoe, rendered waterproof, as far as possible, in the following manner: Procure from the druggist a lump of paraffin, which can be had for a few cents, and rub well every portion of the outside of the shoe with it. It will cause water to run off its surface exactly as though it were oiled, and yet will not prove to be in any way greasy or oily, paraffin being nothing but wood wax.

And this second discovery I made, also, that it is not altogether essential that the feet be kept dry during the outing, so long as dry footwear be donned as soon as home is reached, and before the glow which follows the exercise passes off. I have never known wet feet to end in a cold if this precaution is observed, and have myself again and again waded in swamps and marshes in ordinary shoes, with the water oozing in and out at its pleasure, and have never suffered any evil effects afterward, provided I made a change immediately upon my return.

For winter use, in the dry snow, nothing equals the oil tanned moccasin. Every sportsman should have a pair of them. For ease and warmth, combined with lightness, durability and serviceability, they are unsurpassed.

Los Angeles sportsmen are having good shooting with both ducks and quail.

More widgeon have been seen on the Bolsa Chica grounds this week than before, and these birds are getting fat. They will be in good condition until the grass springs up. After that time they are inferior to many of the other big ducks.

At last the Alla Gun Club and the Centinela have some water. The Alla is best fixed in this regard. Lieut. Archie Freeman has been on the Centinela grounds inspecting dykes all week.

Shooting on the Cerritos and Green Wing Clubs has been good this week. Robert Ross killed thirty-nine birds, mostly springs and teal, in the mid-week shoot at Cerritos, and John Hauerwas brought back thirty-six from the Green Wing as result of his Wednesday shoot. Jacob Adloff was at the Recreation Club the same day, but the birds were rather scarce and somewhat wild. He got sixteen, which is a good bag.

On the Bolsa Chica, Count Jaro von Schmidt and party were shooting the first of the week. They killed the limit, the birds being much the same as those shot on the other clubs. E. R. Hall got a shot at seven canvasbacks, and made a neat double out of the flock as they passed his decoys. These are the first two canvasbacks killed on the Bolsa Chica this year.

Owing to a scarcity of water, there will not be any shooting on the San Joaquin Gun Club Sunday. It is thought that the ponds will be filled by the last of the month. Plans are being made for a big shoot by the entire club, October 29th and 30th. When there is enough water, there are plenty of ducks.

On foggy mornings there is a merry time on the sand hills south of Ocean Park. On damp mornings, such as often are seen here, the birds fly low, and killings are often made. The shooting, both inside the Recreation Club's grounds and outside it on the dunes, will be better later, as reports from that club indicate that the birds have been shot at a little too much.

Charles Gillen and C. R. Taylor had a good shoot there one of the first days of last year's duck season. They killed near the limit in an hour after daybreak. Many Santa Monicans patronize these natural blinds, the shooting being dry and comfortable. It requires a hard hitting gun and a big load to drop the birds on a clear day, though.

Quail hunters find birds plentiful, though in some sections, notably the San Fernando valley, they have been molested so that they cannot be flushed until walked on.

Quite a number of the hunters take train rides of about fifty miles for their quail, as there are many places within an hour's ride of Los Angeles where the birds have been disturbed but little.

Mr. John Spalckhaver, whose portrait appears on the preceding page, several years ago, in the interest of the Union Metallic Cartridge Company and Remington Fire Arms Company, made an extended tour of the world, taking in Australia, New Zealand, Japan, India, China, a portion of Siberia and all the different countries of the old world. Mr. Spalckhaver before coming to this city had charge of a large corps of travelling salesmen for the companies which he represents. He will possibly go East within a few days. In his trip abroad he had many opportunities to indulge his fancy as a philatelist and is now the possessor of a collection of foreign stamps that has been the envy of many collectors.

ROD.

With the salt water anglers, striped bass fishing has assumed a new and exceedingly agreeable aspect during the last ten days. A new fishing ground has been prospected and developed with most gratifying results. O. W. Jackson and F. R. McFarland one day last week made a trip to Tiburon, where they procured a boat and trolled the waters of Raccoon straits for striped bass. The first strike was made about 10 o'clock, and from that time until 4:30 the fishing was good. Once during the day a double strike was had. The largest fish caught was a thirteen pounder, which took about fifteen minutes to land. Since then a number of other anglers have tried the straits and the waters along the Marin shores from Point Bluff to California City. The best results, however, have been achieved on the Angel Island shore from Stuart's Point to Hospital Cove. The waters in these localities are more than suggestive to the angler of good bass fishing. Casting from the shores has not yet been tried to any extent, although bass have been caught from the island shore by still fishing with both rod and line and hand lines. The method adopted by the successful fishermen is to row slowly, with or against the tide, either flood or ebb, say at a two or three knot speed. The line is out from 90 to 100 feet, with a Wilson hass trolling spoon on a three or four foot leader attached to a swivel. An ounce sinker is placed on the line at the leader swivel. Most of the fish were caught in from ten to twenty feet of water. Hart Williams caught five fish on Tuesday, O. W. Jackson hooked a nineteen pounder on Thursday. F. W. McFarland's largest fish weighed ten pounds. Frank Marcus and Professor Terry caught twelve and ten pound bass respectively. Al Wilson had a catch of eight splendid large bass up to noon Thursday. The first catch by Jackson and McFarland, eight fish, weighed 85 pounds. This fishing water promises to become a famous fishing resort.

The local anglers who discuss trout flies and various other matters gormain to the gentle art, at a prominent sporting rendezvous on Sutter street, were agreeably surprised this week by a visit from "Jim" Fountain, the champion fly-casters of the Sierras, who has caught and landed more game trout from the Truckee river than any disciple of Walton who has visited that magnificent stream in late years.

Mr. Fountain is distinctively a fly fisherman. He is known to every lover of the sport who has whipped the turbulent waters of the big mountain stream. For many years past Mr. Fountain has cast his flies on the Truckee during the angling season and it is safe to say that he has basketed more trout than any of his brother anglers who has the good fortune of fishing the most ideal trout stream in California. Mr. Fountain is owner of one of the finest orchards in Newcastle but his love for fishing carries him each year to the famous Truckee where the rainbow trout, in splendid condition, is always ready to test the cunning and experience of the most expert angler who employs only the fly with which to lure his charge.

Catching the Ravenous Black Orca.

The orca as a fighter first came into notice upon the return one season of a whaling fleet which had wintered in Behring Sea. One of the ships during the late fall had secured a large whale, and the men were engaged in towing it alongside the ship, having it well in hand, when suddenly a school of whales from twenty to twenty-five feet in length, charged them. The animals were jet black with the exception of singular white patches about the head; they had tall dorsal fins, and moved with marvelous speed. They at once attacked the dead whale, tearing enormous pieces from its lips and sides, leaping over the submerged body with wonderful agility and continuing the attack until the water was dyed encarnadine.

The killers were so powerful and in such force that the men could not tow the whale, and laid by, striking at them with lances. In a very short time the whale began to settle, and the whalers realized that the orcas were actually stealing their property. Guns were brought into play, and several orcas killed by explosive bombs, whereupon the animals turned upon the dead bodies of their companions and tore them in pieces, and ultimately, despite all the efforts of the crew, this band of sea wolves carried off the whale, dragging it down out of sight. A witness of this incident later, in camping upon one of the islands, had an opportunity to join in an orca hunt—without doubt one of the most dangerous and exciting of all pastimes.

The Indians of the locality had for several days been gathering, waiting for the breaking up of the ice, when it was said the killer whales would be found in great numbers. That this was true was shown by the fact that the whales were already on the ground, ravenously hungry and going to great lengths to obtain prey. While waiting the Indians continually patrolled the ice pack, saying that the killer sometimes came up through the ice. This was demonstrated one day when the men were hunting walrus.

A small herd of the latter was discovered on the edge of an ice pack. The Indians were creeping upon them, accompanied by the white hunter who was anxious to take one of the animals, when to his amazement, up through the ice came a huge black figure, sending it crashing in every direction; two large jaws abundantly supplied with teeth opened, seized a small walrus, and the two sank out of sight. The whole appearance was only comparable to a gigantic jack-in-the-box, but was a graphic illustration of the clever generalship of the orca, which had seen the walrus lying on the ice, and, sinking down, had risen like a catapult, crushing through the ice cake, and in the confusion seizing a young one and making off.

Several weeks later the ice broke up, and an offshore wind left the harbor clear, in and about which the spouting of orcas could be often heard. The long-expected hunt began early one morning, three boats putting out, each provided with four or five rowers, a harpooner, and steerer. Once out in the bay, they took different directions—one going to the north, one to the south, while the third kept to the center or west.

A mile out the orcas were sighted; first a school of four, their high dorsal fins standing out distinctly against the horizon, their black forms glistening in the sun. Their movements were slow and deliberate, and they swam in single file, so slowly that it was comparatively easy to approach them. The men had muffled their oars, and when near the quarry rowed as quietly as possible, avoiding the slightest splash, but urging the boats on at a marvelous speed.

The leader, the largest orca, was selected, and as one of the boats with a rush went directly over it the harpooner with all his strength hurled the weapon into the black back. As the harpoon struck the boatmen backed water violently, not a moment too soon, as in the air rose the huge creature six or seven feet in a marvelous jump, then dropping back with a resounding crash, sending heavy seas chasing each other after the boat. The moment the orca struck water it sounded, tearing the rope from the coil with such velocity that it fairly smoked.

Two or three hundred yards were taken in this way, then the animal must have struck bottom, as up it came like a rocket, so near the boat that there could be little doubt but that the object was to crush it. The orca, with its tons of weight, fell with a mighty crash, and for a moment lashed its powerful tail, doubling up into a U, then straightening out with a violence that brought its tail upon the surface with a crash that sounded like the report of a gun. It was endeavoring to rid itself of the death-dealing iron, and now began to swim upon the surface in a circle, its back exposed—a movement which suggested that it might be searching for its enemy. But the native hunters were not afraid, and commenced to take in the line, hauling rapidly. This disturbed the orca, which plunged down, then swam rapidly out to sea, towing the boat.

For several miles the pace was continued through seas which kept the men bailing, then the animal turned in shore, towing them back to the bay, during which time they gained on the line until they were within 150 feet of the orca. The other two boats had now thrown lines and were also being towed, and with much shouting the men hauled, gaining foot by foot, until finally they were nearly over the orca, which was surging along the surface, its black back exposed.

Suddenly it sounded, to immediately reappear, striking one of the boats fairly amidships, sending it into the air, then lying on the surface snapping its ferocious teeth and striking powerful blows with its tail, completing the destruction of the boat. The men so unceremoniously thrown into the water swam to the other boats and were pulled in. When the orca had quieted down, at a signal the boats rushed upon it and two lances were hurled into its vitals, the boats quickly backing off to avoid the rush. One was too late; the orca rolled over and sank, to again come up and seize the cut-water of the craft in its mouth and crush it. This was the end, and as the men swam to the remaining boat the active and savage creature beat the water into foam in its dying agony and soon lay on the surface, dearly bought game. It was towed in shore, hauled in at high water, and when exposed later on constituted a feast for the natives for days, age or previous servitude having no effect upon the Alaskan appetite.

The savage nature of the orca can be imagined from the following incident observed by an acquaintance of the writer, Prof. C. F. Holder. He was rowing down the shore of one of the Southern Californian islands, when, two hundred feet or so ahead, a large whale jumped almost entirely clear of the water, carrying with it several orcas which were clinging to it. The whale was surrounded by a school of these animals, which were literally tearing it in pieces. They attacked its lips, so finding their way to the mouth, eating the tongue out and continuing the cannibalistic feast until the water was dyed with blood for yards about, and the whale, which was at least sixty feet in length, was dragged down.

The orcas are particularly common on the Northwest coast, where seals and sea lions are also abundant, and that they destroy vast numbers of them is well known. An orca has been seen to dash out of the water, seize a sea lion from a shelving rock and bear it off. The mouths of salmon rivers are favorite feeding grounds for these animals, which dash into the schools, cutting them down by hundreds. The voracity of the orca may be imagined when it is known that from a specimen over sixteen feet in length four large porpoises were taken, while another orca devoured thirteen porpoises and fourteen seals, well earning the title of gladiator.

The most striking of the family is the orca gladiator of the North Atlantic, which reaches a length of twenty feet in the male and is distinguished by a remarkable dorsal fin at least six feet in height and nearly straight, the tip turning over. The black fish and grampus are allied forms, and almost equally destructive fishes. They are, especially the former, common on the coast of Massachusetts, where they are often caught in numbers. Some years ago a school came into a shallow bay and in their eagerness to secure prey—a school of mackerel—they grounded in about four feet of water, whereupon ensued a scene of great excitement. No boats were at hand, so farmers rode out into the water on horseback, killing with pitchforks and other improvised weapons.

The black fish lashed the bay into foam, hurling the water into the air, rushing over each other in their efforts to escape, and creating a picture long to be remembered and one that was not without danger, as the powerful animals laid about with their tails in a manner that made near approach extremely difficult. Whaling on horseback was here inaugurated, but it is needless to say that it is not likely to become a common or favorite sport.

A New York paper of the issue of November 9, 1831, has an oddly interesting item concerning striped bass:

"A striped bass weighing forty pounds was taken day before yesterday by a colored servant living with Benjamin Bailey, Esq., on the banks of the Harlem river just below the bridge. The fish was discovered by the man from the end of the dock, which projected some distance into the river. At times he would sail gently along past the dock into the shoal water. No net, no hook, and bait was at hand, and as the golden opportunity might not last long, our hero quickly resolved to encounter him single-handed in his native element, and at a favorable moment he leaped from the dock directly upon his back. The affrighted fish darted from under him as though a shark was in pursuit, and as luck would have it, took a direction for the shore, and ran up nearly high and dry into the mud. Before he could get fairly afloat again and have plenty of sea room to make his escape, the colored man seized him by the gills, dragged him upon the beach, and secured his prize."

"Thirty-three thousand horse mackerel were taken in a net at one haul a few days since, a little above the dry dock," is another item.

Jackson's Napa Soda is sold in every city, town and hamlet in the State.

THE FARM

Milk and Its Preservation.

[J. H. Monrad in Pasteurization and Milk Preservation.]

Milk as it comes from a healthy cow, fed on pure food, is absolutely pure and sterile; that is, if we could secure it without admission of air in a sterilized bottle, it would keep—if not for ever—for a very long time indeed.

Practically this is, of course, impossible, and thousands of germs (bacteria) float in the dust laden air, adhere to the udder, the flanks of the cow, the hands and the clothing of the milker.

Even supposing that the utmost precaution is taken, that the cows are carded and brushed, that the udder and the hands of the milker are washed, that the barn is thoroughly ventilated just before milking; even then remains the favorable breeding place for bacteria, the end of the milk duct in the teats of the cow where they find the best temperature and the best nutrition in the few drops of milk which remain from the previous milking.

But it must not be supposed that all these bacteria are undesirable; some of them do no harm, and some of them are useful, not only in the manufacture of cheese and butter, but also in aiding us to digest the milk.

This explains why there is a difference of opinion among physicians as to the desirability of giving infants pasteurized or sterilized milk.

I am therefore of the opinion that wherever we are sure of getting milk from a healthy cow, under veterinary inspection, and with the above mentioned safeguards, as well as the additional one of using only sterilized vessels, or at least those which have been exposed to steam or boiling water for 10 or 15 minutes, we have done all that can be expected, even in this "antiseptic" age.

But, when we come to the practical task of supplying large cities like Chicago and New York with milk at a reasonable price, we meet the difficulty of an effective control. In these cases I do not hesitate to recommend pasteurization for two reasons. 1. It will without perceptibly changing the taste and digestibility, kill a great many if not all bacteria. 2. It will enable the milk producer and dealer to preserve the milk sweet for 36 or 48 hours longer, without fear of committing infanticide with chemical preservatives.

In order, however, to get the full benefit of pasteurization, it should be done as quickly after milking as possible and the before-mentioned precautions in the shape of the utmost cleanliness must not be neglected.

The usual precaution taken by honest milk shippers, is to cool the milk before hauling it to the railroad, and where this is done properly and the cans kept clean, the dealers in the city manage by a liberal use of ice to sell most of it before souring.

But the eloquence of the agents for preservatives as well as the inherent laziness of human nature, which said agents know how to work, has lately dulled the sense of responsibility in the shippers and induced them to use these preservatives extensively.

Their use was made illegal in most civilized countries, England excepted, where I find not less than 10 different (?) kinds advertised in the dairy papers for 1895, under the following names "Semper Dulcis," "Arcticanus," "Glacialine," "Sal Preservare," "Preservitas," "R. J. J. & B. Preservative" and Duncan's Preservative."

Add to this, sundry American fancy names, such as "Preservaline," "Milk Sweet," "Iceleene," "Freezene," "Formaline," etc., and it may be imagined to what extent the public is being imposed upon by the milk dealers, who on their side are being imposed upon by the manufacturers who charge from two to ten prices for a fancy name.

Thus, so-called "Milk Regenerine" was offered for sale in London in 1884 at 65c per pound, and it was claimed to restore the original taste and smell of sour milk. Dr. P. Veith found it to be 1 part bicarbonate of soda and 2 parts of sugar, worth, at most, only 6 cents.

I shall not enter a discussion on their comparative value, he they composed of bicarbonate of soda, borax, boracic acid, salicylic acid or the latest compounds of hydrofluoric acid, fluorites or formaldehyde.

No honest dairyman should use either of them in the milk.

It is now given out authoritatively by Gifford Pinchot, the forester, that pasturing sheep will not damage the forest reserve, so long as it is not overdone. Mr. Pinchot has just made an extended visit to a reserve which has just been given up to sheep. The only evidence of damage to the growth of young trees was found where too many sheep had been kept in a given area. The bark had been eaten off of young fir trees in many places and he is therefore opposed to overstocking any part of the reserve. Sheep do not eat the young trees, he says, unless driven to it by hunger and they should not be kept in any portion of the reserve after they have eaten the grass and such vines and underbrush as they like.

Hogs fed all the alfalfa hay they will eat will fatten on much less grain than without hay. Sorghum hay is also good for hogs. Many farmers carry their stock hogs through the winter on alfalfa hay alone. Stock hogs fed twice daily all the alfalfa, clover or sorghum hay they will eat will require much less than the usual amount of grain. Hogs should be fed sufficient coarse feed so that they will need to eat the leaves only.

Keep the calves growing and comfortable. Allow them plenty of sunshine and outdoor exercise on bright days, but see that they are protected from the rain and cold. Their stall should be so constructed that the sunshine can enter, and while they should be snug, there should be plenty of room for the comfort of the calves and good ventilation.

The condition in which to have a cow stable in order to get high grade milk should be such that a person going to the stable blindfolded cannot detect by the odor that it is a stable. When the odor of a cow stable will load down a person's clothes it is just as certain to load down the milk.

As to Wheat Farming.

[Marysville Democrat.]

There is a disposition in some localities to cut down the acreage of land devoted to growing wheat. This means that farmers are being educated in the school of necessity, that divers fied farming is more profitable. Farmers who grow a variety can pick from the list something that will produce money nearly every month in the year. But the tiller of the soil who continues to plant one particular cereal year after year without giving the land rest, will find close quarters at tax-paying time. From the exchanges of the Democrat we glean varied opinions as to the future of wheat and the chances for the farmer.

The Gridley Herald in an article on these lines said:

W. A. Woodworth, who farms the Fagan ranch of 1200 acres south of town, has decided that summerfallowing is not profitable and proposes to devote more of his time and land to sheep. He bought a bunch of 250 fine ewes this week from S. J. Haugh, and also received three fine thoroughbred Shropshire bucks from J. H. Glide & Son, breeders of fine sheep at Sacramento. One of the bucks is a prize winner, having won several prizes at the State Fair and elsewhere, the other two being about nine months old. Mr. Woodworth usually summerfallows about 500 acres, and hereafter will pasture the land instead of plowing it. During the past year his success with a small band of sheep led him to believe that they would pay better than to summerfallow, for from a band of about 150 head he sold the wool, young bucks, and some mutton to the amount of about $500, and still has 180 head left, which show a big balance on the right side. With a band of about 400 head he figures it will be more profitable than to summerfallow the land.

And the Oroville Register considering the situation, said:

"Sutter county landowners are dropping wheat and planting grapes. They can pay expenses the third year by raising wine grapes and after that the returns are good. Mr. Starr, who lives in Sutter, told a friend lately that he had sixteen year old Zinfandel grapes and got about seven tons to the acre. At one time the grapes were down to $7 a ton but for some years past they have been from $15 to $20 a ton. The winery at Vina and Sacramento, we are told, are paying $20 a ton this season. Many farmers in Sutter county will plant grapes instead of continuing to grow wheat. "Ed Fagin, who lives below Gridley, put out 90 acres of grapes last year and did not lose fifteen per cent. of them. The vines have made a magnificent growth and by the third year will pay quite well."

A few landowners probably will grow hemp, which has been tried in several places quite successfully. In fact, diversified farming is the only correct theory, as all cannot expect to grow fruit and grain, or either, continuously and succeed.

ASTHMA CURE FREE!

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent
Cure in All Cases.

Sent Absolutely Free on Receipt of Postal.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it.
I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle!"

We want to send to every sufferer a trial treatment of Asthmalene, similar to the one that cured Mr. Wells. We'll send it by mail POSTPAID, ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE, to any sufferer who will write for it, even on a postal. Never mind, though you are despairing, however bad your case, Asthmalene will relieve and cure. The worse your case, the more glad we are to send it. Do not delay.
Write at once, addressing DR. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO., 79 East 130th St.,
N. Y. City. Sold by all Druggists.

DISEASES OF THE HORSE AND HOW TO TREAT THEM

By Robert Chawner.

New Edition and Concise Manual of Special Pathology for use of Horsemen, Farmers, Stock Raisers and Students of the Agricultural Colleges. Fully illustrated. Bound in cloth. Size, 5½ x 7½ inches. Cloth.....$1.25

"It is an unpretending treatise free from technicalities, and well adapted for the use of farmers and stock raisers. The object of Dr. Chawner was to make a popular and reliable handbook in that department of veterinary science which treats of the horse and his diseases and in this object he has succeeded and supplied a practical want. There is no extraneous matter. Information is imparted with commendable brevity and in language plain and simple enough to be understood by all. The fallacies of the old school are rejected, and the treatment prescribed is that of modern practitioners."—Turf, Field and Farm.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

LONDON, October 13, 1901.

I have spent ten days in Ireland and six in Scotland, getting back here last night in the middle of a down-pour that recalled the gloomy days of the great Sacramento flood, now forty years past. In the whole sixteen days we saw only one in which it was clear all day long. That was at Edinburgh day before yesterday. I saw no stud farms during my stay on "the ould sod," but I never saw such hunters as they produce in that country. Nine inches around the forward cannon bone is barely an average, many of them measuring nearly ten. A. W. Heeney, who lives near the Lakes of Killarney, had my ideal of a hunter—a big chestnut with a blaze face that recalled W. Freye's great picture of old Boston.

Blairpride, own brother to Galtee More, seems to be the real coming sire of Ireland. Hisson Revenue, that bumped Mr. Whitney's Volodyovski so outrageously at Doncaster in the St. Leger, proved his quality yesterday by winning the Duke of York Stakes at Hurst Park and beat a really good field. I expected that this performance would make him a favorite for the Cesarewitch, but Sidus remains first choice, Mannlicher and Sinopi are next in say, but it looks very much now as the latter would be scratched, as he has taken a severe cold and was coughing badly yesterday afternoon. There will be an awful lot of money burnt up about him. The latest horse to emerge from obscurity in the betting is Brissac, against whom you could get 60 to 1 about ten days ago. Another horse that got the blue pencil yesterday was Rougemont, who was backed at 100 to 4 to win a big pot of very hard cash. All this time Revenue has never advanced nor receded in the ante-post wagering, and the scratching of Rougemont, who is in the same stable (Sam Darling's), looks as if the latter long-headed gentleman was not much afraid of his colt's chances, even if his weight is increased by five pounds for this victory in the Duke of York Stakes. Revenue made his own pace in that race and won cleverly from every challenge. He is out of an Isonomy mare and the daughters of that horse throw more than the usual share of stayers, Pietermaritzburg being another instance of that sort.

The sensation of the past ten days has been the perpetual disqualification of Lester Reiff for an alleged slovenly ride in the New Barns Plate at Manchester about a fortnight ago. He was on the outsider De Lacy, owned by Hon. W. C. Whitney, and his brother Johnny was on Mr. Croker's filly Minnie D. Sandpiper was the hot favorite but De Lacy had him fairly beaten as they swung into the stretch. Suddenly up came Minnie D. on the inside, Lester having swung the turn wide and, being a speedier mare—as is well known to everybody—was soon on even terms with him. To pull in and take the pole, after once being straightened out, meant an actual loss of ground and also the danger of putting his younger brother over the fence, so there was nothing for Lester to do but sit still and keep his horse straight. Everybody that knows anything about De Lacy knows that he is a most notorious coward and will flinch from the least attempt at punishment. To strike him with the whip meant to swerve him, so Lester took his chances of pulling through on what little courage the horse possessed. He was beaten a head and the permanent ruling off was the result. It is also claimed that he made no effort to win the St. Leger. All I know is that Volodyovski was at least fifteen inches ahead of Doricles when they passed where I was sitting, about 120 yards from the judges' chair. But his horse was tired with the bumping he had got and relaxed his efforts in the last three jumps.

Now, it so happens that the defeat of Volodyovski in the St. Leger was a very sore blow to the bookmakers for they had made him an odds on favorite for weeks before the race, and the mere fact that the St. Leger was won by an outsider did not materially help matters, for the reason that not one in five had laid against the favorite. They judged, as I do now, that he was the best three year old out—and a good deal the best. His defeat of Doricles, to whom he gave three pounds, on the Kempton Park plate a day or two ago, goes far to establish this; and Doricles' St. Leger is one of the things that turf chronicles must put down in the same category with the Derbies of Amato in 1838, Bloomshury in 1839 and Little Wonder in 1840. Three consecutive Derbies the rankest flukes on record, if we except those of Sir Bevis in 1879 and Sanfoin in 1890. So, arguing that Volodyovski was the best horse in the St. Leger, which he undoubtedly was, they blame Reiff for his defeat and make no allowance for his being bumped four times in the race, twice by Revenue who got the third money in the race, instead of being disqualified and set back to the rear, as either Captain Rees or John Carter would have done, to say nothing of myself. It is a noteworthy fact that not one of the three Jockey Club Stewards saw the New Barn race. When the Manchester Stewards took hold of the matter, Marcus Beresford acted as a sort of prosecuting attorney in the matter. When the case came up on appeal to the Jockey Club Stewards, then one of the number was unavoidably absent and Marcus Beresford acted in his place as a judge after having already acted as prosecutor. This was just about as contemptible proceeding as the famous Marvel case at Sidney in 1890 when the Hon. (?) J. H. Want, after having been a plaintiffs attorney in the suits against Mr. R. E. Lopez, sat as one of the board of three stewards and ruled him off for life. The other two were George Hill and William A. Long, owner of the unbeaten Grand Flaneur. It was the most scrupulous trick on record. To break up the lease of a horse they were content to ruin a man socially in order to get the horse away from him, to they could race him themselves. But as Mr. Hill is dead and Mr. Long don't feel any too well himself, probably the least said is the soonest mended. I had always a great admiration for Grand Flaneur but it never extended to his owner. However, that's another story.

You will understand that Lester Reiff's position is just as much worse than Tod Sloan's as anything possibly can be. Tod Sloan is not "warned off," as they called it here. He was told he need not apply for a renewal of his license, as he would certainly be refused. He can go upon any track as a spectator, with his flashy clothing and big cigars, and do as much betting as he likes, so long as he does not seek to ride a horse in the race. But with Lester Reiff the case is different. He is now a pariah and an outcast on the turf. He cannot go upon any track in England or Ireland as a spectator; and any ticket clerk who sold him a ticket would be discharged in less than ten minutes. You get the Sportsman of the day following the stewards' edict and read Mr. Allison's mild but manly protest against it; and you will feel satisfied, as I do, that Lester Reiff has been punished unjustly. The truth is, that young Lord Falmouth is merely the shadow of a great name. He is thoroughly honest and upright, and actuated by none but the purest motives, but he knows nothing about racing; and in the hands of a cunning and unscrupulous turf gambler like Lord Marcus Beresford, he is simply a pliant piece of putty.

A third element who want Reiff—and every other American jockey, too, for that matter—out of the way, are the English jockeys, into whose profits the American jockeys have cut so deeply in the last five years. Before they came over here there was a ring of jockeys that could make a race result in any way they chose. At the head of this ring were Sam Loates and Charley Wood, both of whom were promptly ruled off, while several others who were under suspicion were dismissed as "not proven." Both Loates and Wood have since been allowed to come back into the saddle; and the removal of Sloan and Reiff paves the way for a restoration of the conditions which existed prior to the excommunication of the two former jockeys. The bookmakers will begin to lay heavier odds against prominent horses, now that Sloan and Reiff are out of the way; and the old-time jockeys' ring will be in full blast before the close of another year.

I most sincerely hope that American owners will hereafter refrain from making entries in English races; and that they will retire in good order, as Mr. Whitney has already done. It is evident that our jockeys have won too many races to be popular with English horse owners. The mass of race-goers like them, however, because they ride to win and they feel much safer in backing a horse under Sloan or Reiff than they would if Sam Loates or Wood had the mount. The bookmakers know with whom they can do business before a race; and they cannot call up a single occasion on which they made bargains with Lester Reiff, whom three of the first gentlemen of England (God save the mark!) have branded as about one degree from a thief.

HIDALGO.

Hanford Fair and Race Meeting.

The greatest fair ever held in the San Joaquin valley in point of attendance was given at the new half mile track at Hanford, Tulare county, last week. On Friday there were five thousand people present and on Saturday, in spite of the rain, a very large crowd was present. One of the features of the fair was the stand taken by the Directors in opposition to gambling games and the sale of intoxicating liquors. The only means of betting on the races was by the auction pool system, and none but soft drinks were sold on the grounds. Many predictions were made that the public would not attend under these conditions but the public seemed to endorse the new plan. The racing was held on a new half mile track that was pronounced by all to be one of the best on the coast. The boards of directors of the 24th Agricultural District and the Kings County Agricultural Association worked together to make the fair a success and to Secretaries A. E. Miot and Fred L. Howard much of the credit is due for the success of the fair. The pavilion display was excellent and the live stock display is said to have fully equalled that at the California State Fair this year.

The racing was excellent so far as contests were concerned. There was not a race that was not on the square and though the purses were small every rider and driver was trying. The summaries of the events are as follows:

October 23. Two year olds, trot or pace, one-half mile heats, purse $50. J. M. Dagg's Getaway 1-1, S. A. E. 3-2, Milton Gear 2-3. Time—1:31½, 1:24½.

Running, one-half mile and repeat, purse $75—Lud Jones' Birdie 1-2-1, Gottlieb 2-1-2, Pearl 4-3, Chris Evans 2-4. Time—0:50½, 0:50, 0:50.

Running, six furlongs, purse $75—H. J. Rahuske's won, Kittie Tozier second, Miss Dividend third. Flandis, El Rio and Fortis also started. Time—1:19½.

October 22. 2:40 trot, purse $75—H. Robinson's Louis R. 1-1, Gloaming 5-2, Goldbug 4-4, Lady Gray 6-6, Bridget 3-dr, Stoneway 2-dis. Time—2:36, 2:38. Stoneway distanced for pacing.

2:30 pace, purse $75—Jos. Corey's Mabel C. 1-1, Daisy L. 2-2. Time—2:33, 2:32.

Running, one-fourth mile and repeat, purse $50—J. Whitesides' Jesse James 1-1, Hercules 2-2, Verna B. 4-3, Pira Le Spring 3-5, Chris Evans 6-4, Billy Mc. 5-5. Time—0:24, 0:24.

Running, five furlongs, purse $50—Birdie won, Rixford second, Kittie Tozier third. Fortis, O'Bee and Pearl also started. Time—1:03½.

October 24. Gents' road race, mile heats, purse $40—Hugh Robinson's Lois R. 3-1-1, Daisy L. 1-2-2, Miss Hanscomb 2-3-3, Glory 4-4-4. Time—2:37, 2:37, 2:35.

Saddle horse race, three furlongs, purse $30—Emmett Ford's Iguaico won, Tulare Chief second, Lorena third. Time—0:40½.

Running, four and a half furlongs, purse $50—Ludd Jones' Hercules won, Limber Jim second, Miss Dividend third, Pira Le Spring fourth. Time—0:57½.

Running, three furlongs, purse $40—John Hayes' Josephine 1-1, Ora 3-2, Baby Kings 2-3. Time—0:38½, 0:39½.

October 25. 2:30 trot, purse $75—Joe Williams' Pa 1-1, Ida D. 2-2, Goldbug 3-3. Time—2:30, 2:35.

Ladies' race, one-half mile, purse $50—Miss P. Whitesides' Tulare Chief won, Miss Ida Matthews' Riding Jack second, Miss Floy Hayes' Arizona Kid third. Time—0:56.

Running, seven furlongs, purse $75—Hobart's Pilot won, Rixford second, Birdie third, Flandis fourth. Time—1:30.

Running, half mile, purse $50—Winningham's Pearl won, El Rio second, Kitty Tozier third. Speculation and Wilbur Smith also ran. Time—0:51.

Running, quarter mile, purse $40—Stokes' Oro won, Billy Mac second, Tom Thumb third, Baby Kings fourth. Time—0:25½.

Running, five furlongs, purse $50—Miss Dividend won, Gottlieb second, Arizona Kid third, Josephine fourth. Time—1:03.

October 26. Trotting, free for all, mile heats, purse $100—Joe Corey's Mahel C. 2-1-2-1, Stoneway 1-2-3-3, Peter Jackson 3-3-1-2, Our Pet 4-4-4-dr. Time—2:51½, 2:50, 2:52½, 2:47.

Running, three furlongs, purse $65—Burriss' Chris Evans 1-3-1, Jesse James 2-1-2, Verna 3-4-2, Hercules 3-4. Time—0:38½, 0:39, 0:40½.

Produce in 2:20 List.

Direct 2:05½, the horse that was raced so severely first as a trotter and then as a pacer, sired by Director 2:17, a famous campaigner and out of Ecobora 2:23½, a mare that raced successfully, is making a wonderful show as a sire. He heads all sires of 2:20 performers this year with nine new ones in that list as follows: Reka Direct 2:14½, Freddie C. (p) 2:14½, What Is It 2:16½, Joe Pinkett (p) 2:17½, Ou Stanley 2:17½, Fram 2:17½, Daey (p) 2:17½, Lizzie F. 2:18½, Crici (p) 2:20. Direct now has 26 performers in the 2:20 list at 16 years of age. Without making a careful search of the records, I am inclined to think that the only sires that have surpassed Direct in this respect are Allerton 2:09½ and Chimes 2:30½. At 16 years, Chimes had 27 performers in the 2:20 list and Allerton, now but 15, has 31 in the 2:20 list. The season is not yet ended, and Direct may surpass Chimes, but he will not be able to head the wonderful son of Jay Bird.—Raymond in Horse World.

McKluney 2:11½, the California sire, has 29 in the 2:20 list at 14 years of age and of these 19 are in the 2:15 list. He is already ahead of Chimes and Direct and will surely beat Allerton's 16 year old record.

In hot weather there is no drink like Jackson's Napa Soda—plain in a lemonade.

THE SADDLE.

WINTER RACING IN CALIFORNIA will begin to-day under different conditions than have prevailed for several years. It will be under the auspices of the New California Jockey Club, an organization that now owns the three magnificent racing plants at Oakland, Ingleside and Tanforan, and has entire control of winter racing on this Coast. All who know the managing officials of the new organization are confident that the condition of affairs will be much improved and that racing will be more popular and of better class than in former years. The program for the opening day is an excellent one, and that there will be a very large attendance is certain. The Oakland track, where the first four weeks of racing will be given was never in more perfect condition than at the present time.

The New York politicians are getting into the racing game because it pays. The new race track at Jamaica, Long Island, which will be controlled by Senator Timothy D. Sullivan and other Tammany politicians, will be completed by April 1st of next year. The meetings there will be under the auspices of the Metropolitan Jockey Club. The new course will represent an outlay of $300,000. The steel grand stand will be 400 feet long and 100 feet deep and will accommodate 6000 persons. There will also be a field stand capable of seating 2500 more. The betting ring, covered by a steel roof, will be 275 feet long and 100 feet wide. The stable accommodations will include 550 stalls. There will also be a paddock, 225 feet by 50 feet, which will include eighteen stalls. The clubhouse will be three stories high. On the first floor will be the offices, the jockeys' room, the cafe and a large reception room. The parlor and dining rooms will be on the second floor and on the top floor will be ten bedrooms with a bath. Senator Sullivan says that all of the prominent horses which have been running at Morris Park, Gravesend, Sheepshead Bay and Brighton Beach will run at his new track. The purses to be offered will be just as large as those at other local tracks. The Metropolitan Jockey Club expects to receive a license from the Jockey Club for a spring meeting beginning April 15th. If such a license is granted, turfmen say that Aqueduct will have trouble.

J. B. Haggin, through C. Littlefield, Jr., who will train a large section of his big stable next year, has signed Jockey Wonderly for a second call next season. The jockey will be paid a liberal salary, but the figure will fall far short of the $15,000 talked of recently as the amount fixed in the contract.

The fast and good three year old Terminus, who was injured while at exercise at the Morris Park track recently, was taken to the American College of Veterinary Surgery, in Fifty-fourth Street, New York, where it was proposed to place him in a sling and leave him for treatment. It is improbable that the colt can recover, however.

Speaking of jockeys who have foreign inclinations, the report that Burns will go to Germany next season has no foundation whatever. He has never been spoken to on the subject and has never even thought of such a thing. "I don't know who I shall ride for next season," said he, "but if Mr. Whitney wants me there is no question that I should accept; I could hardly refuse." Burns will come to California this winter but not until late in the season.

Goodwin Bros. have issued volume I of their Official Turf Guide for 1901. It contains a complete indexed record of every race run in the United States and Canada up to and including June 29. Not only are all the features which have made it indispensable to racing men been retained, but new ones have been added. The most interesting of these latter is a record of the running of the English Derby and Oaks this year, the former having been won by W. C. Whitney's Volodyovski and the latter by Foxhall Keene's Cap and Belle II. The particulars of these races were furnished by the Messrs. Wetherby of England.

A despatch from London under date of October 19th says: By the retirement of Edward Weatherby as secretary of the Jockey Club and Keeper of the Matchbook, which occurred this week, the racing world loses a picturesque and altogether unique character. Edward Weatherby, who is about 62 years of age, has for years been a notable figure on the turf, not only as Secretary of the Jockey Club and head of the well known firm which publishes the Racing Calendar, but as strikingly recalling by his clothes and old-fashioned courtesy the early days of the century.

It is the consensus of opinion in New York that Yankee and Endurance by Right are at the very top of the two year old class this year, and that both will develop into the most formidable kind of three year olds. Yankee has already been pronounced a greater colt than Nasturtium, or even Heno, who beat the Futurity winner in the Matron Stakes two weeks ago. Yankee's conceded supremacy is undoubtedly due to the splendid form displayed by him in the Champagne Stakes, when Turner had to pull him over "into his lap" to keep him from running past Endurance by Right, with whom Mr. Whitney had declared to win. While Yankee was undoubtedly in fettle to beat any colt or filly in training, it must be admitted that Endurance by Right was not extended at all. The fact that she ran the seven furlongs in 1:28, which was two seconds slower than Chuctanunda's track record, was proof enough that the Inspector B. filly had things all her own way. But if Mr. Whitney had issued orders to have both two year olds ridden out on their merits it is safe to say that Yankee would have had to move in record time to beat his phenomenal stable mate. In the match race with Heno at Gravesend it will be remembered that Endurance by Right broke all previous track records for the distance, five and three-quarter furlongs, and yet she disposed of Heno quite easily. Reckoning with Heno's impressive victory over Yankee in the Matron Stakes, it should be considered that if there is now any superiority possessed by Yankee over Endurance by Right it is very slight. Yankee is a superb colt. His breeding alone would warrant sterling merit. He is by Hanover-Correction and is a big, powerful animal who is inclined to be sluggish in the early stages of a race, but is a grand finisher. At the post Yankee is very well behaved. As Starter Fitzgerald says, the colt seems to have human intelligence, so tractable and docile is he when brought face to face with the barrier. He appears to know exactly what he is on the track for and when called upon to go he makes no fuss, but gets away readily. That he will, barring accidents, make a great race horse before his turf career ends, there is little room for doubt. As Mr. Whitney has decided to keep the colt in America next season, great things will be expected of him in the rich three year old stakes.

There is a probability that Hon. W. C. Whitney will visit the coast this winter to take a look at California winter racing. Several of his horses will come to the coast and race here.

August Belmont, who is now in London, has had several important conferences with the turf authorities there. He has seen the officials of the English and French Jockey Clubs and that they evinced the most friendly desire to enter into reciprocal arrangements with the New York club. Belmont said: "I cannot disclose the details until I consult my American colleagues. But you can say there is a good outlook for thoroughly reciprocal arrangement between these organizations."

The high prices paid for thoroughbreds is often a matter of discussion. Some statistician has compiled the following list of the highest prices paid for horses of this class, which is probably very nearly correct:

STALLIONS AND BROODMARES.

Flying Fox.....	$187,500
Ormonde.....	150,000
La Fleche.....	63,000
Blair Athol.....	62,500

Colt by Orme-Serpentine.....	20,000
Colt by Trenton-Sandwich.....	27,500

Burns & Waterhouse will do a great deal of their training at Ingleside, where three large new stables have just been finished for their use. They will occupy them this week and one of their trainers will be located there permanently. Burns & Waterhouse have always had better luck fitting their horses at Ingleside than any other track.

Hon. W. C. Whitney has purchased of W. Showalter the chestnut filly Smoke (4) by imp. Order, dam Alfalfa, for $5000.

Danny Maher is now known over on the other side as "Jockey to the King." On Thursday last he signed a contract giving to the Duke of Devonshire first call on his services. This was virtually an engagement to ride for King Edward VII., for since the death of Queen Victoria all of the King's horses have been sheltered in the Duke of Devonshire's stables and have raced in his colors. Maher's career in England has been marked with success. His popularity is widespread and the finger of suspicion has not been pointed at him. His engagement to ride for his Majesty is far more flattering than the honor enjoyed a couple of years ago by Tod Sloan when he rode for the Prince of Wales. Maher will be the regular stable jockey and will have all the mounts that the weights permit.

The parents of Jockey Redfern have accepted the offer of John E. Madden of $8000 for the first year and $10,000 for the second and the clever Canadian light weight will ride for Madden during the next two campaigns. Redfern went to New York only a few weeks ago from Toronto and Fort Erie, where he had made quite a reputation for himself. In several instances he has shown himself to be a cool-headed dashing rider who is a strong finisher both with his hands and with whip and spurs. Madden was quick to see the boy's good qualities and made an offer stipulating the above conditions. It was not accepted until last week. Redfern will ride in California this winter.

A racing law will be introduced into the Canadian Parliament next session which will affect the Windsor and Fort Erie tracks, and it will aim to limit racing to 15 days in the spring and 10 days in the fall.

R. T. Wilson, Jr., has made arrangements by which T. J. Healey will train for him exclusively in future. Healey signed a five years' contract at a salary said to be $12,000. Hitherto Healey, while training Mr. Wilson's horses, has been handling others, including his own. In a recent race at Morris Park there were three horses, Dublin, Carbuncle and Lady of the Valley, all trained by Healey. Lady of the Valley won at odds of 50 to 1.

A dispatch from Chicago says: The outlook for a brilliant season of racing at New Orleans this winter is the best in the history of the new Louisiana Jockey Club, for a higher class of horses than has ever before been stabled on the Crescent City track will be on hand, according to Secretary Sheridan Clark, who is in Chicago. Many of the stables from this section of the country that have for years past raced at other points will this winter take in New Orleans, among them being those of S. C. Hildreth, Charley Ellison and a big contingent from the stable of P. Dunne, which will be sent there in charge of "Bishop" Poole, a trainer who has made New Orleans his headquarters for many years. If the statements of Secretary Clark are to be relied upon—and the hustling little gentleman who originally hailed from New York is generally pretty accurate in his calculations—the Eastern contingent that will put in an appearance will be the largest seen in years, as among the prominent owners who intend sending horses are A. H. and D. H. Morris, A. Featherstone, Wm. Barrick, "Bill" Daly and many others.

W. C. Whitney's three year olds, Paul Clifford and Black Dick, that have been entered in several of the stakes to be run here this winter, were sold at auction in New York last Saturday. The former brought $5000 and the latter $2500. Both were purchased by J. H. McCormick.

Curley Brown is to officiate as starter at Latonia meeting.

At the special meeting of the Western Jockey Club, held at Chicago, October 21st, 150 owners, trainers and jockeys and a large number of horses were reinstated.

The Saratoga Racing Association will have the finest racing plant in America next year if it already does not possess it. William C. Whitney, President of the Association recently purchased thirteen acres of land on the north side of Union Avenue, and contiguous to the training quarters. Many new and handsome stables are to be erected on the new purchase and several thousand dollars expended in constructing new stands and re-arranging the track. Saratoga will give away more money in stakes and purses than any association in America next year and the racing will attract all the best horses in the country.

Word comes from Paris that Milton Henry, the American jockey, has signed a contract to ride for Baron Rothschild next year at a salary of $25,000.

Jackson's Napa Soda cleanses the stomach and renders the eye clear.

SULKY NOTES.

Time for the wind up—at Pleasanton to-day.

Hollister meeting was a success and was well attended.

Boreal 2:15½, the sire of Boralma 2:07, is totally blind.

Pleasanton wants the Breeders meeting next year and will make a bid for it.

Sir Albert S. 2:08½ has won close to $2500 on the California circuit this year.

It begins to look as though Chimes would be the leading money winning sire of the year.

Will not some enterprising association in California arrange a stake of at least $2500 for 2:25 trotters?

The Los Angeles Driving Club is making arrangements for an afternoon of racing on Thanksgiving Day.

They have been working the old game of moving the quarter pole on horse buyers at Lexington and an investigation is in progress.

Mr. C. K. B. Billings, who drove Little Boy a mile to wagon in 2:01½, has set a mark for amateur drivers that but few will ever be able to reach.

The new track at Hanford is a half mile ring and is said to be by horsemen who have raced horses over it, one of the fastest of its kind on the coast.

The Pleasanton Times says that Geo. H. Davis drove Flying Jih 2:04 a mile in 2:10 one day last week. The old horse is not a "dead one" by any means.

The 2:15 class trot at Pleasanton to-day should result in a good contest. The starters will very likely be Dan W., Alta Vela, Floradora and Thomas R.

Little Boy's mile to wagon in 2:01 raises the hope that there will be another two-minute pacer in the list next year to keep company with Star Pointer.

Ashland Wilkes is probably the leading sire of new standard performers this year. He has seventeen new ones in the list. McKinney 2:11½ will probably be second.

Col. Crawford of Willows has sent his string of harness horses to the Alameda track to be trained by Billy Hamner. There is a full brother to Don 2:10 in the lot.

Four have entered the list this season sired by Caution namely: Santiam 2:24½, at Everett; Francisco 2:18½, and Saltese 2:25, at Whatcom; Juniper 2:22½, at North Yakima.

Creseus will be at Deuver November 16th. Mr. Ed Gaylord, manager of the Overland Park, expects at least ten thousand people will turn out to see the champion.

The revolt against bookmaking on harness racing is spreading. Several of the district fair secretaries assert that bookmaking will not be permitted on their tracks next season.

Thomas R. 2:15 by Iran Alto 2:12½ is the fastest four year old trotting gelding of the year. "Farmer" Bunch thinks he will be a 2:10 performer for Iran Alto in his five year old form.

H. S. Hogoboom who took the trotter Duke of Waldstein to Oregon and Washington and gave him a record of 2:23½ in a gale of wind, has sold the horse to Wes. Walters of Island City, for $500.

A typographical error made us give the record of Trilby in the third heat of her Stockton race as 2:28½. It should have read 2:23½, which is now the record of this good daughter of Mambrino Chief Jr.

Henry Hellman has leased the McKinney horse Mack Mack from Chris Simpson of Oregon and will train him at the San Jose track this winter. Hellman thinks he has a great prospect in this trotter.

Among the stallions that breeders should not overlook next season is Stam B. 2:11½. The few colts by this horse that have been worked all show remarkable speed and for size and good looks they are the peer of any.

Mr. A. G. Gurnett's good gray gelding What Is It 2:16½ had a very severe attack of lung fever after reaching Pleasanton from Los Angeles. He is out of danger, but will not be able to start at the Pleasanton races.

Four trotters entered the 2:15 list in California this year: Ned Thorn 2:11½ by Billy Thornhill, Sola 2:14½ by McKinney, Thomas R. 2:15 by Iran Alto, and Alta Vela 2:15 by Electioneer. This is a pretty fair showing for a rather poor season of racing.

J. M. Nelson is arranging to hold a big speed sale at the Alameda track on December 2d. There is no better place in California to show and sell horses than there and every sale that has been held there by Mr. Nelson has been a complete success.

"Veritas" covers the whole case in a few words when he says: "To lay up a tired horse after he has had a gruelling heat is one thing and a fair thing to do, but to pull a fresh horse at the first and last of a race should meet with condign punishment."

Vic Shellar 2:15½, Stamboulette 2:10½, the four year old Tom Smith by McKinney and a colt called Mollit which B. O. Van Bokkelen took East, are all at the Syracuse State Fair grounds, where they have been since the races held at that track in September.

There is nothing better at this time of the year to put and keep horses in condition than the Red Bull Manhattan horse and cattle food. It is inexpensive and very effective and is recommended by every horse or cattle owner who has used it. Ask any of them about it.

William J. Kenney, the well known macbinist and bike manufacturer, is a candidate for the office of Public Administrator at the San Francisco municipal election next week and is making a strong fight. Mr. Kenney is very popular with the horsemen of this city and will poll a heavy vote among them.

Mr. C. F. White, manager of the Gray's Harbor Commercial Company of Cosmopolis, Washington, has been in San Francisco during the past week. Mr. White saw the Diablo mare Diodine 2:10½, get her record this year and says she is a wonderfully fast mare. We understand he has a refusal of her.

A good track with plenty of stalls would be well patronized if located near this city. There are hundreds of horses owned in San Francisco that would be trained were the owners not compelled to send them into the country. One of the principal features of hiring a horse trained is the pleasure of seeing him worked.

Palmer Clark, the well known Chicago horseman, says: "While at Memphis last week what impressed me as much as anything else was the ease in which Ed Geers drove the Village Farm pacer, Direct Hal, a workout mile in company in 2:06½, and I want to go on record now that he will be one of next year's sensational green pacers."

Hon. Jesse D. Carr's big handsome trotter Silvion by Electricity won two races and took a mark of 2:24½ at the Hollister meeting. Silvion is not only a fast trotter but one of the handsomest road horses in the State. At the price Mr. Carr asks for him he is one of the best bargains in horse flesh we now know of in this State as he will trot in 2:15 sure.

The yearling colt by Searchlight 2:03½ out of Mr. A. B. Spreckels' great mare Hulda 2:08½ is dead. He got cast in his stall at the Aptos ranch and when found life was extinct. Great things were expected of this colt, as he was one of the grandest looking yearlings ever seen in the State and we understand Mr. Spreckels had refused many handsome offers for him.

The next regular meeting of the Board of Appeals of the American Trotting Association will be held at the Auditorium Hotel, Chicago, Tuesday, December 3, 1901, at 10 o'clock A. M., for the transaction of such business as may properly be presented to the Board for its consideration. All new applications and written evidence must be received at the office of Secretary Steiner not later than November 18, 1901.

Belle Medium, the dam of Stam B. 2:11½, is now in the great broodmare list. Her colt Dictatus Medium by Dictatus took a pacing record of 2:24½ at Hollister and won his race in straight heats. Belle Medium is one of the handsomest mares ever foaled and has a colt by Zombro 2:11 that will be heard from as soon as he is grown. She is in foal to Zombro again. Belle Medium is owned by Tuttle Bros. of Rocklin, owner of Stam B.

Judge Joseph Murphy, of the California Jockey Club, was judge of the light harness classes at the St. Louis fair this year. Mr. Murphy is a great admirer of the American trotter and when at home in St. Louis drives one on the road that is hard to beat. The horse is by Secretary out of a mare by Adrian and was purchased for Mr. Murphy by Richard Havey, of this city, last year. Secretary Jr., as he is called, is a square trotter and very fast.

A year ago five gentlemen who reside in and near Boston, Mass., entered into an agreement by which they purchased five yearlings by Allerton at a New York sale, and divided them by lot with the agreement that they should race them this fall, the winner of the race to become the owner of all the colts. The race came off last week and was won by Mr. A. H. Parker's colt Nileus in straight heats. The race was half mile heats, best three in five. The best time was 1:21½.

Horsemen in every corner of the country, as well as those of Europe, will be pleased to learn that William B. Fasig is rapidly improving in health. About three weeks ago, says the Horse Review, his attending physicians gave up all hope, and said he could not live forty-eight hours. A prominent physician was summoned from New York to the farm, Benniscliffe, near Brewster, and after a thorough examination ordered all the medicines thrown away, and placed Mr. Fasig on a diet of buttermilk. He has been improving ever since.

P. W. Hodges has moved to Pleasanton with his horses. The Nutwood Wilkes colts and fillies that he worked and gave records this year for Martin Carter have been sent back to the Nutwood Stock Farm and will be permitted to eat and grow during the rainy months. A few days since Mr. Hodges worked Judge W. E. Greene's black two year old colt by Directum a mile in 2:30 flat, last quarter in 35½ seconds, and the Judge's bay two year old, also by Directum, stepped a mile in 2:31½ the same day. There are not two sounder, better gaited or more promising youngsters than these to be found anywhere.

The North Pacific Rural Spirit of last week says: "I. C. Mosher left the Fair Grounds last week for Los Angeles, Cal., where he will make his future home. Mr. Mosher took with him his old standby, Coeur d'Alene 2:19½, Scappoose 2:16½, the broodmare Allie Wagner, and the youngsters Athalene, Kathelene, Dix Alone, Allie Lane, all by Coeur d'Alene. The last named colt is nominated in the Breeders Futurity Stake of $6000, and we give the California trainers timely warning to look out for this youngster for the Coeur d'Alene-Mosher combination if a hard one to beat in colt stakes."

And old time driver, who has spent some years in Europe, was in attendance at the recent Parkway meeting, and in referring to a rather noisy argument between some drivers and the judges and starters, said: "We may think here that we know something about running a trotting meeting, but I tell you, the Europeans can beat us at that game as easily as a 2:10 horse can beat a 2:40 skate. They would not allow any such arguments to go on one single instant, and any one who attempted such a thing would be ruled off for life."

Charles E. Clark, the Fresno trainer who has made such a success on the eastern tracks this year, purchased a very fast trotter while in Lexington. The horse is Cozad 2:20½, by Fred S. Wilkes 2:11½, dam Pelos by Almont, second dam Maggie Keene by Mambrino Hatcher, son of Mambrino Patchen, third dam Laura Fair dam of Keene Jim 2:19½ by Rattler, etc. Cozad is said to be a very fast horse and Mr. Clark will campaign him over east next year, and he expects to take quite a string with him. The price paid for Cozad by Mr. Clark was $2000 and all the Lexington horsemen who know the horse say he got him very cheap as he is a 2:10 trotter sure.

Humboldt Maid 2:13½ by Waldstein out of Nancy Moore by Grand Moore, was well known in California as one of the most persistent little trotters that ever trotted down the homestretch in a race. Since Hi Hogoboom took her East and sold her several years ago she has been raced in all kinds of company and on all sorts of tracks, and is always in the money. She started in the free for all trot at Bremen, Indiana, October 10th, this year, and won first money in a five heat race. Her fastest mile in the race was 2:16½, in which she made a dead heat with Gold Standard. As Humboldt Maid is now ten years old and has been racing every year since she was a two year old she is evidently a pretty game old girl.

Sam Gamble took his two year old black colt, by Axtell out of Lady Simmons by Simmons, up to Pleasanton this week and will work him a little over that track next spring in his three year old form. This colt is a royally bred fellow. His second dam is by Artillery 750, and his third dam was Lizzie Hayden by Peavine. Lizzie Hayden was the dam of Tennessee Wilkes that sired Roan Wilkes 2:04½, Mazette 2:04½ and many other fast ones. The fourth dam is Lizzie Brinker, dam of three in the list and several producing sons and daughters. This colt will be a very handsome fellow and Mr. Gamble will probably permit him to serve a half dozen mares next spring. We believe he is the only son of Axtell in California.

"Griffin" of the Turf, Field & Farm prints a tabulation of the pedigree of Janice 2:09 to the fifth generation, but gives her fourth dam as untraced. The fourth dam of Janice was Bonnie Bell, by Williamson's Belmont out of the famous old time brood mare Liz Givens by imported Langford, next dam Charlotte Pace by Sir Archy. Bonnie Bell is recorded on page 63, volume 3 of the American Stud Book. She was the dam of several noted thoroughbreds, notably Phil Sheridan that won a memorable six heat mile race at Sacramento in the early '70s. In this race Demorep won the first heat, Nell Flaherty the second and third and Bonnie Bell's son the next three, although he was dog lame. Bonnie Bell is also the third dam of Clipper 2:06.

Sam Grigshy, the well known horse dealer of Woodland, lost a good saddle horse and came near losing his own life by getting entangled in a piece of barbed wire one day last week. Mr. Grigshy was driving a band of horses and rode into the wire which was lying on the ground with one end fast to a fence post. The horse became entangled in the wire and Mr. Grigshy jumped from his back, but was himself caught by the barbs. The wire coiled tightly around the horse's neck and cut the arteries so that the animal fell and bled to death. Mr. Grigshy received two cuts on the leg—one five inches long, the other an ugly gash two inches in length. He was also very severely bruised but after receiving medical attendance is now getting along very well considering his severe wounds.

The condition by which associations keep the money lost by a distanced horse, is being very strongly objected to by eastern horsemen and turf writers. There certainly is just cause for the kick. When horsemen pay the largest part of the purse in entrance money, as they almost invariably do, they should be allowed the full benefit of the money hung up to be raced up. There have been races in the East this year where five or six heats were trotted and all the horses distanced but two, yet the associations kept third and fourth moneys under the condition which read: "A horse distancing the field will be awarded first and second money, but under no other condition shall a horse be entitled to more than one money." This is not giving the horse owners a fair deal, and the suggestion that the National Trotting Association should make such a division illegal is a good one.

While at the Lexington meeting, Will Durfee sold his big black gelding, Charlie Mac 2:11½, to Ed Gaylord, of Denver. Mr. Gaylord states that his intentions at present are to retire this fast son of McKinney and use him exclusively for matinee racing and road purposes, but it is not unlikely that when the 2:12 classes are advertised next year that Charlie Mac's name will be found among the entries. Of all the horses that went East this year to trot on the Grand Circuit, Charlie Mac and Toggles made the best showing as consistent trotters. Charlie Mac won four good races on the Grand Circuit, was second once, fourth once and twice unplaced. He won $475 before reaching Lexington and was one of the best and fastest of the horses in the classes in which he raced. Mr. Durfee owned a half interest in him when he started East, but afterwards bought out his partner and became the sole owner of the horse. The price paid by Mr. Gaylord is not stated, but is said to have given Mr. Durfee a profit on his investment.

Dan Patch has started eleven times this season and won every race.

Peter Stirling 2:11½ will be sold at the Fasig-Tipton sale in November.

A number of tin cup records were made during the Lexington meeting.

James Golden drove the two year old pacing sister to Idolita a quarter in 32 seconds before turning her out.

It is reported that Connor 2:03½, the twelve year old pacer, will be campaigned in the trotting classes next year.

The Bush boys are thinking of wintering at Colorado Springs and may take Hail Cloud 2:07½ with them.

Cousin Madge, a mare by Brown Hal and without a mark, stepped a mile in 2:07½ during the Lexington meeting.

Hal Dillard 2:04½ now has three pacers in the list with records better than 2:09. Cambria Maid 2:08½ is the latest.

It is said John Hussey has worked Patchen Wilkes Farm's young stallion Prince Selma 2:16 by Bow Bells, a mile in 2:09.

In the 2:16 class pace at the Terre Haute Grand Circuit meeting, sixteen out of the eighteen starters wore the "pajamas."

The first of the get of Lorable to enter the list in the three year old filly Secular, that took a record of 2:22½ at Lexington.

Fereno still holds the Kentucky Futurity record, not only for the fastest heat, but for the fastest three heats, 2:12½, 2:10½, 2:12.

Prelatess 2:15½, hy Ponce de Leon 2:13, and Grace Eldred 2:17, hy Cedilian, are the two fastest two year old trotters of the year.

George Henry, of Buffalo, has purchased of James Mulhall the fast trotter, Mamie Griffin 2:12, for speedway and roadway driving.

The American Horse Breeder says that the New England Trotting Horse Breeders Association will clean up about $20,000 on the year.

The Board of Review of the National Trotting Association will meet at the Murray Hill Hotel in New York on Tuesday, December 3.

Axtell 2:12 has eleven new standard performers for the year, five additions to his 2:20 list, and an even half dozen of his grandchildren have standard records.

Rowellan 2:15½, by Adhell, three year old, trotted a mile in 2:12½ before being retired for the season. It is reported that a half interest in him has been sold for $4000.

The fastest yearling pacer at the Lexington track is a filly hy Austral, son of Boreal, in George Bowerman's stable. She recently stepped a quarter in 34½ seconds.

Harry Benedict expects to cut a wide swath next season with the three pacers, New Richmond 2:08½, Cousin Madge (trial 2:07½), and Bronson Cooper (2), trial 2:11½.

Senator McCarthy intends using Joe Patchen 2:01½, on the New York Speedway this fall, and the famous black pacer should be able to make in interesting for the best of them.

Walter Keim 2:11½, Ed Geers' great green trotter this season, is out of a daughter of Hambrino. Hambrino mares are becoming almost as desirable as Mambrino Patchen mares.

One of Lexington's daily newspaper boys was so apt at picking winners that during the last few days of the meeting the bookies would grah for the sponge the moment they saw him coming.

Country Jay is a very well bred gelding, as he is hy Jayhawker out of Paranelia hy Parkview, son of Electioneer; second dam Minnie Merrill hy Young Jim, third dam Minnie West by Allio West.

Culbert & Lally, of Portland, Ind., have sold to C. M. Mix, of Nottingham, Ind., for $1000, the bay stallion Truman's Brother 2:18½ by Electioneer, dam Telie, dam of Truman 2:15½ hy General Benton.

Orchard Park Farm has sold to Edwin Gaylord of Denver, Col., the bay mare Agnes Le May 2:17½ hy Ashland Wilkes 2:17½, dam Nelly Riley hy Harkaway. Agnes Le May will be used as a matinee mare at Denver. She paced a half in 1:02 over the Lexington track the day she was sold.

During the year of 1900 a total of 243,166 mares were covered by stallions which had received the patent of the French government. The average cost to the owner of each mare was $2.15 per service.

A handsome horse will always command a much better price and reader sale than a plain one, all things being equal. Beauty detracts nothing from speed, while it is a very valuable adjunct.

Baronmore 2:14½, sire of Peter Stirling 2:11½, winner of the Kentucky Futurity and the Louisville Prize, has six new performers to his credit this year, all three year olds, and all trotters except one.

During his entire racing career, two seasons, Harold H. 2:04, the Canadian pacer, has started in twenty-four races, won seventeen, been second in five and unplaced in two, winning $8362.50, $6250 of it this season.

Mr. Tipton had this to say about Captor: "Why, he can lay in behind any 2:10 trotter till within 200 yards of the wire, then pull out and trot around him like he were standing still, so much brush speed has he."

Garatta 2:15½, one of the new standard performers is the daughter of Milroi, son of Guy Wilkes, out of Anagallis, by Prodigal; second dam, the great brood mare Annie Wilton, hy Wilton. Garatta is a three year old.

The Red Wilkes mare Chestnut Belle, owned at Walnut Hall Stock Farm, near Lexington, has three in 2:15, four in 2:20, five in 2:30, and another with a trial of 2:18½, at sixteen years of age. She has two 2:15 trotters in 1901.

Alcantara gets a new producing son in Alciphone (now a gelding), the sire of Jessie H., that Trainer Ed Avery drove to a record of 2:15½ in a race that he won at Dover, N. H., on the 25th ult. Jessie H. is owned by Mr. Charles Saunders.

Eolus, that entered the list this year, getting a record of 2:24½ at Belfast, Me., is seventeen years old. He is now a gelding, but he was kept for some time entire and is the sire of Paul T. 2:18½, Linne G. 2:20 and Maud Ellingwood 2:25.

It was in 1892 that the first pacer, Mascot, entered the 2:04 list. To-day there are seventeen in this list. Five of the 2:04 pacers have records below 2:02. Two others have records of just 2:02. So that the 2:02 list has already seven within it.

Fred Isabel tried to get a New Bedford man to buy Walter Keim, 2:11½, last winter, but a veterinarian refused to pass him as racing sound. As he has won four races and shown a half in 1:01½, the medicine man does not stand well with one resident of the whaling city.

The trotting stallion Allie Wilkes 2:15 by Red Wilkes, dam by Allie West, has been sold hy L. V. Harkness, proprietor of the Walnut Hall Stock Farm, Lexington, Ky., to T. E. Thomas, of Niles, Ohio. Allie Wilkes sired Jupe 2:07½, Arlington 2:06½ and other good ones.

Here's the way in which a Canadian writer refers to the pacer Dutch Mowrey, 2:17 to wagon: "He is ratted, no mane to speak of, slab-sided, cockle-jointed, and looks like a peddler's ill-kept workhorse, yet can simply fly, turned loose over a parlor track to a light speed wagon."

Mr. Klotz, the efficient and popular secretary of the Detroit club, will remain another season. The July meeting at the opening of the Grand Circuit was the most successful in the history of the club. Next year in addition to the $10,000 M. & M., $10,000 will be offered for free for all pacers.

T. W. Lawson admits having lost seven millions of dollars on the depreciation of copper stocks that he failed to sell in time. There is an old California story of a '49er who lost a fortune by failing to bring across the plains with him enough hogs to fatten on the tons of mast he saw between the Mississippi river and California.

Eyellet 2:06½, is a confirmed grafter. She is fond of beer, and takes it with as much regularity as she does her oats. She begs for it, and will not be denied. When she asks for beer and it is not forthcoming she proceeds to start a rough house, and it is worth a man's life to approach her unless he has beer to offer. The strangest part of it all is that she can drink the famous beverage from a bottle or glass as well as from a bucket.

One better at Lexington, who sticks close to form, refused to hack Peter Sterling for the Futurity because two of his close relatives, while fast, were cowards and had the reputation in their racing days of being quitters. He nursed his theory to the end and hacked Walnut Hall. It then dawned on him that Peter Sterling was not responsible for the misdeeds of his ancestors, and his "dope" book was scattered to the winds.

A horseman who made a recent trip to the home of Peter Stirling 2:11½, which is located at Berlin, Wis., described another three year old by Baronmore, that trotted an exhibition half on the farm track in 1:03½ for the entertainment of the visitors present. This promising youngster was held in reserve for the Futurity, in case anything happened to Peter Stirling, and it is likely that J. B. Chandler and the Baronmores will be much in evidence again next season.

Creseus 2:02½ has received a number of presents from his admirers this season, but one of the most unique is a complete set of clothing—hood, blankets, etc., made from the finest black wool, which is undyed, having been cut from a fancy herd of seventy high bred black sheep expressly for the purpose and spun and woven into the fabric for the suit without dyeing. The donor was Mr. G. W. Peterson, superintendent of the carriage department of the Adams Express Company, Jersey City.

Thomas Marsh, who is about to end a five-years' engagement with Maplewood Farm, Portsmouth, N. H., for not winning the $10,000 Massachusetts Stake with the season's crack, Eleata, was rewarded to the extent of $500 by the officials at Terre Haute for winning the $5000 Wabash Stake with Country Jay. Seldom does a driver receive that amount for an afternoon's work in the sulky. It was 10 per cent of the entire purse and 20 per cent of the money won in the race by Country Jay.

At Delorimier Park, Montreal, P. Q., October 5th, a purse of $500 was given for a five-mile dash race for trotters. Six started and the victor was Harry Wilkes 2:23½, who covered the distance in 12:45, which is, with the exception of the record of 12:30½, made by Bishop Hero in 1893, the fastest five-mile race ever trotted, and it is really the best, as Bishop Hero trotted over a mile track, while Delorimier Park is a half-mile ring. Harry Wilkes is by Guelph Boy, a brother of the great race horse and sire, Grattan 2:13 by Wilkes Boy.

Arion is to remain in Kentucky for next year's season, Lister Witherspoon of Glenartney Farm, at Versailles, having arranged with owner J. Malcolm Forbes of Boston, to again offer for public service the greatest colt trotter the world has ever known. Although Arion did not arrive in Kentucky this spring until the breeding season was well on, upward of fifty of some of the best mares in the Blue Grass State were bred to him. Mr. Forbes, appreciating the welcome given his favorite horse, has reluctantly allowed him to remain another season at Glenartney.

Another effort is being made by some of the wealthy members of the Road Drivers' Association of New York to purchase the Empire City track. Many plans have been proposed for this since the death of William H. Clark, the founder, but all of them have fallen through; some for lack of nerve and others for reason that those who have the estate in charge wanted more money for it than the estate seemed worth. It is now thought that the property can be bought for $500,000. If the deal goes through the parties behind it will hold weekly matinees and will give at least two regular trotting meetings each season.

Alix's race record was 2:05½ and her time mark was 2:03½. No other trotting mare has ever equaled either of these records, and Creseus and The Abbot are the only trotters that have surpassed them. Her race record equaled the world's race record held by Directum from 1893 to the day that Creseus reduced it to 2:05 at Detroit last July. Her time record stood from 1894 to September 25, 1900, the day The Abbot reduced it to 2:03½ at Terre Haute. At the Columbus track last August Creseus still further reduced the mark to 2:02½. The 2:03½ of Alix withstood all assaults for six years, while Directum's race record, 2:05½, remained intact for eight years, and is still the record for stallions four years old.

Christian Schuarte, who conducts an extensive breeding establishment at Dusseldorf, Germany, and is one of the most prominent breeders of trotters in that country, arrived in New York last week. Mr. Schuarte became known to the horseman in this country about five years ago when he bought the stallion Darknight, the sire of Searchlight 2:03½, Brightlight 2:08½, Valpa 2:09½ and many other fast performers. He also owns the stallions Black Hawk McGregor 2:28 by Robert McGregor, and Independence 2:23½. Mr. Schuarte owns a number of three and four year olds by Darknight that he says promise to develop into fast trotters. He is a splendid judge of a horse, prefers animals of good size, and insists on their being absolutely sound, and will undoubtedly purchase some desirable breeding stock before his return.

William Bradbury, of Kansas, said to be the luckiest breeder in America, has recently sold his three year old filly, Maxine, by Jackdaw, dam Pansy McGregor by Fergus McGregor, grandam by Coriander, to S. De Ridder, of Louisville, Ky., for $2000. Maxine has all kinds of speed, and will be especially prepared for the big stakes of 1902. At Topeka she showed halves in 1:05½, and at Terre Haute, in the Kentucky Stock Farm Stake, she proved beyond the question of a doubt that in time Jackdaw will have a 2:10 trotter. Mr. Bradbury owns only a few mares, but it has been stated upon excellent authority that he never bred a mare to a trotting bred stallion without securing a valuable foal, one that either acquired a standard record or showed the ability to do so. Pansy McGregor, the dam of Maxine, still holds the world's record for a trotting filly, which is 2:23½.

American horses in Cuba are in demand. A gentleman writing from Havana says that the trade in the island of Cuba this fall and winter already shows encouraging prospects. The erstwhile Spanish isle is not very far behind the times in locomotion, when it is known that electric cars are already plying their ways in the devious antique streets of the capital. But it is not through purposes of street car propulsion that the demand from Cuban omamates; rather it is for good mules to work in the sugar fields, the tobacco plantations and in other agricultural pursuits of the country, and for horses as drivers in the largest cities of the country. The demand for nice, tasty horses promises to be very good. Cuba handles a good class of both horses and mules. The natives best like shapely, smooth made horses, 15 to 15.1 hands, with a good amount of style, cloau, light limbs and of solid colors, or in short, the toppest class of what is generally termed in the market "top southerners." For their mules they often take a larger animal, sometimes up to 15.3 hands, although the bulk of the Cuban mule purchases range around 15.1 to 15.2 hands. Most of the natives have peculiar ideas, or what we would call peculiar, with regard to the sex of their purchases, but after all there may be reason for the peculiarity, though we have never heard it fully explained.

San Francisco, Saturday, November 2, 1901.

THE NEW CALIFORNIA JOCKEY CLUB at a meeting of the Directors held Thursday, decided to make the price of admission to the race track this winter $1.50 for men, the admission for women to remain $1 as heretofore. The reason given for this step is that more money will be hung up this season than ever before. Not a single purse this winter being for less than $400 and many of the free handicaps worth from $500 to $600. It will be the endeavor of the Club to furnish the public with only the highest class sport which can be secured by giving rich purses and stakes.

It was also decided at this meeting to abolish the recall flag in starting. This action was taken in response to a very generally expressed wish among the horsemen themselves. It was also announced that no complimentary tickets will be issued.

FIFTEEN STAKES, ranging in value from $10,000 to $1500 are advertised by the New California Jockey Club to close Monday next, November 4th. These stakes are the Burnes Handicap $10,000 one mile and a quarter. The Thornton stakes, $3000, four miles, the California Derby $3000, one mile and a quarter, the California Oaks, $2500, one mile and a furlong, the Waterhouse Handicap, $2500, two miles, the Palace Hotel Handicap, the Bell Stakes, the Pacific Minor Handicap and the Gehhardt Handicap all $2000 each, and six others at $1500 each. These stakes all have a guarantee value. The New California Jockey now owns the three handsome racing properties at Oakland, Ingleside and Tanforan, and controls winter racing on this Coast. There is every promise of the coming season being the greatest ever held in California and that the entries to the stakes that close next Monday will be of high class and very numerous is a foreign conclusion. The conditions of each and every stake are fully stated in the advertisement.

BREEDERS AND OWNERS of harness horses and all kinds of live stock, can do a great deal to promote the prosperity of those industries if they will effect some sort of an organization this winter and unite in an effort to make the district fairs of 1902 successful shows and race meetings. For years in this State there has not been that unity of action and pooling of issues between the stock breeders and fair directors that there should be. If a convention could be held in which the breeders of cattle, sheep and swine, the owners and trainers of horses of all the harness breeds, and the directors of the district fairs could meet and discuss the questions that pertain to the success of all much good would be accomplished. The time is ripe for a circuit of fairs in California next year that will not only be financially successful, but will do a great deal to build up in the districts where they are held, industries that will greatly add to the welfare and the prosperity of the people. If a few of those most interested will take the initiative and lead in this matter, others will follow. A convention on the plan here suggested should be held this winter. It would certainly accomplish much good.

THE CONEY ISLAND JOCKEY CLUB can now claim the largest collection of fixtures of any racing club in the world. In this issue of this journal there are advertised nine of these stakes, to which large sums of added money are affixed, the total estimated value of the nine being $168,000. It is estimated that the Futurity for 1902 will be worth between $70,000 and $100,000, as per rough estimate of the declarations to be expected. With the many other rich stakes to be offered during the year, the Coney Island Jockey Club will undoubtedly lead all racing associations in the world in the amount of money given for fixed events. The nine stakes advertised are The Foam, The Surf, The Tidal, The Lawrence Realization for foals of 1900, The Mermaid, The Great Filly, The Century, The Annual Champion and The Lawrence Realization for foals of 1901. The estimated value of these stakes ranges from $4000 to $40,000, and the stakes are divided between two year olds, three year olds and three year olds and upwards. The full list of these stakes will be found in our advertising columns and as entries to them close Monday, November 18th, breeders and owners have ample time to look them over and prepare their entries. The Coney Island Jockey Club has sent to this office a supply of its entry blanks, which are the most complete and beautifully printed blanks we have ever seen. They can be had by applying at our office or will be sent by mail on application.

IT WILL COST $1.50 to see the races at the New California Jockey Club's tracks this winter, the directors having fixed the price of admission tickets at that figure at a meeting held last Thursday evening. Every person who honestly desires to see the tone of the sport raised on this Coast will endorse this action of the board, and if the big list of persons to whom passes have been given in the past is cut down to those legitimately entitled to them, the New California Jockey Club will still further improve and elevate racing here on the Pacific slope. All the turf scandals that ever occurred here originated among the people who were trying to play a game in which they could not afford to take a hand. Racing like every other sport should only be followed as a pastime by those who can afford the expense. The poor devils who see in it a chance to make a fortune with a farthing, and to whom the sum of a dollar and a half is a bar to the privileges of the track, are better off outside the gates. We are pleased to note the raise in price for admission to the races of the New California Jockey Club.

THE ROSE DALE STOCK FARM have the good news that on September 6, 1901, at the Royal Agricultural Show, Australia, Mary Daly, sired by Daly 2:15, dam Miss Fay by Steinway, got a record of 2:25. She was sold as a buggy mare about one year ago, and had been used as a buggy mare up to twelve days before she got a record. Mary Daly is a full sister to Favor 2:21. This will make two for Miss Fay. Mary Daly got her record on a half mile track, half up and half down grade and very rough in places.

Soprano is Also Dam of Ten.

The Strathmore mare Soprano, full sister to Oakwood Park's great stallion Steinway, is now the dam of ten standard performers, thus equalling Beautiful Bells in the number of her get in the 2:30 list.

At the close of 1900 Soprano was credited with seven performers. These were six trotters, C. F. Clay 2:18 by Calihan, Amhryon 2:18 by Ambassador, Eminence 2:18 by Empire, Archduke 2:27 by Anteeo, Strathridge 2:28 by Grand Sentinel and Supremacy 2:28 by Ambassador; and the pacer Airbrake 2:24 by Warlock. This year three more of her offspring have taken records; the trotters Blue Silk 2:27 by Garnet Wilkes and Raw Silk 2:29 by Ashburton, and the pacer Roy T. 2:23 (2) by Ernest Wilton.

The remarkable thing about Soprano's record is that her ten performers are by nine different sires, which shows that it is 'largely the old mare's fault.' Soprano was foaled in 1875, consequently is twenty-six years of age. It is not probable that she will ever produce another foal, but her owner, Mr. W. B. Griffin, of Albia, Iowa, states that another of her foals will in all probability acquire a standard record. Soprano's son, C. F. Clay 2:18, is the sire of the pacers Connor 2:03, Coleridge 2:05, Choral 2:06, and the trotters Cling 2:11 and Leola 2:11. He has ten 2:15 performers and nearly six in the 2:30 list. One of Soprano's daughters, Nannie Etticoat, is dam of the pacers Split Silk 2:08, Red Silk 2:10, Geo. C. Easton 2:19, and the trotter Brown Silk 2:19, and granddam of India Silk 2:10, China Silk 2:16 and several others. Soprano's full brother Steinway has sired Klatawah 2:05, W. Wood 2:07, Agitato 2:09 and Cricket 2:10, while his son Charles Derhy has sired Much Better 2:07, Diahlo 2:09 and Derhy Princess 2:08, and his son Strathway is the sire of Toggles 2:08. Diablo has sired Clipper 2:06, Sir Albert S. 2:08 and many other fast ones, showing that the blood that has made Soprano a wonderful broodmare also made her full brother a great sire of speed and that his blood, as well as her's, is breeding on. No other sister and brother have made such a showing, and their pedigree makes a most interesting study.

They were sired by Strthmore, he by Hambletonian 10 out of Lady Watermire by North American.

Their dam was Ahness, a daughter of Alhion, he almost a thoroughbred, being by Peters' Halcom.

The dam of Ahness was a daughter of Marshall Noy, out of a daughter of Bertrand by Sir Archy, therefore very close to thoroughbred. The advocates of the thoroughbred blood close up in a pedigree can get enough for a sermon out of the pedigree of Soprano. dam of ten, and her full brother Steinway.

Betting on Eastern Tracks.

Some people profess to believe that few, comparatively, play the trotting races, and that it is a difficult matter stirring up real enthusiasm. Not so. Were one in a position to state, even approximately, the amounts wagered at each of the Grand Circuit meetings this season, the figures would be simply astonishing.

At Lexington, a small city, yet a trotting horse centre, over half a million was sent into the betting ring during the ten days' meeting which closed so brilliantly yesterday. During the Brighton Beach trots well toward $400,000 was wagered in the auctions alone on the six days' events, and the books did more than a fair business.

At Cleveland and Detroit too, the betting was heavy on the M. & M Stake, at Detroit; and nearly $100,000 went into the auction pools. Then there is the staid old town, Boston, where the puritanical citizens close down all bars and ask themselves if it be proper to patronize the street cars on Sunday, yet speculation runs high when it comes to an event like the $10,000 Massachusetts Stake.

N. W. Huhner, the millionaire turfman of New Haven, had over $50,000 in the box during the Lord Derby-Boralma-The Monk three cornered hat at historic Charter Oak Park last month, and compared with the plungers, who pay tribute to the runners all season, compares very favorably as a daring bettor.

It must be conceded that only a few can play a leading stake race for trotters or pacers—that is, in the auction pools—because the choices run into the four figures. The top liners when they sell all out in the early betting sell at as high as $2000 at times, and the small fry have to look on and await the fag end selling so to get on $50 or so.

So few long shots land their races that the books have not as yet become anything like as popular as at the running meetings. Popular opinion is against this method of betting a harness race. It leads to 'laying up' of heats by the drivers and the public wants a race at all times and no lengthening of the races.—N. Y. Telegraph.

Alma Mater Does Not Lead.

Superintendent F. W. Covey of Palo Alto Stock Farm writes the BREEDER & SPORTSMAN in regard to the article from the American Horse Breeder, published last week under the caption "Alma Mater Leads Them All," and furnishes the data to show that Green Mountain Maid is in the lead with the number of descendants that have won heats in 2:10 or better this year. The article in question gave Alma Mater 12 and Green Mountain Maid 10 descendants in this list. Mr. Covey moves to amend as follows:

There should be added to Alma Mater Wm. G. Layng's pacer, Sir Albert S. 2:08½ as the dam of his sire was by Alcantara. This would give Alma Mater 13.

There should be added to Green Mountain Maid, Eleata 2:08½, second dam by Electioneer; Janice 2:09, traces to Fallis, by Electioneer; Helen D. 2:09½ by Crafty, Crafty's dam by Electioneer; Cornelia Belle 2:10 dam by St. Bel, son of Electioneer, and Sir Albert S. 2:08½, by Diablo, son of Derhy, whose dam was by Electioneer, Terrace Queen (p) 2:09½; her sire Velpeau, was by Nephew, dam Odette by Electioneer. This would make Green Mountain Maid 16, and would, if I am correct, change the complexion of the list.

I believe all records (except Janice's) better than 2:10, were made before publication of "American Breeder's" article. Ages of broodmares though foaled this same year do not always show the proper standpoint to judge from, for instance Beautiful Bells and Alma Mater were foaled in 1872. Bells did not have a horse colt until 1882. Alma Mater had Alcantara in 1876. Green Mountain Maid foaled Electioneer in 1868. Up to 1877 he had but few foals, and as all the 2:10 performers, that trace to the great Green Mountain Maid in 1901, all trace to Electioneer, his showing as a single sire is very remarkable.

The good three-year-old colt Terminus is paralyzed, as a result of an injury to one of his legs, and it is thought it will be necessary to destroy him.

W. O. Palmer and associates have leased from J. J. Douglass the trotting track at Louisville, Ky., and a thirteen days' running meeting will begin there on November 2d.

On a hot day drink Jackson's Napa Soda lemonades and be refreshed.

Peter Stirling, the Futurity Winner.

"Perhaps I should have made the statement before, and not after the race, but I journeyed to Lexington expecting to see Peter Stirling win the Kentucky Futurity," writes Volunteer in the Horse Review.

"I had never even so much as seen the son of Baronmore and Medio, but J. B. Chandler, his trainer, had 'talked him over' with me a couple of weeks before, with such candor that, studying the 'form' of the event, especially after his race at Evansville, I felt positive that he would be the winner, or, at least, the one that the winner must beat.

"Besides what 'Chan' told me, I was influenced by what I knew about his relatives. His half-brother and sister, Black Robert 2:13½ and Marble 2:14, were both familiar to me. His sire, Baronmore 2:14½, I had also known well—well enough to be sure that he was a better horse than either King Clay, the sire of Marble, or McRoberts, the sire of Black Robert.

"Baronmore was, in fact, one of the fastest three and four year olds that I ever saw. His speed was extreme and his courage equal. And if Peter Stirling had the speed of either Marble or Black Robert and the inheritance that, by right, his sire should have bequeathed him, there was every reason to believe Chandler when he said that he was the greatest trotter he ever in his long and successful career as a reinsman sat behind.

"Chandler says Peter was a hard colt to train, and that since he was a yearling he has had a trying time with him until this spring, when in May he began to act and perform satisfactorily. From the time he was broken when a yearling he showed, at intervals, such inclination and ability to trot fast, that 'Chan' felt in duty bound to train him.

"The colt lost his early inclination to go on the trot, however, the spring when two years old, and for a time was so willful and notional he would do nothing but run or work on a canter. Then came a serious time with his feet. He got sore and was turned out during last summer while the stable was campaigning, and new feet, as Chan put it, were grown on him at the farm.

"When he took him up last fall he had forgotten his old tricks, and for quite a while gave so much promise as a runner that he had most concluded to make a prompter out of him. He finally squared away at a trot just in time to save his mane and tail.

"Chandler further relates that just about the time he was experiencing his severest trials with Peter some one wisely told him that Geers went through the same trial with nearly all the Mambrino Kings that ever amounted to anything, that is, the run and canter period, and this, he said, was real encouraging to him, since his grandam is by Mambrino King.

"If this were not known to be a matter of absolute verity it would sound like a fiction in the light of his performances this season, and especially his Futurity race. His manners are simply perfection. Apparently he knows nothing but trot now. Just once during the race did he leave his stride. That was during the scoring for the third heat, and in next to the final trial, when he jumped off his feet just as he was turning sharply, and cantered to the wire as a consequence. This was taken as a sign that he was tired by some wise men who had bet their money against him and were looking and hoping vainly for his collapse.

"Peter Stirling's endurance is not the least remarkable of his traits. As a matter of curiosity I took the pains to visit him in his stall after that record-breaking second heat in 2:11½, with its phenomenal second quarter at a 2:03 gait, and I found him fresh as the morning. His head was aloft, his ears pricked eagerly, he was nipping at his grooms and lashing out with his heels and stood firmly on his limbs. After the third heat I again looked him over, and there was still not a sign of distress of any sort apparent.

"Stirling is a rich chestnut, with four white feet and ankles and a strip. In conformation he is slim, rakish and quite after the thoroughbred pattern—in fact, he reminded me of the great handicap horse Ramapo, the Suburban winner of '94. He is 'quality all over', with a long neck and a beautiful, bloodlike head that bespeaks his thorough gameness at once. In action he is trappy gaited going slow, but when fully extended has a grand reaching stride that is very deceptive as to the rate of speed at which he is traveling.

"As a matter of record I may say that the fastest mile he had ever shown before he was sent to Kentucky for the race was 2:14½, over the Milwaukee track; he had been a half in 1:03½ and a quarter in 3¼ seconds. The Friday before the race at Lexington, 'Chan' popped him the question, and he trotted a mile in 2:12½, finishing strong. One of those who saw him do this was Joe Rea, and as a result he won handsomely over his victory.

"Peter Stirling is rigged to race in ordinary harness, with side check and open bridle. He wears one-ounce shoes and three-ounce toe weights, and shin and ankle and heel boots forward, and three-ounce shoes and shin, ankle and speedy cut boots and scalpers behind.

"It is a peculiar fact that Trainer Ed Benyon, who behind Walnut Hall, gave Peter Stirling such a great race for the Futurity, trained Peter's sire, Baronmore, when he was a two year old. Mr. D. C. Palmeter, of Chicago, the owner and breeder of Peter, bought Baronmore that season, and Peter is one of the first crop of colts that he bred from him.

"About the time that he bought Baronmore Mr. Palmeter also bought the bay mare Marble, by King Clay-Medio by Cooper Medium. She then had a record near the 2:20 notch, but possessed two-minute speed. A few seasons later he bought her dam Medio of the estate of her owner, deceased. With her he got her then yearling colt, Black Robert (4) 2:13½, still owned by him, and her weanling, by the same sire, McRoberts.

"Marble was Medio's first foal, and between her and Black Robert she produced two foals by Lexington, son of Mambrino King. Peter Stirling was her first foal at Riverside Park, and she has since produced three others, one by Don Wilkes 2:24½ and two, brother and sister of the Futurity winner, by Baronmore.

Memphis Meeting a Success.

Reports from Memphis, where the last big harness race meeting of the year was held last week, are to the effect that it was a complete success. The new track is one of the best and fastest in the country as the records of the meeting show. During the week the pacer Little Boy reduced his record to 2:01½ to wagon, driven by his owner, Mr. C. K. Billings, and the hopped pacer Alert took the world's champion gelding record of 2:00½ in the record heat of a race. While The Abbot failed to lower his mark he trotted a mile in 2:04 flat within three-fourths of a second of his record. Janice, the California mare, won the first race under Secretary Murray Howe's Memphis plan, and now holds the world's record of 2:24½ for a heat at a mile and an eighth.

The purse was for $3000, and by winning the first heat of one mile Janice won $612. By winning the second heat of one mile and an eighth, she won $828, making her total winnings $1440. Lita W., won the third heat of a half mile, which gave her $360, and she was second in the first heat, which gave her $306, a total of $666 for her. Waubun was second in the second heat, winning $414, second again in the third heat, winning $180, and third in the first heat, winning $102, a total of $696 for him. Charley Mac was third in the third heat, and won $60, while Miss Whitney was third in the second heat, and won $138. There were no heats laid up in the race, and to the one who did not witness it, the method seems to have been successful.

Secretary Murray Howe is to be congratulated upon the success of the first meeting under his management and has given evidence of what a real live manager can accomplish. The summaries of the meeting are as follows:

Doings in Dogdom.

An opportunity to secure a rattling good Bull Terrier is noted in our kennel advertisement column this week.

Woodlawn Kennels' Fox Terrier bitch Eclipse Blanche is due in a few days to whelp to Norfolk Trueman.

Leon Greenebaum has donated a handsome silver cup as a special for the best Boston Terrier dog at the Oakland show.

Premium lists of the Oakland show were mailed this week. Copies can be secured at the office of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. The list of specials will appear in the catalogue.

Mr. John G. Kent, President of the Canadian Kennel Club and proprietor of the Terra Cotta Kennels, Toronto, Can., will shortly visit the Coast with the purpose in view of purchasing a string of Greyhounds.

The Stockton bench show rumor was only of an effervescent nature we find. The formation of a kennel club in that city is about as remote a possibility as can be imagined. Either San Jose of Sacramento will turn out a better show, particularly the first named city.

It is possible that Mrs. Bradley-Dyne of Sidney, B. C., will be invited to pass upon the Irish and Scotch Terrier class at some of our coming shows. Mrs. Bradley-Dyne is a prominent fancier up north. Her dogs have been seen at an Oakland show where they got their share of ribbons. Cardiff Warman is an Irish Terrier that will put any of our local dogs on their mettle.

Purcell J., a Dash Antonio dog belonging to Fred S. Johnson was recently lost from N. H. Hickman's kennels. The dog was found and Johnson notified, but meanwhile he again made his escape and has not since been found.

Silver Plate, S. H. Hughes' English Setter bitch was recovered last week after being lost for eighteen months. Plate was in whelp and in the custody of a new master who had purchased her for a $5 bill. The matter was amicably arranged between Doc and the custodian of the bitch.

P. D. Linville, who lost his Setter bitch Maggie F. last May has heard of his dog and is sanguine of recovering her.

Several years ago a now defunct weekly paper, which had a department devoted, unfortunately, to kennel affairs, was presided over by the Coast oracle of dogdom. The editorial sanctum was notorious for the "pipe dreams" exhaled every seven days by its presiding genius. When this handicapped journal was trundled to a deserved oblivion, a well-worn and over-worked collection of "hop pipes," which was a pestiferous portion of the contents of the editorial tool box of this kennel news joint, was put out of commission. These poppy seasoned pipes were not all lost, however, when the oracle had his wings clipped. Now and then one of the fragrant old guns is fired up and the "long draw" taken by one or the other of the oracle's disciples or an affinity and the fumes of the ancient pipe is shown to be still potent—the queer old pipe dreams are again disseminated through the atmosphere and the same mephitic odor is perceptible. An emulsion of asparagus tops and the re-lit ashes of the lethal pipes make an odd combination when you come to think of it.

The annual plains meeting of the Interstate Coursing Club will be held at Petaluma on November 12th, 13th and 14th. This was decided Tuesday afternoon at a joint meeting of the committees representing Petaluma and the club. The claims of Merced, Modesto and Fresno were also considered, but Petaluma won by a unanimous vote. The result was a pleasing one to the local leasmen, who have favored Petaluma throughout. The grounds selected for the coursing are within four miles of the city limits. At one end of the field of 300 acres is an elevated knoll, from which a magnificent and unobstructed view of the running can be had. The stake will undoubtedly reach 96 nominations, as all the big kennels have promised a large entry. The total value of the purse will approximate $1000, of which sum $500 has been subscribed by the people of Petaluma. The entrance fee has been fixed at $5, and the drawing will be held on Saturday evening, November 9th. As the meeting will be held in close proximity to San Francisco, it promises to be the most successful in the history of the club.

Don't feed a dog candy or sweets. It often produces fits.

Don't forget that flies annoy your dog as much as they do you.

Don't allow your dog to roam the streets because he has a license.

Don't allow stale water to go down the dog's throat while in confinement.

Sale of a Notable New York Kennel.

A total of $2360 was received at auction in the American Horse Exchange on the 24th inst. for thirty-two Pointers and Setters from W. Gould Brokaw's Fairview Kennels, Highpoint, N. C. On the list were the noted bench show winners Sir Walter and Shotaway, with a number of other dogs nearly as renowned on the show circuits. Neither of the two brought anything like his value, in the estimation of the ringside critics, yet in general the sale was regarded as far ahead of the usual auction sales of dogs in New York city, for as a rule the fanciers of fine dogs are not quick hiders at public sales. All the dogs had good reputations in the field, except two that had just been broken and were practically untried, and the support given to the auctioneer came from men who wanted dogs for the field rather than the bench shows.

Quite a notable gathering stood about the ring when W. D. Grand ordered in Prince Boy, for Sir Walter was sold fourth. In the throng were Robert Armstrong of the Cragston Kennels, Judge Henry A. Gildersleeve, A. T. Sullivan, Charles Guthrie of Pittsburg, Phil Daly, Jr., E. O. Schuyler, Louis A. Thebaud, J. J. Lynn of Port Huron, Mich., G. Muss Arnolt, Tbos. Wood, Dr. E. M. Myers, S. L. Pettit, Archy Thompson, Dr. Barker, H. B. Gilbert and Dr. H. Clay Glover.

The summary of the sale and purchasers follows:

It was denied at Irvington last week that Frank J. Gould had any intention of selling out his high-stepping show horses or his kennel of St. Bernards.

Like all good things, Jackson's Napa Soda has a dozen counterfeits. Watch out!

Hints to Beginners.

[By Clipperton.]

One of the most important things to be attended to if dogs are to be kept in proper health is the provision of variety in their food. Some people seem to think that it does not matter how small an assortment of food is given, so long as the dog has plenty. Dogs must have variety both in meat and in cereals and in vegetables. If only one dog be kept, there should be sufficient variety for him in the scraps from his master's table, but if it is a question of providing for a kennel of dogs, then the best plan is to have a feeding list made out and hung up for regular sequence.

A great deal of bread is used by fanciers for feeding their dogs upon. As a dog food brown bread is much to be preferred to white. In the brown or whole meal bread you get constituents of frame and muscle-producing nature which are entirely omitted in the white. (Of course, by "brown" bread we mean the whole meal—that is to say, the grain of wheat ground up in its entirety without the removal of any part whatever.) Then there is another virtue in brown bread. The "shelly" part which you see in it acts as a natural aperient in two ways—first, by setting up a sort of what one might almost term irritation of the bowels; and, secondly, by the other mechanical attribute of providing extra waste material, which thus, by a forcing forward process, causes the bowels to act more frequently than would be the case if only white bread were used.

Bones are necessary for the good health of a dog. The teeth are kept bright and clean, the digestion is aided thereby, and they afford a dog the means to profitably while away an hour and keep out of mischief. But like a nip of liquor, they should come after the meal and not before. In a mixed dish of meat and bones most dogs will pick out the smaller bones first, and if hungry the chances are they will bolt them. This may lead to trouble—either choking or to a stoppage in the intestines. Therefore it is best to separate the bones from the feed and give them after the appetite has been appeased. If a dog has swallowed a small bone, a chicken splinter, for instance, and shows signs of trouble, it is a good plan to give a bolus of mashed potatoes or soft crumb bread. This will generally aid the passage of the bone.

In the matter of keeping dogs' coats in proper condition, more good can be done by regular attention than by spasmodic onslaught of treatment just before showing. All dogs, more especially the long-haired varieties, need to be systematically groomed with a suitable brush. No rule can be laid down to apply to every breed. In fact, each breed possesses peculiarities of its own, which are understood only by the initiated and their pupils; but, generally speaking, the short wire-haired breeds can be washed, which goes a long way—if proper soap be used—toward keeping the coat right. On the other hand, the long-haired breeds cannot be washed—at least, very seldom; and so it is necessary to rely upon careful and regular grooming, to keep their coats in a proper form and their skins free from vermin and disease.

Do you keep a dog? You own him, and he follows you around, but do you really keep him? If you keep him, it implies that you bestow a little thought on him now and then. A good many people own dogs that they do not keep. They feed them (if they happen to be around at meal times) when it is no trouble to do it. What would become of your children if you owned them but didn't keep them? The general appearance of a dog is not only an index to his keeping, but a sure index of the man who owns him. When you see a dog that looks clean, healthy and sprightly, and looks you straight in the face, you may depend upon it he is owned by a man that keeps him, feeds him and speaks kindly to him. Some dogs are like some men. As you pass them on the street or roadside they look down at the ground till you've passed them, then cast an upward glance at you as if to say, "Now he thinks he is somebody." Kind words to a dog will not only make him love and respect you, but they will make him have more respect for himself. If your dog gets sick, don't tell him to go off to the meadow and eat grass and cure himself, but give to him the same careful attention that you would any valuable high bred animal.

Some Facts About Distemper.

[By Dr. Cecil French.]

A great deal has been and still is written about distemper and its treatment in the various dog books and journals. The most of it can be aptly and curtly described as "a diarrhoea of words and a constipation of thoughts." More particularly does this apply to the commonly advocated methods of treatment, for it is only within recent years that the subject has been handled with an intelligent understanding of the real nature of the malady by a few earnest seekers after the truth.

There is no doubt that many excellent preparations can be found on the market which are specially adapted for the benefit of some of the disorders to which the dog is heir, but the much vaunted "guaranteed to cure if given in time" mixtures for distemper are worthless nostrums, whose only benefit is to enrich the bank account of the vender. Many are deluded into a belief of their efficacy by high sounding affirmations of "long conducted experiments and researches into canine pathology, culminating in such-and-such discoveries." [While admitting the truth of Dr. French's criticisms in many respects, we will take the liberty of placing Dr. Glover's remedies in the list of exceptions.—ED.]

These statements are invariably found in the booklets which accompany and are apparently indispensable to a successful sale of the various makes of remedies for dogs. They then proceed to enumerate a long list of "causes," among them being "ill-ventilated kennels, poor food, neglect, etc.," and then almost in the same breath we are told that the common cur is rarely dangerously troubled with this disease.

Now, we all know that if any dog is exposed to the above "causes," it is the common cur, and if any dog has the advantage of good feeding and careful kenneling it is the pet and brood animal. I doubt very much if our dogs are less susceptible than their more aristocratic fellows. I have seen many fatal terminations among the former and I consider it tolerably certain that the reason apparent immunity is ascribed to them is because the departure of their valueless lives is unnoticed and unchronicled, and hence it has come to be thought that they do not die from the ravages of distemper. The truth is, that all these misconceptions of the origin of distemper may be unreservedly banished from consideration. There is only one cause of distemper, and that is a microbic agent of a contagious nature. The latter is also infectious in as far as the disease can be acquired by contagion, transmitted through indirect channels. For instance a cat, which animal is susceptible to the malady, may climb a fence into a yard, leave some of the contagium-holding discharge from the eyes and nostrils on the ground and escape, all unnoticed. A dog shortly visits the spot, comes in contact with the matter lying there and develops the disease, to the wonderment of his master, who is positive he has not even seen another dog for days past.

Any and all dogs, under whatsoever condition they may be in existence, are liable to contract the disorder, and their recovery or death will depend on certain physiological provisions of nature, the character of which it will be my endeavor to explain in the following lines:

Certain of the white cells or corpuscles of the blood and other organs of the body (little microscopic bodies possessed of independent life and action, and technically known as leucocytes), are capable under certain conditions of performing very important defensive functions for the animal body. In short, they may be regarded as a vast protective army, ever alert to rush to the defense of the common good at the first alarm of an invading enemy. Everyone is familiar with the appearance of the increased flow of blood to an inflamed area. Inflammations are generally regarded by the laity as something pernicious. On the contrary, there is nothing deleterious in the inflammatory process itself. Rather it is a beneficent provision of nature. It means that innumerable little warriors, upon whose success our very lives depend, are arraying themselves to give battle to the foe. The efficiency of this defense depends altogether on the respective potentialities of the corpuscles and the as-ailing bacteria. Should the corpuscles possess the greater power, they will repel and destroy the germs and the poisonous secretions of the latter, and vice versa. This they accomplish through excretions of, or dissolution into, certain fluid products (antitoxins). Strangely enough, these cells may at first be repelled from and eventually become accustomed to, and finally overcome the invaders, and furthermore, this acquired function may be retained and transmitted to their descendants.

On this adaptability to circumstances depends the acquisition of the condition we call "immunity."

An animal that is immune to a certain disease, to which its species is susceptible, may become so by suffering an attack of virulent germs of that disease, in which the leucocytes have possessed the greater power and come off victorious and so acquired the function of defense that they are inpregnable to subsequent attacks for longer or shorter periods. Such a manner is usually accidental and accompanied by fever and prostration of the vital forces, from which many may fail to recover. Or he may be submitted to inoculation with an attenuated or weakened virus which is incapable of producing fatal effects, and thus enables his blood cells to quickly and easily learn, as it were, how to combat subsequent accidental inoculations of virulent germs of that disease.

Many demonstrations of the supremacy of the corpuscles over some bacteria have been made by different observers, and as an example of probable naturally acquired immunity may be mentioned the rat. This animal is insusceptible to typhoid, and it has been found that its blood serum is strongly germicidal to the typhoid microbe. Since the favorite haunts of these rodents are the sewers, where typhoid germs abound, it has been concluded that they have acquired their immunity in the past by a process of "survival of the fittest," and that the immunity has been and is transmitted to their descendants.

Another instance is that of the frog, which is not susceptible to the anthrax bacillus. If a drop of blood from this animal, into which some living anthrax bacilli have been introduced, be placed under a high-power microscope, under proper favorable conditions for observation, the following phenomena may be witnessed: A white cell (or leucocyte) in the body of which can be seen little granules, approaches a microbe. While yet some little distance off the granules disappear and the microbe commences to curl up. The leucocyte next spreads itself over the surface of the microbe, and two or three others may come up to assist in the struggle. The microbe soon dies and the leucocytes devour it. The disappearance of the granules and the curling up of the microbe before it comes in contact with the leucocytes must have some import. The only reasonable conclusion to arrive at is that the granules represent the elements of an excretion which can wither the encroaching enemy and render harmless the toxins or poisons produced by it. This forms the basis of the anti-toxin theory.

For the production of the anti-toxin used to combat diphtheria the horse is used as a preparatory medium, he being a large animal and his blood capable of generating a considerable amount of the desired matter. Diphtheria germs are grown in beef tea. This is then filtered to separate the germs from the poisons they have secreted.

The Standard of the Great Dane.

About two years ago the Great Dane as well as a number of standards for other breeds was published in the columns of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. Several inquiries received recently from fanciers prompts us to give this week the standard of type as adopted by the Great Dane Club of North America:

General Appearance—The Great Dane (Deutsche dogge) combines in his whole appearance—size, strength and refinement, as hardly any other breed. He has not the heavy and clumsy look of the Mastiff, nor lightness of the Greyhound, but holds about the middle relation between these extremes. Immense size, with strong, albeit elegant conformation, high-stepping and proud bearing; head and neck big, stern, when quiet, banging down; when excited, straight or only slightly raised above the back.

Head—Rather long, more high and pressed in on sides than broad, and flat appearing; seen from the side shows decided stop; line of forehead and nose must be parallel with each other; viewed from the front the forehead should not appear much broader than the strong, developed muzzle; cheeks very little developed. The head should from all sides appear squarish and clean in all its lines, nose large, bridge straight or only slightly arched, lips blunt, forming a right angle with line of head and with medium yet distinct flews, jaws even; eyes medium large, round and with sharp expression, brows well developed; ears high set on, moderately wide between and standing erect, having a pointed crop.

Neck and Shoulders—Neck long, strong and slightly arched, with well defined line where connecting with head; from shoulder to head gradually growing finer, no dewlap; shoulders long and sloping.

Chest—Moderately broad, ribs fairly sprung, reaching far back, deep in front, should go almost down to elbow joint.

Body—Back moderately long, loin slightly arched, croup short, slightly dropping and running in fine lines to stern; seen from above, the broad back connects well with the fairly sprung ribs; thighs should be strongly developed and hams well muscled up. Under line of body a graceful curve, well tucked up in flank.

Stern—Medium length, reaching just below the hock, strong at root; end well tapered, but should never, even under excitement, be carried high over the back or curled.

Forelegs—Elbow well let down, at right angles almost to shoulder blades and neither turned in nor out; forearm well muscled, the whole leg strong, and seen in front appears, on account of muscle development, slightly bent; seen from the side, perfectly straight from elbow to pastern.

Hind Quarters—Long, well muscled and well let down, fairly bent; seen from behind, stifle must appear entirely straight, neither in nor out.

Feet—Catfoot, neither turned in nor out, well arched and closed toes, nails strong and curved, dew claws not desired.

Coat—Short, dense and smooth, slightly longer on under side of stern.

Color—A. Brindle, body color from the lightest fawn to the richest golden tan, always with black or at least dark stripes. B. Whole-colored, fawn or gray in the different shades, either entirely one color or darker shadings of the same on muzzle, eyebrows and back; also black and all white. The nose in brindle or whole-colored dogs (except all whites) always black. Eyes and toe nails dark. White markings not desirable. C. Spotted (Harlequin), body color white, with irregularly formed, but regularly distributed spots of black or sometimes gray; other colors except markings as the above, are faulty. Harlequins, or all white dogs, have sometimes wall-eyes, flesh-colored or spotted rose and white nails, which are permissible in these colors.

Size—The height of dogs should not be under 30 inches; hitches, 28 inches or more.

Don'ts For Dog Owners.

Don't chain your dog.
Don't feed your dog small bones.
Don't let your dog suffer with fleas.
Don't kick your dog if you wish him to obey you.
Don't give raw milk to puppies; always boil or scald it.

Don't buy a dog unless you know what his breeding is.

Don't fail to have a regular time for exercising, feeding and caring for your dog.

Don't think because a dog is cheap that he is a good one. Silk is not sold for the price of calico.

Don't fail to see that your dog has sufficient bedding to keep himself warm and that it is clean.

Don't allow your dog to bark and howl at night. He can be broken of the habit easily and quickly.

Don't buy a dog from a huckster. Always be sure you do business with a good, reliable breeder.

Don't fail to give your dog a bath, but he sure his coat is thoroughly dried before exposing him to the cold air.

Don't forget that the law does not recognize such a thing as a "lost dog," and you may claim your own dog wherever and whenever you may find it. The late possession of it has no legal claim upon you for anything.

Don't overlook the fact that if you list your dog on the personal property schedule and pay taxes on him, you need not pay a yearly license.

Don't believe that the poundman has a right to seize your dog, whether you have a license or not.

Don't overlook your common law right that the proper method of making you pay a dog license is by civil suit and not by brutal capture.

Don't you know that a police magistrate has no authority to order your dog killed.

Don't think that the poundmaster can sell legally your unredeemed dog and transfer title to the purchaser.

GUN.

County Game Laws in Force.

The present State Game and Fish Laws are in force and unchanged in the following counties:

Alameda.	Monterey.	Solano.
Colusa.	Santa Cruz.	San Joaquin.
Contra Costa.	San Benito.	Sonoma.
Merced.

The following counties have adopted ordinances in regard to fish and game, and which are now in force as follows:

Fresno—Quail, Nov. 1 to Feb. 1.	Quail, Oct. 15 to Jan. 15.
Marin—Male deer, Aug. 1 to Sept. 15.	Shooting on county roads or in cemeteries prohibited. The use of "pump" gun, repeating shotgun or any kind of magazine shotgun for hunting in the county is prohibited.
Monterey—Sea gulls and blue cranes, killing of prohibited. Use of guns of larger caliber than 10-gauge prohibited.
Santa Clara—Quail, Oct. 8 to Feb. 1.
San Mateo—Quail, Nov. 1 to Dec. 1. Rall, Oct. 15 to Nov. 15.	Shooting from boats at high tide prohibited.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Among the clearances at the Chicago custom house recently was one for four live beavers. They were consigned to Governor Van Sant of Minneapolis, from the minister of crown lands of the province of Ontario, Canada, and were sent from Depot Harbor, Ontario. They will be placed in Itasca park, the state preserve, at the head waters of the Mississippi river, and are expected to form the nucleus of a colony.

The shipment of these beavers through Chicago recalls the fact that, like the buffalo, the beaver in its wild state is now almost extinct in the United States. Once it was abundant and widespread. In the Maine and Adirondack wildernesses, in the Michigan peninsula, in the head waters of the Mississippi, in the mountainous portions of Virginia, Pennsylvania and even Mississippi, and in the forest country between the Mississippi and Puget Sound, its kind was once almost as numerous as that of the fox squirrel. In fact, it was recorded that during the early part of the last century as many as 200,000 beaver skins were shipped each year from America to European countries.

Yet to-day it is doubtful if the beaver can be found wild anywhere within the borders of the United States. It has gone entirely from its favorite haunts in the Adirondacks, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan streams, where once the beaver's work changed the face of the landscape, know it no more. Perhaps in the deepest wilds of Wyoming or Oregon there may still be found a beaver dam here and there and a few of the intelligent little animals that built it. But the beaver as an American animal is practically extinct.

Like the buffalo, the beaver was once intimately associated with the life and development of this country. Its thrifty habits and remarkable home life, its wonderful dams, canals, locks, houses and other engineering works showing an intelligence and skill almost human, made it prominent in the minds of the pioneers of the land and an object of superstition to the Indians. The names of Beaver Falls, Beaver River, Beaver Dam and Beaver Lake show how strong was the influence exerted by the beaver on the pioneers of the northern States.

For this reason the passing of the beaver is a national loss. But it is unavoidable in the progress of civilization.

In the State of Maine game protection and the preservation of "a valuable food supply of the people" has been legislatively worked down to a science. The expenditure of $3,000,000 per annum directly and indirectly by sportsmen for the benefit of the thrifty citizens of that State has been quoted by our leading apostle of game protection as a precedent in arguments given, which advocated for this State a comparatively similar governing condition for fish and game. The game has been boomed back there in a commercial spirit for all that it was worth. The fact that there are annual licenses for 1800 guides is significant. The Maine system of game protection and all that it implies, according to the following from a Boston exchange, seems to point to a high tariff in human lives that is inadequate to the returns:

"Five men have already been killed and three severely wounded as the result of the careless manipulation of firearms in the Maine woods since the season opened this year.

As only nineteen days of the season have passed, if we multiply the dead and wounded by the number of days yet remaining of the game season and divide by nineteen it will leave quite a respectable company.

All the dead and wounded thus far have been mistaken for deer, bear or other game, unless we surmise that some private local grudges have been settled in this way.

At the last session of the Legislature a law was passed providing for the punishment of persons who through careless handling of firearms should shoot and kill or injure another. The punishment provided is a fine of $1000 or 10 years' imprisonment. But the law does not seem to work, and only one person has been arrested under it.

The only law conceivable to stop these accidents would seem to be to shut off the season and invite hunters to stay at home."

Antoine St. Louis and Frank Glenu, of Willows, recently were goose hunting and after making a careful approach to a flock of geese on a sandbar in the Sacramento river near Jacinto, fired the four barrels of their 10 bores at once and brought down forty geese—this sounds rather incredible, but the story is vouched for as true.

California favorite hot weather drink—Jackson's Napa Soda.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

We note with much regret a painful accident whereby Fish Commissioner W. E. Gerber of Sacramento was accidentally shot while duck hunting at the Teal Club preserve this week. Happily the case was not a serious one and the gentleman is now out of danger, so it was reported from the Lane Hospital on Wednesday evening.

Clarence Berry, the wealthy Klondike mine owner who is interested in San Joaquin county real estate, arrived in Stockton from San Francisco Friday last, accompanied by his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Keller. Mr. Berry brought along with him an automobile, operated by steam, gasoline being the fuel used in generating the power. It is a very handsome machine and more costly than the average "auto." He has had it fitted up with special reference to making hunting trips, and the party came prepared for quail and duck shooting. A machinist employed at the works where the machine was purchased, accompanies the party for the purpose of seeing that the automobile behaves properly. After an hour's stay, they left for Bakersfield, intending to get whatever shooting there might happen to be on the way. After arriving at Bakersfield, they will make hunting excursions in that vicinity.

The rains scattered the ducks temporarily, the birds going south from the marshes for a few days. From present indications the majority of them seem to have come back again. The homebred birds have been joined by quite a number of canvasbacks, which are fairly plentiful on the bays; a few other migratory ducks are also in evidence. On Thursday, one commission merchant disposed of fifty sacks of ducks, a total of 2500 birds. The present gamelaw, over which such a grand hurrah was made, and which, according to the apostles of game protection, was to be such an effective agent in game protection, is of no effect whatever when it comes to a prohibition of the sale of game.

Despite the decision of Judge Ross in the "pump gun" case, the Marin county authorities have inserted in the game ordinance now in force, a clause prohibiting the use of this unsportsmanly weapon for game slaughter. The decision in the Marshall case has been adversely criticised by eminent Eastern jurists, who have, by reason of the particular ruling in the Marshall habeas corpus case quoted many authorities showing the fallacy of the decision given in the matter. The "pump gun" as an engine of destruction has been the subject of prohibitive legislation in the state of Minnesota, where, at the last session of the state legislature, a bill was introduced to stop the use of repeating shotguns in that State, where prairie chickens and other feathered game were threatened with a sure and early destruction by the indiscriminate use of guns, which in their effect on game was as deadly as a trap or any other wholesale and unsportsmanlike means of game depletion.

A suit against the Board of Fish Commissioners was instituted this week. This will illustrate another phase of our queer game law, whose only virtue (?) is in the benefit it affords a proselyting deputy, who in direct opposition to the letter of the law and without a shadow of authority for the particular expenditure on the part of the Board of Fish Commissioners, is at an expense of at least $150 per month to the State.

The complaint in the suit is a prayer for an injunction to restrain the Commission or parties acting in behalf of the Commission from seizing quail and duck in the possession of the plaintiff, L. Duprat, or in the possession of other parties without due process of law. It is claimed that the game law of March 29, 1901, does not provide that the Fish and Game Commission be empowered with police authority or the right to trespass upon private property in its search for game held illegally, or provide for the confiscation of quail or duck.

The plaintiff alleges that the officers of the Fish and Game Commission seized his lawful property, confiscated it and otherwise injured the plaintiff, all without due process of law. It is claimed that such proceedings were illegal and void and contrary to the Constitution of the United States and of the State of California.

Duprat says that he is acting on behalf of himself and many others having a common interest in the suit. He proposes to test the game law of last March, which has been the cause of considerable trouble between Fish and Game Commissioners and parties holding game, especially quail and duck.

The defendants named in the suit are the Fish and Game Commissioners, H. W. Koller, W. W. Van Aldale and W. E. Gerber, as members constituting said commission, and Charles A. Vogelsang as chief deputy commissioner and L. N. Kercheval as deputy commissioner.

The American Field, as usual when paragraphing local news from the daily papers is decidedly wrong in depicting the incidents of the seizure of Mr. Herman Oelrichs' bag of ducks. It is true, the seizure of ducks was made on a technicality, but Mr. Oelrichs never had anything whatever to do with the passage of the present game law. In fact 90% of the members of the shooting clubs denounce the law as it stands at present. Our law does not direct that seized game or fish be turned over to any charitable institution whatever. This a custom merely, followed out by the the Fish Commission in the disposition of seized material. Mr. Oelrichs is an ardent and skillful sportsman, in fact has hunted and fished since he was a mere youth and has always been an observer and upholder of the game laws. He seems to have unfortunately in this affair, been as much under the ban of careless reporters as he has been in other matters, wherein his motives or actions have been misconstrued or distorted by irresponsible or designing scribes.

This incident is one of many we have noticed from time to time in which the Eastern sportsmen's journals have shown such an eagerness to get the news early, that they have lost sight of the main feature of the announcement—the truth.

ROD.

A correspondent writes for advice as to where he can go for a fortnight's camping and find good fishing and boating next summer, he far enough from hotels to be able to wear his old clothes comfortable, and yet be near enough civilization to get his mail with a reasonable degree of promptness, and also be able to obtain plenty of fresh vegetables and milk.

The Redding Free Press says there is a heavy run of salmon in the Sacramento river. Great schools of fish crowd the channel. They are bound from salt water to the spawning ground. They come to the surface incessantly in the evening. It would not require much scheming to land some fine fellows but for the fact that the season in which they may be caught is closed.

Net fishermen are making big hauls of salmon in the Eel river tide waters. The run this year is a good one. Fishermen along the river are jubilant this year and judging from all reports they have just cause to be elated. Those in a position to know say that salmon is more plentiful this season than at any time within the past fifteen years. This is believed to be due to the good results from the work of the hatchery on Price creek from which a large number of fish were hatched and liberated about four years ago. At any rate the run is phenomenally large and the prosperity of the fishermen for the present assured.

Anyone who has examined the catches of the average fisherman who spends his time holding down the sea wall or the string pieces of the city wharves must incline to the opinion that they own cats and are very fond of them, for if the majority of these men do not feed to their domestic felines the product of their day's fishing, then the final disposition of their catch must remain a mystery.

They certainly cannot take the fish home to stock salt water aquariums, as the contents of their baskets are as dead as the greenback issue before they reach home. They cannot eat them, as the three-inch shiver or the two and one-half inch rockcod does not contain very much meat after being cleaned; yet those men will sit there all day yanking in an occasional microscopic specimen of the finny tribe.

The effort to clear trout streams in Santa Clara county of suckers and pike, a movement desired by some fisherman who are lamentably ignorant of the utility of the sucker, at least, in a stream, is commented upon by W. R. Welch, Fish and Game Warden of Santa Cruz county. He writes: "I note the article in a weekly city paper regarding the use of dynamite to destroy the suckers and pike in the Coyote Creek. Permit me to say that complaint was made to me that the suckers were destroying the fish in the San Lorenzo river and I made as careful an investigation as I could and I am satisfied that such is an erroneous idea. Now if you will strictly enforce the law regarding steelhead you will have lots of trout. Don't allow a steelhead to be killed in any of your streams in any manner between November 1st and April 1st and you will see how fast your streams will pick up and how long the trout fishing will last. If you will put half of what it would cost to destroy the suckers in extra patrol, the trout will multiply and the suckers disappear, for in my opinion instead of the sucker eating the trout it is the other way, viz: the trout eat the sucker fry as well as all other small fry in the creek."

The sucker is the natural scavenger of the stream. This fish fills an important and absolutely necessary station in the economies of running water. The patient observer will note the work of the sucker in foraging the bottoms of brooks. Decayed vegetation and other impurities are taken up by the homely fish, assimilated and when vented again has lost all of its septic or polluting qualities. It may be possible that in its peregrinations over the bottom and gravel beds of streams, it will, like all other fish, get away with and feed upon the spawn of the trout or other fishes. The damage, however, in this respect is nil.

Modesto anglers are getting their bass tackle ready for the sport promised by the fact that plenty of fish are in the river and ready for the spoon or clam baited hook. That the striped bass fry planted in the Tuolumne river five or six years ago found favorable conditions and propagated amazingly, was demonstrated last Sunday, when seventy-three fine specimens, of an aggregate weight of perhaps 600 pounds' were taken from the river at one spot with a seine. Some of the fish weighed as high as twenty pounds, and one of the big ones wrestled Deputy Sheriff Poynter almost to a finish. It was one of a number that slipped out of the seine, and as it was a particularly fine specimen, Poynter grappled with it. First man and then fish was on top, and spectators say that if the fish had not been handicapped by shallow water Poynter would have been vanquished. The big catch was made at a point opposite the Adams ranch, about three miles up the river from Modesto.

The fall run of steelhead is on in the Coast streams. Three beautiful fish were received by John Butler on Friday. They were caught by John Gallagher in the Paper Mill. Reports from Point Reyes are indicative of good steelhead fishing in tidewater.

Angling for striped bass about the rocky shores of Angel Island and the Marin county shore from Point Bluff to California City has recently developed a new phase of the sport. Hitherto the fish have been sought principally in the shallow waters of the mud flats on the eastern shores of San Francisco or San Pablo bays and tributary waters; Petaluma creek and adjacent sloughs, for instance, had a good reputation for bass fishing possibilities. The new field for the efforts of the bass angler now, the clear, deep and swift currents of ocean water surging through the Raccoon straits, has now become the Mecca daily of the striped bass enthusiasts. These waters gave promise, several years ago, of being the scene of much sport in trolling for bass. It remained, for some unexplained reason, all this time an undeveloped piscatorial mine until the experts, "Al" Wilson, R. W. McFarland and O. W. Jackson went at the game in the proper manner and located a new fishing ground that promises to vie with any fishing resort on the Coast.

The reason that striped bass fishing has been looked upon indifferently by many salt water fishermen is the fact that most of those who have gone after the gamey fish have been unfamiliar with the details necessary for successfully hooking the fish, and also were not supplied with the proper tackle. The fishermen who have been successful recently have caught their fish by trolling for them. In trolling the boat is rowed at a speed of from two to three knots when going against the current; when drifting with the current it is only necessary to row to maintain proper control of the boat. A good rod and reel are absolutely necessary. The line, generally of twelve or fifteen strand cutty-hunk, should be out from 90 to 120 feet. At the end of the line a Wilson trolling spoon, No. 4 or 5 B, is attached on a swivel to a three or four foot leader. There is another swivel to which is attached a sinker which weighs half an ounce or more according to the current. The spoon must be allowed to sink down anywhere from ten to twenty feet, according to the depth of water near the shore, for the fish frequent the feeding places close to the rocky bluffs, it being a waste of time to try for them in mid-stream. Although, contrary to expectations, a fine ten pound fish was hooked by J. A. Pariser last Sunday in the middle of the channel. The line must be looked after from time to time. A short experience will enable the fisherman to determine whether his line is fouled with kelp or seaweed or whether he has hooked some of the small fry. The "blue cod," by the way, has a strong fancy for taking the trolling spoon. When bass make a strike they generally run a short distance. This is the time to give a quick, heavy jerk at the line to fasten him. A large bass will often fight for fifteen or twenty minutes. One should use a gaff to lift the fish into the boat when brought alongside.

Jackson's Napa Soda is sold in every city, town and hamlet in the State.

THE FARM.

The Care of Sheep.

A flock of sheep cannot be handled or fattened successfully without a close observance of their habits and peculiarities. There are a great many little things that enter into the attention and management by a successful shepherd that may seem trivial, yet they have much to do with the comfort, thrift and profit of the flock, says Prof. Curtis. The axiom that "The eye of the master fattens" is nowhere more applicable than in the sheepfold. The competent feeder acquires a trained eye, that detects at a glance any evidence of disorder that will be manifest if a single animal is off of feed or out of condition. To the unobserving or inexperienced feeder sheep all look alike, but when rightly studied no class of stock presents more marked individual peculiarities or so clearly manifests evidence of thrift or well-doing or the reverse. Attention to these little details, accompanied by regular habits and a quiet manner, constitute the keynote of successful sheep feeding. Nothing contributes more to good results than contentment and quiet surroundings. The feeder who disturbs the quiet and comfort of the flock every time he goes about it should quit the sheep business at once. Rough manners and harsh treatment absolutely disqualify any man for success in this work. The natural timidity and nervous temperament of the sheep necessitate gentle treatment. Their dainty habits about eating and drinking must also be indulged as fully as practicable. No animal naturally selects a wider variety of feed, particularly of rough forage and vegetation, viz., cleanliness and palatability. Never give a sheep any stale or undesirable feed, or expect it to eat any feed left over from a previous meal. The ration should be always wholesome and tempting to the appetite. The barn or stabling quarters should never be without fresh, pure atmosphere and an ample supply of dry bedding. Sheep rarely suffer from cold if kept dry and protected from direct drafts. The open air is better than a poorly kept shed or barn.

Here is a paragraph taken from the Tulare Register, which may be worth considerable money to dairymen:

John Estees has a crop of sugar cane that is calculated to make the human eyes stick out. It was put in with a drill the first of June and irrigated once. It has grown nearly as thick as hair on the back of a yellow dog and ten to sixteen feet high, and some of the stalks are as big as one's wrist. He had a curiosity to know how much of that sort of cow feed there was to the acre, and so cut up a square rod of the stuff and drove on to the scales and weighed it, deducting, of course the weight of the wagon. The load, green and just from the field, weighed 1180 pounds, for what grew on one square rod. As there are 160 rods to an acre the yield is at the rate of 94 2-5 tons per acre.

PRICE $15, F. O. B. SAN FRANCISCO.

"STEWART'S PATENT."

THE MOST PERFECT EVER MADE

A Revolution in Clipping Machine Construction.

INCOMPARABLY superior to anything previously manufactured at any price by any one. Surprisingly simple, strong and durable. No belts to slip, positive power. The teeth in large gear are cut out of solid metal (no cast) which must run easily and will wear forever. It has a rigid base, tubular upright, with a fine, strong crank handle, and unlike any other machine made it can be turned with either the left or the right hand. Each machine is furnished with the '99 Improved one-nut balance tension knife, which cannot get out of adjustment.

One of our customers writes us, after receiving the new machine: "Life is too short to fool away with my old belt machine. I can clip two horses now in the time it formerly took to clip one and I am not half as tired."

ASTHMA CURE FREE!

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent Cure in All Cases.

Sent Absolutely Free on Receipt of Postal.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

We want to send to every sufferer a trial treatment of Asthmalene, similar to the one that cured Mr. Wells. We'll send it by mail POSTPAID, ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE, to any sufferer who will write for it, even on a postal. Never mind, though you are despairing, however bad your case, Asthmalene will relieve and cure. The worse your case, the more glad we are to send it. Do not delay. Write at once, addressing DR. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO., 79 East 130th St., N.Y. City. Sold by all Druggists.

DISEASES OF THE HORSE AND HOW TO TREAT THEM

By Robert Chawner.

New Edition and Concise Manual of Special Pathology for use of Horsemen, Farmers, Stock Raisers and Students of the Agricultural Colleges. Fully illustrated. Bound in cloth. Size, 5½ x 7½ inches. Cloth.....$1.25

"It is an unpretending treatise free from technicalities, and well adapted for the use of farmers and stock raisers. The object of Dr. Chawner was to make a popular and reliable handbook in that department of veterinary science which treats of the horse and his diseases and in this object he has succeeded and supplied a practical want. There is no extraneous matter. Information is imparted with commendable brevity and in language plain and simple enough to be understood by all. The fallacies of the old school are rejected, and the treatment prescribed is that of modern practitioners."—Turf, Field and Farm.

By Hiram Woodruff.

Edited by Charles J. Foster. Including an Introductory Notice by George Wilkes and a Biographical Sketch by the Editor. With a steel portrait of the author and six engravings on wood of celebrated trotters. 12mo. Size, 5½ x 7½ inches. Cloth, extra...$1.25

"The author was one of the most noted horsemen of this country, and in the work before us has given to the public the best thoughts, founded on years of experience in the feeding, handling, breaking and training of colts with a view to securing their best performances. Besides treating of driving horses, it gives a condensed history of the best horses in this country, with a mention of their best performances. It is invaluable in its suggestions to horse trainers, and its rules laid down and suggestions given are as good as the day they were written."

TWO DAYS AT PLEASANTON.

A GREAT SUCCESS was the horse show and race program at Pleasanton on Friday and Saturday of last week, and the two or three thousand people who attended were most royally entertained. It was a sort of impromptu affair, gotten up after the circuit racing had ended, and without any regular organization, but the citizens of Pleasanton were behind it and they have never yet started out to do anything in the way of entertaining visitors but they have accomplished the desired result. They did it well this time and when the program was finished Saturday evening there were expressions of congratulations to the management heard on all sides. And these expressions were well deserved. Every promise made had been fulfilled and there was not a person to find fault or offer any adverse criticism. The races were good, the display of draught and road horses excellent, and the good natured hospitality unbounded. It was a great occasion for the "horse centre" and has started a new boom for the famous track that will bring many trainers, with their horses, who had intended locating elsewhere.

The only trouble experienced by the committee of arrangements was in providing sleeping accommodations for the hundreds of people who came from San Francisco and other points.

A. T. SCHWEER, Pres.

But with the help of the citizens, who generously threw open the doors of their residences, nearly all were provided for, although quite a number returned to their respective homes on the late trains Friday evening and came back again the following day. The hotels and restaurants were equal to the occasion and provided plenty to eat at reasonable prices. Not a resident of the town took advantage of the occasion to advance the price of meals or anything else, but all seemed imbued with the idea that the visitors were guests of the town and should be treated as such.

Among those who were especially active and energetic in arranging the meeting and carrying it to a successful conclusion were Messrs. L. A. Crellin, Geo. A. Davis, A. F. Schweer, Jos. H. Neal, Editor Adams and others, who spared neither effort nor time to make everything pleasant and agreeable for the horsemen and those who came to see the sport.

On Friday, the first day, at least two thousand people were at the track when the races began. The track was in excellent shape, and Superintendent James Sutherland came in for many compliments for its condition. Samuel Gamble acted as presiding judge and starter of the harness races and did his work well. He was ably assisted by Geo. Van Gordon and George Reed of San Jose, and none of their decisions were questioned. The well known trainer, W. R. Walsh of Pleasanton was chief tinner and was assisted by different parties from among those who carried split second chronographs.

Two harness races were down for decision on Friday, the 2:13 pace and the 2:30 trot. In the latter race records made at the Stockton and Concord races this year were not bars, so Lady Rowena and Trilby were eligible. The pace was won by that handsome and fast, though heretofore unlucky stallion, I Direct. He has recently become the property of Mr. Frank H. Hall of San Francisco and is being driven on the road and in his races by Henry Dunlap, who seems to thoroughly understand him and has won two races with him within a month. He beat Durfee Mac and Gaff Topsail as he pleased, though the drivers of those horses did their best to defeat him. I Direct broke going round the first turn in every heat, but on regaining his feet caught and outpaced his adversaries with ease.

The trot went to Lady Rowena in straight heats, she seeming to outclass her adversaries. In fact Leiginger stopped her to almost a walk at the finish of every heat to keep from giving her a faster record than necessary, being lengths in the lead.

The half mile and repeat running race furnished some extra sport as three of the horses made a false start while at the post for the second heat and ran nearly the entire distance before being pulled up.

On Saturday three thousand people were estimated to be present. In the morning at eleven o'clock the stock parade was held, the horses being formed in line and led from the track through the main street of the town and back again where they were judged by James R. of San Jose, John Slaven of Oakland and

William White of Danville who awarded the following prizes:

Best draught stallion—first prize, $10 and blue ribbon, to J. C. Mowry's stallion Rock from Irvington; second prize, $5 and blue ribbon, to A. Glass' stallion Romeo from San Ramon.

Best draught mare—$5 and blue ribbon, to A. Glass' mare Juliet from San Ramon; second prize, $2.50 and white ribbon, to E. Harlan's mare Bay Bess from San Ramon.

Best colt—blue ribbon, to Geo. A. Davis' colt X-Ray by Rey Direct 2:10 from Pleasanton.

Best driving team—blue ribbon, to Geo. A. Davis' chestnut team, Pleasanton.

Best road team—blue ribbon, to Sam Vandervoort's bay team from Centerville.

Best single buggy horse—blue ribbon, to bay gelding Examiner.

Best family of carriage horses—stallion and four colts, blue ribbon, to N. Dutcher's stallion Warren and family from Livermore.

Best family driving horses—blue ribbon, stallion and six colts, to Geo. A. Davis' stallion Rey Direct 2:10 and family of Pleasanton.

Blue ribbon was also given to four-in-hand Shetland pony team belonging to Geo. A. Davis of Pleasanton.

The display of draught and driving horses was very meritorious and surprised everyone by its proportions as but few prizes had been offered. It was worthy of a district fair where all classes are provided for and was ahead of many such that we have seen.

The races in the afternoon brought a crowd estimated at about 3000 people to the track. The improvised grand stand was crowded, there were people all over the grounds, the infield was filled with vehicles loaded with people, and the crowd overflowed onto the quarter stretch until Marshal Martin had the most difficult sort of a job to keep the track clear. The features of the day were the 2:15 trot, in which Alta Vela, the thirteen year old son of Electioneer, defeated Thomas R. 2:15, the four year old great grandson of the dead Palo Alto sire; the remarkable showing made by the sixteen year old Flying Jib; and the buggy horse race won by the seventeen year old mare Lottie Vernon, driven by her sixteen year old owner, Elwood Walter of Pleasanton.

The 2:15 trot opened the program. Four horses lined up for it—Alta Vela 2:15 by Electioneer, Thomas R. 2:15 by Iran Alto, Floradora 2:18½ by Sable Steinway and the fast roan gelding Dan W. by Hero. It was conceded by all that the race would be between Alta Vela and Thomas R. and the latter was favorite before the first heat. Judge Gamble sent them away to a splendid start and the duel was on. It was the closest kind of a race all the way and the race down the stretch brought cheers from the crowd that amounted to an ovation at the finish, where Alta Vela poked his nose in front and won by a short head in 2:13½. It was the best finish seen in a trotting race this year. The next heat was won by Alta Vela rather easily, Hooper letting his horse make his own gait in the stretch and looking back at Thomas R. as the latter strove in vain to get up. In the third heat Albertson brought Dan W. up with a great rush in the stretch and for a minute it looked as if he had Alta Vela beaten, but Hooper raised his whip, the old stallion responded nobly. Dan W. went to a break and the race was over.

The race for members of the Golden Gate Driving Club furnished a split heat contest, as Mack was not going just right when the first turn was rounded and Lieginger finished third with him. Sable Le Grande winning the heat. Mack got the next three, however, as he pleased.

When the race for buggy horses owned in Murray township was called there was a rush to get positions of vantage where the race could be seen. There were three starters. Elwood Walter, who seemed to be the favorite with the crowd, and was up behind the bay mare Lottie Vernon, is but sixteen years old, while the mare is eighteen. Mr. J. Chadbourne, one of Pleasanton's leading business men, and who has but one arm, drove the bay pacing mare Hattie C. and handled her well, while Ben Meshima, a prominent member of the Japanese colony of Pleasanton, drove a recent purchase, a buckskin colored gelding that he called Butterfly. This race certainly holds the record for its class. The boy proved himself a cool headed expert driver and won with his game old mare in straight heats, the best time 2:46½. Young Walter gave his old mare all her training for this race and has driven her quarters in 35 seconds and eighths in 17 seconds. He got such an ovation from his young school mates and friends at the close of the race that the cheers of the crowd were heard a mile distant.

During the afternoon those two grand looking sons of Direct, Bonnie Direct 2:05½ and Rey Direct 2:10 were exhibited on the track. The latter was led to a halter and not speeded, while the former was driven to a bike by Bert Webster his trainer. Both horses were much admired. Bonnie Direct was barefooted but was speeded a little.

The sensation of the day was the quarter paced by the old champion Flying Jib, holder of the world's record of 1:58½ for pacer with a running mate. Mr. George Davis, who had his hands full looking after details of the meeting sent the old fellow on the track hitched to a heavy bike road cart and driven by his groom. It was not intended to speed him, but simply to show to the crowd how well he bore his sixteen years. Several of the horsemen present called for Mr. Davis, however and persuaded him to get up and drive Flying Jib a quarter. He mounted the cart, and with the band playing and the people cheering started the son of Algonia on a jog to the three quarter pole where he called to him and let him step through the stretch. The Marshal, mounted on a saddle horse tried to keep him company. The old hero seemed to be filled with his old fire and with ears pricked and nostrils inflated fairly flew. Twenty watches caught the quarter in 30 seconds flat and several had it a shade faster. It was a performance worth going a long way to see.

Sam Gamble was very happy in making the announcements in presenting Flying Jib, Bonnie Direct and Rey Direct to the audience and gave much valuable information as to their breeding and best performances.

The entire racing program was a success, and reflected great credit on the racing committee, of which Mr. A. F. Schweer was President, Mr. Geo. A. Davis, Vice-President, and Mr. Joseph H. Neal, Secretary.

JOS. H. NEAL, Sec'y.

Mr. Neal, who was formerly secretary and manager for Monroe Salisbury during his famous campaigns on the Grand Circuit, is now City Clerk of Pleasanton and manages the affairs of the Pleasanton post office. His services were very valuable to the committee, as his experience made the management of the racing and the carrying out of the program have a very business like appearance, and every horseman present expressed himself as highly pleased with the manner in which everything passed off.

Two records were certainly made for the track, Flying Jib's quarter in 30 seconds being the fastest ever paced by a fifteen year old horse, and Elwood Walter being the first hoy of 16 to win a race with a mare older than himself.

A pleasing feature of the meeting was the Pleasanton band composed of young men of the town who furnished good music for the two days.

Mr. Fred Chase of San Francisco, conducted the auction pools and mutuals, but did not make a fortune as the crowd cared little for betting on the results. A few pools were sold on each event, but there was never more than twenty or thirty people in front of the pool stand at any time.

The Pleasanton people can congratulate themselves on having one of the best attended meetings held in the State this year and one of the most enjoyable ever given anywhere.

Successful Fair at Hollister.

The eleventh annual fair of the San Benito County Agricultural Association was the most successful ever given in the district. It began on Wednesday, October 23d, and lasted four days. Everything passed off pleasantly, and the horsemen who raced there are loud in their praises of the treatment accorded them. Every purse was paid from the stand as soon as the judges rendered their decision, and better racing has rarely been seen at any district fair in California. After all expenses were paid a surplus remained. Much of the success of the meeting is due to Robert I. Orr, President of the association, who devoted his outtime to its management. Mr. Orr was ably assisted by Secretary Shaw and the Directors. Director Zanetta acted as starting judge and was assisted in the stand by James Boyd and Dan McCloskey. The summaries of the races held are as follows:

October 23. Buggy horse race, purse $150.

Time—2:24½, 2:24½, 2:25.

The three-eighths' dash was a walk-over for old Lottie D. On account of the fake ride put up on Nora W. the judges decided that every bettor was entitled to a run for his money, and declared all bets off. Time, 0:39.

The five-eighths' dash was a horse race worth going miles to see. In a hot finish to the wire, Trainor's Bruce Jr. boxed out Gault's Santa Lucia, with Appleby's Ringmaster close up. Time, 1:03.

October 25. Trotting, 2:30 class, purse $200.
Sylvian by Electricity.....	(Higby)	1	1

Time—2:28, 2:28, 2:35, 2:34.

In the three quarter dash Santa Lucia won from Bruce Jr. and Ringmaster in 1:18½, but pools were declared off.

The half-mile dash was won hands down by Lottie D. Bill Young second. Time, 0:51½.

The saddle horse race, three-eighths dash, was a cakewalk for Higby's Red McCourt, McCloskey's Dumas second. Time, 0:38½.

October 26. Pacing, 2:30 class, purse $125.
Dietatus Medium by Dietatus.....	(Sanchez)	3	3
Diabla.....	(Dwain)	2	1

Jim Jeffries.....	(Ferguson)	d	s
Time—2:23½, 2:24½, 2:24½, 2:25½, 2:25½.

The special trot required four heats to decide the ownership of the purse. Wilson's Little One took the first, third and fourth. Hardin's Al Direct took the second. Best time, 2:41.

The special trot was won in three straight by Sylvian, driven by Col. Higby. Dwain's Walling second, Haney's Cyclone third, McNeil's Synder distanced.

The three eighths and repeat was won in straight heats by Bill Young ridden by Al Wilson, Minula second. Time, 0:37½ and 0:38.

The three-quarter dash was run in the dark, and was a cakewalk for the Santa Clara mare, Santa Lucia.

An Old "New Idea"---Iodine.

A foreign veterinarian treats those wounds of the horse which are slow to heal with tincture of iodine, and one of our most valued exchanges suspects that the idea is a brand new one. The writer has made use of iodine in indolent ulcers or slow-healing wounds for several years, and did not know that he was making use of a new treatment. He remembers seeing it used years ago in Illinois for the same purpose, and even at that time we did not presume upon supposing that the idea was a new one. There are many wounds that do not heal well during warm weather, and of these are the kind that are benefited by the use of iodine. To use this simple remedy, shave the surface about the sore, or ulcer, or wound, and be certain to remove all the hairs. Then paint the entire surface of the ulcer with iodine, night and morning, leaving the parts uncovered. Saddle and harness galls may be treated successfully in this manner. After a few applications a dry scab forms and granulation follows. Tincture of iodine is a valuable and necessary stable remedy. It is virtually the only effective ingredient found in many proprietary medicines guaranteed to cure spavin, ringbone, curb, splint and other "outs" of horses. Iodine is a strong absorbent and antiseptic, and it also causes hypernutrition. It is worth more to the owner of horses than all of the liniments and lotions ever invented or manufactured, says Columbus.

A New System of Betting.

Andy Welch has in view the introduction of a new system of betting on harness races, and he proposes introducing it next year. He claims that this new system will do away with much of the jobbery so often complained of in connection with the present system of heat betting. In explanation of his new system Mr. Welch said at Lexington to a representative of The Horseman:

"I will have a large board, with a sufficient number of squares to accommodate the names of all the horses starting in the race. Under the name of each horse will be a pad of numbers running from 0 to 500. This board will be set high up in the betting ring, and on the platform beneath it will stand a boy or man whose duty it will be to tear off a number under the name of the horse on which every ticket is sold. The tickets will be worth $5 each, and will be purchased at the window, much after the fashion of the old Paris mutuels. As soon as the gong rings announcing the start of the race there will be no more tickets sold, and the boy will leave the platform with the board indicating exactly what has been done on the race. Anybody can figure up the status of the pooling at a glance. For instance, Onward Silver, Dolly Bidwell, Dolly Dillon, Susie J. and Chain Shot start in a race; that's five horses. Well, say, when the gong rings the board shows the number of tickets sold as follows:

Onward Silver	Dolly Bidwell	Susie J
5	60	15
Dolly Dillon	Chain Shot

"See how easy it is to figure it up: Eighty-eight tickets sold at $5 each; total, $440. Now, say that Onward Silver wins the race. There are five tickets sold on him. That jackpot of $440 goes to the holders of the five tickets, less 5 per cent commission. Let's see. Five into $440 goes 88 times. That's $88 to each ticket, less 5 per cent—$4. That leaves each holder of a ticket on the winner $84 for his investment of $5. In the case that Chain Shot should win—there was no ticket sold on him. Well, the second horse would figure in the betting as the winner. Say the second horse was Dolly Bidwell. There were sixty tickets sold on her, so each holder of a ticket would get $7. Thus the public will make the odds, and if any fellow was of a mind to frame up a job he would have to fix every horse in the race, and that comes pretty near being an impossibility. Under this system the true odds can be more nearly received than in the auctions or in the books, which must depend on the auctions for their line."

The relative number of tickets sold will constitute the odds, and as the public will make the odds they will be more equitable than any bookmaker could or would make, and, instead of the proceeds of the losing tickets going to the bookmaker they would go to the backers of the winner, less the stated commission. Mr. Welch's system certainly looks plausible.

Matinee at Sacramento.

An afternoon of harness racing was held by the Sacramento Driving Club last Saturday, and a very large crowd was attracted to Agricultural Park.

The first race on the card brought out four entries—Pearl Sinclair, driven by F. E. Wright; Canny Scot, driven by Frank Ruhstaller, and owned by John Morrison; Jennie H., driven by A. M. McCollum, and Copper, driven by W. K. Cothrin. The race, a well contested one, was won by Jennie H., Canny Scot second and Pearl Sinclair third. Time, 2:53½.

The second race also had four entries—Toots, driven by Charles W. Paine; Zulone, driven by Frank Ruhstaller, and owned by Albert Elkus; Maud, driven by William Sayre, and Gladys H., driven by M. N. Winans. Toots came first, Maud second and Zulone third. Time, 2:32.

Baby Button, driven by Frank Wright; Elevator, driven by E. J. Weldon, and Captain Hackett, driven by John Batchelor, were the starters in the next event. Elevator won, Baby Button second. Time, 2:22½.

In the next event the starters were: Charles S., driven by Charles Silvey; Gray Dick, driven by T. J. Hanrahan, and Talisman, driven by W. J. Irvine. Charles S. had an easy thing of it, as Gray Dick lost his feet in the back stretch. Talisman tried for it in the stretch, but Silvey finished an easy winner, looking back, with Talisman second. Time, 2:33.

Silver B. was slightly lame, and the relative of Cresceus was not brought out. This left a pretty contest between Elevator and Monroe B., Elevator winning by a neck. Time, 2:24.

The contests were so interesting and successful that the club has decided to hold another matinee next week. The officials were: H. Hogueboom, starter; W. Lambert and W. Trust, timers; W. O. Bowers, H. I. Seymour and C. L. Hayford, judges.

Big Early Horses.

Professor Lucas, chief paleontologist of the National Museum at Washington, D. C., has taken up the work of preparing, classifying and setting up the vast collection of remains of prehistoric animals taken from strata of late tertiary age in Western Nebraska, and will to the museum by the late Professor O. C. Marsh of Yale.

With some few exceptions, the whole of Professor Marsh's valuable collection has remained untouched since the date of its arrival at the museum in 1888, and now that Professor Lucas has begun work on the material, interesting results are anticipated.

Professor Lucas has already brought to light a fact of considerable importance.

The largest of American fossil horses was one "Equus Scottii," abundant remains of which were unearthed by the late Professor Cope, from a marly formation known as the "equus beds," in Western Texas. This animal was a contemporary of the mastodon, and in size was a trifle larger than the largest Belgian or Percheron draught horse of to-day. A complete skeleton of the "Equus Scottii" is on exhibition in the American Museum of Natural History in New York city.

In Professor Marsh's collection there are a number of skulls of prehistoric American horses, and on one of these Professor Lucas is now at work. This specimen arrived at the museum imbedded in a matrix of soft, marly sandstone, which, by reason of the dry atmosphere of the museum interior, has crumbled to pieces and resolved itself back into sand, causing the skull which was imbedded in the rock, to also break up into fragments.

Professor Lucas has about completed the task of putting this skull together, piece by piece, by the aid of plaster of paris and wire supports. The teeth of this extinct horse do not differ much from those of the "Equus Scottii," but when Professor Lucas applied the calipers to the skull he found it was about four inches longer than that of the "Equus Scottii," so that this prehistoric equine must have been of a variety larger, even, than the largest of American fossil horses. The skull is that of a young though adult male.

Speaking of the fossil horses of America, Professor Lucas says:

"The most puzzling feature of American fossil horses is what caused their extinction. We know, from the evidence right before us, that they ranged all over North and South America, up until a period that, from the standpoint of geology, was quite recent, and yet, when the Europeans arrived, they had long since disappeared, the Indians having no record or tradition of such animals.

"The minute the European horse was introduced in America he began to thrive, increase and multiply, and what could have happened in the interval between the extinction of American fossil horses—the varieties ranging in size from the largest Percheron to the smallest Shetland pony—and the introduction of the European horse to render the continents of North and South America unfit for their existence is a question that may never be solved.

"The remains of prehistoric horses are found all over this continent up into Alaska even, where their remains are associated with mammoth bones. It is reasonable to suppose that in the early ages of the world herbivorous animals traveled about in large herds, and it may be that while the pre-historic horse of America was traveling westward by the old Behring Sea land bridge, the mammoth, which animal had its origin in the Old World, was journeying eastward to join its relative, the mastodon, in America, and that the two forms, American horse and Asiatic mammoth, met in Alaska, where to-day their remains are associated in the same matrix."

The fact that the three year old trotter Peter Stirling was able to win $15,500 in two futurity stakes at Lexington, will do much to make that class of events more popular than ever. In a futurity stake every man has an equal chance for the amount of money he pays in, and the winner is as liable to turn out to be the produce of some mare owned by an obscure farmer as it is to be from a mare owned on a big breeding farm. If the farmer has the right kind of a broodmare, mates her with the right kind of a horse and gives the foal a chance to develop speed, he stands a chance of at least winning the event. Moreover a youngster of promise, nominated in some rich futurities is always salable at a price far greater than can be secured for him without any such engagements. —Horse World.

SULKY NOTES.

Get ready for 1902.

It will be a great year for harness horses.

I Direct 2:12½ should race well next year.

The stallion season of 1902 will be a heavy one.

Several new eastern bred stallions will be in service in California next spring.

The North Pacific Rural Spirit calls Hi Hogboom, "the silent man from California."

Applications for stalls at Pleasanton are becoming numerous and more may have to be built.

Who Is It 2:10½ and Ellert 2:11 will both be sold at the New York sale which opens November 5th.

A $2500 stake for trotters and another for pacers will assure a good season of racing in California next year.

Send your horses to J. M. Nelson's Blue Ribbon Speed Sale, to take place at Alameda track December 3d.

Breed every good mare you have next spring. The shortage in horses cannot be supplied inside of five years.

Don't put off applying for space in our holiday number. Those who come in early can be given the choice positions.

Pleasanton will again be the horse centre next spring. Quite a number of trainers have already engaged stall room there.

A convention of association managers is to meet in Seattle in December or January for the purpose of arranging dates for a circuit of fairs and race meetings next year.

There is considerable talk of the Petaluma track being put in shape next spring and a big harness race meeting given there in the summer. It has been the scene of many famous races.

Parties having horses for sale can find no better medium to advertise them than the holiday number of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, which will be issued December 21st, and the cost will be but little.

The story going the rounds that Nancy Hawks is the dam of Ralph Hanks, thus putting her in the great broodmare list is untrue. The only one of Nancy Hanks produce to be raced is Admiral Dewey 2:14½.

Stallion owners should decide now what fee they will ask for the services of their horses next spring, and make an announcement of the same in our holiday number, which will be out December 21st. Every man who will breed a mare next season will read it.

Burt Webster brought Bonnie Direct 2:05½ out on the track at Pleasanton Saturday and showed him to the three thousand people present. The "handsomest horse in California" was barefooted but he spurted through the stretch at a 2:10 gait and showed that he was feeling mighty well.

The California districts will have to get a move on before next spring, or the Oregon-Washington circuit will get a majority of the harness horses in training. The northern circuit was very successful this year and it is planned to increase the purses for 1902 and make a bid for the best horses on the Coast.

Ed Gaylord, of Denver, will have a strong stable on the Grand Circuit next year in charge of John Blue, and we predict right now that they will get a good share of the money the horses start for. Mr. Gaylord has some extra good green ones and some well tried record horses, notably Charlie Mac 2:11½.

While at Memphis with Ed Gaylord's string, John Blue gave the two year old James Madison filly Corfienza a workout mile in 2:18, the last half in 1:06. That is a very fast clip for a two year old and she should be one of the front rank trotters in the three year old classes next year on the Grand Circuit.

Charles Jeffries is in California as the representative of several of the associations in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana and will endeavor to secure the promise of a number of California horsemen to race up north next year. Mr. Jeffries will manage the racing end of the big Inter-State Fair at Spokane.

Ethel Derby 2:26½, the five year old trotting mare by Chas. Derby 2:20, out of Ethel by Gen. Benton has been in five races over east this year and inside the money every time. Her second dam is a daughter of Electioneer and the third dam by American Star. Ethel Derby was sold at the Cleveland sale two years ago.

William Murray, owner of Diablo 2:09½, writes that the pacing mare Diodine 2:10½ that made her record up north this year, is out of a mare by Secretary, son of Director, but further than this he does not know her breeding. Diodine was purchased by him from Dr. Powell Reeves of Seattle, Wash., who took her north in 1899.

S. K. Trefry, who trained the little black wonder Freddie C. 2:14½ and that other good pacer Direct C. at the Pleasanton last spring, is again located at the "horse centre" and will train horses for road or track on reasonable terms. Mr. Trefry is a careful man and has the faculty of teaching young horses how to step as well as how to behave.

In the class of standard bred two year old stallions, Interstate and Merry Monarch carried off first and second premiums of the Spokane fair. These two grand youngsters are by the famous stallion McKinney and are every bit worthy of their sire. Their owner, Howard W. Peel of Spokane, has every reason to entertain fond predictions for his sons of McKinney.

Princess Alice 2:16 by Dexter Prince, died at Andover, Maine, recently. She took her record at Napa, October 18, 1890, when she beat the pacer Gold Medal in three straight heats. She was trained and driven in the majority of her races by "Rio Vista George," who is still telling the boys about her two-minute speed whenever the subject of champion pacers is up for discussion.

The sale to be held at the Alameda race track on Tuesday December 3d will be a good place to get a good price for a horse that can show speed. Horses that are fit for the road or track are in demand now and they can be shown to advantage while the sale is in progress. Mr. J. M. Nelson, who is managing this sale has held three such sales at Alameda heretofore and all have been successful. This will be the best of all.

Flying Jib's quarter in 30 seconds at Pleasanton last Saturday showed what a wonderful horse he is. He is now sixteen years old, and that day he was hooked to a big 80 pound cart, and driven by his owner, Geo. A. Davis, who weighs about 180 pounds. The old horse was not even warmed up for the trial, in fact Mr. Davis did not expect to speed him. The Jib could probably pace a quarter close to 28 seconds with a little preparation.

Maplewood Farm took first prize at the New Hampshire State Fair this year in the three year old division of standard trotters with its handsome colt, Col. Carter by Nutwood Wilkes, that Superintendent Dan Mahaney purchased in California two years ago. The colt is out of a mare by Boodle and is one of the best lookers ever seen in the old granite State. At the same fair Maplewood Farm took first prize with a weanling colt by Idolita.

The thoroughbred is close up in the pedigree of a colt that is now at the side of Wm. Napier's good race mare, Lady Hurst by imp. Martenburst. The colt was sired by Diablo 2:09½, the champion sire of pacers, and should be a two-minute horse. Lady Hurst was a very frequent winner when raced and was not only fast, but as game as a pebble. The mare and colt are offered for sale at a very low figure and are a good investment at the price.

Geo. T. Beckers left the Fair Grounds at Salem on Tuesday of this week for Sacramento where he will remain during the winter and the early part of next spring with his stallion Zombro 2:11. No stallion on the Pacific Coast has had a better lot of mares bred to him this year than Zombro, and as it is the first year he has made a heavy season in the stud, there should be a lot of standard performers to his credit when the resultant foals are trained and raced.

The yearlings by Rey Direct that were exhibited at Pleasanton last week were a grand lot of youngsters and brought forth exclamations of surprise whenever they were lead out. Their size and conformation were remarkable and several of them looked like three year olds. It would be hard to find a lot of yearlings that would compare favorably with them in general appearance and Mr. Davis' challenge to show five of them against five by any other stallion was not taken up.

Millard Sanders received $800 for Rubato, the full sister of Agitato 2:09 that he took to the Cleveland sale in May 1900. She is a member of Mr. J. Tarlton's stable at Lexington now and is being trained by Everett Middleton. Two weeks ago the latter drove her a mile in 2:14, last half in 1:06 and it did not seem to be much of an effort for her. She will be raced in 1902. No farm in the country produces as large a percentage of fast ones as Oakwood Park Stock Farm, where Rubato was bred.

"Will you race in California next year?" is a question often asked the leading harness horse trainers now-a-days, and the answer almost invariably is: "If there is a good circuit and announcements of purses are made by February 1st." District boards that want big entry lists should make a note of this. Horses cannot be taken up late in the spring and put in shape to race. If purses are announced early there will be plenty of horses to fill them all. The lesson of 1901 should not be forgotten.

Mr. J. F. Thompson, editor of the Eureka Daily Standard and Receiver of the United States Land Office at that point, has been in San Francisco this week on business, and while paying a visit to the office of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN stated that the people of Humboldt county will give the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association a cordial reception if it concludes to hold a meeting there next year. Mr. Thompson says that the date selected (the first week in July) will suit everybody in that section, and he is certain the people will largely patronize a meeting given by the Breeders. There is hardly a doubt but the association will accept the invitation to visit Eureka, and the opportunity to visit the leading lumber and dairy county of California will be gladly embraced by a very large number of horsemen and others in this part of the State. It has been suggested that on the day just preceding or just following the five days' races that excursions be run on the Humboldt county railroads from Eureka to the big lumber camps, that the visitors may see the wonderful processes by which mammoth trees ten and twelve feet in diameter are felled and converted into marketable lumber in the shortest space of time. The Breeders could not select a place where a more enjoyable week's outing can be enjoyed by the people of this part of California.

P. W. Hodges recently purchased from the Nutwood Stock Farm a three year old filly by Nutwood Wilkes, dam by Direct Line, grandam by California Nutwood, that carries an unusual amount of Nutwood blood. Lida W., the dam of both Nutwood Wilkes and Direct Line is by Nutwood 600, and that famous horse sired California Nutwood. This gives Mr. Hodges' filly three crosses to Nutwood. She is not large, but has a very nice way of going, though hardly bridle-wise as yet, and he thinks she will trot fast enough to race.

Prof. E. P. Heald's mare Lady Rowena by Pilot Prince trotted a most excellent race at Pleasanton last week. Her heats were 2:27, 2:28½ and 2:28½ and in every one of them she was pulled almost to a walk at the finish. Dan Leiginger who has trained and raced her this year is certain that Lady Rowena can shade 2:20 easily any time it becomes necessary. Leiginger drove two races at Pleasanton and won both, the other being the Golden Gate Club race in which he landed the pacer Mack a winner, the third heat being paced in 2:19½.

J. P. Stetson and L. L. Ormsby of Boise, Idaho, have purchased the stallion Kinney Mc from Geo. Peringer of Pendleton, Oregon. Kinney Mc is by McKinney 2:11½, dam Midway Belle by Gossiper, second dam Briar Belle, the dam of McBriar 2:14, by Don Wilkes. Kinney Mc is therefore a full brother to Captain Jones. He is but three years old, but weighs now 1120 pounds and is a horse of fine proportions. He should attract a large patronage from the Idaho breeders as he is one of the most fashionably bred horses in the country.

Chris Simpson of Pendleton, Oregon, and Henry H. Hellman of San Jose have leased the Irvington track at Portland, Oregon, for a term of five years and will put the buildings and grounds in first class condition for stabling and training horses. It is the intention of Messrs. Simpson and Hellman to give race meetings and matinees and they will try to run things in an up-to-date and first class manner. Portland should be a good point for a race meeting and if good racing is given it will be patronized. Hellman will probably take quite a number of trotters and pacers there from California.

Among the horses that were most admired by the visitors to Pleasanton last week was Col. J. C. Kirkpatrick's handsome colt Thornway by Steinway, dam Algerdettia by Allandorf. Thornway returned from his eastern trip a few weeks ago and does not look as though it had been a bad year for him, as he has grown and filled out remarkably since he left California last May. He is undoubtedly one of the handsomest three year old stallions in California and as he has wonderful speed is bound to make a reputation for himself by another year. His proportions are very nearly perfection and no better legs and feet could be desired. He has one of the brainiest of heads and is handsome all over.

The big bay four year old Dictatus Medium was trained by Joe Sanchez, and in all the ten heats he has paced this year has not made a break. His mark of 2:24½ is not near the measure of his speed, as we understand he has worked a mile in 2:18 more than once. His dam is also the dam of Stam B. 2:11½ and is one of the handsomest broodmares of her age in America. Her dam, Argenta, is by Almont Lightning, sire also of Whisper, the dam of Zombro 2:11. This strain of the Almont family is noted for its good looks and both Zombro and Stam B. have inherited a goodly share of it. Dictatus Medium is a very handsome horse in the opinion of all who have seen him. He is owned by Mr. William Higby, a leading real estate dealer of San Benito county.

An interesting comparison is that of the best records of this year and last. The fastest two year old trotter last year was Walnut Hall 2:20½; this year Prelates 2:15½ holds the record. Feren 2:10½ held the record for three year old trotters; the best this year is Peter Stirling 2:11½. Borama 2:08½ headed the four year old division last year; Eleata 2:08½ is the fastest this year. Last year the fastest aged trotter was The Abbot 2:03½; this year Cresceus 2:02½ holds the record. Lord Derby, with a record of 2:07, was the fastest new trotter last year; Eleata 2:08½ is the holder of that record for this year. In the pacing brigade the fastest two year old last year was Alice Mapes 2:14½; this year Miss McClintock 2:17½ holds the record. Last year's fastest three year old pacer was The Hero 2:14½; this year the best of that age is Silver Coin 2:16½. The four year old record for last year was held by Bonnie Direct 2:05½; this year Anduhon Boy 2:06 is the fastest. The best of the aged pacers last year was Prince Alert 2:02, and this year he again leads in 2:00½. Bonnie Direct 2:05½ was the fastest new pacer of last year; Shadow Chimes 2:06½ holds the honor for this year.

Tom James of Des Moines, Iowa, owner of the Baron Wilkes stallion Barondale 2:11½, writes the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN that he will bring his horse to California for the season of 1902. It is Mr. James' intention to locate in this State, believing that the climate of central California will benefit his health. Barondale is a young stallion, but is already a producing sire. His breeding cannot be excelled and he will doubtless receive a large patronage from the leading and progressive breeders of California. He is a son of the great Baron Wilkes, and a full brother to Gran Baron 2:12½, being out of the great broodmare Natalie by Nutwood, second dam Beatrice (dam of Patron 2:14½, Prodigious 2:16, Patronage and Pangloss) by Cuyler, third dam Mary Mambrino (dam of Elvira 2:18½, one producing son and four producing daughters) by Mambrino Patchen, fourth dam by the thoroughbred horse Embury's Wagner, a son of the great four-miler Wagner, and so on through a long line of dams registered in the American Stud Book. Barondale is just such a bred horse as is needed on this coast. His record was made in a race when he was four years old.

Like all good things, Jackson's Napa Soda has a dozen counterfeits. Watch out!

EASTERN NOTES AND NEWS.

Prince Alort 2:00 $\frac{1}{2}$, is the third pacer to beat 2:01.

Mazette 2:04 $\frac{1}{2}$, 2:04 $\frac{1}{2}$, world's record for pacing mares.

It is said that John A. McKerron will be at the races next year.

Scott Hudson thinks that Audubon Boy can beat Dan Patch.

Lord Derby 2:06 $\frac{1}{2}$ and Shadow Chimes 2:06 $\frac{1}{2}$ will be sold at auction next month.

The pacing gelding, Master Roy 2:24 $\frac{1}{2}$, is a full brother to the Canadian champion, Harold H. 2:04.

Alix 2:03 $\frac{1}{2}$ leaves two foals, a two year old by Sablo Wilkes and a colt foaled last June by Handspring 2:26 $\frac{1}{2}$, son of Prodigal.

The average time of the 2:08 pace at Memphis was 2:07 40-100—fastest average for the class this year and fastest for five heats paced.

Three enemies of the foot are: Long toe and heel corks, large nails driven high up in the foot, and the rasing of the foot, to fit the shoe.

At the recent Woodard & Shanklin sale in Lexington, 320 horses were sold at an average of $250. The average for 333 horses last February was $241.35.

Mazette's mile in 2:07 $\frac{1}{2}$, over the Malone, N. Y., track, is the fastest by a pacing mare over a half mile track. The best previous record was 2:08, made by Pearl C. in 1898.

If a horse is inclined to stock up in a tie stall, he should have the freedom of a box stall. Try it. The high-spirited, nervous horse will always do better in a box stall.

Alix 2:03 $\frac{1}{2}$ was buried in a coffin at Mariposa Stock Farm and a neat marble slab is over her grave. Her last filly is large and strong, and is by Handspring, a son of Prodigal.

The original entry list of the Kentucky Futurity that was won by Peter Stirling contained more than one thousand names. The field that faced the starter consisted of six horses.

After Dan Patch won his race at Memphis last week and went to the stable the unheaten hero of a dozen straight races, C. W. Marks of Chicago, offered $20,000 for him, which was instantly refused.

The Glenville track is being recelayed, having been closed to trainers for the past week. The famous course will be faster and in better condition than ever before in its eventful history, when the bell rings in 1902.

Eleata 2:08 $\frac{1}{2}$ won \$19,600 on her season's campaign, and is as smooth as a pickarel. She is not to go to the court of Cresceus, as was reported, but will probably be mated with Idolita, three-year-old record of 2:12.

The Abbot was not such a had investment at $26,500. He has earned in purses this year over $15,000, and his owner's share of the gate receipts at one of the New York meetings was in the neighborhood of ten thousand more.

The average of all the heats trotted at the Memphis meeting was 2:10.22; the average of the heats paced was 2:07.73. The grand average was 2:08.97. This is about two seconds faster than the average of any other meeting this year.

Baronmore 2:14 $\frac{1}{2}$, the sire of Peter Stirling, the Futurity winner, comes into the Great Table this year for the first time, and be comes in with flying colors. The year has given him six performers, all three year olds and all trotters except one.

The followers of the trotter will learn with pleasure that Mr. C. K. G. Billings has absolutely refused to let or lease his Memphis track for a running meeting, and has also in his will decreed that it shall be devoted exclusively to the light harness.

With the exception of Cresceus 2:04 $\frac{1}{2}$, Dartmore 2:11 $\frac{1}{2}$, owned by Walnut Hall Stock Farm, is the fastest trotter by Robert McGregor. He has, however, eighteen in the 2:15 list, trotters and pacers. He is also the sire of the dams of light in 2:15.

Ferono, the filly with which Mr. L. V. Harkness won both divisions of the Kentucky Futurity and now a four year old, gave the public a taste of her real quality at Terre Haute when she stepped to the front in the 2:09 class, winning a heat in 2:08 $\frac{1}{2}$.

The pedigree of Peter Stirling shows six crosses of Mambrino Chief. The Mambrino Chief strain always did seem to nick best with a strong thoroughbred infusion. Lady Thorn 2:18 $\frac{1}{2}$, Woodford Mambrino 2:21 $\frac{1}{2}$ and Mambrino Patchen are notable instances.

With ten new standard performers to his credit, Red Wilkes now has a total of 160 in that select circle and in that respect leads all living sires. The old horse, who is now twenty-seven years of age, is owned at Belle Meade Farm, Belle Meade, N. J. Onward, who is a year younger, is a close second, with 159.

Trainer Freeman, who left East Aurora in July with fifteen head of Village Farm horses, sold to the Japanese government, arrived at Yokohama without losing a horse or having a single case of sickness. He left San Francisco, August 21st, and arrived in Yokohama, September 7th, all the horses in fine shape and the buyers well pleased with their purchase.

Within three days Miss Lydia West of the Lyric Theater, London, invested $10,000 in horses. She bought of S. T. Harbison & Co., of Lexington, a pair of bay geldings by Red Wilkes and Belmont that can step in 2:30, paying $3500. She will drive them as a four-in-hand with a team for which she paid a similar amount.

Dr. George Harder, of Pittsfield, Mass., and Patrick Hennessy, of New York, were fined $300 each last week for docking the tails of five Western horses at the stables of Irving T. Bush, of New York, in Pittsfield. Dr. Harder is a veterinary surgeon and Hennessy is Mr. Bush's coachman. They pleaded guilty. Mr. Bush was before the court as an accessory, but was discharged.

Hon. Frank Jones' horses are in winter quarters at Maplewood Farm, Portsmouth, N. H. Eleata has been there for some time and has had the advantage of a run-out in an extensive paddock. She has picked up wonderfully and is looking good and strong. Her legs are as clean as can be and she has no physical disability whatever. She will be a great mare in her class another year if she is raced.

H. K. Devoreux's trotting stallion Earl Wilton is only six years old and this was his first season out. He started in eight races, winning four first moneys, two seconds and one third, taking a race record of 2:18 $\frac{1}{2}$ over a half-mile track. Had he not been taken down with an attack of the prevalent distemper he would have started at Lexington and Memphis and gone home with a record of 2:12 or 2:13.

Range horses from Colorado, Wyoming and Montana are winning praise and popularity in England. Broncos of the type that speculators were canning for export three or four years ago are now being used in England for polo and the hunting field. English critics say they are natural jumpers and as handy as cats, in addition to being hardy and of fine fibre.

Encouraged by the success which has attended the inauguration of the first light harness meeting at Memphis, C. K. G. Billings and his associate owners of the Memphis Trotting Association and Park are trying to establish a southern chain of trotting tracks to supplement the harness horse season in the north, which usually closes with the Lexington meeting.

Ed Geers has his eye on the events which will be opened next year for green pacers. The horse Direct Hal, which Geers sold last year to the Hamlin for \$10,000, will be the medium with which Geers will attempt to duplicate Audubon Boy's record of this year. During the Memphis meeting Direct Hal was given a mile in 2:06 $\frac{1}{2}$, and two days later astonished everyone with the last half of a slow mile in 1:00 $\frac{1}{2}$.

The present season in the East has been one of the best in the history of the trotter. Several world's records have been lowered, including the trotting record, which was cut to 2:02 $\frac{1}{2}$ by Cresceus, and moved a full second nearer the coveted two-minute goal. The associations have generally had a prosperous year, the meetings have on the whole been well patronized, better than ever before, which goes to show that the trotter is held in popular esteem.

Thomas W. Lawson, of Boston, and W. B. Leeds, of the tin plate trust, were rival bidders at the American Horse Exchange in New York last week for the four-in-hand team of high steppers from the Chicago stables of Tichenor & Co. Mr. Lawson, through his representative, Dr. Lee, hid $10,000, but was outbid by Mr. Leeds, who secured the team for $10,750. Mr. Lawson bought Capt Barr for $7500. He also bought the chestnut saddle horse Radiant for $2900.

Idolita developed a quarter-crack early in the summer and was thrown out of training. It grew down sufficiently well for him to join the stable at the latter end of the season, and he was given some work but not any extremely fast miles. After a short season in the stud next spring it is the intention to race him another year, and he should take a low mark, for he was surely one of the greatest three year olds ever raced. In his three year old form he got a mark of 2:12.

We are glad to know that the Morgan family of horses was well represented at the Pan-American Show. There are lots of good ones of that family still left in New England. There is a stallion up in Vermont called Billy Roberts, whose pedigree shows no less than twenty-three crosses of the original Justin Morgan. We have often heard of full-blooded Morgans in the past, but don't if there is another horse, mare or gelding, living that comes nearer to it than Billy Roberts.—American Horse Breeder.

Charles Marvin, the veteran trotting horse driver, has sold to C. K. G. Billings the trotting horse, Captor 2:09 $\frac{1}{2}$. Captor is a brown gelding by Electric Bell, dam Ula Lee, and was given to Marvin by Miller and Silby when they closed out their Kentucky breeding venture last winter. Marvin has won a number of rich races with Captor, including the Walnut Hall Cup at Lexington. At Memphis he got a record of 2:09 $\frac{1}{2}$. The price is said to be \$7000. Captor has won six races this season, and with the exception of Hon. Frank Jones' great four year old filly, Eleata 2:08 $\frac{1}{2}$, is the best green trotter of the season.

Frank Starr, the American trainer who is driving trotting horse in St. Petersburg, Russia, has been most successful this season. He has won so far this year about \$26,500. He won the Emperor's Cup in a race of two and three-quarter miles, in which driver and sulky had to weigh 290 pounds, driving the distance in 6:18 $\frac{1}{2}$, beating all previous records for the distance. He also won the Empress Cup, the Imperial Cup, the Grand Duke Dimitry gold medal, and the big Moscow prize. The race for the latter was for three miles, and Starr drove the distance in 7:09 $\frac{1}{2}$, making a new European record for the distance, and also beating the American race record for the distance, which is 7:16 $\frac{1}{2}$.

Julius Pajoneck, of Copenhagen, Denmark, who has been in Kentucky for several days, looking at trotting stock, with a view of establishing a stud in his native country, has, through Ernest Featherstone, purchased of Mike Bowerman, of Lexington, for $1000, the broadnure Alice Princeton, by Princeton, and Winoga 2:36, by Hernando, the former, with colt at her side by Clay King, and the latter with colt at side by Potential. He also purchased from Dr. W. F. Dickerson for $1000 Nannie Embury, a three year old bay filly by Ashland Wilkes, dam Minerva. This filly has shown very fast trials.

Dan Patch made his first appearance on the turf in 1900, as a four year old. That season he started in four races, won them all, lost but one beat and retired with a record of 2:16. Since his first appearance on the turf he has started in sixteen races, all of which he won and has been headed at the wire in but two heats. This a record never equalled by a trotter or pacer. Other horses have an unbroken series of victories to their credit, but none of them have been on the "firing line" all the time and met the class of horses which the son of "Old Joe" has defeated week after week. He has well earned his title of "the unbeaten Dan Patch."

Charley Herr 2:07 has been retired for the season, and Mr. Cahill says that he is free from all lameness. He will be looked after carefully through the winter, and will be taken up in the spring and prepared for a campaign in 1902. Mr. Cahill has another one in which he has great hopes for the future in the brown stallion Alfred Star, five years old, by Alfred G., dam Becky by Mambrino King, second dam by Alexander's Abdallah. A few days ago this fellow trotted a mile over the Lexington track in 2:13 $\frac{1}{2}$, quarter in 32 seconds, last eighth in 15 seconds. Mr. Cahill also has several promising youngsters that he will train for the races next year.

Now that the racing season is practically over, north of the Ohio river, we are reading various excuses why so many local race associations were compelled to declare off during the season, and why so many of the fast classes failed to fill at the fall fairs. As we stated early in May, the cause is the scarcity of horses, and while we have received several letters from race horse men "pooh-poohing" this idea, we still hold the same view, says the American Sportsman. One turf writer ascribes the shortage to the large exports to Europe. Still we see no valid reason to change our often-expressed opinion that the shortage is due to increased use and decreased population. Doubtless there has been increased breeding during the season of 1901, but the production has not been up to the demand which will confront the market three or four years hence. The leading breeders of the country should take in good solid chunks of wisdom in the experience of this season.

Many fine horses were offered at the annual sale by Tichenor & Co., Chicago, in the American Horse Exchange October 22d, and they brought high prices. The first fifteen horses sold averaged $2930 a head, and the first nineteen brought $50,000. In all forty-nine head were sold. For a four-in-hand team of bay geldings, H. T. Leeds of Chicago paid $10,750. Thomas W. Lawson of Boston paid $7500 for a brown gelding and $1700 for a handsome chestnut saddle horse. Florenz Ziegfeld, acting for Anna Held, gave $1750 for a pair of brown geldings. W. H. Moore paid $6800 for a pair of chestnut carriage horses. A bay horse, six years old, brought $5100 from H. B. Leeds, and D. D. Leeds paid $4100 for a pair of bay geldings. D. G. Reed gave $4200 for a pair of bay carriage horses. A. Lowther paid $2300 for a dapple-gray gelding. Dr. Dwight bought a pair of roan carriage horses, paying $3600 for them. S. J. Valenty gave $1350 for a dark gray gelding.

One of the features of the Memphis meeting was the Transylvania, for which the conditions read as follows: "An annual event to be decided at the fall meeting of the Memphis Trotting Association, for male and female mules twenty-one years and over. Eligibles must show reference as to the performance of hard work. Infirm, lazy and balky mules barred. Regular rules to govern. Owner of winner to receive silver cup. Drivers of non-winners to be fined on suspicion, and winning driver to receive a working interest in the racing qualities of his mount. Those conditions subject to change without notice." There were thirteen starters in this race, and the drivers were Tom Price, Millard Sanders, W. L. Snow, Ed. Geers, Jack Curry, Dick Mahon, Scott Hudson, Andy McDowell, Knop McCarthy, Geo. Castle, M. Carpenter, Lon McDonald and Frank Erwin. Tom Price won, Millard Sanders was second, W. L. Snow third, and Ed. Geers fourth. The others failed to reach the distance flag. The race furnished a great deal of fun for the crowd and Secretary Murray Howe says that it will be made an annual event of the Memphis meeting.

Peter Stirling, the winner of the Kentucky Futurity and Louisville races for three-year-olds, arrived at Berlin, Wis., October 22d. The enthusiasm of the people was at a high pitch and the depot yard was filled with an eager throng to welcome the wonderful little trotter home. As the train pulled in the Berlin band struck up a lively air, while the car was besieged by an eager crowd to get the first glimpse of the little gelding. He was led out to the business street between long lines of interested spectators, the band preceding. When the street was reached a halt was made, and a handsome collar of white and pink carnations and smilax, the gift of many admirers among the business men of Berlin, was passed over his head by Chief of Police Ellis, and Mayor Truesdell raised his hat and was joined in three hearty cheers by the admiring crowd. Over his stall was suspended a new hroom, signifying a clean sweep. D. C. Palmeter, the modest owner of the fast stopper, was quietly enjoying a smoke when the parade arrived there. Peter will remain at Berlin until Mr. Palmeter takes him with a bunch of other horses to the New York horse sale in November.

THE HANFORD FAIR held this year down at the little county seat of Kings county, a place that has heretofore had no place on the horseman's map or the stock show exhibitor's itinerary, has given evidence of what an active, energetic board of directors can do when they start out to accomplish something. The Hanford association sprang into existence last summer and before the fair was held had gone into debt about fifteen thousand dollars by purchasing a piece of land, building a half-mile track, putting up a pavilion, erecting a grand stand and 75 box stalls, etc. Of course, the land and the buildings were pretty fair security for the indebtedness, but the Directors resolved that a good sized payment could be made and the indebtedness reduced if they got to work and gave a successful fair. One of the first things decided upon was to bid for the patronage of the best people in the district and to this end the board announced that no intoxicating liquors would be sold on the fair grounds and that no gambling games would be permitted. Auction pools were sold on the races and were managed by the association for its own profit, thus assuring the people fair and square treatment. To the average person who has had anything to do with the management of fairs and race meetings in California, this action of the Hanford association looked suicidal, as two or three of the usual and principal sources of revenue were cut off. But it seems that the Kings county board knew its business. It had a population of farmers and heads of families to cater to that do not care much for gambling, but can get plenty of enjoyment out of racing without that accessory. And it had not reckoned without its host. When the fair opened the crowds poured in at the gates of the track and the doors of the pavilion, for a magnificent exhibition of the products of the district had been secured. The stock show was equal to that seen at the State Fair this year, it is said. When the fair was over and all the bills paid, there was a $12,000 surplus to apply on the $15,000 debt, so that the Hanford association now stands on solid footing. It is proposed to give a fair next year that will eclipse the one given this season, and there is not the slightest doubt but the $3000 debt will be liquidated and a big balance left in the treasury. This result at Hanford shows what can be done when a live board of directors has the management of a district fair. These gentlemen catered to the people of their own district and made no effort to please the gamblers, touts and riff raff that make a business of following the country fairs. They have set an example that other boards of directors can study and follow with profit.

A COUPLE OF BIG STAKES for trotters and pacers of the slow classes will do more to make the California season of harness racing for 1902 successful than any one thing that can be suggested. The Breeders Association or the State Fair can afford to offer two such stakes, one for 2:30 trotters and the other for pacers eligible to the 2:25 class. Nothing will put more horses in training for next year, and if properly conditioned and arranged they will get very large entry lists. Since this suggestion was made in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN some weeks ago, nearly every horseman in California has stated that he would try and have an entry for each stake if offered. The Pacific Coast has no big events for harness horses outside the colt stakes. It is now an opportune time for the Breeders or the State Fair people to inaugurate a couple of stakes that will be the leading features of harness racing each year on this Coast. The day after they are announced buyers will be out scouring the country for horses with which to win them, and every good prospect in the State will increase in value. The Grand Circuit would not attract one-half the entries of attendance were it not for the M. & M., the Charter Oak, the Transylvania, the Chamber of Commerce and stakes of that character. It is these big events that are the drawing cards of the big circuit, and many new men get into the harness horse business every year through a desire to win one or more of these stakes. California should have at least one rich stake for aged trotters and one for pacers. Let us inaugurate them in 1902.

SHIRE HORSES are high in price in England says an exchange. A month ago Mr. Fred Crip dispersed his entire stud at public auction with the result that the total offering of forty-five head made an average of $876. This included stallions, mares, fillies, colts and foals, nine of the last named youngsters making an average price of $450. The highest price paid for a mare was $4375 for the champion mare Southgate Charm. The mare Aurea, once the London champion herself and dam of Buscot Harold, champion of the male section the same year Aurea headed the female list, brought $2750 and Girtan Charmer, Southgate Charm's foal at foot, made $1300. The fourteen year old stallion Marmion 2d, which has sired some excellent stallions imported to this country, found a new owner at $1400 and Mormaer of Batsford brought $1900. The three year old stallion Heudre Champion, by some considered the best horse of his age and breed in Britain, brought the very handsome sum of $7750 and Girtan Chieftain, another three year old made $1750. The younger fillies were appreciated, selling as high as $1550, which was paid for Girtan Sunlight. All accounts so far received of this notable sale agree that the interest never was in a better condition than right now, which may be accepted as presaging a continuance of the present high prices for heavy drafters for work on the streets. This of course will continue to operate to the advantage of American breeders for the reason that Britain has not in many years been able to produce enough of this sort to meet her demands and many American-bred geldings have crossed the ocean to pull their loads.

CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATIONS that expect to give harness racing at their fairs next year will have to wake up and get to the fore with early announcements if they desire to secure good lists of entries for the purses they will offer. The successful revival of harness racing in the northwest this summer, and the determination of the Oregon and Washington associations to offer still larger purses and extra inducements next season has caused many California owners and trainers to turn their gaze that way, and it need not surprise anyone if several formidable California stables are raced through the northwestern circuit next season. From well known horsemen who have recently returned from a trip through the upper country, we learn that the $1000 stakes given there this season were so successful that the number will be increased next year and it is likely that a few stakes of still larger size will be offered. There will be meetings at Portland, Salem, Seattle and Spokane, where the harness horses will have large purses and stakes hung up to contest for, and the associations at those places are already at work preparing for next year and will announce their purses early. Mr. Chas. Jeffries, who acted as presiding judge and starter with excellent success up north this year, is now in California in the interest of the Spokane and other fairs for 1902, and Henry Hellman of San Jose, who with Chris Simpson of Oregon has leased the Portland track, is here on a like mission. Both these gentlemen have their eyes open for good trotting and pacing prospects at the same time. They are enthusiastic over the racing in Oregon and Washington this year and say the horsemen up there are prosperous and busy. There is no doubt but they will induce quite a number of trainers to start for the north in the spring. It therefore behooves the directors of California associations to "get a move on." Nearly every district in the State has a two years' appropriation to draw on next year and there should be a general effort to hold the best fairs in 1902 ever given in California. If the racing programs are announced early there will be plenty of entries to fill all classes, but if everything is delayed, as was the case this season, the best of the strings will go north next year and what few remain at home will not be able to make racing that will be worth going to see.

A REGULAR MEETING of the Board of Review of the National Trotting Association will be held at the Murray Hill Hotel, New York, at 10 A. M., on Tuesday, December 3d. All communications intended for the consideration of the board must be forwarded to Secretary Gocher not later than November 19th. President Johnston has decided to issue a call for an early spring meeting in New York, for the accommodation of those whose convenience or necessities will be served thereby. The majority of the members are nearer New York than Chicago, and for this reason it is satisfactory to hold spring as well as winter meetings in that city.

THE RACING SEASON opened last Saturday at the New California Jockey Club's magnificent track at Oakland and can now be said to be fairly under way, although quite a large number of horses from the East will arrive here during the month and the majority of the bookmakers who will do business here during the winter will not be ready to cut in until the first of December. The increase in the price of admission to $1.50 has undoubtedly kept the attendance down, and the strict ruling against touts has also served to keep many of that fraternity outside the fence where they belong. The gate receipts have not fallen off from the opening days of last year however, and the increase in the price of admission is evidently very satisfactory to the association officials as it is to all who hope to see the tone of racing on this coast improved. Starter Holtman's efforts at starting without a recall flag have been all that the most exacting could desire as the starts have been very good. The Opening Handicap at a mile run on the first day was an excellent race and won by Hagerdon, the bay gelding by Esher out of Lady Richmond by imp. Richmond. Hagerdon was ridden by Vitaeo, 106 pounds, and ran the mile in 1:40, a good performance. Obia was second and Rosormonde third. There were eleven starters and Mr. Holtman got them away like a platoon of cavalry. There have been several very fast performances during the week. On Wednesday Hagerdon won a five furlong race in 1:00 flat, and the same day Antolight broke the coast record for one mile and seventy yards, running the distance in 1:44. The first half was run in 47 1/2 seconds, and the three quarters in 1:13 1/2. Winnie O'Connor had the mount. Twelve hooks are handling the money for bettors and seem to be baying all they can attend to. The season promises to be an improvement over last year.

GOOD PRICES can be obtained for good horses at the speed sale which J. M. Nelson will hold at the Alameda race track on Tuesday, December 3d, the particulars of which will be found in our advertising column today. Mr. Nelson has held three such sales at Alameda and in every instance consignors were more than pleased with the prices received. The Alameda track is the best and in fact the only place close to San Francisco where horses can be shown in harness to buyers at auction. The track there is always in fine condition and the place can be reached in thirty minutes from San Francisco. Mr. Nelson proposes to issue a catalogue of all the horses in the sale, to be compiled by experts and to be correct in every particular. That horses may all be catalogued properly they must be entered for the sale not later than November 19th and those who have animals they desire to dispose of should correspond with Nelson immediately that terms, etc., can be arranged. The demand for good road and driving horses is excellent at the present time and there will be no lack of bidders at this sale. A first class auctioneer will be employed, the sale is to be extensively advertised and a large crowd is sure to be present. It is a first class opportunity to get a good price for horses.

REMEMBER the stakes of the Coney Island Jockey Club will close November 18th, which is one week from next Monday. These stakes are fully set forth in our advertising columns, and aggregate the largest amount ever offered by a racing association.

California.

The Horseman of October 29, 1901, in an article, "New 2:10 Trotters," gives a total of eleven, and with pardonable pride the writer of this calls attention to the fact that no less than five performers trace to the great Electioneer, son of Hambletonian 10 and Green Mountain Maid.

The dam of Dolly Dillon 2:07 was Dolly (dam of Daly 2:15) by Electioneer.

The dam of Janice 2:08 1/2 was Fenella by Fallis 2:24, son of Electioneer.

The grandam of Eleata 2:08 1/2 was Eleanor by Electioneer.

The sire of Captor 2:09 1/2 was Electric Bel, son of Electioneer and Beautiful Bells.

The dam of Cornelia Belle 2:10 was Bel Onward by St. Bel 2:14, son of Electioneer and Beautiful Bells.

Another performer to the credit of California is Dr. Book 2:10 by that great sire McKinney 2:11 1/2, thus making six of the eleven new performers that trace to Electioneer and McKinney—a credit to our State.

On the 1st of November last there passed away at the branch of Palo Alto Stock Farm at Vina the celebrated gelding Fred Crocker, who in 1880 trotted to the world's record for two year olds 2:25 1/2, attracting world wide attention, and bringing into prominence the great sire Electioneer 125. His dam was Melinche by St. Clair 16675, while the breeding of St. Clair could never be traced, he was entered at the State Fair, Sacramento, in 1863, as "the well known Morgan stallion."

RIO ALTO.

HIDALGO'S GOSSIP.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

LONDON, October 20, 1901.

To-morrow I start for Paris, thence to the Riveira and so back to Boulogne, where I take the steamer of November 7th for New York. To say that I am glad of it does not fully express what I feel; and yet, no man was ever treated with more uniform courtesy than I have been over since my arrival in British waters. But the fact remains that I have become so habituated to the off-hand ways of Pacific Coast life that I am unfit to live elsewhere; and I have no doubt but I should feel equally ill at ease in New York, where I was born nearly seventy years ago.

The truth is, that America is a progressive country, while England is weighted down by the musty traditions of the past. This is more or less evident in all things, but especially so in racing. At Newmarket they have six or seven different courses and the Cesarewitch, through which I stood through a pouring shower of rain, is run over half a mile away from the finishing post of the two year old race, which had just preceded it. On our American courses, all the races are terminated at one given point; and yet, if there was one man that walked across the field to see the finish for a great autumn handicap, there were five thousand. How long would any American track last—as a business investment—where people would have to pay for admission to three separate stands in one afternoon? Such methods are not only piliocene, but asinine. I gave these otherwise practical people credit for more sense. But they seem to be tied up to what their forefathers did in the years that have flown. My only wonder is that they do not wear steel armor in battle like they did in the days of Cressy and Agincourt, and yet I have met with no more hospitable people than those are; and when they have invited you to their houses, you will find out that there is nothing too good for you.

The Cesarewitch was simply the triumph of a strong and well kept horse with a straw hat on his back. Black Sand ought to have beaten, and will do it if ever he meets him on a good track. But in the heavy going the horse I most pitied was Santoi, who had 129 pounds up and was completely anchored by the weight. My ideal of a great handicap horse is fully realized in Santoi and I look for him to become a great sire, as he comes from the same line of mares as Whalebone, Whisker, Bay Middleton and Glencoe, to say nothing of Bird of Freedom and a host of other good ones. He is a very level mover and a horse of beautiful proportions; and while he, like St. Simon, is descended from the male line of Voltigeur, he is so completely bred away from him on the dam's side that he is all but an outcross for the St. Simon mares. The Speculum branch of Blacklock blood is not, nor never can be now, as fashionable as that which comes through Galopin, but it is represented in a great many excellent horses, all of whom seem to like a distance; and most of whom, so far as I can discern, are horses of excellent temper.

The racing of the past ten days or two weeks has been one grand mix-up and leaves the form student completely at sea. In the first place Volodyovski wins the Derby and then Doricles goes out and beats him in the St. Leger. Then Revenue comes out and beats Doricles; and Osbeck, by Oberon, winds up by going out in the Champion Stakes and beating both Doricles and Pietermaritzburg, who had just won the Jockey Club Stake. So how you are going to find out which is the best of all the three year olds of 1901, is "one of those things that no fellow can find out," to borrow the language of the late lamented Earl of Dundreary. In former years there was some key to the situation, but when horses that have run fifth and sixth in Derbys and St. Legers come out and defeat the classic winners on even terms, where do all of your figures come in?

It is now proposed to get up a race at two miles for Doricles, Volodyovski, Pietermaritzburg, Balsarroch and Revenue, to carry 126 pounds each, but my own belief is that it will never materialize. If it does, the Cesarewitch winner will be the last in the race, nor am I sure that Doricles will be the first. At the same time everybody has a good word for Mr. Leopold de Rothschild. He is such a genial, kind hearted man, that nobody can help liking him; and look what a protection to the general public the brave old Rothschild colors have been. There have been sixty years of turf scandals in England but not one breath of it ever came to sully the dark blue and yellow cap. The Rothschild motto is "always first, if with honor," and poor Leopold—always a martyr to a chronic malady which he bears with stoical fortitude—never forgets to keep up the family traditions. That is the class of men I like to see win races, although so far as the recent St.

Leger was concerned, my sympathies were all in favor of Mr. Whitney; and as Volodyovski has since beaten Doricles, there is no doubt in my mind as to which was the best horse of his age. Revenue can beat the St. Leger winner at a mile and a half, in the belief of most people here, and will not astonish me if he wins the Cambridgeshire.

The proposed match of Epsom Lad against Santoi, the winner to take both horses, is another proposition that will end in sherry and bitters for two. Epsom Lad is a gelding and can have no value after he once breaks down, while Santoi is a stallion of good pedigree and superb formation. I should not be surprised to see Santoi's book fill at 30 guineas in his second season. He belongs to Mr. George Edwardes, of the Gaiety Theater, who is also the lessee of Daly's, at which the comedy of Santoi is making him a fortune. There are few more glib gentlemen than "Gaiety George," as he is called by his legion of friends.

John Mackoy, superintendent of the Rancho del Paso, has been here for several days, but I have not met him. He purchased Mr. Corrigan's horse Greonan by St. Simon out of Sunrise and has already shipped him to California to take the place of the dead St. Andrew. Greonan won the Great Yorkshire Stakes of 1897 and was a stayer from Stayville. He was a small horse, however, which told against him when called upon to assume handicap weights according to his performances. He comes from the same line of mares as the Cesarewitch winner, Balsarroch; and this ought to guarantee that he will breed cup horses if properly mated. Mr. Corrigan, at the same time, purchased the once popular racehorse, Dunlop by Ayrshire, for $125 and will probably send him to the Monument ranch near Sacramento. This horse sold for $2500 as a yearling and has gradually been bringing less at every succeeding sale. He may make a good sire, however, and I suppose that is about all that Mr. Corrigan wants of him.

I came down from Newmarket on the train with little Jed Waldo on the Cesarewitch night and from what he told me, I do not think either Mr. Corrigan or Mr. Wishard will race in England next year.

HIDALGO.

Edward Stokes is Dead.

The following from the pen of E. C. Walker (Veritas) of the New York Trotter and Pacer will be interesting reading to all old San Francisco trotting horse men:

It will be sad news to his many old friends and acquaintances to learn that Edward S. Stokes is dead of Bright's disease at the home of his sister in New York city. He has had a checkered career in turf and business circles. Our acquaintance with him began over thirty years ago when Wm. H. Borst, who used to handle Geo. Wilkes, campaigned the chestnut mare Josephine 2:31, for him. Then Mr. Stokes was the Adonis of the trotting turf and the pet of the sporting fancy. Later he became involved in business quarrels with Col. "Jim" Fisk, whose death at his hands cast a cloud over his life. Next he went to California, associated himself with "Bonanza" Mackay and made a fortune. About twenty years ago, with J. W. Mackay as partner, he returned to New York and entered the hotel business. He remodeled the Hoffman House and was the pioneer in introducing pictures, statuary, bronzes, music and palatial effects in hotel appointments. During all these years his sporting heart was true to the trotting horse and Orrin Hickok was his turf aide-de-camp. Through his friend Mackay, Mr. Stokes got Sweetheart (3), 2:22½, and her sister, Eva, 2:23½, by Sultau, out of Minnehaha. He raced Eva in New York. Her picture by Scott Leighton was in a conspicuous place in The Hoffman. In the early eighties the Hoffman House was the resort of the better class of local and visiting trotting turfmen. Mr. Stokes matched Overman, 2:19½, against Isador Cohnfield's Helene, 2:21, for $2000 a side. The race took place at Fleetwood Park, November 1, 1882, and Overman won it, trotting the second heat in 2:21. But the match in which Mr. Stokes took the greatest pleasure was a team race brought to an issue about this period. Then a coterie of winning "high rollers" from California made the Hoffman House their headquarters and Fleetwood Park their trotting ground. They would hot high and long on any "even hitch" proposition. One of them, Charles Benham, owned the best trotting pair of their party. The horses were Castle Boy, 2:21, and Winchester Girl, 2:26½. Mr. Stokes brought a mare called Bollflower, 2:28½, from California, and found a fairly good mate for her in the dun gelding Lyman, 2:25½.

One day he met his friend Benham at Fleetwood and after a little banter they bet $500 a side, owners to drive, and the race to be decided then and there. The Benham team won it handily. But the bets were doubled, with professionals to drive, mile heats. John Murphy at once took charge of Castle Boy and mate.

Mr. Stokes naturally sought Hickok, but Orrin was ready to go back to California and, although at sword's point with Dan Mace for years, said: "Get Mace, he's the greatest team driver of us all." Dan worked the horses separately as he found the mare needed more fast work than the gelding. On the day of the race the club house looked like the floor of a stock exchange when there was something doing. The high-toned sporting crowd had no use for pool sellers or bookmakers, but recorded their bets on each other's cuffs or "any old way." The Benham team had shown a fast trial and were the favorites. The Stokes pair won the first heat, but the time was slow. If our memory serves, about 2:38. The race is not recorded in Chester's Book, and we have no time to rummage over old files. The word went out that Castle Boy threw his cheek, so he and his mate remained favorites. We sought Dan's advice as to betting at this stage. Mace was the exact opposite of a plunger, and said to us, in his sententious manner of speech: "I can beat '30. Don't go deep. You know Benham drove his team in '29." Next heat one of the Benham pair went tangle-legged on the turn and before Murphy got them squared away Mace had a long load and won in hand in 2:32, laughing and shaking his head the while as he drew near the finish, as he often did, for there was nothing funereal or silent about Dan, the king of all drivers, past or present. Life to him was a perpetual holiday and merry-making time. As he dismounted to weigh in he said to us aside: "Wish I had let Stokes alone. If I had he'd have won the track. He wanted to bet them to a standstill."

About this time Mr. Stokes fell out with Mr. Mackay and Hon. Roscoe Conkling, who lived at the Hoffman House, was his lawyer and friend. He converted this great statesman to the trotting horse cause and we often saw J. G. Blaine's greatest opponent drive Lyman and mate through Central Park. Mr. Stokes was also the friend and hacker of Wm. Durland in establishing the Durland Stable. He was a courteous gentleman, ever ready to do his old and true friends a favor, great or small, but uncompromising if what he conceived to be his rights were infringed—a fighter to the bitter end, even against death, for disease had brought him to its door before this last struggle.

Dick Hovey, who drove Betonica to his record of 2:10½ and worked him a public trial of 2:06½, stated to the writer the other day that he has always regretted that he did not get the opportunity to have the son of Azmoor driven three consecutive heats at Los Angeles. Mr. Hovey had prepared Betonica for such an effort, and fully believes that he could have driven him the fastest three heats on record, but the accident occurred in which Mr. Hovey's leg was broken and that changed all plans. Mr. Hovey secured the consent of that excellent reinsman, James Sullivan, to pilot the horse in the trial; but word came from Mr. Lathrop, manager of the affairs of the Stanford estate, to send Betonica home and not make the attempt. Hovey is certain that Sullivan could have driven Betonica three heats better than 2:05 and set a record that would have been difficult for any pacer to lower. Betonica was sent East and sold that winter and is now in the stud at the Maplewood Farm of Senator Jones in New Hampshire. The foals by him are uniformly good looking, and Superintendent Mahoney thinks they are a very promising lot. He carries a large percentage of the "hot blood" in his veins, the dam of his sire, Azmoor, being a thoroughbred, and his own dam being by the thoroughbred horse Wildile.

Oakland Show Notes.

There has been a brisk local demand for Premium Lists. The entries close on the 23d inst.

Among the specials offered this week were two silver cups, one for the best Cocker Spaniel in the show and the other for the best of opposite sex to winner of the first cup.

Cash prizes of $5 are offered both for kennels of four or more Greyhounds and Great Danes.

Advices from J. L. Elgholz, a leading Los Angeles fancier, are to the effect that he will probably show a pup or two and he believes there will be a number of good ones sent up from the City of the Angels.

He further says: "The men who came down from the north to our late show were all good fellows (excelled only by the ladies they brought with them) and I for one will certainly be delighted to meet the rest of the northern fanciers in December.

It seems doubtful now that a string will come down from Seattle or Tacoma.

In contrast, however, Mrs. Bradley-Dyne will send down four or more Irish Terriers and stand, we think, more than a good chance of cleaning out the opposing "Dare Devils."

Additional silver cups have been donated for specials by the following fanciers: Chas. Newman, E. Courtney Ford and N. H. Hickman. These cups will be given for best in their breed. Other cups are also promised by several prominent doggy enthusiasts.

P. D. Linville's field trial winning English Setter Maggie F. was recovered this week by her master. The bitch escaped from her kennel last May. She was last noticed by any one familiar with her when she jumped on a Sutter street car—presumably to take a trip out to the brush covered hills back of Sutter Heights, which she had been accustomed to do frequently when Linville would take her out for an afternoon's work. It was ascertained that a conductor had put a dog answering her description off his car the day she was missed. From that time until one Sunday about two weeks ago all trace of the bitch was lost. Linville and Albert Betz were on a train intending to enjoy a day's shooting near Danville when a friend imparted information which led to locating the dog in Crockett. Linville soon found out that his dog was in the possession of John Golabek, proprietor of the Star Hotel. Upon demand the dog was given up to her rightful owner without a murmur.

Some Facts About Distemper.

BY DR. CECIL FRENCH.

The germ-free filtrate, containing the toxins, is then injected in gradually increasing doses, until he can stand enormous doses. By that time his blood cells have learned to secrete in turn a large amount of anti-toxins, which neutralize the effects of the toxins. The horse is then bled and the serum or fluid part of the blood containing the anti-toxin is separated from the remainder, and it is ready for introduction into the blood of the human sufferer, and also into that of chickens suffering from roup, and will supply what in a fatal case the blood cells of the latter have not the power to secrete in sufficient quantity themselves.

A remarkable German experiment supports the view that the cure of infectious diseases depends on anti-toxins. Tetanus, otherwise known as lockjaw, is due to toxins circulating in the blood stream, which are secreted by specific microbes located in any part of the body, to which they have gained access through a cut or wound. Some of the blood of a horse immune to tetanus (and consequently containing anti-toxin to the toxins of that disease) was injected into a mouse which was suckling young. This gave the mother mouse immunity and actually conveyed it through her milk to the young, for when they were shortly afterwards inoculated with virulent germs they remained unaffected, whilst other nursling mice whose mother had not been so treated died quickly from the disease. Here we have the passage of the necessary anti-toxin of this disease from one animal to another, and through the milk of the latter to its offspring.

So that it becomes apparent that an infectious disease will run its course, longer or shorter, according to the potentiality of the leucocytes and their secretions or the infecting germ, unless the subject under attack be artificially assisted with anti-toxins prepared outside his body. With one or two exceptions, notably the effect of quinine on the malarial micro-organism, no drug or medicine is known that can subdue or influence to any very great extent the course of the existence of the microbe causing an acute general infection, such as we have to deal with in distemper. Drugs powerful enough to destroy the bacteria, if introduced into the system with that object in view, would also bring about the extermination of the blood cells and speedy death of the subject.

Great stress is laid by some on the necessity of "reducing the fever." Every medical man knows how easy it is to be deceived in judging of the amount of temperature present in any case, without the use of the clinical thermometer. The latter is the only sure method to enlighten oneself on that point. By its employment it is found that there is little elevation of temperature in distemper, and then only for a few hours at the outset of the attack, whilst for the greater period it is decidedly subnormal. The question of temperature need hardly ever be considered.

Others advise that the discharges be checked. These discharges are otherwise known as pus. Pus, examined microscopically, is seen to be composed of countless moribund white cells, many of them dead, germs, and degenerated fluids from the blood. It really represents a mass of the little defenders that have fallen in the fight. Now, it should be plain that any attempt to check this discharge, if it were possible, except by local disinfection, must mean repression of the very action it should be our object to promote. As long as the germ is present some leucocytes will die and become component parts of pus, and nothing will stop it. Cases that present a profuse flow of pus are very prone to complete recovery without any of the complications we are apt to witness where mucous membranes apparently escape.

Vomiting is very common and frequent in this disease, and it is rendered far worse by introduction into the stomach of a lot of irritating drugs, and even food at times.

In only one form in the acute stage do I favor employment of drugs designed to have a local palliative effect. I refer to those cases where the brain and its coverings become inflamed, as manifested by epileptic seizures. Occasionally, but very rarely, some good may be accomplished by the use of medicines that have a depressing effect on the excited nerve centres.

During the later and convalescent stages medication is advantageous. Tonics are beneficial, but even then, if the appetite be good, the best tonic we can give is food itself. Recovery from the intestinal catarrh, so commonly a sequel, can be materially assisted.

As far then as the medicinal treatment of distemper in the acute stages is concerned, it resolves itself mainly into sanitary nursing. I know of no canine disorder that needs careful medical guidance more than this, with its 30 per cent to 50 per cent of fatal results, and yet in no sickness is our poor friend and companion more tormented with useless and more often harmful concoctions than in this.

Numerous testimonials invariably accompany these preparations, but they count for naught; for in those cases where a supposed cure has followed their use, restoration to health would have taken place in any case, from the dog's own innate power of recovery. And it should be further remembered that few men who have not been trained medically are competent to diagnose diseases or judge of the effect of drugs on the animal system.

Before many months have passed we shall no doubt have an effectual distemper anti-toxin within reach of everyone, as exhaustive experiments are now being carried out in this direction, and in the light of modern scientific research we can believe in the efficacy of no other treatment than this.

Field Trials and How They Are Conducted.

Interest in field trials throughout the country is very much on the increase, as will be noted by reference to the scheduled list of coming trials. On the Coast the Pacific Coast Field Trials Club is the leading organization; in fact, has been in existence for nineteen years past. The Pacific Northwest Association is now in its second year of existence, but judging from the recent showing at Whidby Island interest has waned among the northern sportsmen for the time being.

How field trials are conducted is graphically explained for the novice, and is also of interest to the sportsmen familiar with the game by no less a prominent writer and handler than Luke H. White. He takes the Eastern Field Trials Club as a subject, which, with but a slight change of local coloring, will fit the annual trials out here almost perfectly.

The Pacific Coast Members' Stake closes the evening before the running. The fee is $10 to start, and all starters are handled by the owners. The All-Age closes on December 1st, with $10 first forfeit and $10 to start. The Derby for Pointers or Setters whelped on or after January 1st of the preceding year, thus allowing dogs an age limit of two years and a month, opens for entries on July 1st with $5 first forfeit, second forfeit $5 due November 15th and $10 as a starting fee. Purses are awarded to first, second and third in both the Derby and All-Age. Elegant cups and other trophies have also been oftentimes won during our trials. In the Members' Stake the winners receive suitable prizes. The Eastern Field Trials Club and other large organizations take in a large amount of entrance money, and consequently offer comfortable guaranteed purses in their stakes.

The Eastern Field Trial Club is the oldest and, in the opinion of many, by far is the best organization of its kind in existence in this country. Its first meeting was held 20 years ago on Robin's Island, an island about three and one-half miles from the mainland in the Long Island Sound. The second and third events of this club were also conducted on Robin's Island, but it was found that the sharp salt-water air of that place had a severe effect on the dogs, plainly injuring their smelling powers and in some instances producing well-defined catarrhal symptoms in dogs that had been prepared for the trials in the mild inland climates of the Carolinas and other Southern States. For this reason chiefly it is understood the Eastern Field Trial Club allowed the Robin's Island Club to purchase the island without competition at the small price of $10,000.

The next trials of this club were held at High Point, N. C., from which place the club removed its meeting to Newton, N. C., about nine years ago.

Meantime, various other clubs held field trials, including trials on chickens in Minnesota during the month of August, at which the Pointer Vandevort's Don proved the superiority of his breed in hard weather over his long-haired competitors; trials on quail at Grand Junction, Tenn., which afforded some pleasure and a great deal of dissatisfaction to those who competed; farcial trials on Fisher's Island, where Messrs. Peshall and Max Wenzel seemed to be judges, handlers, owners and managers themselves. An eye witness to this laughable event relates that Peshall gave Wenzel a prize and Wenzel gave Peshall a prize, although one point on a field mouse, by "Jimmy" Peshall's Pointer, was the only point recorded for either of the two competing dogs.

A prominent Southern California sportsman who was present at the Eastern Field Trials three or four years ago had, on his return here, an amusing story to relate concerning the self-constituted Pacific Coast authority on field trials. The Coastwise man and field trial authority had attended the club trials a year or two previously and being an unknown quantity, save for the persistent heraldings of his great abilities, coming from his own sport and pen—he was given the opportunity of acting as one of the judges. "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread." When the local Dogherly arrived here again his stories were homastic and grandiloquent and a few of those who did not know him were inclined to think he was "some punkins on bird dogs." The gentleman who pricked the bubble on his return from Newton had heard nothing but self-praising eulogistic stories and when he met the Eastern sportsmen and spoke of our windy friend's judging according to his information, he was heard with astonishment which gave way to hearty laughter. One and all the Eastern sportsmen were unanimous in saying that the judging by our Coast oracle was the most ludicrous exhibition of field trial judging and absolute ignorance of the sport that it had been their misfortune ever to witness. After what they had been led to expect and understanding the standard required of a judge of field trials, indignation and astonishment at the conceit and presumption of the Pacific star of dogdom finally gave way to laughter. Even at this day it is only necessary to remotely refer to the great man's work in the saddle to provoke the risibilities of those familiar with the history of the trials that year. In mentioning this incident we will be at the pains of explaining that we do not refer to H. H. Briggs, who has judged several Eastern trials with distinction and ability.

Trials were also held in New England, Pennsylvania and other places, but those events were, to say the least, not altogether satisfactory, birds being too scarce in these localities and the character of the grounds not at all adapted to the holding of successful field trials.

The purpose of a field trial's existence and the object of its trials must not be confounded with the idea of profit and compensation of any kind for its members, other than the sport and satisfaction derived from witnessing the competitions and the improvements of Pointers and Setters, to the breeding and development of which the trials are supposed to be a great incentive. The usual stakes or classes conducted at field trial meetings are The Members' Stake, for members only, in which professional handlers are not allowed to take part. The Derby of the Eastern Field Trial Club is for Pointers and Setters whelped on or after January 1st of the preceding year; as the trials take place in November this leaves one year and 10 months as the limit of age for eligible competitors. Nominations for this stake must be made on or before May 1st of the year in which the trials are to be held. For each nomination a forfeit of $10 in cash must be paid, and a second forfeit of $10 must be paid on or before August 1st. The remaining $10, called the starting fee, to be paid before the drawing, which takes place at the principal hotel, near the trial grounds for instance, the night before the running takes place, always selected as the headquarters of the managers during the trials.

The prizes in this stake are usually $300 to the winner of first, $200 to second and $150 to third.

The All-Aged Stake, open to Pointers and Setters who have never won a first prize at any recognized trials in the United States or Canada. The prizes in this stake are about the same as in the Derby. Recently the plan of requiring the payment of a nomination fee of $10 on or before November 1st was adopted by the Eastern and other clubs; $10 additional to be paid before the drawing takes place.

The Champion Stake, for winners of first prizes, at recognized field trials held in the United States or Canada, has been superseded by the Free-for-All Stake, open to dogs of any age or record; entrance fee $50, the aggregate of which fees, with $250 added by the club, constitutes the amount of the three prizes offered.

The Members' Stake always begins the sport, and this usually starts on a Friday and closes on Saturday evening. While it seldom attracts serious attention from owners, handlers and others who are interested in the greater stakes, it affords much sport to those who take part in it and serves the double purpose of familiarizing the managers with the location of heaves, feeding grounds, cover, etc., while the full day's rest on Sunday gives time for the birds to settle down and recover from the effects of being disturbed, and the Derby dogs are thus enabled to work under natural and fair conditions.

The handlers or trainers always begin preparing their dogs at the opening of the shooting season [in the East], which at present is October 15th. This brings into North Carolina quite a number of "bird men," as the natives call them, from almost every State in the Union and frequently from Canada and Great Britain. These trainers are always gentlemen of intelligence, responsibility and refinement, no other being suitable either for the skillful training and development of high class dogs or for association with the class of sportsmen who support and attend field trials, these latter being of the very best quality to be found anywhere.

A few weeks of steady work and anxious care usually puts the prospective competitors in the best of form. Two or three days' rest after the fine touches have been laid on to its training puts each dog on its "edge" for the contest. The natives of the little town and surrounding country are at last gratified by the appearance first of the secretary, next the managers, then a strange face appears, its wearer unknown to the complacent hotel proprietor, the shrewd looking stable proprietor or the excited colored "boy," the latter may be any age or size, from those of a scrawny kid to a burly church deacon. He knows, however, the stranger is a "bird man," and he offers him besides his best smile anything and everything the town affords, including his own services during the trials, for almost any consideration at all.

The handlers, dogs in crates, owners, spectators, artists, reporters, etc., keep arriving on every train until the Members' Stake is over, and by 9 o'clock Sunday night the hotels of the town are generally well filled. Old faces smile and greet each other, new faces become familiar at once, and the general scene is that of an agreeable reunion on both sides. This is too often transformed later on as the winners of the various stakes are announced on the blackboard, which is always placed conspicuously near the secretary's door, to a mingled aspect of delight on the part of all the owners, handlers or attending friends of winners; disgust, disappointment and chagrin on the part of most of the losers; assumed composure by some, complacency, good nature, sympathy and utter indifference by others. Growls, disputes, jokes, criticisms, yarns, etc., usually fill the air every evening, and so the time, generally less than two weeks, is passed at the headquarters of a field trial club during the progress of a meeting.

The drawing for the Derby takes place Sunday night after the last train arrives. Of the fifty or more nominations made on or before May 1st previous, about twenty, more or less, generally are ready to fill; all starting fees being paid, the name of each dog entered is written on a separate piece of paper, folded and dropped into a hat. A disinterested person is then selected to draw. The first name drawn out is numbered 1 and written down, the second is numbered 2 and written under it; the third 3, etc., until all the names in the hat are drawn out, written down and numbered in the order in which they were drawn. As some handlers may have more than one dog in a stake it is provided that the last name drawn shall be put back in the hat if two dogs handled by the same person should come in succession so that they would come together in the order of running, and, if it should be found impossible to separate such, they shall finally be allowed to go down in a brace. Numbers 1 and 2 are braced to run together, so are 3 and 4, 5 and 6, and so on to the end of the list, where, if there be an odd number, the dog it represents is given a companion by selection from the stake by the judges.

The field is reached bright and early next morning; saddle horses brought forward, hacks given instructions where to meet the crowd again, and the first brace "cast off." The three judges follow the handlers, close and watchful on horseback, who are usually on foot; then come the reporters, field stewards and spectators, all on horseback, in the order named. After about an hour's run the brace is ordered up. The hacks being on hand at the exact point given the drivers, the next brace is at once taken out and "cut loose." About the same length of time is consumed, during which several heaves of quail may have been found and the judges have had ample opportunity to observe the range, style, nose, bird sense, training, etc., of each competitor. A new brace is again called for, and thus the trial continues until all the dogs in the stake are tested, and then the first series ends.

The running is usually so gauged that the first series closes the work for the day. The same night the judges meet in their private room at their hotel, consult about an hour, during which their notes are referred to and the best dogs of the first series braced for the next series, and those that could not win, in the judges' opinion, are "spotted out." As yet these are not necessarily out of the race, although their case is supposed to be almost hopeless. It sometimes happens, however, that the selected ones play out in the second or third series, in which case the judges may call in any dog they please from the stake. Dogs thus called in have been known to redeem themselves and get into the money. But as a rule, the dogs "spotted out" lack the requisites of field trial winners.

After three series of heats, or brace exhibitions, the judges are generally able to place the winners of first, second and third prizes. If it appears to them, however, that any dog in the race is not independent, or might not work as well alone as when in company, such dog is ordered down for a spin without competition long enough to demonstrate the doubtful point.

All the stakes are run like the Derby, except the "Free for All," which is supposed to test endurance. Let it be remembered, though, that endurance in this case means keeping up top speed, sharp work and ambition. These, under the eyes of judges, seem altogether different to the "go as-you-please" style of an every day hunting dog.

The question may be asked, "Do the best dogs always win?" Not always; for there is too much difference of opinion as to what the best qualities of a field dog are. Besides, judges are not always impartial. Although under the experienced, careful and fair management of the Eastern Field Trial Club and some others, correct decisions are now the rule. There have been many erroneous and, no doubt, some unfair decisions at most of the field trial meetings.

Handlers always carry their guns, which must not be loaded until so ordered by the judges. Killing is not always required, or even allowed, but the handlers usually desire to shoot and are required to do so at least with blank shells over every established point. Killing is sometimes required to test the steadiness of competing dogs, but as retrieving does not count there is no necessity for dropping birds to every point at field trials.

In conclusion, it is not a far-fetched assertion to say that the future of field trials rests chiefly with the judges. The competent ones are few and far between. It is to be hoped they may always be available to act and thus preserve and make popular the most useful and delightful of all sports.

Doings in Dogdom.

Although the project of holding a bench show at Stockton "died a bornin'" it is not altogether unfeasible. Under the proper auspices a very nice little show could be arranged in the Flour City. Sacramento or San Jose is on the list of eligible cities for a bench show. A far better exhibition could be given in Sacramento than the poor showing made last year if handled under the proper management. When we refer to the probable success of a show in Stockton we mention the matter taking into consideration a somewhat different program and management than originally contemplated.

The Turf, Field and Farm of last week has the following announcement from a Coast correspondent.

"Speaking of weddings, Dave Sinclair told me recently of his engagement to Miss Freda J. Hatje, of Alameda, who is an enthusiastic breeder of Japs and Mastiffs, has lately become interested in Cocker, and was one of the organizers of the California Cocker Club."

Whether this is true or not, we cannot tell, certain it is that Mr. Sinclair was responsible for the statement and while requesting our silence in the matter was rather equivocal in giving direct information. At all events the par has gone the rounds of the local fancy and has been the most interesting bit of gossip for the week past.

Another matter in the journal just quoted shows rather bad taste on the writer's part, we mean the references detailing the proceedings of the Pacific Fox Terrier Club and the comment on one of the members.

County Game Laws in Force.

The present State Game and Fish Laws are in force and unchanged in the following counties:

Alameda,	Monterey,	Solano,
Colusa,	Santa Cruz,	San Joaquin,
Contra Costa,	San Benito,	Sonoma.
Merced,

The following counties have adopted ordinances in regard to fish and game, and which are now in force as follows:

Fresno—Quail, Nov. 1 to Feb. 1.	Quail, Oct. 15 to Jan. 15.
Marin—Male deer, Aug. 1 to Sept. 15.	Shooting on county roads or in cemeteries prohibited. The use of "pump" gun, repeating shotgun or any kind of magazine shotgun for hunting in the county is prohibited.
Monterey—Sea gulls and blue cranes, killing of prohibited. Use of guns of larger caliber than 10-gauge prohibited.
Santa Clara—Quail, Oct. 8 to Feb. 1.
San Mateo—Quail, Nov. 1 to Dec. 1.	Rail, Oct. 15 to Nov. 15.
Shooting from boats at high tide prohibited.

The Lady and the Tigers.

A record tiger shooting performance by a lady is described by a correspondent in a recent issue of The Field: "Miss Pole, niece to Lieutenant-General Sir George Luck, was the lady, and as the object of the shoot was solely to get her a tiger, the party assembled was a small one—namely, Sir George Luck, Lieutenant-Colonel Ellis, R. E., Captain Cook, A.-D.-C., and two Indian friends. The shoot was to last four days, from a camp about ten miles north of Parangur, on the Rohilkhand and Rumaon Railway. Thirty-six elephants were collected to form the line, and it was evident on our arrival in camp that our hosts had left nothing undone to ensure success. First day:—On approaching the River Sardah we spied an alligator basking on the sands on the opposite bank. Miss Pole killed it with the first shot. Arriving at the beat, and information being vague, we formed 'line for swamp deer, and before long one fell, like the alligator, to the lady's rifle. Second day:—Towards 1 P. M. out came a topping tiger making straight for Miss Pole. Bang went her .303 and 'stripes' was a corpse. One shot, no more, and he never bulged. Almost at the same time another came out to Sir George, which shared the same fate, and yet another, but this one was too cunning and got off unharmed. Needless to say, the excitement and rejoicings were great. Mahouts shrieked 'Shabash' and clapped their hands, coolies stared in blank astonishment. All seemed mad with delight. Luncheon followed, and then a start for No. 3, the wily one. The first beat proved too much for him, with all his craft he could not escape Miss Pole, who howled him over when going at full speed at 130 yards. This was not my first experience of tiger shooting, and I can safely affirm that it was the prettiest piece of shooting I have ever witnessed. Third day:—Sir George Luck killed the first tiger of the day. Then out came a grand beast who crossed Miss Pole to her left and plunged into a small stream in the hope of escape, but this was not to be permitted. On reaching the further bank he received a bullet which struck him full in the body. He thereupon threw himself into the stream again and endeavored to regain the bank, but only just managed to scramble up the bank where he collapsed and was stone dead before any of us could get up to him." And yet we read that the modern women are neurotic.

Riding Down Rabbits in Kentucky.

A gentleman from Mississippi was once visiting at the home of a gentleman in Kentucky, when the host proposed a rabbit hunt. The guest was sorely offended until he learned that the rabbit hunt is one of the favorite sports of Kentuckians. The gentleman from Mississippi took offense for the reason that in his State gentlemen shoot birds or deer and leave rabbits for "poor whites and niggers." The Kentuckian hunts rabbits as he does well nigh everything else—on horseback.

The Kentucky hunter learned a long time ago that the little cotton tail is even a bigger coward than is generally supposed. Every one who has seen the little animal knows that it is coward enough to run on all occasions. But there is one degree of cowardice far worse—the cowardice of the quitter who is so badly frightened that he gives up and will not even run. This is the extreme of yellowness, and the Kentuckian, discovering this in the rabbit, adapted his style of hunting to suit. The hunters simply mount fleet horses, go into a field, scatter and ride about until a rabbit is started. Away goes the hunter who is nearest and across the field they fly like streaks. A fairly good horse can keep close to a rabbit, and before bunnies has any great hope of escaping pursuer number one pursuer number two rides in ahead of him, and he turns to dart across the field in another direction. Before he has gotten over the confusion of the turn number three comes in to cut him off in the new direction. Now the rabbit is more than ever confused. He darts away, terror stricken, between the horses' feet only to hear the pursuing hoofs almost upon him and to see another hunter riding in ahead. One or two more turns and the little cotton tail is hopelessly confused and utterly disheartened. At last, paralyzed with terror, he squats upon the ground, and the hunter has only to dismount and pick him up.

This sort of sport the Kentuckian prefers to fox hunting, as it is more exciting and more full of incident. Sometimes the program is varied slightly by each hunter carrying a stick with which he strikes at the fleeing animals, but this is not in great favor, as it is apt to end the chase too soon, and it is not so clean cut as the hunting which must drive the rabbit into a state of abject terror before it makes a kill.

One year ago a number of young men headed by Clarence L. Kerr of Middletown, in the heart of the Blue Grass, gave a Thanksgiving hunt to which the young men and women for miles around were invited. Certain fields were carefully preserved during the summer and fall until Thanksgiving Day, when over 120 men and women, all mounted, assembled in the streets of the village and started for the hunting grounds. The fields were surrounded, the rabbits started, and the chase that followed looked like some sort of magnified polo game. The man who caught the first rabbit with true Kentucky politeness handed it to a young lady who hung it as a trophy from her saddle. This action became a precedent and every rabbit went to the saddle of some lady rider. There were scrambles after that over many a rabbit, for each youngster was bound that the lady he admired should have more rabbits than the rest, and the smiles he received amply repaid his troubles. When the fields had all been hunted and something more than 400 rabbits killed the sports of the day ended at a picnic table, where rabbit pie, roast chickens, and plum pudding were served in abundance.

Notes of the Hunting Season.

Duck shooting has been excellent this week in most localities. Bunches of northern birds are making their appearance daily, the advance guard of the main army nearly due. Among the new arrivals, widgeon and bluebill are fairly conspicuous. Canvasback ducks are becoming more plentiful from week to week; a number of good bags of these birds were made last Sunday and during the week at favorite resorts for these ducks.

Canvasback ducks are frequently confounded with "red-heads." The two varieties are somewhat similar, but the similarity, upon comparison, is more imaginary than real. The canvasback is larger, its head darker and its bill is a deep black in color, whilst the bill of the "red-head" is an intense blue or a slatish color. These distinctions can easily be remembered by the most inexperienced hunter. "Cans" are very tenacious of life and possess a well developed hump of stubbornness apparently. When wounded they will dive long distances and seem to prefer death by any other means than by the shotgun route. A "cripple" will usually look around for a second or two, to see where the danger lies, then down he goes and if weeds, tules or other cover is available it is good-by to that duck—it will not be seen again.

In hunting canvasbacks a knowledge of their ways and habits is essential for a successful morning's shooting. They will, generally, only decoy where they are accustomed to feed or where they believe there is food for them. This is one reason why the Pringle ponds and Tubbs' island dammed-up sloughs afford such excellent canvasback shooting. At such places they come in readily. Decoys in imitation of their own kind are best, but "red-head" decoys are almost as good.

The best results are obtained when the sportsman is in a blind located as far as possible in the water from the edge of the pond or shore. The birds are extremely cautious. This quality is shown when alighting near decoys. They will come along with rocket-speed and fly straight as an arrow past the decoys. This is a critical time for the novice, who generally bangs away with both barrels, rarely getting more than one or two birds, frequently missing them entirely, because he did not hold far enough ahead. The "cans," when unmolested, will keep in flight and when, perhaps even at as short a space as 100 yards or as great a distance as a half mile, will suddenly whirl. The knowing hunter will watch for this maneuver, and the birds, with a wide sweep, will circle and "pitch" into the water near the decoys; but many times, just out of gunshot. The shooter who understands the birds will now patiently await developments. The birds scrutinize the wooden decoys as if in wonder and surprise; then they grow inquisitive, swim to and fro, gradually approaching the decoys; then they will seem to hesitate, as if cogitating whether it is safe or not to approach any nearer. When they "bunch," which they invariably do, the movement which the shooter is waiting for, he lets go both barrels and mostly has several fat "cans" for his bag. Another method is to wait until they are thoroughly at home in the pond and when they commence diving for food, the shooter picks them off in ones and twos as they come to the surface. In this manner some hunters will get every bird in a small flock of canvasback. These ducks are about the last to leave the bay regions in the spring. They are essentially a deep water bird. San Pablo bay is a favorite resort for them. Some hunters have great sport shooting "cans" out in the bay, where they have "baited" in ten or less feet of water and have a brush blind erected in which to lay in wait. A blind or thick cover, however, is not absolutely necessary.

If the hunter will remain immovable and entirely quiet the birds will come to the decoys. What frightens them away is a movement or other evidence that their arch-enemy, man, is in dangerous proximity to their feeding grounds. Hunting ducks on the bay in row boats or power launches is not as effective as going for them in a sail boat. For some unexplained reason a sail boat will get within gunshot distance time and again. With the other boats the birds will take flight when within an eighth of a mile. When the "cans" first come in from the north they are generally in fine, fat condition and splendid table birds. A notable exception this season has been in the number of canvasback shot on some portion of the Suisun, Petaluma and Sonoma marshes that were in very poor condition.

Duck hunting for a week past in the Suisun marshes has been fairly good, many of the club members having shot near the limit. Three shooters on the Alameda Gun Club preserve on Sunday killed the limit—50 of the birds were "cans." Four guns at Soars Point accounted for nearly 100 ducks, over 30 of them being canvasbacks. Point Reyes marshes accounted for a few bags of ducks on Sunday.

Four carloads of duck hunters left the mole on Saturday evening for a shoot in the Alameda marshes. Few large bags were made, however, on Sunday. Many shooters bagged good strings of quail instead.

Quail hunters were out on Sunday by the hundred. Reports from Marin county districts: Country, Tamalpais and Point Reyes clubs show many limit bags. Bert Patrick, Ed Hinklo, Jorry Johnson and Tom Deffenback had a good quail and duck shoot on the Marin Gun Club preserve. W. B. Chute and L. Abrams bagged 36 quail near Belmont. F. F. Field shot three days near Pescadero with a limit bag each day. F. Vernon and Fred Butler made limit bags at Point Reyes. Otto Feudner bagged 13 quail and an English snipe near San Rafael. Reports from many sections indicate plenty of quail.

Jackson's Napa Soda is sold in every city, town and hamlet in the State.

ROD.

Fish Lines.

Happy now are the striped bass fishermen and the hunters who frequent their chosen resorts in and about San Francisco Bay and its connecting waters, for they are the only fellows who never feel sad when summer says "farewell." The woods may sigh while the autumn winds tear away their leafy toggery; the seas may rise in anger and the waters on the bar without the Golden Gate may tumble and rage; but the lovers of the hammerless shotgun and the admirers of the seductive trolling spoon and juicy clam all rejoice when the time comes for the mosquitoes and hot days to go out and ducks and striped bass to come in. The bay fishing season at present seems to be at its prime and the rod and reel laddies are happy. We say "laddies," because all fishermen remain young.

What a variety of types one finds among the lords of the rod and the reel! Let us take a rapid glance at a few of them. First on the list is the conceited fisherman, boasting of his skill and his tackle. He endeavors to make people believe that he alone possesses the secrets of thesea and that he alone is familiar with the wonderful ways of the denizens of the deep, from sturgeon to shiners, from bass to smelt, and from rock cod to sting-rays. As a rule, the tales of his exploits, like the tails of his fishes, are long and uninteresting. For all that he is a good boy, and even the bad boys love him. Next comes the timid fisherman, always on the lookout for squalls, constantly suggesting difficulties and predicting dangers. He, too, is a good fellow, but he is a bother in a boat. After him steps in the lone fisherman, fond of going off shore in search of new grounds—a sort of fish-hunter—sometimes successful and often unfortunate. Nothing can induce him to stay long in one place praying for bites. Patience is not one of his virtues. The more cool-headed anglers criticize his methods and condemn his movements; he calls them "gardeners" or "beach rats." Putting the whole crowd into a scoop-net, we find, after all, only the generous fisherman, ever willing to give green hands the information they need, honestly telling them just when and where to drop their anchors, good-naturedly arranging their tackle or setting them up in business with some of his own, liberally sharing his bait with them, if they are "short," and, if need be, dividing with them the last few swigs of his flask. There is a sort of self-made Masonry among fishermen. In truth they are a band of brothers, from the humble wharf-fisherman or hilarious crabber to the learned and long-distance caster. They are all a gloriously light-hearted set of young fellows. With them years count for nothing; fishes count for everything; and it is cheering to know that their numbers hereabouts, already surprisingly good, are constantly on the increase.

The success of the first Wilson spoon, the No. 4 size, was an agreeable assurance of sport to the striped bass anglers from the start. Then followed No. 5, a spoon a size larger. This was found to work more satisfactorily than the first one introduced. Observation and experience has demonstrated that a still larger spoon was not only practical, but splendid results ensued and now the Wilson No. 6 B is placed at the disposal of the angler. This size has been found better for the big fish, it will hold a whale, compared to it the No. 4 spoon looks like a La Forge spinner. The new spoon is a little over four inches long and slightly more than an inch in width, with a No. 7 ought Pennell eyed Limerick hook attached. For trolling its appearance is indicative of much effective work. The No. 4 B spoon is about two and a half inches long with a No. 3 ought hook, the No. 5 B spoon is nearly three and one-half inches long, fitted with a No. 5 ought hook. These spoons are made of German silver, the staples and rings of heavy phosphor bronze wire well soldered together. Results with the No. 6 this week have shown four fish caught with the big spoon to one on the smaller sizes.

Since the record catch of striped bass by Messrs. Jackson and McFarland in Raccoon straits, hundreds of anglers have enjoyed the sport developed in the most favorable waters of San Francisco bay. The straits and adjacent waters of the Marin shores had been prospected time and again with most unsatisfactory results. Many spots on the shores are ideal for casting, but this style of angling has generally been handicapped by the strong winds, particularly in the afternoons, blowing off or on shore. The catch shown in the illustration comprises seven fish that weighed 85 pounds. The next best catch so far is one made by Al Wilson and G. W. Mitchell, twelve fish which scaled 123 pounds. The bass caught for the last three weeks generally range from 7 to 15 pounds as an average.

On Sunday last a large flotilla of boats were in commission by a crowd of jolly anglers who trolled for bass in the straits and along the Marin shores. Very few fish were caught along the Angel Island shores, as has been usual. Most of the fish were caught between Point Bluff and California City. Near the latter place C. B. Hollywood hooked an 18 pound bass, the largest of six he caught. J. Bliss hooked two, a nine pound fish being the heaviest. Louis Rondeau hooked three fish, Will and J. S. Turner two. Jas. Chesley, Walter Burlingame and Dr. Chas. Hart hooked three fish, 12, 10 and 8 pounds in weight respectively. They were taken at the high point just south of Paradise Cove. At one time on Sunday, four different anglers were observed handling a fish simultaneously; this shows that that there must have been a good run of bass on. Other anglers who were out and hooked fish were: Bob Tittle, J. A. Pariser, Lou Bantz, Lou Clark, F. Carroll, G. Luttrell, C. H. Kewell, F. Seidenberg, Al Cumming, F. H. Bushnell, J. Cracknell, F. Marcus, J. Utschig.

W. S. Kittle and R. W. McFarland were out on Saturday and hooked a ten pound fish in the straits. A. M. Cumming, F. Dassonville and A. E. Lovett also caught several nice fish. On Wednesday, Eli Marks and Sam Heller hooked five fish; other boats were also successful.

One thing has been demonstrated, trolling in a power launch is ineffective for various reasons. The speed of the boat cannot be properly regulated for one and the noise made by the machinery is possibly another cause for non-success. The row boat seems to be the proper craft for bass trolling.

The "white house" pool at Point Reyes is full of large salmon and some nice sized steelheads. Last Sunday a number of anglers were at the "tide water," but strive as they would could not get a salmon to rise at spoon, fly or bait. Among the sportsmen at the Point on Sunday were J. H. Sammi, M. J. Geary, John Gallagher, T. Kierrulff, J. B. Kenniff. J. Fatjo landed two half pound steelheads.

The run of salmon in Eel river this season promises to be larger than for any one of several seasons in the past. The river as far as tide water extends is alive with fish. Schools of salmon trout that would swamp a boat on the riffles are going up stream and some of the finest salmon ever caught are being taken near the site of the old salmon cannery.

There are some good reasons to believe that under present conditions the salmon production in Eel river will steadily increase. The State fish hatchery at Price creek has let loose millions of small salmon in Eel river and they are just beginning to show up when the salmon return from the ocean. This year 1,000,000 more will be hatched and possibly several millions will be turned into the stream. These will go to sea to return in three years and enlarge the output of salmon.

But the hatchery is not the only benefactor. The law which makes a close season during the salmon run from sunrise on Saturday to sundown on Sunday during which time no salmon are to be taken with net or seine is one of the causes of better supply. The fishermen are now at the height of their season.

THE FARM.

Dentistry for Horses.

While it is still in its infancy, yet nearly all the operations that are practiced on human teeth are now practiced upon those of the horse. The caries of the teeth of the horse is of frequent occurrence, and no part of the tooth is exempt from this disease. It may attack the external surface of the crown, neck or root, or it may begin in the center of the tooth around the pulp cavity and gradually extend outward. The molars are the teeth usually affected, the incisors rarely, and the canines never suffer from this affection. When the diseased process goes on to suppuration, as it usually does, if the tooth be the first or second upper molar, a fistulous opening is formed into the nasal cavity; if the third, fourth, fifth or sixth upper molar, the pus collects in the maxillary sinus, causing a bulging of the face; if the tooth is a lower molar, the fistula usually opens on the lower margin of the inferior maxilla. When the diseased process has extended too far to save the tooth, the tooth is extracted, and if there be a collection of pus in the sinuses they are trepanned and all healed together. If the cavity is small it is filled the same as a human tooth, with an amalgam composed of the fillings of a mixture of tin and silver, combined with mercury in suitable proportions.

An exostosis or bony enlargement sometimes grows on the root of a horse's tooth. Such teeth have to be extracted, or the enlargement reaches a great size. Foreign substances, such as sticks of wood and pieces of corn cobs, frequently become lodged between the teeth or in the gums. This condition is marked by a continual champing of the jaws, excessive flow of saliva, difficulty of eating, rapid emaciation etc. Fractures of the teeth are of annoyance to the horse. The fracture may be longitudinally or transversely.

When a molar tooth is absent from any cause its opposing tooth grows down and injures the gum of the opposing jaw. These have to be cut off or extracted. Horses of all ages suffer more or less from long, sharp, and projecting points which are often found on the molar teeth. They are situated on the inside of the lower jaw, being narrower than the upper one, and the two rows of teeth do not come in direct opposition, leaving parts that do not come in wear. These sharp points give the horse great pain by lacerating the tongue and cheeks. The animal is relieved by cutting off these sharp projections and then smoothing with a file.

Hog Cholera Preventive.

The Bureau of Animal Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture recommends the following mixture as a tonic and appetizer to fortify the systems of the hogs and make them more resistant to disease: Wood charcoal, 1 pound; sulphur, 1 pound; common salt, 2 pounds; sodium hyposulphite, 2 pounds; sodium sulphate, 1 pound; antimony sulphide, 1 pound; powder and mix. Give a tablespoonful to each 200 pounds of weight in mushy food once a day to all the hogs. It will improve their condition.

Mr. Geo. F. Morrow, the well known grain merchant of this city, advises farmers to raise red and black oats. He says that California heretofore depended upon Washington and Oregon for supply of 80 per cent. of the oats consumed. Oats at $1.20 per hundred, and a ton to the acre, if far better than wheat at 95c.

M. F. Martin of Siskiyou county has sold a band of 1600 sheep to a buyer for San Francisco butchers. Eight hundred of them have just been sent down by train and the balance will soon follow. They are common sheep, yet the old ones sold for $2.50 and the lambs $2.25, after the wool was taken off.

What Does Milk Cost?

Prof. Haecker, of the Minnesota Experiment Station, has for nine years been settling this question by actual demonstration, and recently gave a summary of his work. In brief it is:

"The first year 100 pounds of milk cost 60 cents, while the price of feedstuffs was about the same as now, and the yield of the herd averaged very fair, namely, 6000 pounds of milk, or 180 pounds of butter fat. The second year the cost was about the same, 61 cents per 100 pounds of milk; but in the third year it was reduced 35 cents per 100 pounds, with the same cows, and prices of feedstuffs the same. The only difference was that they had calculated the percentage of protein, and selected the foodstuffs where this was sold the cheapest. He said he did not care for carbohydrates, fats, etc., as protein is the only essential part to look after. The cows require, on an average, two pounds of protein per day."

Pure charcoal, or the charred wood from the stove, when fresh, is an excellent aid in arresting bowel complaints, and is both simple and harmless. Where the hens have not had a variety, parched grain partly burnt affords an agreeable change and serves nearly the same purpose as charcoal. Oats, corn, wheat or even bran will be readily eaten by hens when they have been regularly fed on a sameness of diet, and such food will greatly aid in arresting diarrhea or other bowel disorders. In experiments made to determine the benefits of charcoal in feeding, if any, four turkeys were confined in a pen and fed on meal, boiled potatoes and oats, and four others of the same brood were at the same time confined in another pen and fed daily on the same articles, but with one pint of finely pulverized charcoal mixed with their food. These had also a plentiful supply of broken charcoal in their pen. The eight were killed and there was a difference of one and one-half pounds each in favor of those supplied with charcoal. They were the fattest and the meat was superior in point of tenderness and flavor.—Farm and Fireside.

A set of books well kept on a farm is a good investment besides a source of much satisfaction to the farmer. Especially is this the case where a diversity of products are raised or much attention is given to stock. A record kept of the various branches of farming will soon show where the most profits come from and where to curtail expenses, etc.

TRY IT.

Make Them Dig.

Every poultry journal in the land keeps telling their readers day after day and year after year to make the fowls hunt and dig in straw for all their grain food. Now, there is a splendid excuse for this rule. While all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, no work and idleness makes a hen a non-producing loafer. What fowls need is plenty of exercise. When given their liberty, they will wander miles over the fields and hunt and dig for bugs and seeds, and then they lay the most eggs.

Now, if you make them dig in a foot of straw for all their grain all through the winter, also throw some large sized beef scraps among the straw, they will dig and hunt all day long and get the much needed exercise which imparts the vigor and health that promote the egg production and vitality that gives us the greater amount of fertile eggs. Make them work for all they get; only feed mash food, table scraps and green food in the troughs. If you can have clover hay, cut it fine and throw among the straw for them to dig after.

The bean growers of the Santa Maria valley will realize from $250,000 to $300,000 for the bean crop this year. There have been seasons when the crop was heavier, but not in many years has there been a season when a good yield met with high prices. The crop is being contracted for at 3 cents. They are mostly the small white and the navy bean.

Sampson B. Wright, the well known Sonoma county breeder of prize hogs and sheep, has purchased the prize-winning two year old Berkshire sow at the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo. "Model Princess" has won many high honors in the prize swine world.

George Anderson planted an acre and a half of his ranch on the Cotati to sugar beets last June. On the acre and a half he has raised over fifteen tons of beets. Next year he intends planting between fifty and eighty tons of beets.

A NEW CLIPPING MACHINE.

1902 CHICAGO

PRICE $15, F. O. B. SAN FRANCISCO.

"STEWART'S PATENT."

THE MOST PERFECT EVER MADE

A Revolution in Clipping Machine Construction.

INCOMPARABLY superior to anything previously manufactured at any price by any one. Surprisingly simple, strong and durable. No belts to slip, positive power. The teeth in large gear are cut out of solid metal (no cast) which must run easily and will wear forever. It has a rigid base, tubular upright, with a fine, strong crank handle, and unlike any other machine made it can be turned with either the left or the right hand. Each machine is furnished with the '99 Improved one-nut balance tension knife, which cannot get out of adjustment.

One of our customers writes us, after receiving the new machine: "Life is too short to fool away with my old belt machine. I can clip two horses now in the time it formerly took to clip one and I am not half as tired."

PACIFIC COAST AGENTS:

BAKER & HAMILTON SAN FRANCISCO

A steer, a cross product of a buffalo bull and a Polled Angus cow, has been on exhibition at Western fairs this fall. This animal is polled like his dam, measures 16 feet from the tip of his nose to the tip of his tail, girths 11 feet 9 inches just over the loin, is 6 feet two inches high at the withers and weighs 3700 pounds in a half fat condition at six years old. Color is black, with a shade of buffalo brown at the roots of the hair.

Most men should know it, but some do not, that it is an extremely risky business to move fat hogs in a wagon when the mercury is above 80. If they must be moved or marketed during hot weather, it should be done at night or very early in the morning. Several cases of heavy losses for lack of care in this matter have recently come to our attention.

ASTHMA CURE FREE!

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent
Cure in All Cases.

Sent Absolutely Free on Receipt of Postal.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

We want to send to every sufferer a trial treatment of Asthmalene, similar to the one that cured Mr. Wells. We'll send it by mail POSTPAID, ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE, to any sufferer who will write for it, even on a postal. Never mind, though you are despairing, however bad your case, Asthmalene will relieve and cure. The worse your case, the more glad we are to send it. Do not delay. Write at once, addressing DR. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO., 79 East 130th St., N. Y. City. Sold by all Druggists.

DISEASES OF THE HORSE AND HOW TO TREAT THEM

By Robert Chawner.

New Edition and Concise Manual of Special Pathology for use of Horsemen, Farmers, Stock Raisers and Students of the Agricultural Colleges. Fully illustrated. Bound in cloth. Size, 5½ x 7½ inches. Cloth.....$1.25

"It is an unpretending treatise free from technicalities, and well adapted for the use of farmers and stock raisers. The object of Dr. Chawner was to make a popular and reliable handbook in that department of veterinary science which treats of the horse and his diseases and in this object he has succeeded and supplied a practical want. There is no extraneous matter. Information is imparted with commendable brevity and in language plain and simple enough to be understood by all. The fallacies of the old school are rejected, and the treatment prescribed is that of modern practitioners."—Turf, Field and Farm. With the Breeder and Sportsman, one year, postpaid...$3.15

JOTTINGS.

THERE IS A CHESTNUT MARE over at Oakwood Park Stock Farm in Contra Costa county, that was bred by the late Dr. Herr of Lexington, Kentucky, and purchased from him by Samuel Gamble when selecting a lot of untried broodmares for the late Seth Cook who founded the great breeding farm. The mare has already proven that Mr. Gamble's judgment was good when he picked her out, as her name is inscribed among the "Great Brood Mares" listed in the Year Book, as the dam of Sable Steinway 2:23½ and Allandora 2:18½, by Steinway and Christabel 2:19½, by Chas. Derby, but she is destined to be the dam of some with extreme speed of the 2:10 or better order and it will not be many years before this fact is demonstrated. Over at the Montana Jockey Club's track at Butte on the 29th of last month Christabel accomplished a wonderful performance in the way of extreme speed, and this is the way a local scribe described it.

"A number of horsemen were talking of the mare's wonderful flight of speed when one offered to bet that she could pace a quarter in 31 seconds in present condition. She had two races in July, won both of them, but had not had any work since. All hands then said it was impossible, and one of them offered to bet $100 that she couldn't win it, i. e. go a quarter in 31 seconds, as he knew the mare's present condition. The owner of the mare then came to the rescue, took up the bet, and then telephoned to the livery stable and had the mare hooked to a wagon while the others went out to the track in a hack. The mare was then hitched to a sulky, warmed up a bit, and finally sent away from the three-quarter pole to the wire. There were two starters to drop flags and three timers in the stand. They caught the quarter in the remarkable time of 28½ seconds. That there was no mistake in the time was evidently proved by the watches, as all three caught it alike. This is surely a remarkable performance, for the mare had no previous work, and the track had nothing done to it since the meeting closed. During her working season she was timed many a last quarter in 29 seconds, and not only that, she can beat 30 seconds any time she is asked. It is conceded that Christabel is one of the fastest natural pacing mares on earth."

Christabel was formerly owned by Andy McDowell who took her over to Montana and sold her. She was foaled in 1893, and will be given a low record next year and then put to breeding. But the colt that is expected to add the most to the fame of Algerdette, the dam of Christabel and the other two above mentioned is Col. J. C. Kirkpatrick's three year old stallion Thornway now at Pleasanton race track. A mark of 2:05 should be earned by him next year and he is one of the grandest looking young stallions in America. He is by Steinway and looks very much like that famous old horse did in the days of his youth. Algerdette is by Allandorf, son of the great Onward and Alma Mater, and her dam is King Girl by Hamlin's great stallion Mambrino King. Her grandam is Leah that was by Blue Bull 75 out of a mare by the pacer Tom Hal. What a combination of fast trotting and pacing blood there is in this mare. It is no wonder that the produce by Steinway and his great son Chas. Derby have speed.

Speaking of fast quarters, it is seldom one visits a track on workout days that one does not see something remarkable in the way of fast brushes by both pacers and trotters. I have often thought that an association giving a race meeting could make quite a hit by banging up small purses for horses to go against time for a quarter of a mile. Two weeks ago at Pleasanton old Flying Jih gave an exhibition that aroused the enthusiasm of the three thousand people present to concert pitch when he paced a quarter to cart in 30 seconds. Extreme speed is something that all like to see even if it is only sustained for a quarter of a mile, and there is no doubt but 30 seconds can be beaten very often if prizes are hung up for horses that do the trick. I do not think it would be advisable to offer prizes for anything slower than 30 seconds. There are any number of horses that can pace quarters in 31 and as many more that can trot the distance in 32 and that rate of speed is not uncommon. Few people on this slope however have seen horses pace or trot a quarter in half a minute and many would pay to see the feat accomplished. It would involve no record making, nor would it give any one the assurance that the horse that did it could finish the mile in 2:10 or better, but would be evidence of the rate of speed possessed by the horse.

Among the stallions that will be advertised in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN to stand for public service in this State next year is Hart Boswell 13699, now owned by K. O'Grady of San Mateo, but purchased in the East as a colt for the once celebrated Hobart Farm. I do not doubt for one moment that were Hart Boswell to be sent over East to Kentucky or New York next year he could have a full book at $100 the season on his breeding alone, and he is a grand individual and gets high class foals. He is one of those horses that have been buried during the past few years because his owner had so much other business to attend to that he could devote no time to advertising him. Hart Boswell is by the great Onward and his dam is Nancy Lee (dam of Nancy Hanks 2:04, Nancy Stam 2:30 and Dictator Wilkes, sire of ten in the list) by Dictator 113. No family had greater prominence on the Grand Circuit this year than the Onwards and the showing made by this son of Geo. Wilkes is truly remarkable. At the close of 1901 he had 153 representatives in the 2:30 list, 98 of his sons had sired 407 standard performers and 46 of his daughters were producers of standard speed. Among his new performers this year are Iva Dee 2:12½, and among those of his get that have reduced their records are such great race horses as Onward Silver 2:08, Gracie Onward 2:12, Major Mason 2:09½ and others. Seven of the Onward family have entered the 2:15 list this year, which is a greater number of new performers in that exclusive list than have come from any other family except that of Electioneer. While Hart Boswell's sire has been making this showing his dam Nancy Lee has had new ones added to her list. Her grandson Admiral Dewey 2:14½ is one of the phenomenal three year olds of the year and is one of the prospective champions. Few stallions have as royal a lineage as Hart Boswell, and the breeders who patronize him next season will be wise. Fillies and colts by him will be valuable before long.

Matinee Racing at Bakersfield.

BAKERSFIELD, Nov. 7, 1901.

At the first November matinee of the Bakersfield Driving Club, held at Agricultural Park, November 3d, a small but appreciative audience was in attendance owing to the fact that no one but club members are admitted to the grounds.

The first race of the day was won by T. H. Fogarty's Robin. Harry Gates second and May Hogan third. Harry and May tied for second place in the second heat but in the run off Gates proved the winner after a close and exacting race from start to finish.

The second race went to Elsie Monroe from Cahill's stable, who proved an easy winner over John, Texas and Rube in very hollow fashion, and Mr. Cahill was congratulated on all sides for the excellent condition of the winner as very few on the grounds thought she had a chance.

The free for all trot was the closest and most exciting race of the day, El Monte winning in two straight heats, best time 2:21.

L. S., of the Fogarty stable, won the last race of the day from a good field in straight heats, best time 2:28.

On account of the lateness of the hour the buggy horse race was postponed.

O. W. (Irish) Cahill, who helped Walter Mahen condition such good ones as Adelaide McGregor, Adelaide Simmons, La Belle and many others, has opened a public stable and at present has 10 of the best horses in Southern California under his ever watchful eye, including Elsie Monroe, May Hogan, Hijo El Diablo, Uncle James, a bay filly by Diablo, dam Laura M., Loganette and several promising colts. This young trainer will no doubt fill the place of the late Thomas Keating as a conditioner and driver of light harness horses, as he is a very capable and conscientious man and fanciers of the trotter in this vicinity are congratulating themselves at being able to place their horses under his care.

Tom O'Brien owns the very promising green mare in May Hogan by McKinney, who with very little training has shown a burst of speed that is phenomenal, and unless she goes wrong will be campaigned in the East next season by Mr. Cahill.

C. H. Corey has two in Mr. Cahill's stable, an unnamed bay filly by Diablo out of Laura M. by Almont Patchen, and the chestnut mare Loganette by Logan. Mr. Corey intends entering her in all of the pacing stakes in the East next season, as from the form she has already shown 2:10 is easily within her reach. Mr. Cahill says she is easily the best green horse he has ever handled.

It is with regret that lovers of the galloper will learn of the intention of the veteran Chas. Kerr to retire from the breeding business. On account of pressing business matters he has decided to dispose of all of his horses, having shipped a handsome batch of yearlings to the Bay the other day.

There will be another meeting on the 17th and I will endeavor to send you an account of it.

STANFORD STAKE FOR 1903.

Second Payment Made on 73 Colts and Fillies on the 1st Instant.

Secretary Geo. W. Jackson, of the California State Agricultural Society, sends us the list of colts and fillies entered in the Stanford Stake of 1903, upon which second payment has been made. It will be seen that there is a total of 73, as against 51 for the stake of 1902. This shows an increasing interest in this valuable stake, which is certainly having an increased value every year.

One of the most remarkable performances of the year by a trotter was the mile and an eighth in 2:24½ (a 2:08½ gait) by Janice, after winning a mile heat in 2:09. And what is still more remarkable she trotted the last eighth of the long heat in 15½ seconds. Now will some of those who indulge in criticisms of the Sidney family, and delight in asserting that they have a habit of stopping in the last part of a heat, please note this fact of William Harold's daughter. How many of the 2:07 or better performers, trotters or pacers, can cover a mile and a sixteenth at a 2:08½ gait and then come an eighth in 15½ seconds?

On a hot day drink Jackson's Napa Soda lemonades and be refreshed.

MILLARD SANDERS RETURNS HOME FROM THE GRAND CIRCUIT.

Two Mares That Won $10,715.

Millard Sanders reached the Santa Rosa Stock Farm last Wednesday evening from his campaign through the Grand Circuit with Dolly Dillon and Janice, and his arrival has been neatly cartooned for us by the well known Chicago artist Robert Dickey. Millard won a total of $10,715 with the two mares which makes them a very profitable pair for the Pierce Brothers, and Mr. Sanders is entitled to all the credit as he has not only won the money, but both mares have made very fast records and are now two of the most remarkable pieces of horseflesh in the country. While the showing made is an excellent one Millard thinks it should have been better as there was not a time during the entire trip when either was in perfect shape. Both contracted influenza early in the season and both felt the effects of it all the time. But one horse on the circuit trotted three faster heats than Dolly Dillon's 2:08½, 2:07 and 2:08 at Readville and that was Lord Derby 2:06½ who trotted in 2:07½, 2:07½ and 2:08 when he beat Boralma 2:07 over the same track. Janice comes home with a world's record—2:24 for a mile and an eighth, and also acquired a record of 2:08½ for the mile. As both mares reached home absolutely sound additional credit must be given Mr. Sanders. The readers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN are well acquainted with the history of these two mares and probably a majority have seen them race, as both went through the California circuit in 1900. Both are granddaughters of Sidney, Dolly Dillon being by Sidney Dillon, and Janice by William Harold 2:13½.

While Dolly Dillon and Janice were in the east, $13,000 was refused for the former and $10,000 for the latter. Dolly Dillon now holds the record for the fastest three heats by any mare now living, and Janice's last eighth of her mile and an eighth race was trotted in 15½ seconds, which is the most remarkable eighth ever trotted in a race by any horse. Mr. Sanders confidently expects both mares to beat 2:05 next season. They are the two fastest mares ever campaigned the same year by one farm, and Millard was the only trainer on the Grand Circuit that put two trotters from one stable in the 2:10 list.

A Short Sketch of Little Boy.

Perhaps the most remarkable of all of this year's racing performances is that of the pacer Little Boy, who pulled a wagon a mile in 2:01½ at Memphis, driven by C. K. G. Billings, an amateur reinsman. No pacer has succeeded in going a faster mile under any conditions this year, and only one other has succeeded in equalling it. That he can pace in two minutes to sulky with a special preparation seems sure, and it seems likely that he can beat Star Pointer's record of 1:59½. In view of the important place Little Boy has taken among the great harness performers, a short resume of his history may prove of interest, writes Gurney Gue in the New York Sun. In August of 1890, the Illinois trainer, Walter Palmer, noticed Little Boy at Joliet, in the stable of a Kentuckian who seemed to pay as little attention to training and caring for his horse as was possible. The entire stable outfit consisted of Little Boy, a sulky, a harness, one set of bopples and four rub rags packed in a water pail. The horse spent most of his time before and after his race wandering around the lot near his stable eating grass. At Joliet the horse was to race with a rather faster lot of horses than he usually met, and his owner, not having much confidence in his ability as a driver, asked Palmer to drive for him. A little before the race Palmer got up and drove him a mile in 2:17. This was altogether too slow according to his owner's ideas, so he told Palmer to take him out again and let him step the first half in 1:05, "and then," said he, "let him come the other half fast." Palmer thought the owner was crazy, but he took the horse out, and, after letting him go the first half moderately fast, he clucked to him, and he dropped his head and paced the last half of the mile in 1:02 so easily that Palmer almost fell from the sulky from sheer surprise. At that time the horse wore hobbles in his races to keep him steady while scoring, but he took all his work without them. Palmer concluded, after driving him in this race, that he could be taught to go his races without the straps, and bought the horse for $3000. Later in the season he gave him a record of 2:06½ over a half-mile track. Last winter his new owner used him as a family horse, and in the spring began giving him his work without hobbles. The horse came to his speed quickly, learned to score well and, after showing a sensational mile early in the season, was sold to Frank Jones, of Memphis. Jones drove him during a Chicago matinee in 2:03½ to wagon, and later on at New York he reduced the wagon record to 2:02. Jones then sold the horse to C. K. G. Billings, of Chicago, and that gentleman drove him when he paced in 2:01½ at Memphis. Little Boy was sired by Kenton, son of Harkaway, a grandson of Hambletonian, and his dam was sired by Longfellow, son of Mambrino Patchen. His blood lines, while not fashionable, are good, but not the kind one would expect to produce a world beater.

The Year's Best Records.

The best records of the year were made as follows:
TROTTERS.

Two year old colt—Oxford Boy by Red Clute 2:24½, dam Laurine by Stamboul.....	2:20
Two year old filly—Prelates by Ponce de Leon, dam Prelacy by Lord Russell.....	2:15½
Three year old colt—Admiral Dewey by Bingen 2:06¾, dam Nancy Hanks 2:04 by Happy Medium.....	2:14¾
Three year old filly—Hawthorne by Jay Bird, dam Lady Ham by Hambrino.....	2:13
Three year old gelding—Peter Stirling by Baronmore 2:14½, dam Medio by Cooper Medium.....	2:11½

Fastest new performer—Shadow Chimes by Chimes, dam Charmer by Mambrino King.....	2:06½

Geers and His Horses.

Ed Geers, the most conspicuous figure on the trotting turf, has landed back at Buffalo with his great string of racehorses, writes C. M. Bixby. The Village Farm car, which made the trip around the Grand Circuit, is at East Aurora, and the great but unfortunate trotter, The Abbot, as well as Direct Hal, have gone into winter retirement. This latter fellow, by the way, is held in very high esteem by Geers, and it would not be surprising to find him among the first flight of good ones next year. Geers did not return the notable stallion, Onward Silver, to Village Farm. At the close of the campaign he sold his interest in the sensational trotter to James L. Druin of Bardstown, Ky., which transfer means that this horse, whose series of victories have likely never been equaled, will be retired to the stud; and more than likely will never be seen on the turf again. But his races in 1901 will never be forgotten by those who saw them. Previous to this season Onward Silver was known as a horse with a great burst of speed, but it was accompanied by an inclination to break at the critical moment, and this kept him from winning many a race in which he should have taken down first money.

Geers had Onward Silver last year, then the property of the people who wanted to sell him, but there was no time at which the horses could fairly be said to be right. A sore mouth was one of his troubles, and this increased a tendency to rush away when asked for a little speed. These rushes almost invariably culminated in a break which left Onward Silver far behind the rest of the field, and then would come a great exhibition of fast trotting which would land the stallion on the right side of the distance flag. In one race at Boston he won a heat and took a record of 2:11½ after making a break near the three-quarter pole, and bow fast he stepped the homestretch in order to do this can only be guessed, but it was certainly as good as a two-minute gait.

Negotiations are under way for a special match race between Charles Lloyd's trotter Chain Shot 2:06½, and the Boston trotter Altro L., owned by John Shepard, for $1000 a side. Mr. Lloyd says he will make the match at once for $1000, providing Mr. Shepard will agree to have the match take place at the Empire City track. If this match is consummated there will be several other matches arranged to take place on the same day. Tudor Chimes, Queen Wilkes, Tiverton and Ida Highwood will meet in a four-cornered sweepstakes for $250 a corner; Sphinx S. will meet Moth Miller in a special, and an effort will be made to bring Alves and The Monk together.

Prince Alert 2:00½, the world's champion pacing gelding, may be driven on the Speedway in the near future if the present deal for his purchase goes through. Dan La Mar, the Wall Street broker, is negotiating for the purchase of the great pacer.

Lady R., an American-bred pacer with a European record of 2:17½, was recently sold at Hull, England, for 900 guineas. Lady R. had previously won a ten-mile guileless race in 28:52½ at Blackpool.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 11, 1901.
Dr. S. A. Tuttle—Dear Sir: Kindly send me the book on "Veterinary Experience," which you advertise to send free. I have used the Elixir for several years and find it does all you say. Very respectfully,
E. C. SMITH, 147 Allston St.

Jackson's Napa Soda cleanses the stomach and renders the eye clear.

SULKY NOTES.

Arion 2:07½ has had seven additions to his 2:30 list this season, and every one of them made their records in a race.

Myrtha Whips holds the record for Idaho. Her mile in 2:13 at the Boise meeting was the fastest ever paced in that State.

As the winter rains begin rheumatic aches are felt, but when they come drive them away with Vita Oil. It creates heat and stops pain.

Which will bring the most money at the Old Glory sale in New York which begins November 25th, Directum 2:05½ or Bow Bells 2:19½?

Sam Casto has a ten year old green pacer by Altamont that he thinks he can put into the 2:10 list next year and thereby give the old horse eight in that exclusive circle.

Goshen Jim 2:10½ is to be driven on the New York speedway this winter, and when he hits it just right there will be a great display of speed by the horses that head him in the brushes.

T. D. Condon of Portland, Oregon, has sent his fast young McKinney colt, T. D. C. to J. W. Tilden to train. T. D. C. won the three year old stake at the Oregon fair this year and is one of the great prospects of the northern country for next year.

Mr. A. B. Gwathmey of New York, has purchased from A. E. Perren the fast gelding Tudor Chimes 2:13 and will use him on the speedway. One of the handsomest and most popular of the trotters that go over that famous drive is Mr. Gwathmey's mare Salient.

Caution, son of Electioneer and the great broodmare, Barnes, (dam of Gov. Stanford 2:21 and Caution 2:25½) by Whipples Hambletonian, is the leading sire of the northwest this year. Four of his get have taken new records up there and two have reduced their records.

The Australian trotting record for two miles is held by the mare Lightfoot by Osterley, who recently trotted the distance in 4:31. The New Zealand record is 4:45 and is held by a horse called Vickery. The American race record is 4:45, made by Monette, and the time record is 4:32, held by Greenlander.

Simpson & Hellman, who have leased the Irvington race track at Portland announce that they will give free stall rent from now until March 1, 1902, to all horsemen who train their strings over that track. Mr. Hellman will have personal supervision of the track work and there are few men who know more about keeping one in shape than he.

Tecora, the famous old broodmare that died in Alameda county two years ago, secured her seventh 2:30 performer this year in Claymont 2:27½, a high class stallion owned by Dr. Maulsby of Wichita, Kansas. The names of those previously in her standard list are Chehalis 2:04½, Del Norte 2:08, Touchet 2:15, Tenino 2:19½, Lyla 2:27 and Coqueta 2:30.

Will Durfee is back in Los Angeles after his successful Eastern tour through the Grand Circuit, and will soon begin work on a string of trotters that he expects to campaign next season. Among them are several high-class prospects by McKinney 2:11½. Durfee drove Charlie Mac a mile at the Memphis track in 2:09 just before selling him to Ed Gaylord of Denver.

Clarence Day informs us that he will stand his horse Dictatus 2:17 at Dixon, Solano county, again this year with the prospect of making a profitable season, as quite a number of the best bred mares in that locality are already booked to this son of the great Red Wilkes. Dictatus made a good season at Dixon this year and over ninety per cent. of the mares bred to him are surely with foal.

James Butler of East View Farm, New York, has his trainer, Ed Allen, at work on ten colts and fillies by Direct 2:05½ that are expected to develop into race material. There are five two year old trotters, two pacers of the same age, and three trotters and one pacer that are three years old. All the two year olds have worked miles in 2:35 or better and two of the three year olds have worked in 2:22.

Among the horses catalogued to be sold at the Old Glory sale in New York this month are Directum 2:05½, McZens 2:13, Algonetta 2:14, Phoebe Childers 2:10½, Flare Up 2:14, Bow Bells 2:19½, Azote 2:04½, Jummy 2:20½, Adhell (1) 2:23, Ellert 2:11, Valentine 2:30, and many more that were bred in California. The entire breeding studs of the late Marcus Daly and W. E. Spiers will also be sold at the same sale.

Prince Rio 34797 is one of the young stallions whose name will appear in the next volume (No. 16) of the American Trotting Register. Prince Rio is owned by Mr. J. B. Iverson of Salinas, and is by Alta Rio (full brother to Chehalis 2:04½) out of Belle (the dam of Prince Gift 2:12) by Kentucky Prince, second dam Belle of Richmond by Hambletonian 10. Prince Rio is a handsome black colt and a most promising one.

Several parties who own colts and fillies by Diablo, and who have not been heretofore greatly interested in harness horses, will have their youngsters trained next year with the idea of racing them. The showing made by the get of this horse is such that all who own them are desirous that they should be developed. If the young Diablos in California could be raced next year there would be few stallions in America that could lead him as a sire of standard speed.

James E. Wallace of San Diego, while East this year purchased the standard bred stallion Kewanna 17,149 and will make a season with him in the spring at Sweetwater track, San Diego county. Kewanna is by Sealskin Wilkes 5525 (he by Geo. Wilkes out of Woburn Maid, daughter of Woburn 342.) The dam of Kewanna is Wauwatosa by Almont Pilot 763, grandam Wanita by Geo. Wilkes, great grandam Vienna by Berkeley's Edwin Forrest. Mr. Wallace has a grandly bred horse, one that is rich in the blood of Geo. Wilkes, Abdallah 15 and Almont 33.

J. W. Tilden was over from Vancouver Wash., last week says the Portland Rural Spirit. He says his horses have gone into winter quarters in good shape. Nellie Coovort has her shoes off, running in the paddock, but she is as fine as silk. Mr. Tilden, whom all trainers know brought out Kittitas Ranger and drove him a half in 1:01 before selling him, says he has a green pacer by Malheur, out of Mamie Harney, (the dam of Sidmoor 2:14½) by the Grand Moor, that is the fastest green pacer he ever set behind. He is owned by Samuel Elmore, of Astoria, and certainly must be a wonder if he is faster than the Ranger.

Kansas City horse fanciers presented George H. Ketchum, for Cresceus, with a cut-glass water bucket, in appreciation of his visit to the horse show, where the champion stallion was exhibited during the afternoon and evening of October 26. Hon. L. C. Boyle, ex-Attorney General of Kansas, made the presentation speech, and Mr. Ketchum undertook to reply, but was cut short in his remarks by the frantic efforts of Cresceus to escape from his attendants. It appears that the groom thought it would be a fine thing to give Cresceus a drink of water out of the beautiful cut-glass bucket before removing him from the tan-bark arena, but the son of Robert McGregor vigorously objected: he had been accustomed to a wooden bucket all his life, and the brilliant flashings of the cut-glass arrangement frightened him so badly that it required the efforts of seven men to hold him.

Hambletonian Wilkes, the only son of the great George Wilkes in California, will be in the stud again next season at Green Meadow Stock Farm, Santa Clara. Hambletonian Wilkes has a list of fast ones that grows year by year, and has had several additions this season. As he is one of the most vigorous of stallions, it is probable that he will rank for many years yet among the leading sires of new performers. Among those of his get that have secured low records this year in races are Sunbeam 2:12½, Vic Schellar 2:15½, Phoebeon W. 2:18½ and others. Few stallions have the big bone and heavy muscles combined with great finish and quality that Hambletonian Wilkes possesses. The two leading sons of George Wilkes to-day are Red Wilkes and Onward, and they are said to be much like Hambletonian Wilkes in their general makeup. At $40, which will be Hambletonian Wilkes' service fee next year, breeders will have an opportunity to get the blood of George Wilkes, through one of his best sons, at a very low figure.

C. A. Durfee has leased from the San Jose Agricultural Association an entire section or block of box stalls at the San Jose track, and has established the great McKinney 2:11½ there for another year. There is a large corral in the square made by these stalls, where colts or mares can be turned out and given a run. Mr. Durfee has also secured several large pasture fields for the mares that will be sent to McKinney's court in 1902. The champion sire of 2:15 performers will be limited to fifty mares next year at $100 each. He made a season to over one hundred mares this year, and at the end of the season looked and acted like a three year old. No more vigorous or sure horse lives than McKinney. He leads all stallions this year in the number of new 2:15 performers, having three to his credit, these being Charlie Mac 2:11½, Solo 2:14½ and El Milagro 2:14½, the latter a four year old. But six other stallions have as many as two new ones this year. These are Bingen, Jay Hawker, Athadon, Expedition, Axtell and Anteeo. It is a wonderful showing for McKinney, who now has nineteen in the 2:15 list at thirteen years of age, truly a champion record.

Stam B. 2:11½, one of the handsomest as well as one of the gamest and fastest trotters that ever raced in California or anywhere else, will make the season of 1902 at Pleasanton in charge of the well known horseman, Sam Gamble. Mr. Gamble has always held the same high opinion of this horse that he held of his great sire Stamboul, and has remarked to the writer more than once that if Stam B. could have a good opportunity in the stud he would rank with the great sires of America before many years. He corresponded with Messrs. Tuttle Bros., his owner, this fall, with the result that they will send the horse to Mr. Gamble. Sam has often said that the two greatest young stallions in California at the present time are Zombro and Stam B., and we are glad that he has now the management of one of them, as there is not a man in the business who has studied form, pedigree, action and blood lines more than Sam Gamble and he will be able to secure mares for Stam B. that will be suitable for him and help to make him a great sire of good looks and trotting speed, which he surely is destined to be with ordinary opportunities. Stam B. was a great race horse, having started in twenty-one races, out of which he got first money ten times, second money six times, and third money five times. He met all the best trotters in California in his time, went against aged horses when a three year old and was one of the sensational trotters of his colt years. A splint prevented him getting a record of 2:06 or better, but he can show an eighth at two minute speed almost any day. The owners who breed for good looks as well as speed are the ones that will reap the profits in the horse business in the future, as buyers will require these qualifications more and more. We understand that the price for Stam B.'s services will be $50 and at that figure his book will be full very early in the year.

Negotiations for the lease of Agricultural Park at Los Angeles by the Los Angeles Driving Club have been closed and the lease signed. The home of contention which delayed negotiations for several weeks was the exhibition to be given by the champion stallion Cresceus next month. It will be given under the auspices of the Agricultural Association, the Driving Club relinquishing control of the track on that day.

Among the trotting bred stallions exported to New Zealand from California some years ago is the horse Ha Ha 2:22½ by Nephew out of the Ryan mare, dam of Breastplate 2:23½, Ha Ha 2:22½ and Moses S. 2:19½, sire of Goshen Jim 2:10½. It is said that Ha Ha, now 21 years old, is the fastest stallion ever imported to New Zealand. One of his get All Day, took a three year old record of 2:40 and has since taken a two mile record of 5:02 in a winning race.

R. O. Newman, of Visalia, owns a well bred stallion in his handsome horse Keystone, now three years old. Mr. Newman will place Keystone in the stud next year and should get a liberal patronage from the breeders of Tulare county. Keystone is by Stoneway 2:22½, a son of Strathway 2:19, and his dam is Dewdrop Basler by Robert Basler 2:20, son of Antevolo; second dam Ida May (dam of Homeward 2:13½) by Grosvenor 1883; third dam the thoroughbred mare Susie K. by Alaric, out of a mare by Jack Hawkins. Stoneway's dam was Elizabeth Basler, who is also dam of Rubert Basler, so Keystone has a cross to this mare on both sides of his pedigree. She is by the noted running horse sire Bill Arp and is the dam of two in the standard list and the grandam of another.

Dictatus Medium, the four year old stallion that took a record of 2:24½ at the Hollister meeting, is considered a candidate for the 2:10 pacing class before the end of 1902. He is in looks a Red Wilkes all over in the opinion of those who have seen him and his grandsire. He weighed 1230 pounds two days after the Hollister meeting at which he paced ten heats within four days, having started on the first and last days of the meeting. He goes without hobbles, hoots or anything else but a simple harness, and does not pull a pound on the bit. In his six heat race, which was a contest from start to finish, he paced the last mile as fast as the first and the last half of it faster than any other half in the race. He is sixteen hands high and one of the best headed horses ever seen on a track.

Sandy Smith will leave in a few days for the Spreckels farm at Aptos, the home of Dexter Prince, Cupid and Aptos Wilkes. During the coming winter months Sandy will be at work putting in shape for the Cleveland sale next May a couple of carloads of young horses by these three sires. There will be a large proportion of them by Dexter Prince and the entire consignment will represent as fine looking a lot of trotters as ever left California. They were all bred by Mr. A. B. Spreckels and are from mares that are mostly of his own breeding. The Dexter Princes and the Cupids all have speed, while for big, handsome horses with substance and bone, as well as quality, no stallion in California can outbreed Aptos Wilkes. That Sandy will have this consignment in first class shape and land them in Cleveland in good order is a foregone conclusion, as there is no better conditioner and caretaker than he.

Another addition, or rather a couple of them, have been made to the list of standard bred stallions that will stand for public service in California this year. Mr. B. S. Krehe, a prominent and prosperous farmer of Sutter county, has recently received from the East the stallion Aleco 2:10 by Alyone, and the black stallion Pistol by Lancelot 2:23. Aleco is a pacer and made his record at Portland, Maine, in 1897. He was foaled in 1887, and is therefore fourteen years old at the present time. His dam Louise is by Sunshine 6831, a son of Brignoli 77, he by Mambrino Chief 11. Aleco is by the same great horse that sired McKinney 2:11½. Pistol, the other horse brought out by Mr. Krehe, is a grandly bred horse. His sire is Lancelot 2:23, son of Messenger Duroc and the great broodmare Green Mountain Maid, dam of nine 2:30 performers and also dam of the great Electioneer. Pistol's dam is by Alcantara 2:23, his second dam Wenonah is the dam of two standard performers and is by Curtis' Hambletonian, while his third dam is the renowned broodmare Jessie Pepper by Mambrino Chief 11. Within the first three removes Pistol's pedigree contains the names of three of the greatest broodmares in the Trotting Register, viz: Green Mountain Maid, Alma Mater and Jessie Pepper.

A writer in the New Zealand Referee says: One of the most commanding and fashionable bred horses ever imported to New Zealand from the "home of trotting" is Wildwood, who will be at the service of breeders this season. As a two year old this son of Good Gift and Amulet was raced in California, where he had a winning record of 2:34. Subsequently he was shipped to this colony, and passed into the hands of the well known New Brighton trainers, W. and C. Kerr, for whom, as a three year old, he easily annexed the C. T. C. Juvenile Stakes. Next season will be remembered as that of his famous match with Prince Imperial, in which he reduced the then stallion record of the colonies to 2:24 2/5. In all his subsequent essays Wildwood met with great success, his wins all being achieved in remarkably good time. Although he has only been at the stud since 1897 Wildwood has already made his mark as a sire for in his first season he begot Lancelwood II., Royalwood and Wild Poole, a trio that would do credit to any trotting sire. He also claims the champion two year old Rihonwood among his progeny, besides many others who have helped to swell the reputation of Messrs. Kerr's horses as a getter of winners. Wildwood is by Good Gift out of Amulet by Falls, second dam the thoroughbred mare Alameda by Langford.

Like all good things, Jackson's Napa Soda has a dozen counterfeits. Watch out!

EASTERN NOTES AND NEWS.

John R. Gentry will be raced again next year.

Nancy Hanks 2:04 is once again the fastest mare alive.

Robert J. 2:01½, held the pacing record for geldings seven years.

Prince Alert has gone into winter quarters at Providence.

There were 64,000 paid admissions to the recent Kansas City horse show.

A $10,000 purse for free for all pacers will be on next season's Detroit Grand Circuit program.

Word comes from Memphis that C. K. G. Billings will build a harness racing plant in New Orleans.

Midnight 2:22½, a new performer by Alcantara 2:23 is out of Theresa Sprague 2:25½, by Gov. Sprague.

About 2500 horses are sent every week from the United States to Africa for use in the British army.

Horsemen will learn with regret that the father of C. W. Williams died at Galesburg, Ill., on October 28th.

Potential, by Prodigal, took a record of 2:29½ this season, and worked a mile in 2:23½, over a half-mile track.

John Splan has secured the use of the Chicago Coliseum for a combination sale of light harness horses in January.

O. O. Smith, owner of Princess 2:27½ by Electioneer (dam of Ollis McKinney 2:21), has booked Princess to Cresceus 2:02½.

Up to October 31st there were 99,438 horses received at the Union Stock Yards, Chicago, against 89,626 same period last year.

S. M. Klotz will act as secretary at Detroit another years. The July meeting was the most successful ever held by the association.

Frank B. Walker says that Chain Shot actually finished pulled up in his third mile at Memphis, when he secured his record of 2:06½.

The owner of the stallion Dictionary, when asked why he gave the horse that name, replied: "By doing so I got all the names there are."

Star Pointer still holds the record for the fastest first heat in a race at 2:02, and the fastest mile in a race, which was a third heat, in 2:00½.

The Bishop, 2:07½, should be a factor in next year's 2:08 classes. He was timed a mile in 2:04½ in the heat Harold H. won in 2:04 at Terre Haute.

J. B. Chandler, who gave Peter Stirling his record of 2:11½ this year, gave the trotting Queen Alix 2:03½, her first speed lessons when she was a two year old.

When the books for 1901 are balanced it will be found that the Wilkes and Electioneer families have gathered in the greater bulk of the money offered in stakes and purses.

The developed mares are coming to the front this year with their produce, Colonel Cochran 2:12½ being out of Sally Toler 2:06½ and Nathan Straus 2:09½ out of Mary Marshall 2:12½.

A peculiar feature of the Memphis track is that the feet of the horses racing can be seen during every part of the journey around the track, as no portion of the field rises above the track level.

Another year will see Allerton 2:09½, the sire of over 100 standard performers, and he will be only 16 years old at that time. Truly he is as much of a wonder in the stud as he was on the track.

If report is correct, there are at least two men who have a high opinion of the pacing mare Edith R. 2:05. One is her owner and the other the man who recently offered $12,000 for her. Good ones come high.

Susie J. 2:10½ by Jay Hawker 2:14½ has gone into winter quarters at Elkchester, Ky., and is in fine condition. She is expected to be a great one in her class the season of 1902. Fred McKoy has charge of her.

Colonel Cody, better known as Buffalo Bill, recently lost ninety-two horses in a railroad smashup down in North Carolina, if report is correct. It is liable to prove an expensive accident, both to the railroad and Colonel Cody.

Little Boy 2:01½, holder of the world's pacing record to wagon, was formerly owned by Steve Trabue, of Bourbon county, Kentucky, who purchased him from a gentleman in Owen county for $125, and afterward sold him for $350.

Five of the ten new 2:10 trotters carry the blood of George Wilkes, and four carry the blood of Electioneer. The one not tracing to either of these horses is a descendant of that other great speed-siring son of Hambletonian, Happy Medium.

There is nothing that will promote more rapid growth in weanling foals than cow's milk, but many have found to their sorrow that colts liberally fed on a long-continued diet of cow's milk are more subject to puffs in their joints than those fed on oats. They can be fed milk with profit for a time when first weaned, however. After a few weeks it is well to diminish the milk and increase the oat ration gradually until the former is finally discontinued.

It is the glory of the American trotting horse that while he is used for sporting purposes on the track, he is at home everywhere. He is the national horse in the sense that he does his share of the work of the nation. He is the all-purpose horse.

When Lady of the Manor set the record for pacing mares at 2:04½ she wrenched her hip and has never started since. Mazette raced the first heat in 2:04½, came back the next heat in 2:04½, and it is predicted that she is good for next season and will beat 2:04.

Marvin, although near the 70-year line, can still drive as well as when he started the world with Smuggler, the first stallion to beat 2:16, and later on with Sunol 2:08½, Palo Alto 2:08½ and Arion, whose two year old record of 2:10½ still stands as a world's record.

Dan Patch 2:04½ is another proof that the sluggish horse, one that has to be driven in order to get him to do his best, makes the best kind of a campaigner. The horse that is inclined to loaf as much as possible saves himself a lot, and that is what counts when a long campaign is being made.

Searchlight 2:03½ has been taken to Selma, Ala., where he will remain the coming winter in charge of Trainer Ben Renick. Ed Mills is now sole owner of this fast, bandsome son of Dark Night. If his peculiar temper can be modified Searchlight will undoubtedly be campaigned next season.

In all probability E. F. Geers will remain with Village Farm another year, campaigning two or three of the most promising youngsters, and driving several other racers in which he is personally interested. The pacer Direct Hal, which the silent man bred and sold to the Hamlins, will be his crack green pacing prospect.

Frank Loomis is working Foxy Quiller on the Overland track, which is good, but not in the best of condition, and the full brother to the champion Cresceus went a quarter in 35 seconds the other day. The Overland trainers are enthusiastic over Quiller, declaring that he is a very speedy trotter and one that will never discredit his greater brother.

It is said that famous old Stony Ford Farm, in Orange county, is to be used henceforth as a cattle ranch. According to the story, the present owner, J. Howard Ford, has purchased and turned out upon the farm 100 head of steers, which will be fattened and butchered upon the place. Utility usurps sentiment everywhere in this age of money getting.

Quite a stir has been made among the horsemen at Terre Haute by the sale of Tertimin 2:24½ by Jersey Wilkes, by S. J. Fleming & Son, for a better price even than was paid to Thomas Dickerson for Galety by Edgewood, another Terre Haute bred animal. Galety was sold some months ago for $5000, but the price for Tertimin to a West Virginia buyer was $6500.

Vera Capel 2:07½ is now the property of Hon. J. W. Bailey of Texas, and will probably be used as a brood mare. She ought to prove a success in that capacity, for she was by that successful sire of speed, Wilton 2:19½, and her dam, Cricket, also produced the trotter Jim Young 2:26½. Cricket was by Mambrino Abdallah, and out of Daisy, by Mambrino Patchen.

The way to avoid giving a horse a record is not to start him. The man who sets out to win some money with a horse without getting a record with him is likely not only to get the horse to the wire first some day, but also to get into trouble for not driving to win. The honorable way to avoid a record is to keep the horse in the stable until it is desired to win with him.

Workmen recently began to plow the Readville track. About six inches of the top soil is going to be removed and the course given a new coating of clay. So many horses are trained over the track, that it soon becomes dead and slow. This was particularly noticeable this season. Great pains will be taken to make the track as fast as any in the country, in its new shape.

Byrl Wilkes 2:15½, that took his record this season is from the dam of Harry Wilkes 2:13½, the bright particular star of the 80's, and the fastest of the get of George Wilkes. Harry Wilkes was owned by William C. France, and raced the Grand Circuit successfully several seasons. To-day he is doing road horse duties over in a small New Jersey town, well cared for by his owner, with a snug berth in his declining years.

The Danville (Ind.) Republican has the following: L. S. Brown sold his fast pacing horse Chestnut 2:07½ to a well known Eastern horseman Monday for $3000. The purchaser made an offer to Mr. Brown of $2500 for the horse at the Terre Haute races, but Mr. Brown refused to sell at that price. Monday morning the horseman came and made an offer of $3000. Mr. Brown accepted the offer and the deal was made.

Sam See, the colored care taker who went over with Stamboul 2:07½ when that horse was sold at the Hobart dispersal sale in 1892 at the old American Institute building, was with that noted sire and show horse up to the day he so suddenly died at the Arden Farm, besides which he took care of the horse for a long time before coming across the continent, so he had actually taken care of that one horse about seventeen years.

Star Pointer's record of 2:00½ in competition was made at Springfield, Ill., in 1897. Prince Alert's mile in 2:00½ at Memphis recently ranks second. The best previous mark for a gelding in a race was 2:01½, made by Anaconda last August in a race with Prince Alert. Prince Alert's mile in 2:00½ at Memphis was within a quarter of a second of the race record for pacers, which is held by the champion Star Pointer. This record makes him the fastest gelding in the world and gives him a record surpassed by only two pacers, Star Pointer and John R. Gentry.

Sampson, the seal brown high stepper that won scores of prizes for John S. Bratton, died last week at the country place of Thomas De Ford, near Baltimore. Sampson and his mate, Sigsbee, were two of the most successful show horses of their day, having carried off the biggest honors at leading exhibitions from Boston to Kansas City. Sampson was nearly twenty years old, according to report.

The operation of trephining was recently performed in Lothario, a brown gelding, by Longstreet. He was an erratic runner, one day having the speed of the wind and the next without spirit and logy. His in and out display of temper caused many criticisms. It was believed that he was suffering with trouble of the head. It finally became acute, and he was trephined, a portion of the skull cut away, and a large quantity of pus removed.

Axtell 2:12, again ranks with the leading sires of the year, having had eleven new performers take standard record this season, including: Home Circle 2:13½, Ax 2:17, Astronomer 2:19, Illinois 2:21½, Westell 2:22, Saytell 2:22½, Oglebay 2:22½, Beetell 2:24½, Gladax 2:24½, Miss Finney 2:25½, and Axdell 2:29½. Among the Axtells that have reduced their records this year are the following: Ozanam 2:15½ to 2:11½, Axtellion 2:24½ to 2:14½, Agave 2:21½ to 2:18½, and Axtellene 2:26½ to 2:22.

Many Easterners are corresponding with California breeders with a view of purchasing stake prospects for the 1902 campaign, writes Percy in the New York Telegraph. At Palo Alto Farm there are many fast young trotters at present, but as usual, they will be auctioned at Cleveland next May. Eleata and Idolita, two that cost but little comparatively speaking, earned for Hon. Frank Jones, their owner, in the aggregate over $35,000. Eleata may be bred to Idolita next spring.

As a result of the various trials at different race meetings throughout the country during the season, I am of the opinion that the plan of sending all horses to the barn at the end of the third heat who have not been first, does more to prevent tedious scoring, laying up of heats, dangerously long drawn-out races, and pleases the occupants of the grand stand more than any other system, and at the same time it is the most popular with a large majority of the horsemen I have talked to on the subject, says Palmer L. Clark.

Chain Shot 2:06½, was sired by Red Heart 2:19, son of Red Wilkes, out of the once champion two year old filly, Sweetheart, by Sultan, that took a record at that age of 2:26½, and later reduced it to 2:22½. Sweetheart's dam was the famous Minnehaha, by Bald Chief. Chain Shot's dam, Pique, by Kentucky Wilkes, 2:11½, was out of Vexation, by Mambrino Dudley, 2:19½, second dam, Verona, by Volunteer, third dam by Rysdyk's Hambletonian. There is plenty of performing and producing blood in Chain Shot's pedigree.

John Kelly spent last week at Memphis attending the races. Quoddy Girl, Wistful, Lucy Carr, Circular, Larabie Rose and the rest of the horses under his care are still at the Lexington track, but will be returned to Buckingham track, P. Q., about the first of November and turned out Quoddy Girl, Wistful and Lucy Carr are thought to be with foal. All the horses in this string are owned by A. MacLaren. Quoddy Girl took a time record of 2:10½ at the Lexington meeting. She was bred to Charley Herr 2:07 last spring.—Stock Farm.

Something like a year ago C. W. Williams announced that he would make Belsire the fastest male representative of the Electioneer-Beautiful Bells tribe. At the Breeders meeting at Galesburg, Ill., a few days ago Belsire, in a splendidly trotted mile, earned a new record of 2:18. This gives him the honor his owner has coveted, Bell Boy 2:19½ and Bow Bells 2:19½ have previously been the two fastest of the sons of Beautiful Bells. Belsire is the last of Beautiful Bells' foals by Electioneer and is only ten years of age. His performance gives the famous matron at Palo Alto five trotters with records inside the 2:20 line out of a total of ten in the list.

There is no class of horses in better demand today nor bringing better prices than well-broken, handsome roadsters, possessing a medium amount of speed. This is not intended to refer to that class of road horses in demand for speedway racing, but simply those in demand for bona fide road purposes, those having speed enough to pull a wagon from a 2:50 to a 3:10 gait, and the ability to road from 10 to 15 miles an hour. Fair size, good disposition, a fair share of good looks, and good manners are necessary in horses intended for this branch of the market, and those filling the requirements are so scarce as to enable those buying them to sell to secure excellent prices as quickly as they place them on the market.

The fur will fly when Elastic Pointer, trial 2:09, and Direct Hal, trial 2:06½, meet in the stakes next season, as they seem sure to do if no further accident overtakes the Hubinger horse. Elastic Pointer is a brother to Star Pointer 1:59½, champion of all champions, and cost $10,000 a year ago. Lameness prevented him from making a single start during the 1901 campaign, but he is known to be almost a counterpart of Star Pointer as concerns extreme speed capacity. Direct Hal also cost $10,000, and Ed Geers owns several by him that are said to be very fast youngsters. It is very easy to get $10,000 for horses as fast as these two, for the stake events afford every chance to the owners courageous enough to make the investment. Next season we shall have, probably, far more of stakes open for the pacers. The public likes the pacer, the owners of them are, as a rule, anxious to race, so the entry lists are heavy at almost every meeting. Audubon Boy 2:06 has earned $19,600, and Dan Patch's season on the Grand Circuit netted his owner well toward that figure.

IMPROVEMENT should be the aim of every horse owner who sends his mare to be bred to a stallion next spring. No person who owns a high-class mare should permit her to be mated with an inferior horse in the hope that her many good qualities will predominate in the foal. "Breed up" has been the watchword of cattle and sheep breeders for years, and to this may be attributed the magnificent specimens of the various breeds that are the features of the large stock shows. "Breed up" should be the motto of every horse breeder, and if it has not heretofore been adopted by him, now is the time to appropriate it as one of the tenets of his stock farming operations. Always breed to the best in the line of qualifications demanded. If speed is the only requirement, one can breed to a fast horse that comes from a fast family, even though the stallion is as devoid of beauty as Don Quixote's famous charger Rosinante. If good looks, size, stamina and disposition are desiderata, however, then see that the mare and stallion both possess them, and all of them. Don't expect one of the sexes to reproduce all its good qualities from a union with an opposite that has few or none of them. Select the type which you desire to produce, and select the horse and mare that come the nearest to your ideal for your experiment. In the year 1902 let every horse breeder in California aim to improve his stock as much as possible, and to do this he must breed the best to the best and continue on those lines in the years that follow. By following this plan there will be more prizes and fewer blanks in the breeding business. It is not within the province of man to make anything perfect, but unless he takes perfection as his ideal in stock breeding, and strives to attain it as near as possible, his herds will deteriorate and become less valuable.

GREATER VALUES have been attached to the stakes of the Coney Island Jockey Club, which close Monday next, November 18th. The Realization will be worth at least $30,000 in 1903, and $40,000 in 1904, and this stake alone is enough to place the Coney Island club at the very front of progressive racing associations in the entire world. The Tidal is estimated to be worth $20,000 and the Century $15,000, but these are not all. For the June meeting of 1902 is the Foam Stakes, $1500 added, of an estimated value of $4000 two year old foals at five furlongs. The Surf, $1500 added, estimated value $4000, five and a half furlongs, two year old foals. For the June meeting of 1903, is the Tidal Stakes of $20,000 guaranteed, a mile and a quarter, for then three year olds; the Mermaid Stakes, $1250 added, estimated value $5000, a mile and a furlong, for then three year old fillies, and the Laurence Realization, with $10,000 added, estimated value $30,000, for horses now yearlings, at a mile and five furlongs. These close Monday, November 18th, next. For the autumn meetings in 1903, there is the Great Filly Stakes, with $5000 added, the ultimate value of which is estimated at $20,000 or over, for two year old fillies (foals of 1901), at six furlongs, and there are attractive provisions for nominators of the three placed horses. The Century Stakes is also on the list, a weight for age race, a mile and a half, $20,000 guaranteed, for then three year olds and upward, with nominator provisions. The Annual Champion, of $25,000 guaranteed, then three year olds and upward, two miles and a quarter, with provisions for owner at time of the entry. These all close Monday, November 18th, next. There is also the Laurence Realization of the June meeting of 1904, $10,000 added, estimated value $10,000, for three year old foals of 1901, a mile and five furlongs. Notice is also given that the Futurity of 1904, of an estimated value of $75,000, will close about January 2, 1902. Reference should be made, without delay, to the full details in the advertising columns, and remember date of closing, November 18th, 1901.

CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATIONS that hold fairs and race meetings should take a lesson from the associations over East that have demonstrated to the satisfaction of all concerned that regularly organized circuits are the ones that get the most entries and make the big profits. California associations can not expect, of course, to make any such money as is made on the Grand Circuit, but they can place themselves in shape to insure themselves against loss if they will but get together and organize. There are some that can afford to give large purses and attract the best horses. These should form some sort of an organization and pool their issues. The smaller districts can also form circuits with great advantage to themselves and to the horsemen, and there is no doubt but California could support several circuits each year—a main or central circuit where the purses would be from $500 up and two or three smaller circuits where purses of from $100 to $300 would be the rule. We suggest that an effort be made this winter to organize a main circuit at least, and that associations agree upon the size of purses to be offered as well as classes and make early announcement of the same. Large entry lists and large fields of starters will follow such announcement.

THOROUGHbred SALES are being held every week at William G. Layng's Occidental Horse Exchange in this city and prices have an upward tendency. It will not surprise us if prices of thoroughbreds advance materially withing the next year, as the enormous amount of stakes now offered for runners make the earning capacity of a good horse greater than ever before. On Thursday, November 21st, Mr. Layng will begin the closing out sale of Mr. Naglee Burk's Pueblo Stock Farm, and on that night will dispose of all the yearlings, two and three year olds. On the Tuesday night following, the stallions and broodmares will be sold, including the great stake horse Crescendo, and the well bred and fast stallions Brio and Drum Major. The mares are a royally bred lot.

December 3d, Mr. Layng will sell for W. O'B. Macdonough six yearlings by the great sire St. Carlo. They are out of his best mares and are full brothers and sisters to winners. The same evening he will sell seven yearlings by the fast horse Joe Ripley, and six two and three year olds by imp. Piccolo. The sales are held in a chair seated pavilion, under electric light and elegantly printed catalogues give buyers all information as to pedigree, etc.

FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS for a race for all ages at a mile and a quarter should attract a big entry list. This is the amount to be given by the Saratoga Association, the race to be run in 1904. But this is not the only stake advertised by this new organization, of which Hon. William C. Whitney is President and which holds its meetings at the most beautiful track in the United States. There is $40,000 for the produce of mares bred this year, and the stake is called The Hopeful. It is for two year olds. Then the Spinaway of $14,000 for filly foals of 1901, to be run in 1903, The Hopeful of $25,000 for foals of 1901, also to be run in 1903, and The Travers of $10,000, The Kenner of $5000, and The Alabama of $5000 are some of the rich prizes offered by the Saratoga Association. The conditions of all these stakes are set forth in our advertising columns, to which we call the attention of all horse owners and breeders. Entries for the same will close December 2d.

DAILY AMERICA is the title of a new journal devoted to racing, sporting and theatrical matters, that has just made its appearance in New York. It is a sixteen page paper and contains telegraphic reports from all the tracks in the United States, with form charts, entries and selections besides a large amount of most interesting gossip and articles on breeding, training, racing, etc. It has secured as correspondents many of the leading writers on thoroughbred and harness horses, as well as experts in all classes of sport. The form charts are the most complete ever published in any paper. Daily America will be a welcome guest to those who want their sporting news served daily. The journal is backed with a large amount of capital and is well started on the road to prosperity.

THE SPEED SALE to be held by J. M. Nelson at the Alameda track December 3d promises to be one of the best held in California in years. Consignments must be in by the 19th inst. to be catalogued and owners have but a few days more to make up their minds. Already a number of good horses have been hooked for the sale and by next week Mr. Nelson will have a list of them ready to advertise. Those who have horses to sell cannot find a better opportunity as there will be buyers for every good horse put up at this sale. Correspond with Mr. Nelson immediately in regard to consignments.

A STALLION DIRECTORY of horses that will stand for public service in California next season will appear in our holiday edition, December 21st. In this directory a card giving the name, breeding, place where the horse will be kept and service fee will be printed in a space to occupy one inch of a double column width, for the small sum of $3. This will give every stallion owner an opportunity to place his horse before the public early and the directory will be a very valuable guide to those who contemplate breeding mares next year. As the regular season for advertising stallions does not usually open until some time in January, the directory will be a sort of advance notice that will be greatly appreciated by all breeders. Those desiring space in the directory should apply at once, as the prospects are that it will be well filled, a large number of stallion owners having already taken space.

HORSES FOR SALE can be advertised at great advantage in the coming holiday number of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. An advertisement to occupy one inch of space will enable an owner to describe the animal for sale in such a manner as to give purchasers nearly all the information desired, and will be printed in our holiday issue for the low price of $1.50. As the edition will be the largest ever issued by the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN and will be circulated all over the United States, as well as in the Hawaiian Islands and Australasia, it offers advertisers a splendid opportunity to reach people who want to buy. The edition will be very handsomely illustrated, which will make it doubly attractive. Space should be applied for early, as that devoted to advertising will be limited.

The Horse Market.

Encouraging news comes from London to the effect that the demand for high grade horses of all sorts promises to be exceedingly good during the ensuing year and that the home supply is wholly inadequate to meet it. A very festive season is predicted for the British metropolis and immense numbers of all sorts of horses will be required. Naturally the dealers turn first to the United States for supplies when they are not to be obtained in Britain. Already prices are very high. At a sale held a month ago in one of the English provincial towns a pair of fourteen-hand black cobs brought $3500, being bought by a London dealer. A little pony standing but 13.1 hands was sold at the same auction for $1900 and a pair of chestnut brougham horses for $2500. When a dealer pays such prices for horses to sell again he must be fairly confident of his market. All this season the exporters have bought only a few horses in the Chicago market. Their purchases have been limited likewise to high class animals, but it is likely that if the demand in England develops as suggested they will be compelled to take some few animals at least of more moderate quality. The horse market in the United States has been for some time in most satisfactory condition. If the predictions now being made by the British dealers should prove correct and the operations of the exporters in our marts be extended accordingly, it is probable that prices for good horses of all sorts will go considerably higher than they have ever before gone in this country.

Word comes from Providence, R. I., that the famous mile track, Narragansett Park, has been sold under the hammer to Frederick E. Perkins for $42,000, $5000 above the mortgage. It was announced immediately after the sale that extensive improvements would be made for the future Grand Circuit meetings. The auction sale terminates what has been a sort of entanglement of business affairs between the Rhode Island State Fair Association, which has held the fairs, and the Narragansett Park Association, which has given the Grand Circuit meetings.

"Two events occurred in the trotting world this fall that must be a source of much gratification to all who are interested in the light harness horse. One was the attempt to introduce the runner into Cleveland, one of the best of the harness racing towns in America, and the other was the introduction of the light harness horse into the running race city of Memphis. Happily the Cleveland incident was a signal failure, while the Memphis affair was an unqualified success—a success that exceeded the expectations of even those who had the greatest faith in the Memphis venture.

Over 1000 horses have been entered in the Old Glory sale of the Fasig-Tipton Co.

John R. Gentry is again in training and will appear in public next season.

Belsire's new record, 2:18, makes him the fastest son of Beautiful Bells.

Strike!—if they don't give you Jackson's Napa Soda

THE SADDLE.

RACING IS FIRST CLASS at the New California Jockey Club's track at Oakland and the attendance is improving right along. The touts are very conspicuous by their absence and the tone of the sport is very much improved over that of previous years, and is a complete refutation of the assertions made so freely in certain quarters last season that an opposition association is necessary to clean sport. President Williams and his associates have given the devotees of the racing game better and higher class racing than has been heretofore seen in California. Raising the price of admission, stopping the indiscriminate issue of badges and barring the touts are three causes of the improved condition of affairs. Sixteen books have been doing business this week and the play was never better. By the time the holiday season is on we predict that all former records of attendance will be broken. It is the intention of Mr. Williams to exercise the utmost vigilance in keeping the sport clean and high class. He wired to Paris this week on reading of the ruling off there of "Boots" Durnell, and receiving confirmation of the report immediately ordered that all entries of Durnell's horses now at this track be refused. This plan will be pursued in all cases where persons are ruled off reputable tracks for fraud, and none will be allowed to participate in racing here who are not in good standing elsewhere. The receipts for admissions at the track are now in excess of last year's figures at this time.

J. B. Haggin Buys Gerolstein.

Mr. J. B. Haggin has just secured another well bred English stallion for his American thoroughbred interests. The animal is the brown horse Gerolstein, who is a six year old and has been a frequent winner in the "purple straw sleeves" of Lord Durham.

Gerolstein was secured by Mr. John Mackey on behalf of Mr. Haggin directly after the horse had won the Trial Stakes, which was the opening event of last week's Houghton meeting at Newmarket. Gerolstein carried 126 pounds, ridden by F. Rickaby, and administered an easy defeat to the favorite, Mr. Prentice's Giglio (5 years, 126 pounds, O. Madden) over the Rowley Mile. Mr. Mackey was apparently impressed very favorably by the performance, and promptly purchased the horse for Mr. Haggin.

Gerolstein, who is by St. Serf out of Geraldine, was bred by Mr. J. E. Platt in the Bruntwood Stud and was the "star" lot of that establishment's yearlings at Doncaster in 1896, when he cost Lord Durham $13,000. He did not start as a two year old, but was unbeaten as a three year old in 1898, his record being as follows:

Lingfield Park, Oct. 31.—First for Park Plate, one mile, carrying 147 pounds.

Leicester, Nov. 15.—First for Mile Plate, one mile, carrying 140 pounds.

Derby, Nov. 17.—First for Doveridge Stakes, one mile, 122 pounds, beating Grodno, 126.

Derby, Nov. 18.—First for Qardon Plate, one mile, 119 pounds.

As a four year old in 1899 Gerolstein won one race out of five starts, his victory being in the Peel Park Plate, one mile, 126 pounds up, at Manchester, on September 21st. He had been a close third to Damocles and Boucan for the Nork Park Plate at Epsom, on April 18th, however. In 1900 Gerolstein started ten times, winning the Brandling Handicap (one mile, 131 pounds) at Newcastle, in June; the Clumber Plate (one mile, 126 pounds) at Doncaster, in September, and the Qardon Plate (one mile, 125 pounds) at Derby, in November. Gerolstein had the year previously won the Stewards' Plate (one mile, 130 pounds) at Newcastle, on June 25th.

On the score of pedigree Gerolstein would appear to be admirably qualified for stud service in this country. His sire, St. Serf, is a son of St. Simon, who is easily the champion stallion of the world and represents the potent male line of Blacklock through Galopin. St. Serf's dam, Feronia, is by Thormanby out of Woodbine, she by Stockwell out of Honeysuckle, she a full sister to Newminster, being by Touchstone out of Beeswing.

Gerolstein's dam, Geraldine, is by Barcalaine out of Lucy Ashton, and is therefore a full sister to the famous racehorse and sire, Wolf's Crag. Lucy Ashton was herself by Lammermoor (son of Scottish Chief) out of Alsatia, she by Orest out of Germania, she by Wild Dayrell out of Swallow by Gotherstone.

Numerous classic winners of England and on the Continent trace closely from Swallow. Her daughter, Wheatbear by Melbourne, produced Harvester (who dead-heated with St. Gatien for the Derby of 1884), Skylark (by King Tom), Leap Year (dam of Beatrix) and Ceres (dam of Cornoury). Another of Swallow's daughters, Nightjar (full sister to Germania), produced Herald (by Laneret) and Harbinger (by Pero Gomez). The most famous of Swallow's other daughters was Ortolan (by Saunterer), who produced Vanneau (winner of the Prix Hocquart), Widgeon (winner of the Poule d'Essai), Saisonnet and Rome, the latter being the dam of Acoli (by King Lud) and Chartreuse (by Perplexer).

Sales of Thoroughbred Yearlings.

William G. Layng, live stock auctioneer, has held two sales of thoroughbred yearlings at the Occidental Horse Exchange this month, and the prices obtained have been very good. The first sale was held on November 4th, when fifteen yearlings from the Burlingame Stock Farm were disposed of. The highest price obtained was for The Fog, a chestnut colt by Magnet out of Tenebrae by St. Carlo, second dam Sloe by Hanover, third dam Kelp by imported Strachino, fourth Kelpie by imported Bonnie Scotland, fifth dam a sister to Ruric. $1525 was paid for this colt by Mr. H. Liebes of this city. In the sale of Antrim Farm yearlings $800 was the top price, Sandy McNaughton paying that figure for a brown colt by Lew Weir out of Play Toy by imported Sir Modred. All the brood mares on the Antrim farm will be sold at auction by Mr. Layng in December. The details of the two sales held are as follows:

Devereux's Nervy Feat.

[From the Memphis Commercial-Appeal.]

A game, nervy man, racing down the stretch with Death, pitting matchless nerve against what seemed to be hopeless odds, and then winning the contest, was the sensational finale to the meeting of the Memphis Trotting Association Saturday.

H. K. Devereux of Cleveland, was the man. When the second heat of the third race was called, Hugh J. Grant drove Frankier into the course, F. G. Hartwell was behind Ellert, Frank G. Jones had Mabel Onward on hand and H. K. Devereux held the reins over Captor, Mr. Billings' latest purchase. The start was delayed by trouble in getting the horses into position. The horses were just launching into a terrific gait, when suddenly there came a suppressed cry from the rail. Captor was running at full tilt, madly down the stretch. Mr. Devereux sat in his wagon, but no reins led from his hands to the head of the affrighted animal. The reins had broken. From the point of starting to the turn is less than a quarter of a mile. With a world beating horse the distance becomes inappreciable. A groan went up from the grand stand, the rail was thronged with men. Not a word could be heard, and every one of the 5000 people awaited breathlessly what appeared to be certain death of the gentleman in the wagon.

Captor was headed to the rail. In less than half a minute would bring impact. Just in front of the grand stand Mr. Devereux carefully lifted both legs over the side of the wagon to the outer rail.

"My God, he's going to jump!" was the suppressed cry.

To jump meant either death or terrible injury. But the driver did not jump. He carefully and quickly climbed to the shafts of the wagon, and before the people could divine his intention he had leaped to the back of the flying runaway, and by a deft movement turned him to the track again. Coolly, and as carefully as though trying to adjust the hairspring of a delicate watch, he played the game with Death. But the danger had not ended. From one extreme Captor was going to the other. The fence at the paddock loomed up before the mad career of the speedy animal and the plucky driver.

All at once Captor raised himself in the air and jumped the fence, carrying the wagon with him.

Every eye sought the spot. No one expected to see the driver in living form, but he had taken advantage of the momentary pause for the jump and rolled from his seat to the horse's back. The wagon went over him like a flash, and Mr. Devereux scrambled to his feet and trotted down the track, while 5000 throats united in the most grateful burst of applause that ever came from a horror-stricken multitude. It was half a shout of exultation; half of prayer.

Captor, turning into the paddock, again leaped the fence into the track, leaving his wagon and harness neatly hanging on the pickets, and continued his terrific career up the stretch, until he was finally stopped. Save for a shaking up and the straining of his left leg, Mr. Devereux was unhurt. He called for new harness, a new wagon and the same horse, and again entered the heat, driving out a game finish, to the admiring applause of the spectators.

In regard to the weight of speed wagons a prominent New York wagon builder said recently: "Ask any road rider what his speed wagon weighs and the chances are he will say about fifty-five or sixty pounds. As a matter of fact very few wagons seen on the speedway weigh less than eighty pounds, and this stripped, or without shafts, cushion or carpet. In the matter of weights the carriage builders of to-day have not so much to boast about. More than thirty years ago I saw an end spring wagon, with high wheels and coal box body, which weighed complete, with shafts, pole and neck yoke, only ninety-nine pounds. The weight of the wagon stripped was only seventy-seven pounds and eight ounces; the weight of the shafts eight pounds and six ounces, and of the pole and yoke thirteen pounds; two ounces. This wagon was built for Louis L. Lorillard as a result of a wager. It was stored away for years in Frank Ferguson's stable in West Forty-second street."

George C. Bennett's crack sprinter, Miss Bennett, b f, 3, by Russell-imp. Memoria, died last Saturday at Montgomery Park, Memphis. Miss Bennett caught cold en route from Chicago to Memphis, and contracted violent symptoms of pneumonia. Miss Bennett was purchased at Lexington by G. C. Bennett, and was the least expensive of the 1899 crop of yearlings which was purchased by the Memphis owner. She broke the Little Rock track record in her first start at half a mile, and holds various records over Western tracks at short distances. Bennett was recently offered $8000 for her.—Daily American.

Oakland Show Notes.

Entries during the week have been coming in steadily. A notable influence has been apparent in the number of applications for premium lists—coming from gentlemen and ladies who are novices in bench show affairs. This is a good showing of needed recruits in the ranks of the fancy.

Kennel prizes of $5 cash will be given for kennels of four or more dogs. This premium will be open to all breeds.

The E. Courtney Ford silver cup will be awarded to the best wire haired Fox Terrier.

The N. H. Hickman silver cup will go to the best Great Dane in the show.

Chas. Newman's silver cup trophy has been assigned for the best Collie in the show.

Glenwood Kennels of San Mateo will bench a kennel of St. Bernards and also a kennel of Cocker at the Oakland show.

O. O. Heydenfeldt will show a kennel of Bull Terriers.

Mrs. W. C. Ralston and Plumeria Kennels will each place a quartette of Cocker on the bench across the bay.

Doings in Dogdom.

L. L. Campbell had the misfortune to lose all of a litter of eleven Irish Setter puppies whelped by Glenmore Sultana, No. 34,914, on November 1st. These youngsters were by Barrymore. Sultana has heretofore been a prolific brood bitch and healthy mother. The loss of the litter was an unexpected one. Campbell had a place for every pup and more and feels his disappointment keenly. Such is the experience of the breeder.

Some time since it was described by the highest court of New York that dogs, like horses, are animals of value and therefore property; and that no Humane Society has any right to seize or to destroy them.

The Ohio courts have rendered a similar decision which, says one of the Cincinnati papers, "cuts off the revenues of the Humane Society, which has been seizing and destroying the dogs."

The announcement of Mr. D. J. Sinclair's engagement to an estimable young lady well known to the Mastiff and Japanese Spaniel fancy as it appeared in an Eastern paper, and which paragraph was quoted in last week's issue of this journal, was entirely unwarranted. The announcement was a matter of surprise and chagrin to the lady mentioned and also prompted an immediate interview by the young lady's father with Mr. Sinclair for explanation, at least. This meeting has not yet taken place—Mr. Sinclair has not been seen in town this week. It is reported he has gone to Los Angeles.

The conduct of Mr. Sinclair in this matter is not creditable. His deliberate statement of an engagement was without the shadow of a foundation in fact and evidently emanated from an insatiable desire to prevaricate.

Jackson's Napa Soda untangles the feet!

Loud barking at night, intermingled with doleful whines, revealed the rheumatic cure discovered by Philip Leisenheimer, of New York. Two woolly poodles sleeping on the pain-racked legs of Mr. Leisenheimer absorbed all the rheumatism in his system and apparently suffered accordingly. He advises any person similarly afflicted to try an application of live poodle and become a new being. The proprietor of the dog specific discovered it one night by accident. He was playing cards with his aching legs stretched on a sofa when his dog climbed up and went to sleep among the rheumatic joints. At the conclusion of the game Mr. Leisenheimer was almost paralyzed with astonishment to find that he had no pain. The poodle was somewhat stiff next day, however. That night Mr. Leisenheimer got another woolly dog and wrapped the pair around his legs. Since then he has been a well man, but the poodles became confirmed rheumatic cures. When there are no rheumatic legs to treat they cannot sleep.

Cats have been used for the same purpose, it is claimed with much relief, by rheumatic patients.

Chaining dogs and keeping them confined is extremely cruel at any season of the year. Dogs need plenty of exercise and those who cannot allow their dogs comparative freedom should dispose of them.

Keeping a dog chained makes him cross, stiffens the joints and muscles, and causes stomach and liver disorders. When it is necessary to chain a dog a wire on which a ring has been placed should be tightly stretched between and fastened to two posts or trees, and the dog chain fastened thereto; the dog will then be able to run the length of the wire, the ring freely sliding its whole length. The wire may be placed along a fence, simply fastening the two ends, which will allow the ring to slide freely along the wire.

Even when chained in this manner the dog should be allowed a good run at least once a day for an hour or over. Animals should always have fresh water every day, and their dish be washed daily. Dogs should be supplied with clean straw twice or three times a week to keep them in good condition and prevent annoyance from fleas. Just imagine yourself in the poor dog's position and he will undoubtedly receive better treatment.

A Proposition in Analogy.

BY HENRY E. WARNER.

A big, woolly dog with a deep bass growl,
And a rival cur with an angry howl,
Both snarling and eager for the fray,
And only a big fence in the way—
But each showed a dangerous, glittering eye,
As he on his side snarled a hold, fierce deft.

"Yow-wow!" growled the woolly—"Brr-rrr!" howled the cur;
"I'll chew," said the woolly, "your den-bitten fur!"
"You can't—you're a coward!" the rival cur cried,
"And I'll eat you alive if you'll come outside!"

Thus they chased and they raced and growled their hate,
When they suddenly came to an open gate.

They looked at each other with wide open eyes,
And both dropped their tails 'tween their legs in surprise—
And each, without thought for good breeding or taste,
Gave one frightened yelp and retreated in haste.
It seemed, as the dogs at a breakneck speed ran,
That there's something analogous 'twixt dog and man.

THE BLOODHOUND.

The Cuban, English and American Varieties. Some History and Peculiarities.

BY DR. E. L. SLOUGH.

H. S. Canfield, in an article in a Chicago exchange, in writing of the Cuban Bloodhound, sallies forth with the same old Uncle Tom's Cabin blood-curdling bloodhound stories which are fast sinking into insignificance. He says "it did not much matter that the Bloodhounds hold upon the fugitive slave was broken by the tearing of flesh and tendons, as in those days the slave did not live after his capture; if the slave succeeded in gaining a tree his master would shoot him out as he would a squirrel." In the days of slavery negroes who fled to the north to escape their bonds were tracked with the old slave-trailer through dense undergrowth and swamps of the South.

Now, remember, in those days an able-bodied slave was worth from $500 to $1500 apiece. What slaveowner would be inhuman enough to track these poor slaves with dogs that would kill them? The gratification of spite would ill-repay such foolhardiness and commercial loss. Slave-owners in those days were much as other men. Money and property are of value to them as well as to men in the North.

They guarded their slaves with care, and if they were compelled to capture an escaped slave, it was with dogs that did not tear to pieces the unfortunate slave, and thereby destroy property to the value of from $500 to $1500 for his master.

The belief in the ungovernable ferocity of these hounds has been dissipated like an ugly dream, and the Cuban slave-trailer is today again becoming prominent as a trailer, not as a ferocious beast, but as a docile and companionable dog, a hound in every particular, easily controlled, a guardian of our homes and property, as well as a terror to criminals. The writer above quoted, says the Cuban Bloodhounds did not bay on trail as they frequently had far to run. They saved their breath to the end of the trail. This is another error, and alludes to the mastiff, or mastiff, so frequently called Cuban Bloodhounds by various kennel men. The Mastiff, or Russian and Danish Mastiffs that have been palmed off on the ignorant purchasers as Siberian or Cuban Bloodhounds do not bay on trail unless their quarry is sighted. They are not a trail dog.

The Cuban Bloodhounds bay on hot or cold trail from start to finish. I never saw a Cuban hound that did not bay on trail during the entire chase. The Cuban slave-trailers are rather sharp on man trail and would attack a man trailed if he showed the least resistance; if the man keeps perfectly quiet they will bay for hours till relieved. They are not a pinion dog, as the writer claims that it would take an iron crowbar to pry their jaws apart to loose their hold. I have trailed as many men as any breeder of Cuban Bloodhounds, and have yet to see the first to get hurt or have blood drawn. I will give to the reader the best fit of a brief description of the three different species of hound that is struggling for supremacy as the man-trailing Bloodhounds—the Cuban, English and so-called American Bloodhound, or "nigger" dog.

How and where did the hound get the name of Cuban Bloodhound? is the question. This will be the main point of this article. That he is a dog of ancient history cannot be disputed.

In the serial by Frank Stockton in the history of the "Buccaneers and Pirates of the Caribbean Sea" upon the discovery of Hayti, December 6, 1492, Columbus brought with him a pack of border Bloodhounds for the purpose of hunting the natives and subjecting them to slavery. Here we have the first mention of Bloodhounds imported into the New World. In 1580 the cultivation of tobacco and sugar cane was commenced and led to the introduction of African slavery into Cuba. With the slaves came the border Bloodhound, imported by the Spanish planter, Dr. Caivs.

The historian says Bruce and Wallace's little band had been joined by an ally at Black Ernside. Wallace was forced to retreat with only a section of his followers. The English pursued with border Bloodhounds (for further explanation see history of invasion of Bruce and Wallace).

In the war with Peru and Mexico the Spanish used in warfare the border Bloodhounds in 1624. Soon after the introduction of slavery into the States a pack of Bloodhounds were imported to James City, Va., from Baracoa, Cuba, by a Dutch man-of-war. Upon the landing of these dogs began the application of the name of "Cuban Bloodhounds." In 1756 a regiment of Cuban Bloodhounds were imported into Jamaica to aid in suppressing the Maroon insurrection.

Jessee, the historian; Don Manuel de Segra; Sir James Matthews; Dallas, in the history of the Maroon War, Chamber's Encyclopedia, Information for the People; Youatt; Stonehenge; Richardson; Juan Romero of Manzanilla, Cuba—all these writers speak of the Cuban Bloodhounds and the purposes for which they were used in the Seventeenth Century. The Cuban Bloodhounds were imported in great numbers by the Spanish planters into the southern slave States of America, as some of the old Southern court records show, and were sold at what was then considered an enormous price. From all the history here given we must accept the facts that the Cuban Bloodhounds got their name as soon as the Spanish planter began exporting them from Cuba to all nations where the slave traffic migrated.

The English Bloodhound became prominent in the present century. Previous to this the Talbot was the popular hound in England. Jessee, the historian, claims the Talbot hound was brought to England by William the Conqueror, a breed resembling the St. Hubert hound. This hound was imported from the south of Gaul about the Sixth Century by St. Hubert, the owner of the famous St. Hubert Abbey of Ardenais, Belgium. They were the popular hounds for centuries. Addison contends they were descendants of the Vulcan dog. It is well known by the learned that there was a temple on Mt. Atna dedicated to Vulcan, which was guarded by dogs of so exquisite a smell that they could discern whether the person that came thither was chaste or otherwise.

About the middle of the present century Mr. Jennings of Pickering, England, managed to get hold of a pair of English Bloodhounds—Druid and Welcome—from Lord Favorsham and Baron Rothschild. Mr. Jennings exhibited his dogs Druid and Welcome at all the earliest dog shows and carried off all the first prizes for several years, finally selling them at a fabulous price to Prince Napoleon to cross with his French strain of hounds. Since, Major Cowan, Mr. Pease, Mr. Hallford, Mr. Ray and Edwin Brough have divided the honors between them.

The English Bloodhound is comparatively a new dog. The first mention we have of him in America is in February, 1888, at Westminster Kennel Club Show, where a pack, headed by Champion Barnaby, were exhibited by Edwin Brough, of Scarborough, England. Previous to this there was not an English Bloodhound in America. Dr. Lougest, of Boston; J. L. Winchell, of Fair Haven, Vt.; Rodger D. Williams, of Lexington, Ky., have in the past few years become noted breeders of the imported English Bloodhounds. As show dogs they outclass any hound on this continent. As man-trailers very little has been recorded of them. They were not the slave-trailing dog of Cuba or America, as there is no record of the name of English Bloodhound until the present century. The border and Cuban Bloodhounds are mentioned in ancient writings of over three centuries.

At the close of the rebellion the Southern planters had no more use for the old slave-trailer or Cuban Bloodhounds. Since then he has been sadly neglected so far as breed goes. They were turned loose as all other dogs in the South—that is, what few that were not killed by the soldiers. These dogs have since been crossed with Fox, Beagle, Deer and Boarhounds, till to-day there is not a pure bred Cuban Bloodhound south of Mason and Dixon's line. There are a number of packs of these dogs in the South which show some trace of the old slave-trailers and are good criminal trailers, but as a breed they are all more or less of mongrel and perverted type. I know of but two breeders in America that have the old slave-trailers that trace their breeding back to the imported Bloodhound of Cuba.

The Dog in His Modern Relation to Man.

Although the dog was early domesticated and has been for so long a period the friend of man, it is doubtful if he has ever held so warm a place in human affections as at present. Everything about him is interesting, and new stories of his sagacity and fidelity are read with the same avidity as the first of those recorded narratives—that which Homer relates in his poem written nearly three thousand years ago. The story of the dog's dying recognition of his master, whom he had not seen for so long, and in all the voluminous literature of dogs gathered since there is nothing more touching than this simple tale.

Time has only served to deep the love of mankind for dogs, and, according to all our modern usages, this takes a more practical form than ever before. In all the large communities of the world there is special legislation for dogs. Dog laws are passed, the purpose of which is not only to protect him from cruelty, but to improve his breed and even his social standing, and to add to his value. These laws are designed to weed out the useless dogs and to encourage the principle of the survival of the fittest. We find also in great cities like London and Paris shelters for ailing and homeless dogs, to which benevolent persons sometimes make no inconsiderable bequests. Every year there are dog shows; fine kennels are maintained; men of energy and intelligence devote themselves to the task of breeding superior dogs, and in a multitude of ways we realize that the animal has never occupied so important a position in human consideration at present.

Almost everyone has at some time owned a dog and has treasured up anecdotes of his traits and virtues. These chronicles are seldom if ever darkened by stories discreditable to the dog, for he is one animal whose qualities are almost uniformly of the noblest. If occasionally we hear of a dog alluded to as ferocious or treacherous, he is so only to those who are strangers to him. To his master he is always true; and this is so far recognized that in all ages and in all climes the dog is the emblem of fidelity.

The literature of dogs, as we have said, is voluminous and gathers, in this age of writing and printing, year by year. It is remarkable how many illustrious personages, and particularly illustrious writers, have had their dogs. When recently the great Chancellor, Bismarck, passed away there was probably nothing concerning him read with more interest than the account of his dogs, particularly of the majestic Danes, which were his especial favorites. Is there a more delightful picture than the story of the publisher who called upon Oliver Goldsmith in his garret and found him, not immersed in study or composition, but engaged in teaching his pet dog some new tricks. The dogs of Charles Dickens have become historic, and one of the most charming of the essays of Robert Louis Stevenson is that on "The Character of the Dog."

How can we help loving the dog, who gives up his own kind to devote himself to the service of man? How much happiness the faithful creature brings into the lives of children, with whom he frolics untired, and whom, at the first show of danger, he flies to protect? As is said by the pleasant essayist, "The Country Parson," "There must be something wrong in the constitution of the person who does not like dogs."

An eye for quality in animals is the first requisite of a successful dog fancier. It is the unacquirable ability to recognize the presence of harmonious outlines, intrinsic excellence and true conformation in animals by that intuitive sense which study and experience develop into expertness. Absence of this eye for quality accounts for the great number of fanciers who know nothing about dogs or horses after years of wide experience among these animals.

Pheasants--Varieties and Culture.

Several weeks ago two well known local sportsmen, A. M. Cumming and J. J. Wirtner, were in Washington on a short trip for the purpose of enjoying a pheasant hunt. The results, so far as bagging the "Mongolian" was concerned, were not up to anticipations. Shooting conditions and unfamiliarity with the habits of the wary northern bird militated against the degree of sport wished for. The splendid possibilities of keen enjoyment and sport in hunting the pheasant, under proper auspices, were at once understood by our sportsmen. To one unfamiliar with the ways of the bird, he will be astonished at the wonderful sprinting qualities shown and the cunning displayed in circumventing both good Setters and Pointers well trained on other feathered game. The pheasants seek a heavily covered, or one might say jungle district adjacent to stubble fields, gardens or other good open feeding ground with running water within easy reach.

At the first sign of a shooter's appearance they are off—running a short distance, then up in the air and a quick plump down into the cover, they don't stay where they alight, off they go like a quarter horse and it requires a specially trained dog, one which will cut through the close or heavy cover easily and unerringly, to turn them into the open where the gunner will try to be in range. These tactics puzzle the novice. The Oregon and Washington sportsmen have the game down to a fine point and pheasant shooting is one of the leading sports afield up north.

Pheasants have been turned loose in many counties in this State; recently about forty pairs of the birds were released in Humboldt county, we believe. In favorable districts the birds have thriven; time and again hroods of young ones have been reported and apparently doing well and they would thrive were they unmolested, which, we regret to say, is not the case in many instances.

Pheasant breeding has been undertaken in this State and with comparatively good results. In Oregon breeding the China pheasant has assumed the importance of quite an industry, according to the Portland Oregonian, which says:

"Some seven or eight persons are now engaged in breeding China pheasants for sale to those who wish to introduce them in other States. Miss Jennie Griffith of Macleay is a pioneer in this business, and is more extensively engaged in it than any one else. She shipped some 300 last year, and will ship about the same number this year. Game Warden Quimby granted her a permit a few days ago to ship fifty to Southern California. Last year she sent one shipment of sixty to New Mexico. Other breeders are Mrs. Whitney of Woodburn and Mrs. Dysinger of Roseburg, who has both gold and silver pheasants, as well as the Chinese. Another breeder is F. R. Reis of Albany, who has raised a large number this season. He was granted a permit a few days ago to ship forty birds to one of the Southern States. There is but little trouble in raising them after they get to be two months old, but they are delicate when they are young. The price received by breeders will average about $2.50 apiece, crated and turned over to the express company. Within the past year Mr. Quimby has issued over 200 permits for shipping pheasants, aggregating over 1000 pheasants in all. The business of this season has only just commenced."

In the Eastern states breeding pheasants has been an established business for years and successfully so for the purpose of breeding birds both for domestic propagation and for stocking game preserves and wildland.

Concerning the breeding, rearing, housing and feeding of the several varieties of pheasants, the following founded on the experience and practice of Eastern breeders is given by The Country Gentleman, and simplifies some perplexing problems relative to the breeding and handling of pheasants:

Pheasant culture has attracted considerable attention among our people within a few years. Many persons who own large estates have grown them by the thousand and turned them out to become game birds on their private shooting grounds. This has been done to a large extent by the Ferguson Brothers, on Fisher's Island, and on the Vanderbilt estate at Asheville, N. C. The so-called common English or Ring Neck pheasants are selected for this purpose. The pheasants are raised in confinement, and when fully matured are turned to become wild on the estate. These in turn rear their young, and, in some instances, have done very well. But having been kept too long in a semi-domestic state, they do not do so well as do those accustomed to caring for themselves, without assistance, in their natural home.

The pheasant family is of ancient origin, comprising, as it does, the pea fowl of the days of Solomon, the guinea fowl and turkey, which may be as old, and the many pheasants that have inhabited the mountainous country and jungles of China, Japan, India, and in fact all the older eastern countries from time immemorial. No bird of the hills or forest is naturally more wild than they by nature. But like our domestic fowls, they gradually give way to the influence of man and become partially tamed, and even friendly with their keeper.

Among many they are known and called English pheasants, while in fact it is quite doubtful if any of the family was ever indigenous to the British Isles. It is far more likely that the Romans brought them into the country. Be this as it may, it cannot take from the people of the present England the credit due for having gathered so many beautiful varieties from all over the world, propagated them in confinement and distributed them among others. Much has been written of their scientific status, but little of their possibilities as a domestic fowl.

For the benefit of those who may wish to have the highest authority on the many kinds, we quote from Henry Scherren, F. Z. S., England, who furnishes some information and guides to the possession of more:

"The authorities are not agreed about the number of species. This is not to be wondered at if it is considered that the definition of a 'species' varies according as the classifier is a 'splitter' or a 'lumper'—terms which sufficiently explain themselves. Mr. W. R. Ogilvie-Grant, of the British Museum (Natural History), puts the number at eighteen. Leaving two of these to be dealt with later, we shall here indicate his grouping of the remainder. Eight, like the common pheasant, have the crown green or a greenish-bronze, and the lower hack, rump and upper tail-coverts maroon or a red-bronze, with purple or green metallic reflections. Seven of these have no white ring round the neck, or only traces of one; and in the eighth, the Mongolian pheasant (P. mongolicus), there is a broad white band, interrupted in front. The remaining eight have the lower hack, rump and upper tail-coverts greenish or bluish slate color, and in all but the Japanese pheasant (P. versicolor), there is a rust-colored patch on each side. Three—the Chinese ring-necked pheasant (P. torquatus) and its close allies, or it may be varieties—have a white ring round the neck, while in five the ring is absent or imperfect. Full details of the plumage will be found in the 'Game Birds,' prepared by Mr. Ogilvie-Grant, for the series edited by Dr. Bowdler Sharpe. Everyone who is practically interested in the subject possesses Mr. Tegetmeier's book on pheasants (ed. 3d, 1897); and most people know that the finest plates of these beautiful birds are to be found in Elliot's Monograph of the Phasianidae (1870-72), where all the species known at the time were figured from drawings by the late Joseph Wolf."

We shall not venture to describe the many kinds and colors, but shall confine this article to their care and domestication. Houses for their keeping can be readily constructed. The divisions between the separate rooms can be made close together, so as to make the living rooms not less than six feet square. These rooms must be closely wired in, so that the pheasants cannot get out, with close-mesh wire cloth. The outside runs should be not less than 6 by 10 ft.; closely wired in on all sides and on top; the portion next to the ground to be built up about two feet with boards, and the runways covered with grass sod. The divisions within the house should be built up likewise with boards from the ground. This style of house and run provides against the pheasants getting out together, or fighting one with another during breeding season, when they are disposed to be very cross. At the same time, when they are inside and on the roosts, which should be four or five feet from the ground, they can see each other from room to room—a pleasure they seem to enjoy during the cold months of winter.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Duck shooting conditions bid fair to improve from now on. The northern birds are coming in daily in big flocks. As usual the Suisun marsh has yielded the best duck hunting within easy reach of the city. One of the best shoots recorded recently was had by Otto Feudner on Stewart's ponds, nine miles east of Suisun last Sunday. A bag composed of 40 fat mallards—37 of them greenheads—and 10 cans for the morning shoot is a good one. These ponds are resorted to by plenty canvasback ducks, which find the place so attractive that they get into even the "pot holes" to feed. This hunting resort has the reputation of being as good, if not better, than the famous Pringle ponds. We understand the shooting privilege over the ponds, which will accommodate several shooters at a time, can be had at a fair figure.

The second annual convention to the California Game and Fish Protective Association met at San Jose, Wednesday night, at 8 o'clock, and continued its sessions the next afternoon and evening, the convention closing with a banquet given to the delegates by the local association. Deputy Fish Commissioner Payne, of San Francisco, presided.

After an hour given over to introductions and to a general social time, the convention proceeded to business. This was the reading of papers and their discussion. It was an exceedingly interesting session and the papers were without exception able and on broad lines. The convention by unanimous vote ordered that all the papers read before it be printed in pamphlet form along with the report of the session for free distribution.

The first paper read was by Dr. A. M. Barker, of San Jose, on "Organization." He urged that protective associations be organized in all the counties of the State and that the people be taught the value of their fish and forest game. He spoke of the start made by one association in Fresno county and the now numerous associations of the State.

W. W. Richards, of San Francisco, read a paper on "Relations of the Game to the Forests."

A. T. Herrmann of San Jose, had for his subject "Forestry and Its Relation to Game." This paper attracted a great deal of attention and was a powerful plea for systematic care and preservation of the forests by the government and also for the creation of forests. He thought untold good could be done by finding suitable forest trees and covering the bare mountains with them, as well as the land on the plains. This would store water, add to the rainfall and bring in steady returns in lumber and fuel. It would result in adding millions of dollars annually to the crops of the farmers by giving them more water when needed and would prevent the destructive floods of the wet season.

Delegate Greene of Monterey, told of the strong association just organized there and thought much good would be done. Delegate Welch of Santa Cruz county, who is Game Warden, stated that much interest was being shown in his county to protect the fish and game, and that the public only needed to be educated to the fact that the association was acting for the general good. He said fish and game was much more plentiful now than two years ago. He advocated a gun license at nominal cost for a man who hunted in a county other than his own and in the case of a man who was not a citizen of the United States he wanted the license to be at least $25 a year before could shoot game.

Bruce Cornwall of San Francisco, said the market dealers of that city were violating the law by offering the sale and having many more than 50 ducks on one day.

Chief Deputy Charles Vogelsang of the State Fish Commission, whose duty it is to see after the enforcement of the law, said this was true, but that great good was being done. The records of Wells, Fargo & Company, he said, showed that just about one-half as many ducks had been received in San Francisco this season as last. "We have," said he, "much to do. We have new laws to enforce. The law now absolutely prohibits the buying and selling of quail. Ducks to the number of 50 a day may be sold. We have been having trouble and suits to enforce the quail law which we wanted settled. Many bags have been seized. A test case was made against us and this was decided Saturday by Judge Carroll Cook, who fully sustains the law. No man can now sell a quail legally in the State of California. The press has not given the publicity to those facts that it should. We have seized ducks belonging to some of the richest men in San Francisco and they have paid fines. In time we will get this duck question settled. The shooting clubs about San Francisco are with us and they do not violate the law no matter what reports you may hear to the contrary."

Jackson's Napa Soda is sold in every city, town and village in the State.

Dangerous Fresh-Water Fishes.

So far as any danger from the game is concerned, fresh-water fishing has always been looked upon as about as safe as any sport in the world, and the fresh-water fish has gone on record as harmless and non-resistant. But there are instances now and then when the fish turns the tables. The inhabitants of Osceola county, Mich., who live in the neighborhood of Lake George—an inland water about three miles long—are almost superstitiously afraid of a certain fish that inhabits that lake. No one knows what sort of a fish it is, and opinion locally is divided as to whether it is a giant muskallonge or a sturgeon.

Spearing parties had now and then reported seeing a very large fish without being able to strike it, but no one gave credence to the tales until one night about ten years ago, when a party of sportsmen from Chicago went on the lake spearing in charge of an old resident named Armstrong.

Armstrong was the only one that returned to tell the story. He said the party was spearing in shallow water, when they saw an enormous fish that resembled an overgrown pickerel. Two of the Chicago men were standing in the bow, and at first supposed the fish to be a log. Then one saw his mistake, and struck with all his might. The fish gave a dart that made the boat jump as though a steam engine were pulling it. If the man had let go the spear all would have been well; but he hung on, and the fish gave a mighty flop at right angles with the boat. The man still held to the spear with the result that the boat capsized and the men found themselves standing in mud and water up to their waists. The light went out when the boat upset, and the night being dark and cloudy not one of the party had any idea of the direction to be pursued in reaching shore. The shallow water occupies a large part of the lake, and they could wander in any direction without being able to tell whether or not they were nearing shore. Armstrong said afterward that nothing could equal the awfulness of the experience that followed. They made their way in one direction after another and wandered round and round, going half way to their knees in mud at every step.

To make matters worse, a cold, steady, drizzling rain began to fall. They were soon numb to the marrow. Then one of the sportsmen dropped without a word, and no one went to his help. Little by little the three that remained were separated. Armstrong says he himself became unconscious after a certain point; remembers nothing that happened until he was roused by feeling solid ground beneath his feet and finding that the water was more shallow than it had been. He kept on and fell upon the shore. Then on hands and knees he crawled to camp and gave the alarm. Search was at once made for his companions and their bodies were recovered. Since that time the big fish with a scar on his back has twice or thrice been seen by spearing parties, but they have passed by it.

There is one species of fish in the South that is feared only little less than its salt water contemporary the shark. This is the alligator gar. It grows to enormous size and has a bill hard and bony and much broader than the bill of the common gar of Northern waters. One who goes out upon the lakes of Louisiana and Arkansas will see them jumping and splashing like enormous trout. Their usual food consists of fish, and they not only make endless trouble for those who go fishing with minnows, but have been known to round up and tear to pieces bass which the sportsman had hooked. Bathing in the lakes is considered dangerous.

A negro was sitting in the stern of a boat on a lake near Helena, Ark., letting his feet hang over the stern when a gar grabbed him by one leg. The man hung to the boat until rescued, but his leg was horribly gashed. The fish have been known to attack in like manner negroes who went swimming in the Mississippi below New Orleans. During the past spring Geo. Haille was visiting a rice plantation on the "lower coast" of the Mississippi, when an old negro came wailing to the house and said his five year old boy was dead. He had been playing on the edge of a bayou and was lying on the bank extending his arms into the water when a gar came with a rush and grabbing the youngster by the arm, pulled him into the water. A young negro with a shotgun was standing near watching for rice birds. He ran to the bank. The fish found it had undertaken a bigger task than it could well manage, and a wild struggle was in progress between the gar and the dying child. The negro shot the fish, but the child was dead before it could be taken from the water.

Sportsmen will rejoice to know that the United States Government Fish Commission seems to have solved the problem of propagating grayling. There are very few grayling streams in the world, and a few of those are in the United States.

Two of the best are in Northern Michigan and the others in Montana and Oregon. The grayling inhabit streams similar to those in which trout thrive. They are different from the trout in appearance, more delicate, but equally gamy, and take practically the same bait and the same flies. In the Michigan streams trout were planted with the grayling, for the Fish Commission believed that if Tennyson's brook could hold "Here and there a lusty trout, and here and there a grayling," the brooks of Michigan could be made to do likewise. But they failed to allow for poetic license, and discovered, when too late, that the trout destroyed their little rivals. An attempt was made to propagate the disappearing fish, but the attempt failed. Then some one noticed that the grayling of Montana seemed to be of a different variety, and more hardy. The Commission tried these, and is succeeding admirably in their propagation.

Bay fishing has generally been rather good during the week. The striped bass anglers have noted another change of base on the part of the fish. Last Sunday the best average catch taken to date was made by G. Luttrell and F. Carroll, nine fish aggregating 99½ pounds. They were caught on the west side of Belvidere, between the southern point and the codfish wharf. A number of nice fish have also been hooked in Tiburon cove. On Saturday last "Parson" Jackson and "Pat" Boland booked five weighing in the aggregate 40 pounds, the largest scaled 10½ pounds. R. W. McFarland and "Nat" Turner hooked four fish. The day was very rainy. On Wednesday a large number of boats were out and a fair catch was taken in the straits and in the waters near California City.

The results with the larger sized No. 6 B spoon have been most satisfactory. An angler of this city, who has fished for striped bass on the fishing grounds of the leading New York Striped Bass Clubs, claims that fishing for bass in the surf and on the rocky ocean shores outside the Heads can be developed into a popular angling sport as it is in the East. Bass have been caught in the ocean surf near the mouth of Willson creek, just north of Bodega Head. The hooks used for surf fishing are almost as large as tarpon hooks.

"There is a pretentious, and, I have no doubt, fairly high priced, oil painting in the window of a down-town art store," remarked one of our experienced and observant anglers, "in which a brook trout is represented in the act of rising to a fisherman's fly. The fly has been cast on the troubled surface of rapids, which, in nature, would sweep the light-feathered hook down stream so quickly that the line and leader would be taut in the fraction of a second. But in the painting the leader is represented as lying on the water in a careless loop above the spot where the fly has dropped, while the latter defies the velocity of the rapids and seems ready to be floating up stream to meet the trout, which has leaped clear of the water, and is poised in a graceful curve as he swoops down, upon the patient and obliging fly, from the air like a hawk on a chicken."

"Scores of people stop at the window every day and admire the manner in which the trout is going for that fly. If the artist who painted the picture ever saw a trout rise to a fly in that way and failed to secure it, at once, he made a big mistake. It would have been a curiosity worth having stuffed."

"The real trout out for business doesn't play the part of a hawk in taking his prey. He rises to the fly from the bottom of the water, rushing upward like a rocket. He takes it with a swoop and a whirl from beneath, and if he shows himself at all it is when he turns to go back to his haunt at the bottom. One might as soon expect to see a hawk rise from the ground to seize a chicken roosting in the top of a tree as to see a brook trout shoot out above the surface of the stream and pounce down from the air upon a fly lying on the water, as this picture gayly assures the admiring public he is in the habit of doing."

Fifth Avenue church parade garb and patent leather shoes are hardly suited to a shore casting striped bass fisherman, but Giovanni P. Morosini, banker, society man, and son of the financier of that name, who was one of Gen. Garibaldi's intimate friends, sometimes affects such a "rig." Mr. Morosini, who lives with his father at Riverdale on the Hudson, has been called the King of the North River fishermen. He has often been "high rod" of the season with bass of over twenty pounds, and his outfits are the most costly that can be obtained. He always has several worth from $100 to $150 each. Mr. Morosini as a fisherman ignores class distinctions and is generous almost to a fault. In several instances he has taken a fancy to a chum in humble life and fitted him out with one of his sets of fishing paraphernalia, going the next day to his tackle dealer to replace it.

The "high hook" record for 1901 of the West Island Fishing Club, a select organization of swell New York anglers, was a striped bass weighing twenty-one pounds.

Curing Milk Fever.

In a recent circular Dr. Samuel S. Buckley, of the Maryland Experimental Station, states that he has cured six out of seven cases of milk or calving fever. He says the following method, known as the Schmidt treatment, after a Danish scientist, was used:

First. Dissolve 120 grains iodide of potash in one quart of water, which has been boiled and allowed to cool to about the temperature of the body.

Second. Introduce the funnel and pipette into the ends of the rubber tube and place in a bucket of antiseptic fluid.

Third. Milk the udder dry; then place under the cow a piece of oilcloth about a yard square (a carriage storm apron may be made to answer), so that the udder will be about the middle of the cloth. Wash the udder and teats thoroughly with castile soap and warm water, rinsing carefully with antiseptic fluid.

Fourth. Insert the pipette into the end of a teat and fill the funnel with iodide of potash solution. By passing successively from one teat to another distribute the solution equally among the quarters of the udder.

Fifth. Rub the udder from the teat toward the body and massage thoroughly in order to distribute the solution throughout.

Sixth. Eight or ten hours after the injection or when recovery is assured the udder should be carefully milked out and then bathed with warm water, about 160 degrees. A second injection is rarely necessary, but if so it should be done at the end of six or eight hours.

Treatment for Hog Cholera.

The success made in treating Hog Cholera is becoming more evident each day. Dr. J. H. Snoddy, of Alton, Ill., spends the most of his time in treating fine herds which are diseased. He goes into the pens where hogs are dying fast and stops the disease in a few days. He will send full particulars of his remedy, a report of the recent Ohio test and his new book, revised, "Treatise on Hogs," free to anyone sending him their name and address. Another California animal has broken a world's record. This time it is an Angora goat. It was bred and raised by C. P. Bailey & Sons of San Jose, and is three years old. The annual convention of the American Angora Goat Breeders Association was in session last month at Kansas City, and there were 2500 of the animals on exhibition. Messrs. Bailey & Sons owned what was undoubtedly the best three year old buck ever shown, and he was purchased by Mrs. A. M. Armour of Kingston, New Mexico, for $1050 the highest price ever paid for a goat. The average price brought by the bucks sold during the sale was $314. The breeding of Angoras is having quite a boom all over the United States at the present time.

A NEW CLIPPING MACHINE. 1902 CHICAGO PRICE $15, F. O. B. SAN FRANCISCO.

"STEWART'S PATENT." THE MOST PERFECT EVER MADE

A Revolution in Clipping Machine Construction.

INCOMPARABLY superior to anything previously manufactured at any price by any one. Surprisingly simple, strong and durable. No belts to slip, positive power. The teeth in large gear are cut out of solid metal (no cast) which must run easily and will wear forever. It has a rigid base, tubular upright, with a fine, strong crank handle, and unlike any other machine made it can be turned with either the left or the right hand. Each machine is furnished with the '99 Improved one-nut balance tension knife, which cannot get out of adjustment.

One of our customers writes us, after receiving the new machine: "Life is too short to fool away with my old belt machine. I can clip two horses now in the time it formerly took to clip one and I am not half as tired."

Cure in All Cases.

Sent Absolutely Free on Receipt of Postal.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

We want to send to every sufferer a trial treatment of Asthmalene, similar to the one that cured Mr. Wells. We'll send it by mail POSTPAID, ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE, to any sufferer who will write for it, even on a postal. Never mind, though you are despairing, however bad your case, Asthmalene will relieve and cure. The worse your case, the more glad we are to send it. Do not delay. Write at once, addressing DR. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO., 79 East 130th St., N. Y. City. Sold by all Druggists.

Any of the following Books will be sent Postpaid for the price named:

THE PRACTICAL HORSE KEEPER

By George Fleming, LL. D., F. R. C. V. S.

A guide to those who have to do with horses, containing chapters on Breeding, Purchasing, Stable and Stabling, Feeding and General Management, Riding, Hunting, Breaking and Training, Harness and Driving, Shoeing and Diseases of the Foot, Injuries, Lameness, Diseases of the Horse, the Ass and Mule, etc. Bound in cloth. Size, 5½ x 7½ inches.90c.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN TROTTER AND PACING HORSE

By Henry T. Coates.

The book, besides treating of Driving Horses, gives a condensed history of the best horses in this country, with mention of their best performances. It is invaluable in its suggestions to horse trainers, and is the latest book on this subject published. Illustrated with 4 fine pictures. Size, 5½ x 7½ inches. Bound in cloth.90c.

YOUATT ON THE HORSE

The Horse. By Wm. Youatt.

Together with a General History of the Horse and a Dissertation on the American Trotting Horse and an essay on the Ass and the Mule, by J. S. Skinner. With an engraving on steel and 58 illustrations on wood. Bound in full cloth. Size, 5½ x 8½ inches.$1.15

THE HORSE IN THE STABLE AND IN THE FIELD

His management in health and disease. By J. H. Walsh, F. R. C. S. (Stonehenge). Illustrated with over 80 engravings from photographs. Handsomely bound in cloth. Size, 5½ x 7½ inches.$1.15

DISEASES OF THE HORSE AND HOW TO TREAT THEM

By Robert Chawner.

New Edition and Concise Manual of Special Pathology for use of Horsemen, Farmers, Stock Raisers and Students of the Agricultural Colleges. Fully illustrated. Bound in cloth. Size, 5½ x 7½ inches. Cloth.....$1.25
"It is an unpretending treatise free from technicalities, and well adapted for the use of farmers and stock raisers. The object of Dr. Chawner was to make a popular and reliable handbook in that department of veterinary science which treats of the horse and his diseases and in this object he has succeeded and supplied a practical want. There is no extraneous matter. Information is imparted with commendable brevity and in language plain and simple enough to be understood by all. The fallacies of the old school are rejected, and the treatment prescribed is that of modern practitioners."—Turf, Field and Farm.

THE AMERICAN GENTLEMAN'S STABLE GUIDE

The American Gentleman's Stable Guide, containing a description of the American Stable and Method of Feeding, Grooming and the general management of horses, together with the directions for the care of carriages, harness, etc. Fully illustrated. Pocket Edition. Size, 5 x 7 inches. Bound in cloth.....$1.15

"The book contains a familiar description of the American stable, the most approved method of feeding, grooming and general management of horses, together with directions for the care of carriages, harness, etc. The whole is founded on the careful study and experience of many years of the author's life, and forms a valuable manual for any one who has charge of the noblest of man's irrational servants. Its low price and great value should give it general circulation among horsemen."—Indiana Farmer.

HORSE BREEDING RECOLLECTIONS

By Count Lehendorff

The Manager of the Government Stud of Germany, who has made a special study of the intricacies of horse breeding, and in the volume before us embodies the result of years of careful study. While all may not agree with his conclusions, none will dispute the value of his observations. Size, 5½ x 8½ inches. Bound in full cloth.....$1.15

"The recital of his experiences and the suggestions which he furnishes will undoubtedly prove of value to all who are interested in equine matters. Everyone so interested ought to own a copy of this valuable recolleum."

THE TROTTER HORSE OF AMERICA

How to Train and Drive Him, with Reminiscences of the Trotting Turf.

By Hiram Woodruff.

Edited by Charles J. Foster. Including an Introductory Notice by George Wilkes and a Biographical Sketch by the Editor. With a steel portrait of the author and six engravings on wood of celebrated trotters. 12mo. Size, 5½ x 7½ inches. Cloth, extra..$1.25

"The author was one of the most noted horsemen of this country, and in the book before us has given to the public the best thoughts, founded on years of experience in the feeding, handling, breaking and training of colts with a view to securing their best performances. Besides treating of driving horses, it gives a condensed history of the best horses in this country, with a mention of their best performances. It is invaluable in its suggestions to horse trainers, and its rules laid down and suggestions given are as good as the day they were written."

BOOK OF THE FARM Or the Handy Book of Husbandry

Containing Practical Information in regard to Buying or Leasing a Farm; Fences and Farm Buildings, Farming Implements, Drainage, Plowing, Subsoiling, Manuring, Rotation of Crops, Care and Medical Treatment of the Cattle, Horses, Sheep, Swine and Poultry; Management of the Dairy; Useful Tables, etc. By George E. Waring Jr. of Ogden Farm, author of "Draining For Profit and For Health," etc. New edition, thoroughly revised by the author. With 100 illustrations. 12mo. Size, 5½ x 7½ inches. 542 pages. Cloth, extra.....$1.25

"The farmer who wants to succeed in these days of busy competition must do his farming in the most intelligent manner, and realize that the cultivation of the earth is a science as well as an industry. No farmer ought to be without this book, for it contains much that every farmer and his family need to know. It tells about buying a farm and gives ample directions about buildings, improvements and everything pertaining to the crops, the farm animals and the management of the business."—Sunday Magazine.

JOTTINGS.

THANKSGIVING DAY, the Sacramento Driving Club will place a bill of fare before the horsemen of California that should fill every seat at the table. The pièce de résistance will be the appearance of the world's champion Cresceus 2:02½ in an effort to beat old Father Time, and there are some who hold that with favorable weather and the track just right he can do it, as they think that the California climate will stimulate him to greater efforts than he has yet put forth. While I have an abiding faith in the tonic effects of California sunshine and atmosphere, I hardly expect to see 2:05 beaten, but even though he is not able to trot better than 2:10, the fact that Cresceus will appear should draw every lover of the American light harness horse to Sacramento next Thursday who can possibly reach the track at the Capital. Outside of the desire in everyone's mind to look upon a champion, he he man or horse, there should be an effort made by every trotting horse breeder and owner to "help the business" by his attendance. All we Californians know of Cresceus is hearsay. We have seen photographs, half-tone engravings, etc., without end, and have read descriptions galore, but we have never yet set eyes on the greatest of all trotters. While it has long since been established that race horses come in all shapes, every person who breeds trotters on a large or small scale can make a personal inspection and close examination of a champion with profit. His size, style, way of going, muscle and bone development, the way in which he is harnessed and shod, and all other particulars are matters that should and can be studied by the breeder with profit. To the harness horse enthusiast there is no more thrilling sight than a champion trotter at the top of his speed, and the chances are that Cresceus, given a good day and track at Sacramento, will be able to do at least a part of the mile at his best clip. There will be equine "turkey and trimmings" on Thanksgiving Day, "if it don't rain."

Don Derby, the full brother to Diablo 2:09½ that the late T. E. Keating brought from Bon Chaboya for James Butler, of New York, and that took a record of 2:13½ this year over East, was sold at auction last week in New York together with a number of others from Mr. Butler's horses in training. Don Derby brought $775 and was purchased by Mr. C. Hackett, of New York City. This colt was one of the disappointments of last year to Mr. Butler. When Keating purchased him he thought he had a world heater, giving something over two thousand dollars for him, we believe. He was one of the fastest pacers that ever came from the celebrated Oakwood Park Stock Farm, but like many other youngsters that have been put into hard training, he soon developed in Keating's hands at Pleasanton a couple of "legs" that would have put an elephant to the blush. When the time came to take him East as a three year old he was not able to stand the trip and was left at home. He was sent to Mr. Butler after Keating's death, and while not winning much, showed that he had plenty of speed and took his record in a race. He has probably seen his last days on racing tracks and will be used as a road horse, but there is no telling but with a year or two's rest from training Don Derby may fulfill the promise of his colthood.

The Grand Circuit is not a picnic. It comes nearer being a sweat shop, where hard work from morning until night is the rule. If there are any California trainers who have horses that have shown quarters in 30 seconds at the pace, or 32 seconds at the trot, that imagine they can cross the Rockies and come home with a train load of money, they should look up Millard Sanders who campaigned those two great mares Dolly Dillon 2:07 and Janice 2:08½, this year and ask him about it. Mr. Sanders entertained me for a very pleasant half hour last Thursday with some of his personal experiences on the "big ring" this year and I have about concluded that I would rather race here in California with an average stable than to go East with two or three crackerjacks. There was not a trainer over there this year that had two better trotters than the mares trained by Mr. Sanders. There was but one race where Dolly Dillon was out trotted and that was at the big meeting at New York and even then she won a heat and got third money. In the heat she won, she was on the outside of four horses all the way, yet she and Cornelia Belle went to the three quarter pole in 1:34 and Dolly won the heat in 2:09½, which Millard says is the greatest heat she ever trotted in her life and equal to 2:06 under favorable circumstances. "Why, the scoring in the average heat on the Grand Circuit," said Mr. Sanders, "is equal to a race here in California. In the pricing classes I have snapped my watch on the horses the first eighth while scoring many times at 14 seconds and it is generally about 15 seconds—a two minute gait. In the trotting races the scoring is very nearly as fast, and when a horse has come down for the word five or six times at that speed it begins to tell on him. One can't figure very well on what a horse will do over there in a race by what he will show in a workout here. I think that a horse should work in 2:07 here to be able to win in 2:10 over there. The fields are generally very large, and unless one gets away in front he must drive his horse very fast to get there, and this tells in a fast race where the heats are split. That unbeaten pacer Dan Patch 2:04½ was the greatest pacer I saw this year and I would not be surprised to see him get the world's record from Star Pointer next year. He is a wonderful horse and just simply outclassed everything he met. When they sent that Canadian horse Harold H. 2:04½ against him at Memphis, the backers of the latter thought they had a world heater and put up their money on him in large amounts. Dan Patch took him to the half in a minute and it was not much of a horse race after that. It is class that tells when it comes to racing and horses with two minute speed that lack class do not make great racers."

"Janice and Dolly Dillon should both beat 2:05 next year if they winter well," said Mr. Sanders when asked about the future of these mares, "and Santa Rosa Stock Farm has another mare, Bonsilene 2:14½, that in my opinion can take a race record of 2:08 or better if trained next year. Had she not been bred this year I would very likely have had her over East and I think she would have won a good share of money in her class, and no other stock farm in America could have sent out three greater trotting mares than these."

There is something doing up at Napa. Mr. Arthur Brown, one of the Directors of the Agricultural Society there, has grown weary of seeing the well known Napa track idle and has leased the property. He proposes putting it in first class condition for training and speeding horses and when the Napa Fair is advertised next year the horsemen will know that things will be in readiness for them to race. The Napa track is one of the best and fastest in the State when in shape and held a world's record or two at one time. If I remember correctly, Gold Leaf made her four year old record of 2:11½ over it in 1889, and Freedom 2:29½, the first yearling to beat 2:30, got his mark the following year there. It is an adobe track and one of the easiest to keep in order in the summer time when the rains cease. As a training track it is first class and horses seldom get knocked out there. Secretary Ed Bell, of the Napa Agricultural Society, is already at work on a plan for the race meeting of 1902. He has suggested that a meeting of the associations in the central part of California be held in December and a circuit agreed upon that purses may be announced in January. Mr. Bell has the proper understanding of the situation in California and we look to see action taken in the very near future on his suggestion. Napa will give as large purses next year as any of the district associations and will try to beat all her former records for a fair. There is no more progressive body than the Napa association and every meeting ever given in that town has been successful.

F. H. Rooker, the well known stock dealer, has purchased two thousand mules in California during the past few months for the English army in South Africa. He shipped 1000 east by the Santa Fe route last Saturday and the rest will go within a week. Small, aged mules are the ones desired by the British and while the prices paid are not large, dealers have been enabled to work off a great many that would not meet ready sale here at the same prices paid, which are from $50 to $100.

The best and least expensive way of advertising a stallion that is to stand for service in California next season is by means of the stallion directory which will appear in the holiday number of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. It costs but $3 for a double column space of one inch, which will be ample to give name and breeding of stallion, price of his service fee and place where he will make the season. It will pay.

Tom James of Des Moines, Iowa, writes that he will bring his stallion Barondale 2:11½, to California for the season of 1902, and will stand him at the San Jose track at $40. As Barondale is one of the best bred sons of the great Baron Wilkes, is a magnificent individual and a producing sire at 11 years of age, he should attract many breeders at the fee fixed for his services.

A handsome picture of the world's champion trotting stallion Cresceus 2:02½ will be issued as a supplement to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN next week. The picture is mounted on a dark velvet mat 11x14 inches and is ready for framing.

The Chicago sale was a success. The Hamlin consignment averaged over $500, and many good sales were made.

A Proposed Great Stake.

At its next meeting the California State Agricultural Society will take under consideration a Stallion Stake for trotting bred foals that, should it be adopted, would within a few years become the greatest three year old stake in America, and probably exceed the celebrated Kentucky Futurity in value. The plan of this proposed stake was drawn up by Director Terry and Gen. Jackson, secretary of the Board, and is patterned after the Society's Stallion Stake for runners that closed with nearly two hundred stallions named. Mr. Lowden is confident that at least sixty trotting bred stallions would be entered in this stake, which at an average of $40 each would, with $1000 added by the Society, put $3800 into the stake before a colt was entered. As the first payment in the stake is but $5 for colts and the entire entrance but $50 it will be the least expensive trotting stake ever gotten up in America considering the value of it, as the entrance will surely be less than one per cent. of the stake. As will be seen by the conditions presented herewith the stake will be for the get of stallions nominated and the entrance fee paid on each stallion will be the price of one service fee. If a horse stands at $100 that will be the amount required to nominate him, so that his get will be eligible to entry. Horses not standing for public service would require a nominating fee of $20 to be paid on them to make their get eligible. The payments on colts or fillies are arranged so that they are small and far apart, and the first one of $5 is not required until the foal is over a year old. The proposed stake has so many good features that the best way to put them before our readers is to publish it in full and it will be found herewith. If the State Agricultural Society should decide to offer this stake, we are certain that some of the large eastern associations will follow its example. It should prove more popular than a matron stake and be worth a very large sum of money to the winners in both trotting and pacing divisions. The conditions of the proposed stake are as follows:

Special Harness Stallion Stake for 1902

For the get of stallions that made private or public service, season of 1901, for their foals of 1902. The race to be contested at the State Fair at Sacramento, 1902.

Entrance fee for stallions to be the price that they made public service for during the season of 1901. All other stallions that did not make public service, entrance fee to be $20. Stallions to be named February 1, 1902.

All foals that are the get of any stallion entered in this stake to be eligible to be entered on July 15, 1903. Entrance fee $50 each, of which $5 must accompany the entry, and a further payment of $10 March 1, 1904, and a further payment of $15 each, May 1, 1905. Eleven starters to be named on the 1st day of August, 1905, when the final payment of $20 shall be made, and all colts making this final payment shall be eligible to start.

The State Agricultural Society to add an amount equal to all moneys paid in by the nominators of the stallions, not to exceed one thousand dollars.

Entrance moneys paid in for stallions and added moneys shall be divided 60% to the end for trotting colts and 40% to the end for pacing colts. No nominator allowed to start more than one colt in either end.

The nominator of any colts shall on May 1, 1905, then declare as to the trotting or pacing end he desires to start his colts. All moneys paid in on colts transferred to the pacing division shall be segregated and placed to the credit of the pacing stake, and all other payments shall be placed to the credit of the trotting stake.

All payments not made as they become due declares entry out and releases subscriber from further liability. Hopples barred in both classes. Mile heats, three in five.

Nominator of the sires of the winning colts in each end to receive $250; balance of the stakes and added money to be divided 50, 25, 15 and 10%. Right reserved to declare two starters a walkover, for stakes paid in only.

When only two start they may contest for the entrance paid in, to be divided 66⅔% to the winner and 33⅓% to the second horse. A horse distancing the field in either class shall be entitled to all moneys paid in, and 25% only of the money added by the Society.

Open to all stallions that have made private or public service in any of the following States: California, Oregon, Washington, Montana, Idaho, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Nevada and Arizona, during the season of 1901.

Conditions may be made and published reserving to the State Agricultural Society the right to settle any and all disputes arising out of this stake.

Jackson's Napa Soda is sold in every city, town and hamlet in the State.

HIDALGO'S GOSSIP.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

PARIS, November 2, 1852.

I sit down to-day to write you my last European letter, as we sail on the 7th for the land of buckwheat cakes and apple butter, to say nothing of fried chicken with white sop; I have had three months of Europe and I reckon it will "hold me for a while."

I suppose the telegraph has already informed you how Mr. Whitney's Watershed won the Cambridge shire at 25 to 1, and indeed his price was 40 to 1 only three days before the race, as it was generally believed he would be among those excused. On that day the Americans won six races out of seven and on the day following, Danny Maher rode six horses into second place in seven races, Johnny Reiff won six in three days, including the Cambridgeshire, and Maher got two on that same day. It would not astonish me to hear that these two boys had been told not to apply for licenses renewed, as they are winning altogether too many races to be comfortable to the British.

By the way, I suppose that you have seen that Mr. Whitoe's horse De Lacy, on whose performance at Manchester Lester Reiff was warned off, has never run as good as second in any of his subsequent efforts; this ought to convince the Jockey Club of their error in ruling off Reiff, but it will not. That body is, and always has been, a law unto itself.

From what I learned before leaving England, neither Mr. Corrigan nor Mr. Wishard will be granted a license to train horses in England next year. It cannot be shown that either of them has violated, or sought to violate, any of the rules of racing. Their offense is their open-mouthed denunciation of the Jockey Club stewards in the Lester Reiff affair. I am also informed that Mr. Huggins will return to America in January, to stay there. It is to this cause, more than any other, that I attribute the withdrawal of Mr. Whitney from the English turf, for I have it from excellent authority that he offered to pay a year's rent for Heath House and give it free to Mr. Huggins if he would remain in England. The latter gentleman is probably as homesick as most of the other American horsemen and will be glad to get back to a country where good jockeys like Lester Reiff are not ruled off on as flimsy pretexts as he was.

I met "Cash" Sloan here yesterday morning and while he looked as well as I ever saw him, he tells me that he is far from feeling so. He was riding to a race at Vienna a few days ago and his horse fell with him. Before he could regain his feet he got a severe kick just over the left kidney which has caused him considerable pain. I did not learn the name of the horse nor the race in which it occurred. He and his wife are stopping at the Calais Hotel and expect to sail for New York on the 4th by the Hamburg-American line.

Before leaving England I got a look at Sir John Blundell Maple's stallions Commoner and Royal Hampton. The former is well named, having very little quality about him but Royal Hampton is about as perfect a gentleman as ever you saw. He should have won the Derby and was at least twelve pounds better horse than Merry Hampton who did win it a year or two later on. Commoner is a horse however, of immense power and substance, and has magnificent quarters. Three years ago, he seemed to be outbreeding Isinglass (by the same sire) very badly but in the past two seasons he has fallen pitifully behind him. There is also a stallion there called Gellert, which is for sale, and I would advise somebody to buy him for he is a fairly good individual and beautifully bred, being by Isinglass out of St. Marguerite (dam of Sea Breeze and sister to Thebais and Clairvaux) by Hermit out of Devotion by Stockwell, from Alestis by Touchstone, all these being premier sires for five seasons and upwards. I do not know of any Oxford horse on either side of the water that is much better bred than Gellert and he can be had for what I am disposed to regard as a very low figure.

And so brave old St. Simon goes down to history as premier sire of England for the ninth time, as against seven seasons each for Hermit and Stockwell; five for Touchstone; three each for Orlando and Melborne; and two each for King Tom and Galopin. Stockwell holds the record so far as money is concerned, being the only sire to get the winners of over £50,000 in one season and in that season the Oaks winner was by his half-brother King Tom. Last year St. Simon had the winners of the One Thousand, Two Thousand, Derby, Oaks and St. Leger; and for all that, although the moneyed value of these races is far away in excess of Stockwell's time, he could not reach Stockwell's top figure. This year I regard St. Simon's position as far more creditable, as he is still credited with the largest amount; and yet his get did not win any one of the five classic events above enumerated. It only serves to show what an all-around sire St. Simon is. Some horses get classic winners but no good horses for cups and handicaps—Touchstone was fearfully deficient in this respect, as he never got a winner of either the Queen's Vase, Ascot, Goodwood or Doncaster Cups and only a decidedly inferior one of the Chester. St. Simon goes down to history as—

1. The only stallion to head the winning list for 9 seasons.
2. The only stallion to get 5 winners of the Oaks.
3. The only stallion to get 5 winners of the 1000 guineas.
4. The only stallion to head the list, since 1850, without a single winner of the Derby, Oaks or St. Leger to his credit.
5. The only stallion since Stockwell to get 2 winners of the Derby and 4 of the St. Leger.

Did you ever go over the pages of Ruff for the past fourteen years and realize that an enormous proportion of St. Simon's winners were from mares of the male line of Touchstone? And then did you look closely over the tabulation of St. Simon and notice what an outcross he is for that class of mares? He has only one cross of Birdcatcher and none at all of Touchstone, being as great an outcross at this period as was Melbourne fifty years ago. He seems to get a very enduring class of horses, notwithstanding that many of them have very bad hocks and forelegs that are none too strong.

Speaking of Mr. Corrigan a while ago reminds me to say that he made a very judicious purchase about two weeks ago. The once famous winner, Dunlop by Ayrshire, that sold at auction as a yearling for 1000 guineas, fell to Mr. Corrigan's nod for 125 guineas. He will be sent over to join Indio and Artillery (and Riley, too, be jaspers) at the Monument Ranch on the Sacramento river. Greenan, once a good horse over long distances, will be his companion on the voyage. I do not see why Dunlop should not make a good sire for American mares. American breeding is a good deal of a lottery at best; and Mr. Allison has long since admitted that he considers the Bruce-Lowe system inapplicable to the United States unless both the stallion and mare were imported.

I have seen eight St. Simon horses since I came over here in August and I like them as individuals in the following order:

- | | |
|----------------------|---------------------|
| 1. Bill of Portland. | 5. St. Serf. |
| 2. Florizel. | 6. St. Bris. |
| 3. St. Frusquin. | 7. Greenan. |
| 4. Persimmon. | 8. Diamond Jubilee. |

Indeed, Greenan is a much more shapely horse than either St. Serf or St. Bris, but he is rather undersized for a stud horse. Of course, this applies only to retired horses and not to those in training. Of the St. Simon horses in training, I place Pietermaritzburg ahead of all others. He is an exceedingly good looking colt and ought to make a very handsome individual on attaining his maturity. But when you come to talk about picture horses, I have seen nothing to equal Saotoi, True, Kings Courier beat him in the Jockey Club Cup, but "I love him in the same old way."

HIDALGO.

During the past month turfmen were pained to learn that Robert Waddell, the crack three year old who won the American Derby, had broken down and would probably never race again. This is merely another illustration of how some owners run their horses into the ground. Robert Waddell is owned by "Virginia" Bradley, who has made the gelding work week in and week out ever since the spring meeting at Aqueduct, where he was first seen. That Robert Waddell was a high-class race horse with a brilliant future was conceded early in the campaign, but old Bradley has lost all chances for rich stakes next year by his overzealousness in looking for small purses as long as his famous gelding had the use of his legs. A parallel case seems to be that of the popular old mare Imp. Peter Wimmer said last September, when Imp was disgracefully beaten at Sheepshead Bay that she would be "immediately retired to the stud." But she was brought out again at Morris Park and won, too. At Aqueduct lately Imp was twice beaten by a lot of "dogs," as the railbirds called them. On each occasion the public, more out of sympathy than for any other reason, backed Imp heavily only to see the money burned up. Wimmer now announces with increased gravity that Imp will surely be retired to the stud without further delay. There ought to be some racing rule by which he should be taken at his word.

Down in Lexington many thoroughbreds are trained under covered inclosures, but the majority are trained in the open. The old Lexington race track, for instance, will be the home of 1500 thoroughbreds this winter, including all the horses in the Pepper string as well as many other prominent stables. At Louisville as many more will be quartered.

A Trotter's Earning Capacity.

Much has been written about the earning capacity of the light harness horse, but the most convincing argument on the subject is furnished by the winnings of the small stable campaigned by Ed Geers the past season. When Geers opened the season's campaign at Cleveland the only horses in his stable fit to race were The Abbot, Lord Derby, Onward Silver, Shadow Chimes. Later on he added the unreliable Iva Deo and Walter Keim, whose combined winnings in his hands amounted to less than $5000. With this small stable Geers managed to win something like $50,000 exclusive of expenses, a greater amount than went to the credit of any other stable campaigned in 1901. With the exception of the years 1899 and 1900 Geers has headed the list of winning drivers every season for the past ten years. The star member of the string the past season was of course the blaze-faced son of Onward, who started with a record of 2:11½ and wound up with a mark of 2:08. He started altogether ten times, was first six, second twice, third once, and unplaced once, his total gross winnings amounting to over $15,000. He made his first start of the season at Cleveland, winning a five-heat victory, and from there until the close of the circuit meeting at Boston his racing was one string of victories. At Columbus and Buffalo he won in class races; won the Bonner Memorial $5000 stake at Hartford, and at Boston defeated Eleata 2:08½. The week following he was not started. At Hartford he could get no better than third money and the week following at Boston finished outside the money. With an eye on the Transylvania the horse was not started again until the Lexington meeting, and there he succeeded in winning first money in that $6000 stake. Later in the meeting he was started again, this time in the McDowell Stake for 2:10 trotters, but could do no better than finish second to Dolly Dillon. At Memphis, his last start, he was second to Chain Shot in the race in which that gelding trotted the sensational heat in 2:06½.

Lord Derby won over $10,000 in four races. The Abbot won $15,000 in two races, and Shadow Chimes annexed nearly $10,000 to his credit during the season. —Kentucky Stock Farm.

Nearly all of the leading jockeys have secured lucrative engagements for next season. Turner, Cochran and Burns are to ride for W. C. Whitney, and all of them will receive big salaries. Shaw has signed to ride for James R. Keene and Wonderly will be the regular stable jockey for J. B. Haggin. Redfern will ride for Col. James E. Pepper and O'Connor will remain with A. Featherstone. Henry Spencer seems to be out in the cold. It was only a year ago that he was supposed to be at the top of his profession, but during his temporary banishment from the turf for his ride on Commando in the Matron Stakes in 1900, this noted rider appears to have lost his grip. During the past season Spencer appeared to be in an unfortunate rut. All of his best mounts, nearly, were unsuccessful, and the talent soon avoided his mounts with studious care. Now, the rumor says, Spencer is going to Europe to try his luck where Sloan, Maher, the Reiffs and others have made themselves famous. Spencer can ride easily at 118 pounds or even less, and in the estimation of his friends he is still one of the best jockeys who ever climbed into the saddle. In England or some other European country he may make such a hit that American owners will want to have him come back. It was only a few weeks ago that Sam Doggett had several winning mounts at Aqueduct. Though the veteran rider has been abroad long enough to be forgotten by many turf-goers, he showed that he still knew how to ride with the best of them.

The stable of Col. James E. Pepper of Meadowthorpe, near Lexington, closed the racing season on the Eastern turf $40,000 to the good. The stable is conducted by the wife of Col. Pepper, Mrs. Ella Pepper. A few years ago the Colonel's health broke down and he decided to give up the turf and sell his horses. Then Mrs. Pepper asked for the transfer of her husband's string of thoroughbreds to herself. Col. Pepper complied and Mrs. Pepper's name became as familiar to followers of the turf as was his own. There were in the stables Black Venus, Barley Corn, Whisky King, Lady Pepper and a dozen other horses, all with fine racing records. Mrs. Pepper did not confine her entries to the horses owned by her husband when she came into possession. She bought for herself, and one notable purchase was that of Kantaka, whom she secured from Pierre Lorillard. Col. and Mrs. Pepper live at Meadowthorpe, where they have one of the most beautiful country places in America. Not only does Mrs. Pepper preside over this, but she directs all the details of one of the most successful breeding establishments in the Blue Grass region.

Jackson's Napa Soda does not tangle the feet!

SULKY NOTES.

Cresceus 2:02½

Will be at Sacramento

November 28th, Thanksgiving Day

Under auspices of the Sacramento Driving Club.

The California circuit of 1902 will be the best in years.

Attend the Speed sale at Alameda track, December 3d.

Ed Lafferty is wintering four or five horses at Pleasanton and will have several more to work in January.

Several eastern turf writers have discovered that Toggles 2:08½ has much the same way of going as Little Albert 2:10.

The New York Horse Show opened last Monday with one of the largest entry lists and the greatest attendance since it was inaugurated.

A Central California circuit will be formed and dates and purses announced in January. The district associations are all getting a move on.

When good looks are a consideration there is no family of horses in California that can make a better showing than the Nutwood Wilkeses.

The managers of the San Jose track are figuring on securing Mr. Geo. Ketcham and his champion stallion Cresceus 2:02½ for an exhibition in December.

Many of the best stallions in California will only be permitted to make limited seasons next year, therefore it behooves breeders to hook their mares early.

Anzella 2:10½ now being wintered at Pleasanton is one of the best prospects for the 2:11 and faster classes next year in America. She should trot in 2:06.

Henry Schlosser, of San Rafael, has recently taken up a full brother to Clay S. 2:13½ that is one of the greatest roadsters in California and a most promising trotter.

More money will be hung up for harness horses in California next year than for many years previous. Training will begin in earnest as soon as the rainy season is over.

Lafayette Funk is thinking of bringing a number of good roadsters and fast trotting prospects by his horse Lottery Ticket to San Francisco to sell. He has some extra good ones.

William Bourke, of San Bernardino, has a yearling by Zombro 2:11 out of the dam of Hazel Kinney 2:09½ that he was offered $600 for the other day, but he declined the offer.

S. M. Klotz has concluded not to accept the position of secretary of the Detroit Driving Club another year, and has joined the forces of John Splan, in the sales business in Chicago.

The holiday edition of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN will contain more information in regard to harness horses, their records and winnings for 1901 than any journal published on this Coast.

Napa will hold a fair and harness meeting next year. Arthur Brown, one of the Directors of the Napa Agricultural Society, has leased the track there and is putting it in fine shape for training trotters and pacers.

If you have a foal of this year that is not entered in the Pacific Breeders Futurity, you should make application for an entry in place of some that have died. It is a good opportunity to get a chance at a big stake.

A movement is still on foot to organize a horse fair association in Waco, Oregon, and seventy-five members are already enrolled. Geo. Crossfield is the moving spirit. It is proposed to make the horse fair an annual event.

Three days' racing are to be given at Redding, Shasta county, beginning November 29th, the day after Thanksgiving. Purses will range from $60 to $150. The meeting is, under the auspices of the Northern California Driving Club.

Genial John Kelly, who drove Directum 2:05½ to his champion record, has completed his contract with the Canadian breeder, Alexander McEwen, and is taking a well earned rest in New York. He will probably open a public stable in the spring.

Dan Patch 2:04½, the unbeaten horse, was mated with fifty mares last spring before he began his campaign. Many trainers have an idea that a horse making that heavy season is not fit to race through a long campaign, but there is a difference in horses.

Geo. A. Kelly, owner of the mare Anzella 2:10½, is getting ready to open a public training stable at Pleasanton. Mr. Kelly is one of the best and most careful trainers on the Coast, a thoroughly reliable man, and understands the teaching of speed and manners to horses.

Homer Davenport, the famous cartoonist, purchased the mare Holly Dell by Del Norte while in Oregon this fall and has put her in Geo. T. Becker's care to be bred to his horse Zombro 2:11 next year. Holly Dell's dam, the great broodmare Holly Wood, dam of three in the list.

The Los Angeles people say they will give Cresceus 2:02½ a record breaking reception when he reaches the orange centre. Los Angeles is and always has been a barnes horse town and there will probably be ten thousand paid admissions at the gate the day Cresceus performs.

The Happy Medium stallion Illustrious will be in the stud again next season at Santa Rosa. The Happy Medium blood is being recognized more and more as one of the most valuable of the Hambletonian strains and Illustrious is the only son of the sire of Nancy Hawks 2:04, in California, we believe.

Mr. Geo. W. Ford of Santa Ana, owner of Neernut 2:12½, will probably start that stallion against his record at the Los Angeles track on the day Cresceus performs there. Neernut is in fine shape now and should the weather be favorable and the track good will very likely beat 2:10.

Several of the get of Direct 2:05½ were sold at auction in New York last week. Col. Direct, a black gelding out of Diana H., brought $800; Reka Direct 2:17½, bay pacing mare out of Reka Patchen, brought $385; Little Alix, a full sister to Reka, sold for $225, and Fred, a brown gelding out of Fredrica, brought $250.

Several citizens of Redlands, San Bernardino county, have formed a syndicate and purchased the Cole track. They will fit it up in first class style for training trotters and pacers, and the order for a number of new box stalls has already been given. There are few faster tracks in the country than the Cole track when in shape.

Seymour Wilkes 2:08½, one of the handsomest stallions ever bred in California, will be in the stud again next year at Lakoville, Sonoma county. He will be well patronized by intelligent breeders, as his foals are of such size and have such speed and good looks that everyone who owns one wants another. His service fee is to be $40.

The directors of the agricultural district comprising the counties of Shasta and Trinity have decided to give a fair and race meeting next year either in the latter part of August or early in September. The meeting will be at Redding. The directors are as follows: Shasta, M. T. Kite, W. J. Gillespie, William Hawes and D. McCarthy; Trinity, J. H. Porter, Wm. Vollmers and James Morris. Al M. Irwin is secretary to the board.

The Monterey Agricultural Association District No. 7 has opened four stakes for trotting and pacing foals, to close January 1, 1902. The stakes are for foals owned in Monterey, San Benito, Santa Cruz and San Luis Obispo counties. There is a stake for trotting foals of 1900 and one for trotting foals of 1899. A stake is offered for pacing foals of 1900 and one for those of 1899. The entrance in each stake is $50, of which $10 is to be paid at time of entry, $15 June 1, 1902, and $25 September 1, 1902. The association will add $50 to each stake. All these stakes are to be decided at the Salinas fair and will be mile heats, best two in three.

There are evidently horsemen of the "gyp" variety in Buffalo. A man recently called at The Horse World office to verify the breeding and record of a horse that he had been offered. The horse was "Guy Wilkes, pacing record 2:05½, by Red Wilkes." In the same stable he was shown "Iron King 2:19½ by Mambrino King." As he could find no trace of any such horses in the Register or Year Book, the gentleman tumbled to the fact that the "gyps" were trying to work him. Probably someone will buy these supposed fast horses, although it seems hardly possible that men of intelligence can be induced to fall a victim to such an easy form of fraud.

Geo. T. Beckers dropped into the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN office last Wednesday night from Oregon and looking as if his summer in the webfoot country had agreed with him in every particular. He says Zombro is at Sacramento looking better than he ever did in his life. Mr. Beckers brought with him a photograph of his great young horse to add to our collection, which is one of the handsomest horse pictures ever taken. It is a true likeness of Zombro and a half tone from it will appear in our holiday number. Zombro will make the season of 1902 at Sacramento again and has a number of mares already booked. The young Zombros are all trotting fast and there will be many more added to his list before the close of next year's racing season.

Mr. Ford, in his "Gatherings in Spain," gives some account of the horses of the country as seen at the time of his visit, nearly sixty years ago. "The Andalusian horse is round in his quarters, though inclined to be small in the barrel; he is broad chested and always carries his head high, especially when going a good pace; his length of leg adds to his height, which sometimes reaches 16 hands; but his action is apt to be loose and shambling, and he is given to dishing with his feet; the pace is, notwithstanding, perfectly delightful. Being very long in the pastern, the motion is broken as it were by the springs of the carriage. Their pace is the peculiar pinto Castellano, which is something more than a walk and less than a trot."

Geo. Ketcham is not an opera singer nor an actress, but he must have a strain of that blood somewhere in his pedigree, as witness this story sent out from Denver: "George Ketcham's dog Cresceus, named after the famous trotter, came near causing the loss of $30,000 in diamonds while on the way to Denver. Mr. Ketcham placed the gems under his pillow and raised his head to talk to one of his men, and, according to Mr. Ketcham, the dog put his nose under the pillow and took the bag in his mouth and carried it to the horse's stall. One of the men was trying to find the gems in Cresceus' apartments when the dog gave a bound and grabbed him by the arm. Then he began digging in the straw and suddenly jumped out with the gems in his mouth."

Not only is C. K. G. Billings looking at New Orleans as a likely place for harness racing but he has also got his eye on Dallas, Tex. If his present plans are carried out it will mean many thousands of dollars among the horsemen, as purses and stakes to the value of $80,000 will be distributed at each place.

Baron Dillon 2:12, that is looked upon as one of the coming great sires over East, is bred remarkably like our California horse Nutwood Wilkes 2:16½; that has already made a great name for himself. Baron Dillon is by Baron Wilkes and he was by Geo. Wilkes out of a mare by Mambrino Patchen. Baron Dillon's dam is by Nutwood 600. Guy Wilkes, the sire of Nutwood Wilkes, is, like Baron Wilkes, by Geo. Wilkes out of a Mambrino Patchen mare, and the dam of Nutwood Wilkes is Lida W. 2:18½ by Nutwood 600. This is one of the greatest combinations of choice blood lines that can be found in the books. Geo. Wilkes-Mambrino Patchen-Nutwood.

Among the high class pacers that will go down the line next year in the 2:11 and faster classes is Zolock 2:10½, son of McKinney 2:11, out of Gazelle 2:11½ by Gossiper 2:14½. Zolock made a heavy season this year, having been bred to 103 mares, but will be limited to twenty next spring and the season will close early so that he may put in training. Zolock had the appearance of a race horse of the strenuous build last year, but is bigger and stronger than ever now and the prospects are that he will be a very hard one to heat in his class in 1902. As a sire he is destined to make a name for himself that will be up toward the top. Mr. Ben Davis, his owner, has a yearling filly by him out of his grandam Gypsy that is very promising and a living exemplification of the theory that judicious inbreeding will accomplish good results. Mr. Davies recently declined an offer of $600 for her, and as she is entered in both the Occident and the Stanford stakes she is worth more money as a speculation alone.

A handsome black stallion has been attracting much attention lately from those who drive in Golden Gate Park and inquiry led to his identification as Lochinvar 2:20, by Director H. 2:27, a well bred son of Director and his dam is by Venture 2:27, the thoroughbred son of Williamson's Belmont, that besides getting a standard trotting record sired the dam of Directum 2:05½. Lochinvar is the property of Brown & Blamey of Grass Valley and got his record in the fifth heat of a race. He raced this year at Grass Valley and Sierraville and made a splendid showing. Although a square trotter he had to go in races with pacers this season and at Reno was a close second to the pacing mare Peggy in 2:17. At Sierraville it took five hard heats to decide the race between him and Peggy and he was driven by John Blamey who never drove in a race before. Lochinvar is for sale as will be seen by reference to our advertising columns, and will be shown to any prospective purchaser on the speedway.

California horsemen will read with much gratification as well as interest the following summing up of the Austrian trotting season by that excellent journal, the Chicago Horse Review: "The leader for 1901 is Elsa, a three year old by the ex-American stallion Lord Byron 2:18, (a Palo Alto bred son of General Benton), out of Riga, an Orloff mare. In all the great three year old events—which are the richest on the Austrian turf—Elsa was unbeatable, and her winnings foot up to 57,600 kronen—over $14,000. Second on the list is the aged ex-American stallion Greenbrino, 2:10½, by Woodbrino, winner of 39,500 kronen—about $9,875. This horse cost the Austrians $5,100 at the Fasig-Tipton sale in New York a year ago this month, and we then ventured the prediction that he would prove one of the best horses ever sent from here to Vienna, which opinion has proved correct. Princess Nefta, a seven year old daughter of Prince Warwick, ex-American son of Alcona, who has been one of the heaviest winners in Austria each season since she first appeared as a two year old, is third with 35,600 kronen, about $8900. Enamel, a four year old by Email (French), son of Tigris is fourth, with 32,900 kronen, about $8225." As Lord Byron was bred in California and made his record at our State Fair as a four year old, and Prince Warwick bred in Oregon, the Pacific Coast is pretty well represented in the list of Austrian money winning sires. A son of Arion 2:07½ won nearly three thousand dollars in Austria this year.

The most important financial transaction in connection with the Chicago Horse Show was the purchase by J. H. Moore of the black stallion Dr. Pitzer for $9000. It has been evident to horsemen hereabouts for a year or more that Dr. Pitzer, a trotter with a record of 2:12½, until recently has been handled with only a turf career in view. He was entered in last year's show, and without any preliminary displayed such fine action that it was evident that he would take high honors if fitted especially for the ring. This year he showed on the opening day of the Coliseum entertainment, easily winning a blue ribbon, and at that time Mr. Moore decided to own the horse if possible. H. M. Norton, the owner of Dr. Pitzer, was asked to allow him to be shown in heavy harness. This was done, and to a gig, and for the first time rigged for ring work in harness the trotter gave such an exhibition as was never before made by a "green" horse. He went as high as the highest, arched his neck beautifully and in general showed that if there is a show ring champion in sight he is the animal. The details of the purchase were soon concluded, and Dr. Pitzer joined the Moore stable. Dr. Pitzer was bred by Americus Seeley, of Whitehall, Ill., and was purchased three years ago for Mr. Norton by Oscar Ames for $1000. At that time the stallion had a record of 2:19½, which he reduced to 2:12½ under Ames' driving. He was put in order for the show by Ames, and as the latter also prepared Joe Patchen for the sale at which he brought $15,000, he has the credit of handling the two highest priced stallions ever sold here.—Chicago Tribune.

Like all good things, Jackson's Napa Soda has a dozen counterfoits. Watch out!

EASTERN NOTES AND NEWS.

Anaconda 2:01½ is in winter quarters at Mystic Park.

The get of Onward won about $30,000 at the races this year.

Helen D. 2:09½ is sweeping everything at the New York speedway.

Bitter Root Farm will soon be transformed into a beet sugar plantation.

Onward Silver 2:08 will be placed in the stud next season if report is correct.

Zelico (dam of Dan Patch, 2:04½) will be bred to Joe Patchen again this year.

Dandy C. 2:09½, one of the season's new 2:10 pacers, had never seen a track until June 22d.

Single K. 2:14½, has gone into winter quarters with a record of one heat lost in eleven races.

Frank Doble has secured stalls at Mystic Park and will train a public stable another season.

C. K. G. Billings has concluded he has too many matinee horses and will sell a dozen or so at auction.

Captor 2:09½ and Dr. Book 2:10 will develop into one of the grandest road teams in America. "Doc" Tanner matched them up.

Ed Geers thinks well of the Memphis plan and likes the Brighton Beach plan of ruling out a horse that fails to win a heat in three.

They say that Coney 2:02, had a corn on his toe, which caused him to be unreliable this year, but it has been cured, if report is correct.

Walter Winans, Surrender Park, Kent, England, owns the two year old filly Crocacia, by Cresceus, that is said to look and trot like her sire.

A. H. Miller of Buffalo, announces that he will sell Council Chimes 2:07½, Lolita 2:12½, and all the rest of his horses, in February and retire from racing.

T. C. Johnson, who was once the caretaker of the trotting champion Goldsmith Maid 2:14, is now in charge of the track and grounds at Hanover, Pa.

Says Ed Howe: "An Atchison man is so mean that when he dies the fire engine horses will be hitched to the hearse in order to get him out of town as quickly as possible."

Frederick McGregor, that recently took a record of 2:25, is a brother to Pansy McGregor, that earned a record as a yearling of 2:23½, and which she later reduced to 2:17½.

It is said that the American and National Trotting Associations will this winter so amend the rules regarding records that amateurs may race their horses for cups and avoid a record.

One of the best matinee horses of Detroit was Uncle Tom, driven by H. B. Edwards. The horse started in thirteen races and was first six times, second four times and third three times.

J. B. Chandler has taken up a lot of green yearlings and two year olds by Baronmore 2:14½, at Riverside Park Farm, Berlin, Wis., and says that he has several prize packages in sight already.

The grand stand and betting shed at the Columbus Driving Park burned early Thursday morning, Nov. 14th. The fire is believed to have been incendiary. The loss is $25,000; insurance, $15,000.

Vanco Nuckols, who has the four year old Home Circle 2:13½, out of the dam of Planet 2:04½, drove him a mile in 2:08 before going into winter quarters. Mr. Nuckols will campaign him next year.

For a second season Terrill S. 2:10½ has gone into winter quarters with the title of king of the New England half-mile tracks. Out of eleven starts he won ten of his races, his only defeat being by Chehalis 2:04½ at Concord.

The price paid by J. H. Moore to H. M. Norton for Dr. Pitzer 2:12½ is known to have been in excess of $7500, though no official figures were made public. It is understood that the Doctor's tail will be docked, but that he will be kept entire.

The track at Memphis was remeasured officially last week and found to be an inch over a mile at the usual measuring point, three feet from the pole. It was a close application of the tape on the part of Seth Griffith, the veteran builder.

Jack Curry, who is telling how he broke the world's race record with Prince Alert this season, says that the great hopped pacer was thirty pounds heavier when he went into winter quarters this fall than he was when the season opened, despite his hard campaign.

Tom Price is spending a few days in the Blue Grass, and likely enough will decide to winter Neva Simmons 2:11½ and eight or ten other trotters there. The daughter of Simmons was victorious in five of her starts the past summer, and was behind the money but once in fourteen efforts. She was five times third, twice second, once fourth and unplaced once. She goes into winter quarters sound and should make a useful mare in the 2:12 class next season. She is among the largest winners of the year.

A. H. Parker, Lexington, Mass., made quite a speck of money from his victory at Combination Park, when he won the five Allerton colts. Two of the youngsters he has sold for $1000 and allowed Mr. Alderman to retain his colt on payment of $250. Besides this he cleaned up some $900 he had wagered on the result of the race.

M. E. McHenry is negotiating for the well-known Doan Brook Farm, just outside the grounds of the Cleveland (O.) Driving Park, and if he leases the property will winter there and make it his home. Doan Brook has been John Splan's headquarters for over ten years, and he will probably retain some stall room in the big barn.

J. L. Druien of Bardstow, Ky., who owns a half interest in Onward Silver 2:08, recently drove a green trotter, called Chase, a mile in 2:10½ over the Memphis track. Mr. Druien started in the horse business by buying Sally Toler 2:06½ when a three year old. He bred her to Shadeland Onward, which produced the trotter Colonel Cochran 2:10½.

W. J. Young has sold his mare Honrietta 2:12½ for exportation to Russia. The deal was made through John Splan, and the price paid was $2500. Honrietta won several races this year and about $2500. She is six years old, and is by Idol Gift, dam Haroldia by Harold, grandam Betty Hamlet by Hamlet. She started the season of 1901 without a record.

Week before last the bay gelding York Boy 2:09½, driven by Charles E. Bedford, son of his owner, E. T. Bedford, trotted a mile over the Parkway half-mile track, Brooklyn, N. Y., in 2:10, the last half in 1:03½ and last quarter in 31 seconds. The official record for a gelding over a two lap course is the 2:10 of Dandy Jim and the world's record is 2:09½ by Cresceus.

D. W. Maloney's black pacer, Sir Arthur 2:17½, defeated Dr. Purdy's Ally 2:11 in a private match for $500 at Empire City Park a few days ago. In the second heat Sir Arthur turned the track in 2:13½, but luckily for his owner the judges set him back for foul driving and he did not get a record. In the final heat Mr. Maloney drove the winner the last eighth in 15 seconds, a two-minute clip.

Terrace Queen 2:09½, the pacing mare owned by J. C. McKinney of Titusville, Pa., and campaigned on the Grand Circuit this year by L. D. Shaffer, was stepped to her limit over the Titusville half-mile track October 30th, for the benefit of her owner and a party of friends, and finished the mile in 2:07½, which beat the half-mile track record for mares, 2:07½, jointly held by Mazetto and Edith W.

Messrs. R. Balbi and J. Lamina of Bologna, Italy, who have been in America for some time in quest of a fast trotter, have purchased of Col. John D. Creighton, Orchard Park Farm, Lexington, Ky., the eight year old brown mare Lita W. 2:13½, by George Simmous 2:28, dam Fau, by Hambletonian Mambrino. Lita W. has 2:10 speed, as shown at Memphis, where she was a close second to Janice in 2:09.

Zelica, the dam of Dan Patch 2:04½ which was campaigned this season without the loss of a single race, will be bred to Joe Patchen in the spring. The owner of Dan Patch has some novel ideas. This sensational young stallion, he states, was bred to over fifty mares before his 1901 campaign, and he will breed him during the coming winter and early spring to a large number of mares and then race him again.

The roan filly Hawthorne 2:13 is the fastest three year old trotting filly of the year. She was bred and raised by Robert L. Nash, near Lexington, and was driven to her record in a winning race—the Kentucky Stakes—at Lexington. She was sired by Jay Bird, dam Lady Ham (great broodmare) by Hambrino. Scott Hudson has trained her and driven her in all her races, and she has been a good money winner in 1901.

A Boston special says: "The local horses which raced at Memphis have returned home. Prince Alert is at Providence, where he will be looked after this winter by Jimmie McGregor. Anaconda will winter here in Boston under the eye of Jack Trout. The snake horse has come through his long campaign in splendid shape, and the silver-haired veteran who drives him expects to ride a mile better than two minutes behind him next year."

The Patchen Wilkes Farm has a number of green horses that have shown fast trials this year. It is said that the three year old sister to Beuzetta has shown a mile in 2:17½; that Horace Wilson, a three year old by Onward, has shown a heat in 2:14½; that a three year old by Patchen Wilkes out of Angie D. 2:07 has been in 2:14, and that the four year old colt Frank Hadie by Patchen Wilkes has been in 2:15. Prince Selma 2:16½ by Patchen Wilkes trotted the Terre Haute track in 2:09.

Unless a horse lies down regularly his rest cannot be complete, and his joints and sinews stiffen; and while it is true that some horses that sleep in a standing position continue to work for many years, it is equally true that they would continue to work for many years longer and perform their work much better if they rested naturally. Young horses from a country stable may refuse to lie down when put into a stable in town and the habit may be confirmed unless inducements are offered.

Word comes to the Kentucky Stock Farm from Titusville, Pa., to the effect that Shaffer is working some promising young things, besides jogging Beau-seant, Velvet Rose and Terrace Queen 2:09½ and Zephyr. The latter stepped a mile last week on a half-mile track in 2:14½, Terrace Queen a mile in 2:07½, and the others showed well. James Moran feels quite proud of Terrace Queen, as he bred and handled her up to the time she was sold to J. C. McKinney in her four year old form. On the day of sale she showed a quarter in 32 seconds.

Electric Wilkes 2:17½, brown gelding by Expedition out of Otway by Wilkes Boy, next dam by Onward, was sold at a New York sale last week for $1075. He was purchased by parties who will take him to Italy for racing purposes. He is five years old and made his record at the trotting gait last year.

The formerly well known race mare Mary Centlivre 2:12, by R. C. Brown, died at Dublin, Ind., November 7, in foaling a colt by Cresceus 2:02½. She was owned by William McKinnie and became noted on the turf in the stable of the Centlivre Bros. of Fort Wayne. Her record was made at Pittsburg in 1893, with Frank Bogash behind her. Mary Centlivre was out of the famous brood mare Carrie Blackwood, also dam of Atlantic King 2:09½ and Maj. Centlivre 2:10½, and was sixteen years old. It is thought that her Cresceus foal can be saved and raised.

The New England half-mile circuit wound up for the season with the two weeks' Westfield meeting. Altogether there were seventeen weeks of racing on the circuit, in which over 500 horses were started for the money. The table of winning horses in the New England circuit alone shows the names of upwards of 300 horses who won varying amounts. The biggest money winner of the circuit was Walter R. Cox's bay gelding Jim Mace 2:19½. He was started in fourteen races, winning first money in five and getting a part of the money in enough of the others to swell his total winnings up to $930.

A Washington dispatch says that President Roosevelt returned to the dealers the three carriage horses recently purchased for him in New York. They were found to be thoroughly unsatisfactory, coming up in scarcely a single particular to the standard desired by the president. The fault most evident at the time of the arrival of the horses was that the shoes on their hoofs were badly fitted. When they were removed it was found that two of the horses had corns. When the president tried the animals his practiced eye saw they were not perfect, and he ordered that they be sent back and that others be secured in their places.

George A. Fuller has strong faith in Baron Dillon 2:12 as a sire. With less than fifty foals over yearlings he has ten in the list, and Fuller says he knows of three or four more that could have gone in during the season had it been desirable. He says he knows of a four-year-old by Baron Dillon that trotted in 2:28½ with just sixty days of work, of a five-year old that went in 2:27½, of a three-year-old that can trot in 2:30, and that his own mare, Edna Dillon 2:23½, will trot in 2:10 next year. Another that he told about, Admiral Dillon, by Baron Dillon out of Nida, trotted a mile in 2:28½ without having received two months of training throughout his entire life. Baron Dillon is now ten years old and has a great future before him. He is bred very much like the California stallion Nutwood Wilkes, being by a son of George Wilkes out of a Nutwood mare.

C. Schuarte, of Neuss, Germany, spent several days in the Blue Grass Region last month, and while there visited Walnut Hill, Patchen Wilkes Farm, Elmhurst, Orchard Park, Elmwood, Highland, Mansfield and other stock farms to see something of the various stallions and their get. The stallions inspected by him included Moko, King Red, Asbland Wilkes, Oratorio, Alfred G., Red Chuto, Adhell, Bernadotte, Libertine, Onward, Patchen Wilkes and J. J. Auduhon and he was pleased with the appearance of them all. Mr. Schuarte has visited Lexington before, and in 1893 he bought here the handsome stallion Dark Night, sire of Valpa 2:09½ and of the two crack pacers Searchlight 2:03½, Brightlight 2:08½, etc. Dark Night is by Aleylene, and his dam, Noonday, is out of Midnight (dam of Jay-Eye-See 2:10) by Pilot Jr. Mr. Schuarte has about twenty highly bred Kentucky mares at his place near Neuss and most of them have produced very handsome foals for him. He will probably buy another stallion for his stud. He is a strong believer in the common sense plan of breeding for beauty as well as for speed, and it was because of this idea that he bought Dark Night, one of the handsomest horses ever bred in Kentucky.

"An important addition to the brigade of fast horses owned by Chicago road riders was made the other day when Dick McMahon, acting for M. B. Madigan, the well known West Side merchant and member of the Matinee Club, bought the pacer Ione, record 2:08½. In every respect save that of good looks Ione is a model. She is a steady going pacer, as evidenced by the fact that during the season just closed she made but two breaks, although her campaign began in Manitoba last May and ended at Memphis the last week in October. During the five months that she was on the road Ione took part in about fifteen races, and in only one of them was she behind the money, and previous to this season she always got a part of every purse in which she started. Ione is the one example of the present era of the application of old time methods, and her ease is simply an accident. She was sold at the auction ring at the Chicago Stock Yards when a yearling for $62 and shipped to Manitoba, where she ran out on a ranch until she was eight years old, having in the meantime raised three colts. She was an undersized mare, not handsome from any point of view, and it was by accident that her speed capacity was discovered. Even then it was not thought that a mare who had grown to an age when most horses were ready to retire from the turf would amount to much, but the little pacer made speed rapidly, and in the six years that have passed since she was first introduced to a harness she has become well known in the horse world as one of the most consistent performers on the turf, and has also kept gaining a little speed each season, so that her best mark was obtained in the campaign just closed. In the last race where she started Ione showed that she had even a little more foot than her mark of 2:08½, as she drove out Will Leyburn, over the Memphis track, a mile in 2:06½ the second heat of his race, and Ione must have done the distance as good as 2:07."

San Francisco, Saturday, November 9, 1901.

GOOD NEWS AND GLAD TIDINGS will soon come to the harness horse folk in California. Before the end of this year an announcement will be made that will put more buyers in the field and more horses in training than have been seen on our harness tracks for years. The season of 1902 is to be a sensational one in harness affairs on this Coast. There will be a California circuit that will compare favorably with some of the leading circuits over East, and the earning capacity of the trotting and pacing horses will be greater than for several years. Two or three of the most progressive and energetic district associations are now perfecting a plan by which they hope to organize a main or central circuit for 1902 that will give a first class program of harness racing that will meet with the approval and support of every owner and trainer in the State. There will be six or seven weeks of racing on this circuit and it is proposed to provide for all classes of harness horses and make the purses large enough to induce the best horses in California to be campaigned here. This new movement among the main district associations is the idea of Secretary Ed Bell of the Napa Agricultural Society. The directors of that association have already determined that a fair and harness meeting will be given next year that will eclipse any fair heretofore held at that track. They propose to offer as large purses as are offered by any district in the State, and believing that in union there is strength and success, Secretary Bell proposes that representatives from the principal districts in the central position of the State get together and arrange a circuit of fairs and race meetings in which the purses and conditions will be uniform and liberal and yet within the ability of the associations to give. It is Mr. Bell's conviction that if such a circuit can be arranged and the dates and purses announced in January, that the California horsemen will give it their hearty support. Mr. Bell is right. The greatest drawback to the success of harness racing on this coast in the past few years has been the apathy of those having control of harness racing affairs. All this great American sport needs to make it boom in California is a few energetic men who are willing to take the lead and make an effort to have good and clean racing. The breeders and owners are enthusiastic and anxious to race, but the inducements offered them have been so small and devoid of attractive features that they have trained and raced comparatively few horses during the past few years. The season of 1901 was one of the greatest ever seen over East, and the prospects are that the season of 1902 will be still greater. California has had some great circuit racing in the past and can have it again if the district directors and the secretaries put the energy into their work that is necessary. The success attending the meetings at Woodland, Concord, Hanford and Hollister this year show that the people will patronize fairs that are properly managed, and that the patronage will be sufficient to put a cash balance in the district treasuries at the close of the meetings. When the central districts meet in convention next month we have no fear but they will adopt a plan of action and arrange a circuit that will meet with the approval of all concerned, and that the convention will be followed by announcements, meetings, classes and purses that will be glad tidings of great joy to all harness horse owners and trainers on the Pacific Coast.

THE STALLIONS AND BROODMARES from the Naglee Burk farm will be sold at auction at the Occidental Horse Exchange next Tuesday evening. There are some great mares in the lot. Imported Janet N., dam of Wandoring Nun, Crescendo, Bellicoso and Dolce, is one of them and she is one of the best mares in America to-day. As Compiler Ralph Tozer says in the catalogue announcement: "Mr. Burk has a strong liking for the blood of Wildidle all through his breeding operations, and the wisdom of his course is apparent to all who have followed the fashions in thoroughbred horseflesh, so far as America is concerned. Wildidle (a brother in blood to Spendthrift, Miser, Rutherford and Fellowcraft) begot Flambeau, Flirtation, Wildwood, Nomad, May D., Ella Doane, Jim Douglas, Alfaretta, Muta Carmen, Lovdal, Garella, Wildidler and Tearless, while daughters of Wildidle have produced Sly, True Blue, Carmel, Hotspur, Hermanita, Ostler Joe, Gilead, Hermitage. Border Lassie and Little Esperanza. Spendthrift sired Kingston (winner of eighty seven races and over $120,000), Lazzarone, Assignee, Lamplighter, Hastings and Bankrupt, latter winner of eighty nine races. Rutherford begot Lucky B. and many other good ones. Miser would be justly celebrated if he had never sired anything but Yorkville Belle. Fellowcraft, another brother in blood to Wildidle, sired Lady Reel, sold at auction recently for $11,000. Lady Reel's son, Hamburg, brought $60,000 at auction last spring. A weanling filly from Lady Reel went for $23,000, and a yearling filly for $16,000. Semper Fidele, a granddaughter of Fellowcraft, brought $16,200 at the same sale. All of which goes to show that this blood is in great demand by the breeders of the East and Middle West, who are presumed to know the value of the different lines of blood fairly well."

A CALIFORNIA STALLION has distinguished himself in Australia. The Australasian of October 12, 1901, says: "At the National Horse Show the National Championship prize, consisting of a gold medal, the gift of the Department of Agriculture, and the society's champion ribbon was awarded to Mr. Robertson's Digitalis 2:25½." Digitalis was bred and raised at Rose Dale Stock Farm, Santa Rosa, California, and sold to Mr. Robertson a little over a year ago. He is by the farm's stallion Dally 2:15, son of Gen. Benton and Dolly (dam of Dolly Dillon 2:07) by Electioneer. The dam of Digitalis is Cygnet by Steinway, and his second dam is Leah by Woodford Mambrino, consequently his breeding is as good as any stallion ever exported from this country. It is a pleasure to announce this win of a California horse in Australia as it is further evidence that our state breeds as good horses as the best of any country. Our congratulations to Rose Dale Stock Farm.

SIX ST. CARLO YEARLINGS from the Macdonough Farm should attract many buyers to the Occidental Horse Exchange Tuesday evening, December 3d, and there will also be seven yearlings by the great race horse Joe Ripley, and a half dozen two and three year olds by imported Piccolo. The St. Carlos are the best lot ever sent to the sales by Mr. Macdonough and as the majority of those heretofore sold by him have turned out winners, there will be a demand for this grandly bred lot. The Joe Ripley yearlings are all in fine shape, and being well bred should meet with ready sale. The two and three year olds by imp. Piccolo are all ready to put in training and should develop into fast race horses. This will be one of the best sales of the year. What the consignments lack in quantity they make up in quality.

CRESCEUS 2:02½ will trot against his present champion record at Sacramento next Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, under the auspices of the Sacramento Driving Club. This may be the only opportunity for people in this part of the State to see the greatest trotter that ever lived and it is to be hoped the weather will be propitious and all the conditions favorable. At Denver last Saturday Mr. Ketcham drove his great horse an exhibition mile in 2:08, a wonderful performance everything considered. He will heat this time at Sacramento in all probability and will do it certainly if the weather and track are good. Let every horseman be there to see him do it, that can possibly attend.

ED GEERS, the silent man from Tennessee, won more money than any trainer on the Grand Circuit this year, his winnings in purses and stakes amounting to $56,195. Of this amount Onward Silver earned $15,475, The Abbot $15,000, Lord Derby $11,875, Shadow Chimes $9645, Iva Dee $1700 and Walter Kelm $1500. In addition Geers won several victories with outside horses, behind which he was placed by either owners or judges. At Lexington he won with Willie Glen and Colonel Cochran, and with the latter horse at Memphis, while his other money winning mounts during the season were behind such performers as Sphinx S., Edith W., Henrietta, Confessor and others.

THE NELSON SALE has been postponed until February 19th, on account of sickness prevailing among so many horses in California at the present time. One consignment of twenty head are all down with pinkeye and there is so much sickness among horses in almost every locality that Mr. Nelson concluded it best to postpone the sale.

A SMOKER is to be given by the Golden Gate Park Driving Association at Central Hall, 909 Market street, this evening. This association has enjoyed more good racing this year than ever before in its history. Besides its meetings here and at Vallejo, races were offered for its members at the State and many district fairs and by the Breeders Association, and they proved some of the best contests of the year. The association is in a very prosperous condition and has a goodly sum in its treasury. The smoker should result in a very pleasant evening for San Francisco road drivers.

THE PAIR OF GRAYS pictured on our front page this week were recently purchased in this city for a gentleman in Honolulu, H. I., and have been shipped to him. They were sound and well mannered horses, and made a very attractive pair on our park roads. The photo by Mr. C. Weidner of this city is an excellent one, the artist having caught both horses in a very handsome pose.

A $14000 Pair.

In addition to C. K. G. Billings, Thomas W. Law, son, Mr. Jordan of Boston, and other gentlemen of wealth who have attempted to spreadeagle the horse show world, it appears that another Richmond is in the field in the person of Mr. W. H. Moore, the Chicago-New York multimillionaire. At the recent Chicago horse show Mr. Moore was the liveliest sort of a competitor, and when Mr. Billings walked off with the lion's share of the prizes his pride was evidently aroused. His purchase of Dr. Pitzer for $9,000 has already been recorded, but it now transpires that he has secured a mate for that fine stallion. This horse is The Laird, that was purchased in New York some time since by Tichenor & Co. He was hitched up with Dr. Pitzer a few days ago, the pair being tried to a T cart, and the showing they made is said to have been remarkable. The Laird is of Morgan blood, being by a son of Daniel Lambert, and was bred in Maine. Although he has no record, he showed better than 2:20 before being sent to New York, and the way he and Dr. Pitzer went through the ring demonstrated that no such team was ever put together, so the Chicago experts claim. The Laird was purchased by Mr. Moore on the completion of the trial, and while the price was not given out it is understood to have been $5000, so that the cost of the pair is $14,000. He has been three times in the show ring and placed first each time. It was the talk at the Chicago show that the success of the Billings string has put the Moores on their mettle, and that more sensational moves in the heavy-harness game will be made before long if only the proper material can be secured.—Daily America.

Hon. Frank Jones, the owner of Maplewood Farm, Portsmouth, N. H., is a great believer in young blood, and though a breeder, is always on the lookout for well bred youngsters that can show speed. He bought Eleata 2:08½ for $900 when a two year old, and she proved to be the largest money winner of the season, outside of Cresceus 2:02½. Superintendent Mahoney has recently added three promising youngsters to his stable, purchased in Kentucky. One is a two year old by Moko (sire of Fereo 2:10½) and brother to Bumps 2:03½, second dam Frances Medium by Happy Medium, third dam the great broodmare Annabel by George Wilkes. Another is a filly by Wilton out of Sweet Wilkes by Wilkes Boy 2:24½, second dam Sweetheart by Earl 2:23½. The third is a yearling filly by Wilkes Boy, that is out of Twinkle 2:25½ by Dictator; second dam Flora Wilkes 2:14½, third dam Grey Fanny by Conscript. Twinkle, dam of the latter, is also the dam of the Oratorio colt which showed sensational speed as a yearling, and was sold a year ago by Geo. W. Leavitt for a long price.

Of Value to Horsemen.

Do you turn your horses out for the winter? If so, we want to call your attention to a very important matter. Horses which have been used steadily at work, either on the farm or road, have quite likely had some strains whereby lameness or enlargements have been caused. Or perhaps new life is needed to be infused into their legs. Goulard's Caustic Balm applied as per directions, just as you are turning the horse out, will be of great benefit; and this is the time when it can be used very successfully. One great advantage in using this remedy is that after it is applied it needs no care or attention, but does its work well and at a time when the horse is having a rest. Of course, it can be used with equal success while horses are in the stable, but many people in turning their horses out would use Caustic Balm if they were reminded of it, and this article is given as a reminder.

There is a well bred pacing filly here in California that will be four years old in the spring, by a great producing sire and out of a producing dam, that is considered a 2:05 prospect for 1902. She worked a mile in 2:14 last spring and can show a quarter faster than a two-minute gait. She is a magnificent looker and unless sold this winter will very likely be sent East next year. She will astonish the natives when she comes out.

On a hot day drink Jackson's Napa Soda lemonade and be refreshed.

The "Field" Pays in New York.

The genius in the Jockey Club who achieved that figurative result of causing "two blades of grass to grow where but one grew before" by inventing the cheap field as a means of increasing the attendance and the receipts of the race tracks has not been identified as yet, but should he care to remove his light from under the bushel there is small reason to doubt that the race track owners of New York would vote him some sort of a testimonial.

In the plainest of figures, the "field" has added immensely to the earnings of the race tracks, and the addition has been made in such a way as to make the increase a veritable "find" for the promoters of racing enterprises. The innovation, Topsy-like, may have "just grown" from the small beginning which John A. Morris ordered at the Westchester course when that track was opened; but the Morris plan did not embrace any idea of profit from the field in itself, that inclosure being thrown open to the public without any admission fee. Mr. Morris had in view nothing further than the end of making racing popular and perhaps pleasing a small part of the population residing close to the track. There were no receipts from the field in those days, but the Morris idea has been so improved on by succeeding managers of race track property that the field now pays a big part of the dividends.

As one track manager termed it, the revenue from the field is a "pick-up" at that, for it comes from a source that is not considered in estimating the expenses of a race meeting, in that there is no expense attached to the operation of the field stand, that taking care of itself, and the only trouble that comes from it being the difficulty of counting up small change in the cash returns of each day's racing. At the average admission fee of 50 cents a head, thousands of people are constant patrons of the field stand, though these same people would not dream of attending the races at the regulation cost of $2 for a grand stand badge.

The field simply has brought to the support of racing an entirely new element and one that was not even thought of in the old days of racing about New York. The loss to the grand stand receipts is infinitesimal compared to the amount of money that the new plan brings to the track owners each year, while it is reckoned that after a "fielder" becomes sufficiently prosperous and sophisticated he will develop into a patron of the grand stand, and thus, ultimately, more than make up for any slight loss that might have come from the first falling off in the grand stand attendance. It is doubtful if the true fielder ever will be anything else than a fielder, however, for thrift is as much a peculiarity of the patrons of the cheap inclosure as are the orderly habits of the same people. A few persons among the patrons of the field are race-goers in financial eclipse, who, as soon as they are able, will return to the grand stand; but these hardly count in estimates of the field. The fielder pure and simple, while he amuses himself and his family, does it in the manner that will require the least expense, even his betting being conducted on the same plan.

The patrons of the field are more exacting in certain things than are the patrons of the club stand, and will protest most vehemently if anything in the supplies furnished by the privilege men are not right. Having paid 50 cents to see a part of the races, the people in that part of the track inclosure demand the full value of every penny they pay for anything else, so that catering to the field stand is not an unalloyed joy to the purveyors of refreshment, who are accustomed to the lavish customs of the extravagant public in the higher-priced inclosure. Still, the field stand makes more business, and the caterers are recompensed for the increased trouble by the greater receipts. With all their thrift, however, the people who patronize the field stand are responsible for an increase of about $2000 a day in the receipts of every one of the great race tracks, and that amounts to no considerable total after a hundred days of racing.

In the first years of the field the attendance there was rather small, but it has been increasing steadily for the past two years, and has brought into being comparatively new types of betting men. The men, too, who are the bookmakers or layers of the field are a class by themselves. From all these the race tracks derive revenue, and so it is that the field, once despised, is now a very important part of a race course.

In the pleasant weather of the summer it was a common occurrence for a crowd of ten thousand people to be packed into the field stand and inclosure on the great and popular tracks, while on the important race days the crowds were even larger. With such masses of people on the grounds it is only natural that the privileges of catering to the crowds should bring more and more money each year, and so it is that the field has taken a place beyond any question on the American turf.

At Brighton Beach in the summer the field added to the earnings of the track an average of something more than $2000, while at Sheepshead Bay the earning capacity of the field was even larger. So successful has the field been as an institution that a "field" stand has been added to the plans for the remodeled track at Saratoga, though how it will prosper there remains to be seen. Leaving aside the matter of the profits from that source, the field stand long ago justified its creation, for nowhere else on earth does there seem to be such unrestrained enthusiasm, such unbounded good humor, combined with such extreme caution and shrewdness in money matters. There is not very much to be seen of the racing from the field, but what there is satisfies the patrons of that inclosure, and, though there is always much misinformation about the results of the races as they are run, the fielders pick winners with as much precision as do the turfites who play higher in the "big ring."—New York Times.

Cresceus at Denver.

Last Saturday, at Overland Park, Denver, Geo. H. Ketcham, of Toledo, Ohio, drove his champion trotting stallion Cresceus a mile in 2:08, thereby lowering the Overland track trotting record three and one quarter seconds. There were three thousand people present to witness the performance, which was up to expectations, as the track was not fast and the weather bad, the sun being obscured by clouds and a heavy wind sweeping across the track. Cresceus was given three warm-up miles in 2:38, 2:35 and 2:21, and was then sent on his exhibition mile. Tim Murnen drove the pace maker, Mike the Tramp, and when the word was given had his head at Cresceus' wheel. There never was a more business-like trotter than the champion; and he went at it as if it were an every day occurrence to trot miles at a record breaking rate. He waved his head from side to side something after the style of the California horse Toggles 2:08½, but his manner of trotting is totally unlike him or any trotter that has made a world's record. He went the first half in 1:03, trotted the third quarter in 32½ seconds and the last quarter at the same rate, making the mile in 2:08 flat by two of the watches in the timer's stand and 2:07½ by the other. The former trotting record of the track was 2:11½, which was made by Kentucky Union in a race against Klamath, and this was afterwards tied by Ottinger.

The performance of Cresceus was received with applause from the large crowd present and Mr. Ketcham bowed his acknowledgments.

During the same afternoon there were three races between horses owned by members of the Gentlemen's Driving Club. In the first race the McKinney gelding Charlie Mac broke the wagon record of the track by winning the second heat of his race in 2:16. He won in straight heats, beating the heretofore invincible mare Trilhy P.

The racing season just closed in the East was one of the most successful in the history of the turf. The big crowd at Aqueduct on the last day was a fitting climax. All the year the attendance has been phenomenally large, every one of the local racing associations making a heavy profit on its schedule. The racing, taken as a whole, has been high class and remarkably free from scandal, though it cannot be said that things have not happened that the Jockey Club might have looked into with official scrutiny. It is hoped that in another campaign more representative American millionaires will become interested in racing. William K. Vanderbilt is one who intends to have a big stable in training. Pierre Lorillard, too, is expected to take a lively interest. Then, of course, W. C. Whitney, J. B. Haggin, the Keenes, C. H. Mackay, the Morriszes, the Hitchcocks, the Belmonts, A. Featherstone and other sportsmen of the true calibre will be in line once more to help elevate the sport as they have done in the past.

At the Chicago horse show the high jumper, Heather Bloom, a bay gelding six years old and 16 hands high, owned by Howard Willets of White Plains, New York, broke the world's indoor record for the high jump. Heather Bloom cleared the bar at 7 feet 4½ inches. The previous record was made by Rosebery, who made a jump of 7 feet 3½ inches in competition with Filemaker in Chicago several years ago.

Meridian 2:12½ will be in the stud in 1902 at Brown's ranch, Hick's valley, Marin county. There will be a few of this fast stallion's get ready to race in 1903 and they will show so much speed that breeders will be anxious to own them. Meridian is one of the best bred horses in California. He has three crosses of Strathmore who is certainly one of the four best sons of Hambletonian 10.

What seems to be authentic information comes by cablegram to the effect that the British Government has placed another order for horses and mules in the United States. The number is placed at 10,000 head, mostly horses, and six ships, it is also related, are already under contract to carry them to South Africa.

Sale of Naglee Burk Thoroughbreds.

Small prices ruled at the sale of yearlings, two and three year olds from the Naglee Burk farm which took place last Thursday eveing at the Occidental Horse Exchange. The highest price was paid by Thos. H. Williams Jr. for the chestnut filly Moresca, foaled 1900 and by St. Carlo out of that great brood mare imp. Jaotet N., dam of Wandering Nun, Crescendo, Bellicoso and Dolce. Mr. Williams secured the filly for $600. She is hardly bigger than a good-size 1 sheep, or she would have brought two or three thousand dollars. Nearly all the youngsters sold were small, and thin. Had they been properly cared for from foaling time to the date of their sale the price would have been large, as they are a grandly bred lot and buyers had come in large numbers to bid on them, but were disappointed in their appearance. The results of the sale were as follows:

Majesta, ch f by Drum Major, $35, Frank Whetstone; Meno, bay colt by Drum Major, $45, Dan McCarthy; Mezza, ch f by Crescendo, $105, Dan McCarthy; Molto, br c by Brioso, $300, T. H. Williams Jr.; Mordente, ch f by Brioso, $80, Frank Whetstone; Maestoso, ch c by Drum Major, $30, P. J. Kelly; Mesto, ch c by Brioso, $100, T. H. Williams Jr.; Minore, bay f by Crescendo, $350, Burns & Waterhouse; Maggiore, ch f by Crescendo, $50, Mr. Woods; Morendo, ch c by Brioso, $250, T. H. Williams Jr.; Melisma, bay f by Crescendo, $40, J. Paulson; Muta, ch f by Crescendo, $180, John Civen; Moresca, ch f by St. Carlo, $600, T. H. Moorehouse; Legato, ch c by Brioso, $65, H. S. Kilbourne; Legare, ch f by imp. Golden Garter, $375, W. Mendenhall; Larghetta, ch f by Crescendo, $35, Dan McCarthy; Libitum, ch c by Drum Major, $35, J. Paulson; Largamente, ch f by Crescendo, $85, Mr. O'Donnell; Impresario, ch f by Flambeau, $100, W. C. de B. Lopez; Imponente, ch f by Drum Major, $55, J. Barton; Infra, bay f by Bellicoso, $35, John Ryan; Cassiope, bay f by Sam Lucas, $80, A. J. Molera.

Admiral and General, President Roosevelt's new horses, promise to be satisfactory. They were purchased in Baltimore and were given their first trial at Washington. Miss Alice Roosevelt rode behind the bay geldings, which have been pronounced flawless. They are sixteen hands high, weigh 1100 and 1145 pounds respectively, and are five and six years old. They have long tails, are of fine Hambletonian stock, and so evenly mated that an expert can hardly tell them apart.

While you are waiting for your foals of 1901 to get big enough to win the Breeders Futurity, just remember that care and feed are necessary to make a good horse out of a good foal. "Half a horse goes down his throat" is as true as it is old.

The Oregon State Board of Agriculture will give $2000 for a pacing stake next year, if the citizens of Salem will raise half the money. It will most likely be called the Salem Chamber of Commerce Stake.

More tracks will be put in condition for training purposes next year in California than for many years past, and all will be patronized.

In hot weather there is no drink like Jackson's Napa Soda—plain in a lemonade.

EFFECTUAL

The most effectual remedy in use for the cure of ailments of horses and cattle is

GOMBAULT'S CAUSTIC BALSAM

Used as a Blister or Lotion.

This preferred remedy is prepared exclusively by J. E. Gombault, ex-Veterinary Surgeon to the French Government Stud.

As a HUMAN REMEDY for Rheumatism, Sprains, Sore Throat, etc., it is invaluable. Every bottle of Caustic Balsam sold is warranted to give satisfaction. Price $1.50 per bottle. Sold by druggists, or sent by express, charges paid, with full directions for its use. Send for descriptive circulars, testimonials, etc. Address THE LAWRENCE-WILLIAMS COMPANY, Cleveland, Ohio.

Notes on the Chesapeake Bay Dog.

A request to fill a commission for a Chesapeake Bay Dog received shortly before the opening of the hunting season has yet to be satisfied. Time and again have we heard different sportsmen extol the good qualities of this particular breed and express the wish to possess one of these dogs. We do not recollect any bench show here for years past that had as many as six specimens of the breed benched. Some years ago a breeder named Thos. Higgs used to have some good ones. Several other fanciers also favored the breed. We see now and then a mongrel specimen, possibly descended from some of the old time favorites here, but they are sorry dogs and show such carelessness in breeding that has possibly tended to set the breed still further back on the Coast.

By Maryland and other Eastern sportsmen the Chesapeake Bay Dog is the ideal retriever in water, especially in cold weather. The water soaks into the hair of a long-haired dog to the skin, and in cold weather freezes almost instantly. If the dog lies down on a pier he soon finds himself frozen hard and fast to the pier, and is in a sad plight. On the other hand, in winter shooting East, it is too cold work for short-haired dogs.

The Chesapeake Bay Dog is covered with curly hair, remarkably fine and thick, just long enough to keep the animal warm, and not long enough to become so saturated with water as not to be easily shaken off and to dry quickly. It is a peculiarity of the Chesapeake Bay Dog's coat that it is so thick as to be almost impervious to water, and after a good shake, following a swim, he is practically dry and warm. He is also a sturdy animal, a strong, tireless swimmer and a noble dog in many respects.

That there should be a scarcity of such dogs arises largely from the fact that there is no recognized standard, and little attention has been paid for some years to raising the dogs. Years ago a Chesapeake Bay Dog Club was organized in Maryland and a standard for judging was adopted, but the club soon died, from lack of interest, we believe, and the standard died with it. It is this want of an accepted standard that has caused the Chesapeake Bay Dog to be neglected in American kennel shows, and even where classes have been arranged for him almost every judge has had a different idea about judging the breed.

This fact has caused the few fanciers who really try to adhere to the old standard to keep their dogs out of dog shows, and the status of this fine animal is getting worse every year. In discussing a remedy for the decadence in the status of the Chesapeake Bay Dog, a well known breeder who does not raise the Chesapeakeo said:

"It is the fault of those who breed these dogs. If all those interested in the Chesapeake would form a club, or revive the old one, such a club could adopt a standard and could dictate to the American Kennel Club what that standard should be. The trouble is that the club once formed died an early death, and as there is now no club at all, there is no fixed standard. There are many different kinds of Chesapeake Bay Dogs, and every man who breeds them considers that his dogs are the best and that the standard should conform to them.

"There is another trouble. Even the best known breeders of the Chesapeake Bays do not breed them with the proper ideas. They simply continue to cross them each with his own dog, regardless of whether such inbreeding would lead to better results or tend to deterioration, and it usually does the latter. The first thing, therefore, to be done to improve and perpetuate this fine dog is to form a club and establish a certain standard, and the second is, after such a standard is established, to breed always with a view of getting closer to that standard. These two things are easily accomplished, if only a few people who are in earnest will get together and work them out."

BARKS.

By the old laws, a dog found guilty of certain misdemeanors was to be hanged. Hang was spelled hange, dog, dogge, and all after the old English method of spelling. From this fact probably came the saying, "Give a dog an ill name and then hang him."

Feed the puppies as soon as they are old enough to lap milk, and thus assist the dam and keep the puppies growing and doing their best; he sure they have no worms, as nine-tenths of all pups are born with worms, and to be on the safe side, destroy those terrible pests before the pup is two months old.

Should your dog feel the cold in his house, a piece of carpet tacked at the top of the opening of his kennel, and left hanging to within two or three inches of the bottom, will help keep the cold out, and the dog will learn to push it back and forth at will. A piece of sacking weighted on the bottom is also effective in keeping out the cold and draught.

It may be surprising to many of the fancy as well as to the layman to read that something like $5,000,000 is invested in the breeding and improvement of thoroughbred dogs in the United States. The total value of the dogs exhibited last spring at the Madison Square Garden show, for instance, nearly 2000 dogs, is said to have been over $500,000. Some of the dogs were catalogued at $10,000, which of course was a prohibitive price.

The love of a pet, more especially a pet dog, can be shown better not by applying terms of endearment in the presence of visitors or by endowing him with an expensive collar or fine ribbons, but by careful attention to his health. Apply to your pet the same laws of hygiene you apply to yourself. Give him plenty of fresh air and water. Keep his skin clean and his coat well groomed. Give him plenty of exercise. Do this and nature will reward you with a lively, loving, appreciative companion.

As a rule a man should keep no dog unless he can allow him comparative freedom. It is in the nature of cruelty and at the expense of your dog's disposition, and his health, too. Just look at him as he strains at his chain and begs for the privilege of a good run. How his eye brightens with pleasure and anticipation at your approach! how dejected his appearance if you leave without releasing him! Of course, it is impossible that all dogs should be allowed to run at large, and hunting dogs are worthless unless they have had their freedom.

A good story is told of a dog owned by a Pennsylvania farmer. William Kerr, who lives in the mountains near Williamsport, one day recently with his dog treed a bear, and being without a gun, his offensive tactics were curtailed to quite an extent. But being a man of expedients, he peuced the words, "Bring gun to Dry Hickory flats," on a stick, gave it to his dog, who quickly ran with the stick in his mouth to his master's house two miles away. In less than an hour Kerr's wife appeared on the scene with a rifle, one shot from which weapon put Bruin out of business.

The origin of the Fox Terrier is not certainly known, but they have been bred pure in the royal kennels of England for over 100 years. They are used for bringing all kinds of game out of the ground, and as companions for ladies and gentlemen are the aristocratic dog of the world to-day. Owners soon found them to be not only easily taught, but very imitative, and have developed into great farm dogs, as well as hunters and companions. As guard dogs they have no superior—always on the alert, ready to find the cause of the slightest noise. They are not generally vicious to people, but it is safest for any stranger at first to get permission before he bothers either the person or property of the master. As hunters they naturally take to all animals that burrow in the ground. They need no training for that, but, of course, improve with practice. They are easily taught to tree all animals that climb. They are dead game and will fight to death or victory anything they consider prey. They have any amount of endurance, seldom ever showing signs of being tired. Their scent is good. They are not only pretty dogs, but there are none cleaner. They are excellent companions for children, as they will watch over them and inspire the child with their own determination, obedience, humbleness and affection.

Strike!—if they don't give you Jackson's Napa Soda

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

The Wan Bee Kennels, C. K. Harley proprietor, will have nine Fox Terrier entries at the Oakland show.

Norman J. Stewart, on Saturday, paid a hurried visit to our office for the purpose of saying "good-bye." He left for the East this week on his way to Scotland. We wish him bon voyage and good luck.

Nairod Kennels, besides losing an excellent St. Bernard hood bitch, noted in another paragraph, lost recently the Cocker bitch, Champion Tootsie W., No. 45,541 and now another Cocker bitch, Plumeria Beau II., is expected to drop out.

Wm. Halley, an enthusiastic Sacramento Fox Terrier fancier, called upon us on Thursday. Mr. Halley will send down a dog or two to Oakland. He has now a half dozen Terriers at his kennels and is sanguine that one or more he has not yet shown will cut a hot pace on the bench.

Champion Woodcote Wonder will be seen at the Oakland show. He is in splendid trim and gives every sign of retaining permanently his championship form. It is possible that he will be sent East for the bench show circuit, commencing his bench show appearance with the Ladies' Kennel Association show in New York next month.

Entries for the Oakland show have been coming in during the week in a very satisfactory manner. The bulk of the nominations were received however subsequent to our kennel page going to press, consequently we cannot give in this issue an approximate list of breeds and dogs entered. Up to date however everything points to another successful show in Oakland.

In R. H. Rountree the Pacific Bull Terrier Club has an energetic and painstaking official. A circular issued to the club members this week concludes with the statement: "It is earnestly hoped that the Bull Terrier Club will make its usual creditable display" at the Oakland bench show. This is in the right spirit and is the kind of material that is productive of results.

The Executive Committee of the A. K. C. held a meeting on the 12th inst. Among other business transacted was the endorsement of the Pacific Coast Advisory Board decision in the Bull Terrier awards made at the May show. B. H. Benton and his Bulldog Duke of St. Martin were permanently disqualified for Mr. Benton's attack on Judge H. W. Lacy at Wakefield.

Judges for the Providence, R. I., bench show are: Pointers and Setters, Dr. James E. Hair, Bridgeport, Conn.; Foxhounds and Beagles, Mr. John Caswell, Prides Crossing, Mass.; Spaniels, Mr. H. K. Bloodgood, New Marlboro, Mass.; Bulldogs, Bull Terriers and French Bulldogs, Mr. A. Albright Jr., Newark, N. J.; Fox Terriers, G. M. Carnochan, Riverdale-on-Hudson, N. Y.; Boston Terriers, judge not selected; all other breeds, James Watson, New York.

J. H. Rossiter's famous Greyhound For Freedom has gone to the canine majority. This noted dog was bred by Messrs. Fawcett, Liverpool, England, and was the best dog ever loosed from the slips in this State. He was never beaten since he arrived here and readily won every course in which he was started. He was by Sir Sankey out of Flitting Far and his loss to the coursing interest here will be hard to replace. Several of his sons and daughters are promising and bid fair to keep his memory green in coursing annals.

Mr. John H. Dorian sends us the following, detailing a bit of bad luck falling to him this week: Nairod Kennels lost on the 18th inst. their fine St. Bernard bitch Princess Nairod (53,403), out of the well known Bonnie Doone by Alta Millo. Princess Nairod was quite well known to dog lovers the Coast over, having annexed prizes at most of the Coast bench shows held in recent years, in competition with some of the best. Her death from a complication of heart and kidney troubles, with resulting final paralysis, is regarded as due to distemper and resultant general prostration dating from the last San Francisco bench show. She was shown at the recent Los Angeles show, receiving first in limit, and second in open to Alta Rachel's first; but was even then in such bad condition that her owner hesitated about showing her.

Frank Dole has received from England recently the Bull Terrier, Victor the Scot. He is six years old, has been a good winner at the English shows and has lasted well and will go in hot company. The Bulldog Triangle King, another purchase, died en route between Manchester and Liverpool. He was said to be a good one. The young Bull Terrier, Newmarket Bendigo, a bitch by Edgewood Dick and Gentle Ida, winner at Crystal Palace and Birmingham have also been recently purchased by Mr. Dole. His champion Starlight, a winner of nearly fifty firsts, died recently at the age of 14½ years. Dole claims that he sold nearly $4000 worth of her pups. Woodlawn Kennels' Newmarket Queen is by the same dam and sire as Newmarket Bendigo. Edgewood Dick, which Dole bought right after he sold Wonder, will be used to breed to Wonder bitches, and the blood lines being thought so well of he will now use the son also for his brood hitches.

The trials of the Continental Field Trial Club will begin February 8, 1902, with the Members' Stake, and will be followed on the 10th with the Derby and All Age stakes. The purses in the open events are $250 to first, $150 to second and $100 to third. The officers of the club are: President, Hobart Ames, North Easton, Mass.; Vice-Presidents, Edward Dexter, Boston, Mass.; Edmund H. Osthaus, Toledo, O.; Governors, Hobart Ames, North Easton, Mass.; J. B. Baker, New York, N. Y.; Dr. J. S. Brown, Montclair, N. J.; Edw. A.

Burdett, Radnor, Pa.; Edward Dexter, Boston, Mass.; H. K. Devereaux, Cleveland, O.; C. A. Draper, Toledo, O.; P. Lorillard Jr., Jersey City, N. J.; E. H. Osthaus, Toledo, O.; Theo. Sturges, New York, N. Y.; C. W. Keyes, East Pepperell, Mass.; Irving Hoagland, New Brunswick, N. J.; Judges, S. C. Bradley, Greenfield Hill, Conn.; Charles H. Phelps, Jr., New York, N. Y.; W. W. Titus, West Point, Miss.; Secretary and Treasurer, Theo. Sturges, Greenfield Hill, Conn.

The "Rambler" in the current number of Man's Best Friend describes a "vulture" in the following incident which took place at a recent auction sale of high-class dogs in New York. We have a few of these uncanny birds out here, and we take pleasure once in a while in plucking a few of their feathers out: "A queer looking, small, dark-complexioned man, with a black beard and nervous eye, stood close beside a haughty acting young gentleman who modestly ventured to bid on four or five different pups, and who failed to purchase because he lacked the courage of his convictions beyond the $25 mark. When the sale was over, he of the black beard swooped down like a bird of prey. 'Give me your address, sir,' he said. Whether the young gentleman wished to purchase the nucleus for a kennel of bench-show winners, or merely desired a pair of dogs for this season's shouting, he is at this writing probably in the hands of one who will sell him something, and perhaps help him get rid of something as well. I did not like the appearance of the fellow and labeled him 'naugorous.'"

There are in this country to-day "amateur judges" of certain breeds, who are far more capable than some of those who consider themselves "professionals," but there are unfortunately very few of these and if New York has employed a large number of amateurs than other shows it has also given us worse judging than any large show ever held. At no other show has there ever been so much grumbling over the awards, and if any "professional," any man known to be capable, had been guilty of what we have seen done in Madison Square Garden he would have ended his judging career then and there.

It is not very easy to define the "amateur" and "professional" of the kennel world. Nearly all the "amateurs" are dealing in dogs. Some make no charge for judging, but this is by no means generosity in all cases, because a majority should pay for the privilege of practicing and they would be quite an expensive luxury at that. Others make a charge for "expenses," and the expenses foot up to more than the "professional" receives for capable work and expenses together. A judge on the bench receives a salary. Is he an amateur or a professional? He is a professional man, at any rate, and we know he is not an amateur judge, because amateurs only work for love, their health and their country.—Man's Best Friend.

Field Trial Notes.

The Ohio Field Trials Club trials run near Washington C. H. were the best in the history of the club. All of the stakes filled very liberally with a total of 110 entries. In both the Derby and All-Age Stakes the total purse hung up was $600. The judging was done by Major J. M. Taylor, Theo. Goodman and Geo. R. Haswell. The Members' Derby winners were: First, H. L. Brown's black and white Pointer bitch Jingo's Oseola (Jingo's Pearl-Nellie Rip Rap). Second, C. W. Tway's black, white and tan English Setter dog Count Oakley (Oakley Hill-Queen W. H.). Third, F. R. Murphy's black and white English Setter dog Czar (Jacksonian-Ellen). Fourth, W. H. Stambough's Mr. Jim.

The winners of the Members' All-Age were: First, C. W. Tway's black and white Pointer dog Rip Tick (Young Rip Rap-Miss Tick). Second, C. W. Wolfe's liver and white Pointer bitch Queen Mah (Young Jingo-Eve). Third, H. L. Brown's black, white and tan English Setter Duchess of Honor Bright (Lady's Count Gladstone-Jessie Rodfield). Fourth, Dr. D. W. Boone's black, white and tan English Setter dog Paul Boone (Rodfield-Pippa). In the Open Derby first went to H. H. Hoover's black, white and tan English Setter dog Mars Ben (Domino-Melba I). Stockdale Kennels' liver and white Pointer dog Cuba Jr. (Cuba of Kenwood-Florida) won second place. Third and fourth were won respectively by O'Connell and Erwin's black, white and tan English Setter dog Col. Spot (Colonel K-Sports' Girl) and Medina County Kennels' black, white and tan English Setter bitch Miss Wickliffe (Marie's Sport-Miss Tony).

The Open All-Age Stake landed C. B. Wolfe's liver and white Pointer bitch Queen Mah (Young Jingo-Eve) first. W. H. Dillman's black, white and tan English Setter Gem of Noble (Trouble-Gem of Gladstone) second. C. W. Tway's black and white Pointer dog Rip Tick (Young Rip Rap-Miss Tick Girl) third. Fourth was equally divided by L. Stuehmer's orange and white Setter dog Count Whitestone (Lady's Count Gladstone-Jessie Rodfield) and J. A. Mortou's lemon and white Pointer dog King Cyrano (Jingo-Kate Kent).

Good Fishing In Northern Waters.

J. MAYNE BALTIMORE

Scattered throughout Northeastern Washington are many little streams and picturesque lakes, where there is excellent and exciting angling. Just across the international boundary line in British Columbia, good fishing may be found at many points.

In Washington are several small tributaries of Kettle river which, during the proper season, abound in trout. Prominent among these streams may be mentioned Deadman, Big Boulder, Deer, Little Boulder and Deep creeks. Kettle valley proper is nearly forty miles long, in width it varies from one mile to three. Towering mountains rise each side of this beautiful little valley. To and fro the bright flashing stream winds down the valley. Back from the valley on each side, the mountains extend for miles. Through these widely tossed upheavals the tributaries mentioned rush. Their waters are crystalline in purity and cold as ice. All along their winding course good fishing may be found.

During the fall months schools of salmon ascend from the Columbia into Kettle river. Up this stream they go for many leagues away north of the boundary line. A great many of these savory fish are captured both by the whites and Indians. They are generally speared.

Excellent fishing is found in Curlew lake and Curlew creek. This lake is a beautiful, romantic little sheet of water and the stream is no less attractive. Christina lake lies just east of Kettle valley and is located close to the British Columbia line. This sheet is surrounded by lofty, forest clad mountains. It is nearly twenty miles long but comparatively narrow. The water in places is very deep and is so pellucid that objects may be seen with almost startling vividness for a great depth. The lake abounds in both salmon trout and lake trout. Some of the former have been caught weighing as much as twenty pounds. A great number of large, beautiful lake trout are captured every season. The lake is a very popular resort for anglers every summer.

The lake is fed by many large subterranean springs. Out from the lower end of the lake dashes a small stream and after about eight miles passes into Kettle river. This is the lake's only outlet. This stream also affords good fishing.

Pierre lake is another beautiful sheet which lies east of Kettle valley about five miles from the river. This lake is about three miles long and averages one and a half miles in width. It is very deep near the middle—almost fathomless. Excellent fishing is found in Pierre lake. This body of water is nearly 2000 feet above the level of Kettle river, and lies in between two lofty, frowning mountains. Quite a large stream empties into the northern end of the lake. Another stream runs from the lower end. About three miles below the stream sinks away from sight. Several miles below that point the stream suddenly hursts forth and finally makes its serpentine course to Kettle river.

Near the mining city of Rossland, in British Columbia, are many good angling streams. One of these is Sheep creek, which empties into the Columbia river just opposite the great smelter town of Northport, Wash. Some miles below the mouth of this stream are several beautiful and magnificent falls. At one point the waters make a clean leap of about ninety feet. Between the mouth and the lowest fall there are abundant trout; but from the upper falls clear to the source not a fish can be caught. This is no doubt due to the fact that no fish can ever ascend the falls.

Little Sheep creek, however, contains many "speckled beauties." Murphy creek, which empties into the Columbia just above the town of Trail, is one of the best fishing streams in that entire region.

Trail creek rises in the towering mountains south of the city of Rossland and after devious meandering empties into the Columbia just opposite Trail. It is, with scarcely an exception, one of the most beautiful little water courses in all British Columbia. Its length is nearly ten miles. However, it is not a specially good trouting stream. It runs through a vast mineral zone and its clear, sparkling waters are strongly impregnated with copper and iron. For this very good reason, a great many fish do not inhabit its rushing floods.

Perhaps one of the best fishing points to be found in all British Columbia is in the Kootnai river near the famous Bonington Falls at what is known as "Slocan Crossing." Thousands of magnificent rainbow trout are caught every season at that point. Its fame is known far and near.

Ex-President Grover Cleveland as an angling expert offers the following theory in an article in the Saturday Evening Post as to why the big fish get away, leaving nothing but the foundation for a fishing story, that generally brands the historian as a most consummate prevaricator:

"It is perfectly plain that large fish are more apt to escape than small ones. Their weight and activity, combined with the increased trickiness and resourcefulness of age and experience, of course greatly increase their ability to tear out the hook, and enhance the danger that their antics will expose a fatal weakness in hook, leader, line or rod. Another presumption, which must be regretfully mentioned, arises from the fact that in many cases it is the encounter with a large fish which causes such excitement, and such distraction or perversion of judgment, as leads the fisherman to do the wrong thing, or fail to do the right thing, at the critical instant."

Fish Lines.

A fleet of about fifty rowboats, conveyed now and then by a power launch or a white winged yacht still in commission, animated a picturesque marine panorama along the Marin shores and Raccoon straits last Sunday and proved that the attractions of striped bass angling were more than alluring to a large number of salt water fishermen. The day was an ideal one for an outing and the tides favorable to the oarsmen who were propelling the boats for the bass trollers. Notwithstanding the pleasant and agreeable weather conditions the combined catch of striped bass was a very small one, but few fish were hooked. Why they were absent from many favorable spots and places where they were taken in plentiful numbers for several weeks past, is a problem which will have to remain for the time being unsolved. The waters on the west side of Belvedere, the Tiburon cove, near and about Peninsula Point, both shores of Raccoon Straits and the many nooks and coves abounding along the rocky shores of Angel Island were fished up and down and all around during the day, patiently and persistently. From Bluff Point to El Campo boats were trolling also and with the same general results.

Among the lucky fishermen were J. S. and W. Turner who early in the day hooked two fish weighing eleven and nine pounds respectively. J. Boswell Kenniff caught a seven pounder, in the middle of the day, near Stewart's point, Angel Island.

C. B. Hollywood, who fished in company with J. A. Pariser, captured a five pound bass. Prof. Terry was one of the lucky fishers, his bass turned the scales at six pounds. J. Bliss was his hot companion.

Mr. Miller, Sr., landed a small fish in the afternoon.

W. S. Kittle and W. R. McFarland fished all day, going over the whole fishing grounds and were unsuccessful until pretty late in the afternoon, when they made Hospital Cove, Angel Island. Mr. Kittle got a strike and after playing his fish a short time, "Mac" gaffed a handsome seven pounder in perfect condition. Indications of good fishing in the cove were promising, fish were "breaking" here and there and the fishermen were correspondingly elated at the prospects of sport after the almost futile work of the day. The anglers were doomed to disappointment by an occurrence entirely uncalculated for and which was an extreme exhibition of churlishness on the part of an individual connected with the United States Quarantine station.

The quarantine launch turned a point of the rocky shore, coming in at full speed, heedless of the boat occupied by the anglers and in direct line with the small boat which undoubtedly had the right of way. An immediate vigorous turn at the oars only took the occupants of the rowboat away from the danger of being run down but to give them the disagreeable change of a possible swamping, which was avoided by quick work. The trolling lines were by this time fouled and in spite of remonstrance and request the launch continued on its way—the official alluded to remarking, "I haven't time to wait for that," with the result that Kittle's tackle was carried away and a valuable rod smashed. This is not the first time such an occurrence has taken place. Many anglers believe that the lack of courtesy shown, to say nothing of the legal rights of small boats in a navigable water, is prompted as much by design as indifferent boorishness.

Among the other anglers who set out from Tiburon on Sunday were, W. Swain, "Doc" Cox, C. R. Kenniff, G. Luttrell and F. Carroll hooked two fish, a four and a six pound bass.

Those of the fishermen who journeyed to Petaluma creek and the waters near San Quentin fared better than the contingent above referred to. At the latter place, a party of six, in boats, caught 36 striped bass with trolling spoons. The largest bass weighed over fourteen pounds. A four pound sole and a three pound silver perch were added to the catch with drop lines. Near the Petaluma Gun Club house Capt. Walker landed four bass, a thirteen pounder being the heaviest. W. F. Shattuck was high hook, a seventeen pound fish being the largest of eight he hooked. D. B. Fairbanks caught three fish whose combined weight scaled thirty-four pounds.

Plenty of striped bass are now caught in the murky waters of Lake Merritt. The lake is full of silver fish which the bass feed on.

Rock-fish are very plentiful now. Last Sunday the late boats from Tiburon carried over to the city a crowd of fishers, among them a number of young ladies who had immense strings of rock-fish, or rock-cod, as they are usually called. A yachting party who found bass trolling unprofitable indulged in fishing for the red fellows and caught a large number. One of the ladies was surprised several times because she pulled up two and three fish at a time. Her attention was temporarily engaged elsewhere and the fish placed on the line, which was lowered in the water again.

"I've got a ten-pounder," was the exultant remark of a stout, red-faced angler Sunday as two of the trolling boats were passing each other. An immediate query from a facetious rock-cod fisherman anchored close by, "Boy or girl?" was unanswered as the two fishing boats went on their course.

Hatchers of trout have discovered that the big German brown trout, which has promised so much in the way of sport, will not live in harmony with its smaller but gamier cousin, the brook trout. It not only eats the fry of the smaller trout, but is so large that it can eat a fairly good sized grown-up fish.

GUN.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

A general storm up north will bring down ducks and geese in thousands.

Ed Schultz and Jack Karney made a good bag at Sears Point on Sunday.

Recent reports concerning Humboldt bay are to the effect that the Eureka sportsmen are having grand shooting.

Market hunters in the vicinity of Clarksburg have been sending the limit number of ducks to town from that section for over a month past.

The high tide to-morrow will work havoc on the rail. The rise will be six feet. The Alameda marshes will be alive with shooters watching for the rail.

"Bert" Patrick and "Tom" Deffenbach shot a combined bag of 15 "cans" and 7 widgeon on Sunday last on the Marin Gun Club preserve at the head of Richardson's bay.

The Swan Gun Club, whose preserve is located on the Alameda marsh between Alvarado and Mr. Eden, have just had completed a comfortable club house that will nicely accommodate eight hunters. G. G. Gauld is the President and Dr. L. T. Cranz is the Secretary of the club.

At the Nolo Gun Club preserve, on the Belmont marsh, on Sunday, were Hip Justins, W. J. McLean, T. M. McLellan, E. A. Estabrook, A. D. McLellan, Dr. W. T. Thomas, W. Willigrod, Rev. Guy Wyman and G. G. Galt. A goodly number of ducks, principally sprig, fell to the guns.

In most places this week during the rainy weather, teal ducks, which are on the wing very much when it rains, were in the majority. Last Sunday sprigtails were most in evidence. The rain has had the tendency to scatter most of the birds from the bay marshes. There is a steady influx of northern visitors daily, principally teal and widgeon.

A cynical old man once found himself in the company of a large number of Anglo-Indians, and he proceeded to ask each guest if he had shot a tiger. At last one gentleman declared he had never even seen the royal beast. "Thank God!" exclaimed the questioner: "may I sit next to you at dinner? I am so weary of hearing about the deaths of tigers."

Robert Morris, well known to many of our local sportsmen, passed away this week. Mr. Morris was aged 65 years, and prior to coming to this State had been a noted trap shot at Kansas City. He was of a genial and pleasant disposition, a thorough sportsman and one who loved gun and dog with an application and intelligence that is as rare as it was of high quality and merit.

Last Sunday, although many hunters were abroad, duck shooting was not what it should have been, save on some of the baited ponds of the club preserves. During the week many sportsmen who had been advised by a friend in the interior have gone away for a day's shooting. The members of the Canvasback and Field and Tule Clubs enjoyed a good shoot on Wednesday. H. L. Miller and Fred H. Bushnell bagged over 40 birds each, principally teal. A. Roos killed 28. A. Hopke 17, A. Cummings and three visiting sportsmen, Messrs. Brode, Prince and Green, also bag an excellent shoot.

Last Sunday was just the day waited for by the quail hunters. Some of the best bunches of birds brought to town were shot in the vicinity of Novato and back of Ignacio. John Bergez bagged the limit on Long's ranch near the former mentioned town. William Gludermann and H. Lawrence bagged the limit near Ignacio. Other hunters in the same district got many birds. The quail laid to the dogs in ideal style. Near Sears Point Pete McWilson, Jules Bruns and Edgar Forster had a quail shoot. Advices from San Mateo county are to the effect that quail are plentiful in many sections.

The publication of a story this week in the Solano Courier detailing a duck shoot by Otto Feudner near Donverton last Sunday, in which Feudner was accused of killing more than a limit number of birds and also of shipping them to this city in a manner not warranted by the game law, is refuted by Mr. Stewart, upon whose property the shoot took place. Mr. Stewart states that Feudner and Mr. Stewart Jr. shot together during the day and the combined bag amounted to 72 ducks—50 of these (40 Mallards and 10 Canvasbacks) fell to Feudner's gun. Feudner shot only the two varieties of birds, paying no attention to other kinds.

John H. Foster, formerly of Cottonwood, but now station agent at Ager, was a visitor to Red Bluff recently. He stated that the Klamath reservation, which is about nineteen miles from Ager, is the land for ducks. There are millions of them there, but no white man is permitted on the reservation. It is all for the Indians, who indulge in the most wanton destruction of the game. The lakes and tulos about the Klamath reservoir is a breeding ground for wild fowls. The Indians go out and gather up the eggs in big tin pans by the thousands. They set fire to the tules in order to find the nests and eggs and kill the ducks in great numbers.

The Spooney Gun Club, whose members shoot on a preserve located between Mt. Eden and Alvarado, has a new member who is one of the most enthusiastic sportsmen in this city, Dr. E. N. Short. The Doctor has recently acquired a complete hunting outfit, including a well trained and intelligent Setter dog, which was presented to him by a prominent horseman. Dr. Short, although a novice at duck shooting, is a splendid shot, and has put some of the club experts in the shade shooting ducks this year. He is particularly proud of his hunting dog, however. The other day he was showing Phil Bekeart some of the good points of his dog, and threw a half dollar into one of the sloughs in the marsh. Obviously the dog dived for the coin, and brought out of the water a three-pound bass and 15 cents in change.

Mr. Lopez, Jr., of the Merriwa Stock Farm proposes to send to his friend Mr. Cosmos Bonsor of Sussex, England, 25 pair of California valley quail. The successful introduction and propagation of our famous game bird in the English fields and coverts will give the sportsmen over the water a phase of field shooting that will be a revelation to all of them who have never been afield with dog and gun after our "hoodlum of the valley." Permission for shipment of these birds will be given by the Fish Commissioners. About two years ago Mr. Lopez, Sr., sent 50 quail to Montana where they were liberated on Marcus Daly's Bitter Root Creek Stock Farm. The birds found conditions favorable and have done splendidly, a number of large herds have become thoroughly at home on the range and promise to increase by thousands. Needless to say that for the present the quail are rigidly protected.

In referring to the peculiarities of scent, a writer in the Shooting Times says: "At times a fox will hunt up a hedge side and destroy every sitting partridge and pheasant that it contains. Instances are also on record where hounds have been laid on to a spot where the fox has been seen to pass, and have failed to show even an indication of feathering; yet on being brought back to the same place after a short interval of some minutes, they have at once taken up the line and gone away at score. A bird falls winged, the spot is marked and a retriever laid on: sometimes there is absolutely no scent, and the dog, however good he may be, is completely at fault. But at times, after working round for a bit, he will come back to the original spot, start away at once, and follow the bird straight away to the far end of a long field of turnips or potatoes, finally catching him and bringing him to bag. It is a very curious but well known fact that very often, when a fox is chased by a dog during a run, all scent ceases afterward, even when hounds get to the line of the fox beyond the mark where the dog went."

The tactics of the Eastern game protection fanatics seem to be as effective in creating opposition and resentment on the part of erstwhile well behaved citizens as the game law now in force in this State, has done by reason of its discriminating and class coloring.

A Chicago paper in relating the trials of local hunters in the adjoining State of Indiana, near the town of Alexandria, says: "City hunters in the gas belt are annoyed by the provisions of the game law, which are practically prohibitory, and which are enforced by the farmers to an unreasonable degree, it is claimed. In retaliation the hunters have unearthed the old Canada thistle law, which makes the growth of them on lands a finable offense, and hereafter in case of the prosecution of a hunter, it is sure to result in the prosecution of the farmer in turn, as Canada thistles are fairly plentiful."

Surely a pretty condition of affairs. Possibly these Eastern farmers are also bamboozled by a windy "apostle of game protection" and have, in their mistaken zeal instead of accomplishing anything practical, done more harm to legitimate game protection than honest efforts in its stead will secure in several years to come.

This reminds us that the progress made in the movement to link the sportsmen of the State together in a chain of game protective associations has hardly born the fruit commensurate with the outlay of the State's money already devoted to the purpose.

Out of a total claimed membership, if we are not mistaken, on the rolls of the associations, of nearly 2000 members, but a comparatively few in number of the sportsmen identified with the movement and the members of the California State Association, the nucleus of the great game and fish protection phalanx, attended the recent annual convention held in San Jose.

The publication during the same week of the convention meeting, of a two-column article in a San Jose paper commenting upon and severely criticizing the enforcement of the game laws in San Mateo and Santa Clara counties is as direct an impeachment of the acceptance by the people and sportsmen at large of the present game protection cult and its sponsor, as it is a strong impeachment of a result and condition that is practically class legislation.

County Game Laws in Force.

The present State Game and Fish Laws are in force and unchanged in the following counties:

Alameda,	Monterey,	Solano,
Colusa,	Santa Cruz,	San Joaquin,
Contra Costa,	San Benito,	Sonoma.
Merced,

The following counties have adopted ordinances in regard to fish and game, and which are now in force as follows:

Fresno—Quail, Nov. 1 to Feb. 1.
Marin—Male deer, Aug. 1 to Sept. 15. Quail, Oct. 15 to Jan. 15. Shooting on county roads or in cemeteries prohibited. The use of "pump" gun, repeating shotgun or any kind of magazine shotgun for hunting in the county is prohibited.
Monterey—Sea gulls and blue cranes, killing of prohibited. Use of guns of larger caliber than 10-gauge prohibited.
Santa Clara—Quail, Oct. 8 to Feb. 1.
San Mateo—Quail, Nov. 1 to Dec. 1. Rail, Oct. 15 to Nov. 15. Shooting from boats at high tide prohibited.

California favorite hot weather drink—Jackson's Napa Soda.

Pheasants--Varieties and Culture.

Some pheasants will live quietly in a group of one male and several females, providing the females will allow it. The male is usually satisfied, but the females often destroy each other, and will not submit to other than pair-mating. This is an arrangement that must be looked after when tried, so one must be fully assured that pen-matings will be allowed. As many as four females and one male, common pheasants, have been known to do well to a coop and runway built for fowls, their wings being cut very closely to keep them from flying; they laid well, and their eggs were very fertile.

When they are bred in large numbers this will do, but usually one only possesses a pair or two, the loss of which would be serious. To prevent this the enclosed coop and run is best, and for all the rare varieties an absolute necessity, for many of them will fly as quick as a quail, and are equally wild. Many of the so-called common pheasants will become about as tame as guinea fowls when they have been kept upon a place for several years.

When our purpose of keeping pheasants is to produce them for game birds, to turn out or to eat, what is commonly called the English pheasant should be selected. These are of good size, vigorous growth and the most domestic of them all. As mentioned by Mr. Scherren above, they are not to be had in their original purity, but they fill the wants in this line quite as well as if of the true bred type.

After these, the Reeves pheasant would be recommended for selection. They are the largest variety of true pheasants—strong, vigorous, hardy, and breed well in our climate. They came from China and are said to be very swift of wing. They are beautiful in plumage, yellow barred with black; top of head and neck white, divided with a band about the head; tail grayish white, marked with golden red on the edge and barred with dark crescent shape bars; they breed well in the closed runs, and have proved to be fine game birds for the rough hill lands of Scotland.

But the two varieties, Golden and Silver, are better known, perhaps, than any of the high-colored, rich-plumaged pheasants. The one has the golden crest, orange and purple-tipped collar, and scarlet tail; the other, white top color penciled with dark, under body metallic black, crest black. They are very domestic, and do well in confinement. They have been seen so tame as to run about in the yard with chickens and other fowls. They lay well, and the eggs are very fertile. For those who desire a beautiful pheasant that is easy to rear, this variety will prove a success; but they are not considered so good a game bird, nor so fine for the table, as the others.

The pheasant that is commonly known as the English Ring Neck is the result of crossing the Chinese Ring Neck with the English. This Chinese Ring Neck is commonly called Mongolian. English Ring Neck pheasants are used more frequently than any other for stocking. Sportsmen prefer them because they are better on the wing than other varieties, and very hardy, enduring when in liberty the most severe snowstorms and cold weather with less suffering and loss than might be expected. Chinese are rather small and hard to breed when true to the variety, and do not lay so many eggs as the English cross-breed, which are quicker on the wing, and the finest game bird in many ways.

When kept for home breeding, they will lay from 30 to 40 eggs each, when the eggs are removed daily. They usually lay their eggs in a small hole which they make in the ground. When turned out to shift for themselves, they usually lay two litters and mother two broods of young during a season. It takes 24 days to hatch pheasant eggs. To give some idea of their quality of endurance, the manager of a shooting park that is stocked with this variety of pheasants, relates that a few years ago during and after a severe blizzard they were completely shut in with snow for four or five days, with but little loss.

Hundreds of young pheasants have been known to be reared by Cochbin Bantam hens, out in the grass, the same as young Bantams. Cochbin Bantams are preferred because they are so very quiet, and their domestic ways influence the young pheasants to be more quiet. Any kind of Bantams will do for mothers, but a wild hen of any kind is as bad as a pheasant hen for a mother to young pheasants which it is desired to raise out in coops like young chicks.

When they are bred in pairs in enclosed house and runway, the pheasant hen can hatch and rear her own young in the runway if preferred. Some males will destroy the little ones. To prevent this the male may be removed to another enclosure, or the pheasant hen and her young may be placed in a runway built for the purpose. Wherever the pheasants are kept they should be provided with at least a little green food that can be cut and placed in their runway. Fresh lettuce leaves are also good for green food.

Pheasants, old and young, should be fed about the same as fowls; broken corn, hulled oats, wheat and some little millet seed will do for the grown pheasants. The same, broken fine, or any chick food that is prepared for small Bantams will do for the young pheasants. They should also have some small beef scraps, which should be ground fine enough for them to eat; plenty of clean, pure water and abundance of shade are necessary for the young, and also best for the old pheasants. With such care and conveniences pheasants of the hardier kinds are as easy to rear as young Bantams.

The principal diseases among pheasants are gapes, cramps, scurvy legs, skin disease and enteritis. All trace their origin to dirt, damp and careless feeding. If the pheasants are properly cared for they will have but little disease. But, like all birds that come to us from far-off climes, they must become acclimated. Home-bred birds are preferable at all times. Enteritis, inflammation of the intestines, is often taken for fowl cholera in turkeys, chickens and pheasants. Many thousand young of all these species are lost with like ailments each year; they come from many causes, such as cold from dampness, extreme heat and fermentation of food from any cause.

THE FARM.

Valuable Points on Feeding Hogs.

Pigs require about one-fourth less feed for the same growth when given shelter. Soaked corn for pigs is worth about one-fourth more than corn not soaked.

The mixing of cut clover hay with corn meal for pig feeding in winter affects a saving of 30 per cent. of grain to the amount of gain, and materially benefits the health of the pigs.

The feeding value of wheat, pound for pound, is not greater than that of corn.

Cooked feed, except potatoes, not only makes less gain for feed consumed, but impairs the health of the animal.

Salt fed daily greatly increases the gain from the feed consumed.

The feeding of two ounces of wool ashes, or a couple of spoonfuls of bone meal each day, to a hog on a full ration of corn, will make the same growth with a fourth less corn.

Ground corn shows a saving of only 8 per cent. when fed to pigs, and scarcely pays for grinding.

Ground feed given wet shows a gain of 7 per cent. more than the same feed given dry.

Feed given to the dam while suckling her young gives as much growth to the pigs as though fed direct.

The successful feeder should not only know these facts, but profit by his knowledge of them. He should be constantly on the alert to take any advantage he may of the market, or of the method of feeding, to realize the greatest profit from the feed consumed. The most successful feeder is the man who is able to realize the largest profit from the feed used, rather than he who makes a more rapid gain at a loss.

There is a large per cent. of feed necessarily produced in producing feed for hogs that must be fed to other farm animals to realize a profit from its production. The hog should be fed a properly balanced ration, and have a succulent feed, when possible, throughout the year.

The results of the Pan-American dairy test afford a suggestive object lesson on the effect of tedium in stock growing. There is the Polled Jersey for instance. It must be bornless and capable of reproducing bornless offspring to be entitled to train in this class and it does not seem to require any other qualification for registry. If it can be demonstrated that the possession of horns is a barrier to butter production the hornless dairy cow would be much desired. The results at the Pan prove, on the contrary, that the horn is quite a factor as a butter maker, if the horn by its presence or absence has anything to do with it; which of course it has not. Breeding another type of cattle just because they have a white belt around the middle and apparently for no other object is another silly fad. The average stockman will not care whether there is a black or pink belt, a Boer flag or a bit of red flannel around the belly, neck or rump of his cattle if they are maximum profit-makers in the dairy. A few years ago the Jerseys of this country were woefully deteriorated by the color fad. They had to be solid colored, regardless of every other consideration and consequently all other qualifications were subordinated to color.

November 1st there went into effect in New Jersey what is supposed to be the strictest pure food law ever formulated. Under its terms the office of State Dairy Commissioner is abolished and the enforcement of the law is entrusted to the State Board of Health. The duties of the Dairy Commissioner will be performed by a Chief Food Inspector. Every article of food is to be tested, which is to be extended to canned goods. It will not matter whether the goods are put up inside or outside the State, an analysis of everything must be made before it can be deemed fit for human consumption.

Experimenting With Razorbacks.

A Princeton, Illinois, paper of recent date contained the following:

Early Wednesday morning seventy-five wagons came into town loaded with hogs from the farm of A. P. Blanchard of Bureau township, one of the leading hog feeders and breeders of this county. There were 340 hogs in all, and they were sold in Curtis. Mr. Blanchard gets a nice little sum for his crop.

Over seventy of these hogs were genuine razorbacks from Arkansas. A man went down there last fall and gathered them up, hunting them down in their native forests with horses and hounds. When they got here they were, to Northern eyes, a bad lot, all snout, hackbone and legs, and weighed only eighty pounds apiece.

Mr. Blanchard took them home and all the people laughed. He turned them out and let them rough it. They were used to that, took care of themselves in good shape, stood our Northern climate, remarkably well, were healthy and as prosperous as the proverbial pig in clover.

About the 1st of May he put them on feed, and has found them among the most profitable feeders he ever had. Those that saw them in the yards Wednesday will give testimony that the razorback makes a big hog, takes on flesh, but puts it on where it will make bacon rather than ham, and stands up on its legs. There were no cripples among them. They seem to be remarkably healthy, for not a single one has been lost from sickness.

This experiment has proven a success far beyond the most sanguine expectations, and has put money enough in Blanchard's pocket to pay for the laugh that the other fellows had. "He laughs best who laughs last."

The recent American Royal Cattle Show and sale at Kansas City far surpassed any previous event of that nature. The weather was ideal and with perfect arrangements, including a show tent 300 by 125 feet, a barn covering two and a quarter acres and a sale pavilion with a capacity for housing 200 cattle and containing an amphitheater with seats for 3000 people, there was nothing to mar the success or retard the program that had been arranged. The top price paid for a Shorthorn was $1850 for Ingleswood 151200, a two year old Cruickshank hull, and the average price realized for twelve Shorthorn bulls was $477.91. Thirty-eight Shorthorn cows sold at an average of $292.36, and the general average for fifty Shorthorns was $336.90, or just $20 higher than at last year's sale. The average price of forty-five head of Hereford cattle was $288, sixteen hulls having brought $336.87 each and twenty-nine cows having realized an average price of $261.20. The top price for a Hereford bull was $1005 for Southington 111903, of the Armour herd. The highest price for a Hereford cow was $620 for Pittsburg Maid 07545, Marshall Field, of Chicago, having been the successful bidder. Thirty-five Galloways averaged $134.14. The top price was $600 paid for imp. Wolfel. The top price on females was $200 for Lady of the Lake and calf.

A fine salt trough for sheep may be built with two twelve-inch boards, two ten-inch boards, two six-inch boards and pieces for ends and two pieces of 2x6 to be set in the ground as sills. The sides of the trough can be made sloping, three inches apart at bottom and about ten at top. The top must be made to shed water from the center, one side of the top to be nailed, the other hung by hinges. The sheep take the salt from the lower part in a small trough made with the two six-inch boards. This kind of trough will protect the salt and any drug for worms from the rain and also keep sheep from soiling the contents.

Care in Feeding Cows.

The cow requires not only materials for maintenance, but also must have protein, fat and carbohydrates to make milk from. The milk contains water, fat, protein (casein, or curd), sugar, the ash, and these are all made from the constituents of the food. If sufficient protein, fat and carbohydrates are contained in the food given her, the cow supplies this deficiency for a time by drawing on her own body, and gradually begins to shrink in quantity or quality of milk, or both, says Farm, Field and Stockman. The stingy feeder cheats himself as well as the cow. She suffers from hunger, although her belly is full of swale hay, but she also becomes poor and does not yield the milk and butter she should. Her milk glands are a wonderful machine, but they cannot make milk casein (curd) out of the carbohydrates in coarse, unappetizing, indigestible swale hay or sawdust any more than the farmer himself can make butter from skim milk. She must not only have a generous supply of good food, but it must contain sufficient amounts of the nutrients needed for making milk. Until this fact is understood and appreciated, successful, profitable dairying is out of the question. The cow must be regarded as a sort of living machine. She takes the raw materials given her in the form of food and works them over into milk. If the supply of proper materials is small, the output will be small. The cow that will not repay generous feeding should be disposed of at once and one sought that will. There are certain inbred characteristics which even liberal feeding cannot overcome.

The show and sale of Angora goats in Kansas City was concluded with a banquet at which only Angora "venison" was consumed. The banquet was quite as successful as the show which preceded it and there is no doubt that the "long-fleeced beauties" have made many new friends.

Cost of and Profit on Fifty Ewes.

Let the mind of the reader follow fifty ewes in the hands of the farmer who has not yet adopted the silo, but depends on dry fodder and grain and some grazing. Each sheep of 100 pounds or less weight should have an average of one-half pint of corn or its equal in other cereal food per day and an average of about one and a half pounds of good, dry hay or fodder per day from December 1st until plenty of green herbage comes in the spring.

I know it is not possible to name an exact amount of food for each ewe because some winters require more than others and some sheep more than others; but there is no man capable of feeding sheep at all who does not know when they have consumed the food he last gave them and seem to be ready for another feed from his hands. To feed them thoughtfully and carefully all they will eat up twice a day clearly is as good a rule for general practice as one can have.

The above mentioned ration for fifty ewes will amount to about four and a half tons of hay and fifty bushels of corn for the winter, and no keeper of sheep should go into winter quarters with a less amount of provender set apart for them, even though they be of the cheaper grade of sheep. Six dollars a ton for hay and 50 cents a bushel for the corn, both fed out to the sheep, would be a liberal cost price for them. Eight cents a head per month is a liberal cost price for pasture, salt, attention and care. So we have an account with the sheep as follows viz.:

4 1/2 tons hay at $5, costing.....	$22 1/2
50 bushels corn at 50c, costing.....	25
Pasture, etc., 50 head at 8c, seven months, costing.....	28
Total.....	$75 1/2

50 fleeces, 8 lbs., 400 at 20c.....$80
I am aware that common ewes will not yield eight pounds of wool each, but I know that the second cross of ewes made as I have suggested and fed and cared for, will shear over eight pounds per head, average. If they do not, there is something seriously wrong. The manure from fifty ewes kept as above and properly saved is worth fully $25 to the farm compost heap. So it will be seen that the profit of the business is in the increase. If the flock has not increased 80 per cent in number, some change is certainly needed in management.—Samuel Archer, in Progressive Farmer.

A Government buyer purchased thirty eight head of mules last month in the Paskenta country, paying, it is said, an average of $83 per head. Farmer Myer has sold twenty-three head, Burt brothers thirteen, and D. C. Mitchell two. The mules are intended for Cuba and are to be delivered in two weeks.—Red Bluff News.

Ashland Tidings: Four hundred head of yearling cattle have been sold by Pelton & Neil to J. C. Mitchell and will be shipped south from Ashland this week. The cattle have been ranged in the Dead Indian section during the summer. It is reported that Mitchell paid $21 per head for the lot.

A CHANCE AT $6000 FOR $18 FOR YOUR FOAL BORN THIS YEAR

IN THE Pacific Breeders Futurity Stakes

$6000 Guaranteed

For Mares Bred in 1900 Closed September 1, 1900.

A FEW SUBSTITUTIONS.

A few of the original nominators of Pacific Breeders Futurity Stakes ($6000 guaranteed) for foals of 1901 have advised us that, because of barrenness of the mare or death of the foal, they wish to discontinue their entries. The opportunity therefore presents itself to secure a $6000 engagement for foals of this season. If you own one or more whose dams you neglected to name when entries closed Sept. 1, 1900, you can now secure representation in this stake, and thus add materially to the value of your foals. The cost is but $18—$3 for the nomination, $5 for the January payment, 1901, and $10 for the January payment, 1902.

NOTHING MORE TO PAY BEFORE 1903

When your foal can start in the Two-Year-Old division. Stakes divided as follows: $3350 for Trotting Foals, $1750 for Pacing Foals, $850 to Nominators of Dams of Winners and $300 for Owners of Stallions, money divided as follows:

$2000 for Three-Year-Old Trotters. 200 for Nominator of Dam of Winner of Three-Year-Old Trot.	$1000 for Three-Year-Old Pacers. 200 for Nominator of Dam of Winner of Three-Year-Old Pace.
1250 for Two-Year-Old Trotters. 200 for Nominator of Dam of Winner of Two-Year-Old Trot.	750 for Two-Year-Old Pacers. 200 for Nominator of Dam of Winner of Two-Year-Old Pace.
100 to Owner of Stallion, Sire of Winner of Three-Year-Old Trot when mare was bred.	100 to Owner of Stallion, Sire of Winner of Three-Year-Old Pace when mare was bred.

The Only Opportunity that will be presented to you to secure so rich an engagement at so nominal a cost.

Remittance of $18, with color, sex and breeding of the foal, on or before January 1st next, is all that is required to add thousands of dollars to the earning capacity of your foal of this season. The few substitutions to be disposed of will be awarded in the order in which remittances are received. Prompt attention will secure for you this rich engagement.

QUINN'S OINTMENT FOR HORSES

stands at the head of all veterinary remedies. Such troubles as Spavins, Curbs, Windpuffs, Splints, Bunches have no terrors for a horse if the master keeps and applies Quinn's Ointment. All well known horsemen speak of it in the highest terms:

Miller & Sibley of Franklin, Pa., owners of St. Bel, brother of late Bel Boy, write, "We have used Quinn's Ointment with great success and believe it fulfills all claimed for it. We cheerfully recommend it to our friends." For Curbs, Splints, Spavins or Bunches it has no equal.

Price $1.00 per package. Sold by all druggists, or sent by mail.

1902 CHICAGO

PRICE $15, F. O. B. SAN FRANCISCO.

"STEWART'S PATENT."

THE MOST PERFECT EVER MADE

A Revolution in Clipping Machine Construction.

INCOMPARABLY superior to anything previously manufactured at any price by any one. Surprisingly simple, strong and durable. No belts to slip, positive power. The teeth in large gear are cut out of solid metal (no cast) which must run easily and will wear forever. It has a rigid base, tubular upright, with a fine, strong crank handle, and unlike any other machine made it can be turned with either the left or the right hand. Each machine is furnished with the "99 Improved one-nut balance tension knife, which cannot get out of adjustment.

One of our customers writes us, after receiving the new machine: "Life is too short to fool away with my old belt machine. I can clip two horses now in the time it formerly took to clip one and I am not half as tired."

ASTHMA CURE FREE!

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent

Cure in All Cases.

Sent Absolutely Free on Receipt of Postal.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

We want to send to every sufferer a trial treatment of Asthmalene, similar to the one that cured Mr. Wells. We'll send it by mail POSTPAID, ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE, to any sufferer who will write for it, even on a postal. Never mind, though you are despairing, however had your case, Asthmalene will relieve and cure. The worse your case, the more glad we are to send it. Do not delay. Write at once, addressing DR. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO., 79 East 130th St., N. Y. City. Sold by all Druggists.

INTERESTING and VALUABLE HORSE BOOKS MAKE YOUR SELECTION.

Any of the following Books will be sent Postpaid for the price named:

THE PRACTICAL HORSE KEEPER

By George Fleming, LL. D., F. R. C. V. S.

A guide to those who have to do with horses, containing chapters on Breeding, Purchasing, Stable and Stabling, Feeding and General Management, Riding, Hunting, Breaking and Training, Harness and Driving, Shoeing and Diseases of the Foot, Injuries, Lameness, Diseases of the Horse, the Ass and Mule, etc. Bound in cloth. Size, 5½ x 7½ inches.90c.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN TROTTER AND PACING HORSE

By Henry T. Coates.

The book, besides treating of Driving Horses, gives a condensed history of the best horses in this country, with mention of their best performances. It is invaluable in its suggestions to horse trainers, and is the latest hook on this subject published. Illustrated with 4 fine pictures. Size, 5½ x 7½ inches. Bound in cloth.90c.

YOUATT ON THE HORSE

The Horse. By Wm. Youatt.

Together with a General History of the Horse and a Dissertation on the American Trotting Horse and an essay on the Ass and the Mule, by J. S. Skinner. With an engraving on steel and 58 illustrations on wood. Bound in full cloth. Size, 5½ x 8½ inches.$1.15

THE HORSE IN THE STABLE AND IN THE FIELD

His management in health and disease. By J. H. Walsh, F. R. C. S. (Stonehenge). Illustrated with over 80 engravings from photographs. Handsomely bound in cloth. Size, 5½ x 7½ inches.$1.15

DISEASES OF THE HORSE AND HOW TO TREAT THEM

By Robert Chawner.

New Edition and Concise Manual of Special Pathology for use of Horsemen, Farmers, Stock Raisers and Students of the Agricultural Colleges. Fully illustrated. Bound in cloth. Size, 5½ x 7½ inches. Cloth.$1.25

"It is an unpretending treatise free from technicalities, and well adapted for the use of farmers and stock raisers. The object of Dr. Chawner was to make a popular and reliable handbook in that department of veterinary science which treats of the horse and his diseases and in this object he has succeeded and supplied a practical want. There is no extraneous matter. Information is imparted with commendable brevity and in language plain and simple enough to be understood by all. The fallacies of the old school are rejected, and the treatment prescribed is that of modern practitioners."—Turf, Field and Farm.

THE AMERICAN GENTLEMAN'S STABLE GUIDE

The American Gentleman's Stable Guide, containing a description of the American Stable and Method of Feeding, Grooming and the general management of horses, together with the directions for the care of carriages, harness, etc. Fully illustrated. Pocket Edition. Size, 5 x 7 inches. Bound in cloth.$1.15

"The book contains a familiar description of the American stable, the most approved method of feeding, grooming and general management of horses, together with directions for the care of carriages, harness, etc. The whole is founded on the careful study and experience of many years of the author's life, and forms a valuable manual for any one who has charge of the noblest of man's irrational servants. Its low price and great value should give it general circulation among horsemen."—Indiana Farmer.

HORSE BREEDING RECOLLECTIONS

By Count Lehendorff

The Manager of the Government Stud of Germany, who has made a special study of the intricacies of horse breeding, and in the volume before us embodies the result of years of careful study. While all may not agree with his conclusions, none will dispute the value of his observations. Size, 5½ x 8½ inches. Bound in full cloth.$1.15

"The recital of his experiences and the suggestions which he furnishes will undoubtedly prove of value to all who are interested in equine matters. Everyone so interested ought to own a copy of this valuable reminiscence."—

THE TROTTER HORSE OF AMERICA

How to Train and Drive Him, with Reminiscences of the Trotting Turf.

By Hiram Woodruff.

Edited by Charles J. Foster. Including an Introductory Notice by George Wilkes and a Biographical Sketch by the Editor. With a steel portrait of the author and six engravings on wood of celebrated trotters. 12mo. Size, 5½ x 7½ inches. Cloth, extra.$1.25

"The author was one of the most noted horsemen of this country, and in the work before us has given to the public the best thoughts, founded on years of experience in the feeding, handling, breaking and training of colts with a view to securing their best performances. Besides treating of driving horses, it gives a condensed history of the best horses in this country, with a mention of their best performances. It is invaluable in its suggestions to horse trainers, and its rules laid down and suggestions given are as good as the day they were written."—

BOOK OF THE FARM

Or the Handy Book of Husbandry

Containing Practical Information in regard to Buying or Leasing a Farm; Fences and Farm Buildings, Farming Implements, Drainage, Plowing, Subsoiling, Manuring, Rotation of Crops, Care and Medical Treatment of the Cattle, Horses, Sheep, Swine and Poultry; Management of the Dairy; Useful Tables, etc. By George E. Waring Jr. of Ogden Farm, author of "Draining For Profit and For Health," etc.

New edition, thoroughly revised by the author. With 100 illustrations. 12mo. Size, 5½ x 7½ inches. 542 pages. Cloth, extra.$1.25

"The farmer who wants to succeed in these days of busy competition must do his farming in the most intelligent manner, and realize that the cultivation of the earth is a science as well as an industry. No farmer ought to be without this book, for it contains much that every farmer and his family need to know. It tells about buying a farm and gives ample directions about buildings, improvements and everything pertaining to the crops, the farm animals and the management of the business."—Sunday Magazine.

C. B. BIGELOW of Yolo, who took the Diahlo mare Tags east last spring and reduced her record from 2:13 to 2:11½, is home again, having arrived about ten days ago. "Det," as his friends all familiarly call him, had a very successful trip. He started Tags in fifteen races, out of which she won first money eight times and was inside the money in all the others. Bigelow then sold her to Robert Salter, a well-known business man of Minneapolis, who intended to race her on the ice this winter, but is so pleased with her way of going and great speed that he intends racing her in the 2:12 and faster classes on the Grand Circuit next year, and confidently believes she will pace to a record of 2:06 or better before the season ends. At Denver, Tags paced the middle half of a heat in 59½ seconds, the greatest flight of speed ever seen on that track. It was in the second heat. As she got the word she stepped in a hole in the track and fell to her knees, breaking her check at the same time. When she got up and Det got her to pacing the last horse of the bunch in front of her was at least an eighth of a mile in the lead. The check being broken it was impossible to hold her and she flew from the first quarter to the third in 59½ seconds, and had them all beaten. She simply jogged home in 2:13 and won the next two heats as she pleased. Mr. Bigelow thinks she should reduce her record several seconds next year, and says she is as game as any trotter or pacer he ever drove. Tags is out of Bonnie B. by St. Clair (formerly Fred Low) second dam by old John Nelson.

Mr. Bigelow has many interesting things to tell of the Great Western Circuit, through which he campaigned his mare. At Hamline track, which is about midway between St. Paul and Minneapolis, there were as high as 65,000 people present on one day of the fair. And the most surprising thing about the whole affair was the entire absence of any sort of gambling on the grounds and also the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors. "I never thought it would be possible to conduct a race meeting without betting and minus a bar until I saw this one at Hamline," said Bigelow. "There must have been a dozen or more lunch counters, ice-cream booths and soda-water stands, conducted by committees from the various churches in that section. Farmers and their families were there in great numbers, and when one got out among the cattle sheds and saw the immense crowds walking up and down viewing the cattle, sheep and swine, one could hardly realize that the races were going on at the same time. There were hundreds of cattle of each important breed on exhibition, and the stock show was one of the finest I ever saw. All sorts of amusement were provided for the people, the crowd remaining on the grounds until 11 o'clock at night to see short dash running races, chariot and Roman standing races by electric light. The track on which these were run was a half-mile affair and a big searchlight was kept on the contestants all the way round. There were balloon ascensions and other performances to amuse the people, and everybody seemed intent on having a good time. I think the California district associations should send a representative over one of those western circuits next season and take pointers on how to run a fair that will draw a crowd." Mr. Bigelow will spend the winter at his home in Yolo, and may cross the country again in the spring if he manages to get a prospect as good as Tags was, but if there is a good California circuit will be content to race at home.

C. H. Corey, now of Bakersfield, but formerly of San Jose, was in the city this week. Every horseman in California knows Corey. He used to campaign Laura M. 2:13½, her sire Almont Patchen 2:15, Lady Thornhill 2:17 and other good ones. I can't remember a faster mare than Laura M. that was shut out in as many races as she. The last year she raced was in 1894, and she went through the main California circuit winning a heat or so in nearly every race but getting the flag in her face before the race was over, and whenever this happened the boys say that Corey would make the air turn an indigo blue for a radius of fifty yards. It was at Los Angeles that Laura M. finally won a race, and the wise ones began to think she was the fastest thing that ever crossed the Tehachapi, so when she started a few days later nearly everybody on that track including Corey himself had their money down on her in big chunks. Laura M. was sour and cranky however, and was shut out the first heat. Of course all the "intelligent set" saw a job and there was a howl that could have been heard clear over to San Pedro. The judges declared all bets off, and ruled Corey and the mare off for life. After taking his mare to the barn and seeing her safely put away, Corey called on the judges along with William G. Layng, then editor of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, and after assuring them he had bet his own money on the mare and thanking them for saving it to him by their action in regard to the pools, made the suggestion that the ruling off was not exactly right as the mare had been distanced all through the circuit. Mr. Layng corroborated Corey's statement, "and," says the latter, "me and the old mare were ruled on again, and everything ended satisfactorily." Corey now lives in the oil belt at Bakersfield and is greatly interested in a driving club that has been recently started there. He has a colt by Diablo out of Laura M. that he says "is just as fast as either the old mare or the horse, but I am a little afraid he has Laura's disposition as he gets bees in his bonnet when he gets in a race. On the road he is as nice a horse as one would want to drive, but when he hits a race track he wants to score at two minute speed and gets mad if he is not allowed to. I am handling him mighty carefully, however, and if I get him properly trained I'll knock some of the California records into smithereens."

Mr. J. C. Linneman, of Lima, Ohio, owner of that great producing son of Electioneer, Norval 2:14½, has been in California during the past week and has visited many sections in this part of the State looking for mares by McKinney, which he desired to take East to breed to his horse. Mr. Linneman expected to get enough to make up a carload, but the prices asked by owners were so high that it is doubtful if he will succeed in getting the number he desires. Mr. Linneman left for Los Angeles last Wednesday in the hope of finding a number of fillies there at reasonable prices. While the McKinneys are up at the very top notch in values here in California, it is unfortunate that Mr. Linneman did not secure a number of well bred fillies, as the cross with Norval should produce a very high class of trotters. Norval is one of the very best sons of Electioneer and is the sire of 71 standard performers. He was bred at Palo Alto, and is out of Norma, a great broodmare by Norman 25; second dam by Sir Wallace, and third dam Eagletta by Grey Eagle. Mr. Linneman believes in the Electioneer-Wilkes cross and looks for McKinney mares to be great producers when bred to horses like Norval.

It might not be out of place in this connection to utter a little warning to breeders and owners in this State who will be asked to set prices on some of their horses during the next few months. That there will be quite a number of buyers from the East here between now and spring is certain. It is with horses just as it is with shares of stock in mining and other ventures. When prices go up everybody seems to want to buy, and those who are willing to sell are very apt to ask too much. Until very lately broodmares have been a drug on the horse market and it has been almost impossible to dispose of them at all. Now that there is a demand for good ones of choice breeding, owners should not get the idea into their heads that the old boom prices are going to prevail. By setting the selling figures up too high, owners may in a few years be singing the same old sad refrain that has been sung by them before—"I should have sold when I had the chance." It is well to remember Russel Sage's advice to "Buy 'em when they're low, and sell 'em when they're high."

"That is a great sale they are having in New York," said a gentleman Tuesday morning as he read the telegraphic report of the Old Glory sale. One hundred and thirty-nine horses were sold the first day for a total of $100,960. What surprised me was the price at which Bow Bells was knocked down. Here is a son of the great Electioneer and Beautiful Bells, and one of the best individuals of this wonderful family. He is a full brother to Chimes, which should make him very valuable even though there were no other members of this, the greatest trotting family in the world. Bow Bells, however, does not depend on his relatives for his greatness. He is the sire of Billy Andrews 2:06½, Bellwood A. 2:07½, Matin Bells 2:06½, the great two year old Janie T. 2:14 and also of Boreal 2:15½, sire of Boralma 2:07 and others. Bow Bells has nearly thirty in the list at fourteen years of age, and has two or three producing sons. Yet he only brought $5100 at the sale last Monday. I think he is worth at least twice as much, but the big buyers over East did not think so, it seems.

While I am not at liberty to give the names of the principals in the transactions, I can say that had there not been a misunderstanding as to the date of the sale Bow Bells would have come to California in all probability, as there is a resident of this State who would have sent a representative to the salesring empowered to bid more than the price Bow Bells sold for. The gentleman I refer to, by some means conceived the idea that the Old Glory sale was to begin the latter part of December, and left the State for Mexico with the understanding that on his return the first of next month he would arrange to send a well known California horseman East to bid on Bow Bells. It is very unfortunate, and a big loss to the State that this mistake occurred, as Bow Bells represents the best blood ever produced in California, and a strain that is very scarce now. Bow Bells could earn $5000 easily here next year if properly managed. Every horseman in California will regret that he is not to be owned here. The gentleman referred to is in a location that it was impossible to reach by telegraph or mail, or he would have been notified of the correct date of the sale.

The San Benito Agricultural Association has decided to establish a colt stake for trotting and pacing foals on the same lines as those of the stake established by the Monterey Association. The races are to come off next year and as there is certain to be a large list of original entries, the race should start with a good sized field. There is nothing that will increase the interest in trotting horse breeding like these district colt stakes, and I would like to see the directors of every district association follow the example of the Monterey and San Benito hoards. The cost to an association is so small—simply a stated amount added to the stakes—that one can be inaugurated by any district no matter how small or obscure. The two associations named add but $50 to their stakes which, with the small amount spent for advertising in the local papers, is the total expense of the stake. It is well known to everybody that these colt stakes arouse more enthusiasm and draw greater crowds than any races that can be given. One or two of these stakes should be on every district program for 1902, but to make them successful they should be advertised by January 1st in the local journals.

W. Ford Thomas (or "Captain" Thomas as he is best known by those who do business with the firm of Sprockels Brothers of this city, whose large transactions with the United States customs house at this port he supervises) is one of the most enthusiastic of horse breeders. Riding behind a good trotter in the park is his recreation and chief amusement, and like the majority of road riders he has always entertained the hope that a horse of his own breeding will trot so fast that he will be too good for the road, and win fame on the track. Captain Thomas has bred some that are "very promising," and now owns a few youngsters that show enough speed to warrant training for the races, although it is doubtful if the Captain will permit himself to own a race horse. He has colts and fillies by McKinney and Secretary, and has recently purchased one by Nutwood Wilkes 2:16½ that he thinks more of than anything he ever owned. Captain Thomas came back from a visit to Nutwood Stock Farm about three weeks ago a most enthusiastic man over the get of Martin Carter's great horse. "The yearlings, two year olds and three year olds at Mr. Carter's farm," said he, "are the grandest lot of youngsters I ever saw. They have size, style, quality, good bone, and that finish that is always admired in horses and which I think every breeder should aim to get. They are natural trotters, with speed and the desire to show it, and there is no doubt in my mind but Nutwood Wilkes is now and will prove himself one of the greatest sires of speed California has ever produced." The colt Captain Thomas bought is by Nutwood Wilkes out of a line by Direct Lino. This horse is a son of Director, his dam being Lida W. 2:18½ by Nutwood, and she the dam of Nutwood Wilkes. It will be seen that the colt is inbred to Lida W., and that alone should make him valuable as she is one of the grandest mares ever foaled. I saw her last summer and she looks to be not over seven or eight years old, although she is twenty. Mr. Carter tells me he is pretty certain that she is in foal to Zombro 2:11, as she shows every sign. He expects a great foal and has a right to.

Down in Los Angeles there is a black pacer that all the horsemen are talking about and for which many a good offer has been refused. When Millard Sanders came through there a few weeks ago, he made a bid of $1500 for a half interest in this fellow and another of $3500 for all of him. I failed to learn whether this black whirlwind has a name or not, but he is a green one with speed and that is what buyers are after now. He worked a mile in 2:11½ with a dozen or so good watches snapped on him and they say he can about 2:06. He is owned by Mr. Wilson, and was sired by Titus, who, I believe, is a full brother to Direct 2:05½, being by Director out of Echora by Echo. Those who have looked this pacer over say he has all the marks of a free-for-all horse, and I hope he will be seen at the races next year.

Free-for-all pacers are getting numerous among the green horses in California if all the stories that are being dished up on the local hot air circuit are to be believed, and there should be some wonders crop out next season. There were forty or fifty of them last spring, but when the circuit was over just one, Sir Albert S. 2:08½, had made good. I saw this son of Diablo last Tuesday and he undoubtedly has as perfect a set of limbs under him as any pacer that ever wore harness. There are absolutely no blemishes on him, and the only "protuberances" are the wonderful big muscles which stand out like those of a Sandow. Jack Groom, who gave this horse all his training and drove him in all his races, is very anxious to go down the line on the Grand Circuit next year with Sir Albert S. and is confident that none of the horses that are in his class can beat him. I know that Sir Albert S. has never had his neck stretched as yet and believe it will take 2:05 three times to make him do it, and if you will look over the records of this the greatest year's racing ever had over East, you will see that a horse that can pace that fast can win in almost any company. I hope Mr. Layng will find time from his auction business to take Sir Albert S. over East next year, and there is not a particle of doubt in the minds of horsemen here that Groom can drive the horse three heats better than 2:08 any time it is necessary. Few of the 2:09 pacers are in his class.

Cresceus the Champion.

A pouring rain that did not let up for a minute during the day prevented the champion trotter of the world from giving an exhibition at Sacramento last Thursday. Had the weather been propitious a very large crowd would have been in attendance, and there is little doubt but the great horse would have shown a fast mile. The track prior to the rain was in fine shape, and on Wednesday Mr. Ketcham drove Cresceus an eighth in 15 seconds in his exercise. The horse is in prime condition, and a mile in 2:05 or better would have been shown beyond a doubt. California weather during the rainy season is not to be depended upon, however, and is no respecter of programs of any sort.

The writer went to Sacramento Thursday, but the only glimpse he got of the great champion was through the door of his stall, and as it was rather dark inside, and a drenching rain falling, an inspection of the horse was deferred until next week at San Jose, when we hope for clear weather. The following description of the champion was written by the well-known critic on equine matters, "Volunteer," and appeared in the Christmas number of the Chicago Horse Review last year. It may be a correct pen picture, but from the cursory glance we had at the horse "Volunteer" is a little off as regards his color, as Cresceus is a bright sorrel. As he stood in his stall he had something the appearance of the Red Wilkes stallion Dictatus, known to all California horsemen. "Volunteer" says:

"Roughly speaking, Cresceus is a big, stout, dusty colored chestnut, low-headed, lumbering in his slower paces, and, in the abstract, anything but the jaunty quarter-stretch hero that was his sire in his salad days. We know Cresceus for one of the stoutest and gamest of trotters—and yet his color is that peculiar chestnut that we are apt to consider soft. It has little of the glowing, ruddy hue that made his sire's splendid panoply such a shimmer of radiance when the sun lit up its polished iridescence; and it has equally little of the warm "burnt" tone that was one of Mambrino King's chiefest beauties; nor has it the golden cast of the pronounced "sorrel." Rather, it shades toward the pcheian dun—toward a soft, dusty color that would suggest a cross of Wapsie's blood—which we know he hasn't. His mane and tail fade to blonde at their fringes, and when we begin to get to his "points" we find that they, too, fade to what, for want of a better term, may be called ashen blonde.

When Cresceus entered active training at the Glenville track, Cleveland, last May, he stood just 16 hands tall and weighed 1090 pounds. He is a big horse—a bulky one—one that, in stud condition, would come very near being a gross one. His heavy middle-piece proclaims his capacity for accommodating a good dinner and assimilating it. He "tucked-up" considerably as a three and four year old, but not much last season, considering his seventeen heats in the average time of 2:06½. His muscular substance is tremendous. In the hind quarters he types after a thoroughbred sprinter. The rump is not so sloping, but otherwise the pattern is that of Racine and Little Minch. Through the ham, stifle and gaskin, as you stand behind him and measure them with your eye, the massive furnishing of muscle is semi-phenomenal, inside and out. When he was three he sprang a curb and went painfully lame when American Belle beat him at Righy Park. They got it off him during the winter, and his hocks are pretty smooth now. This brings to mind the recollection that Joe Patchen and Pamlico, two other iron race-horses of extreme speed, were also at one time curbed, in fact, I believe Pamlico was curbed on both hocks when a colt. Such as these are among the queer things of racehorse history. Salvator, the best thoroughbred ever produced in America, was ringhoned as a yearling and, at one time, thought worthless, or next to it.

For a horse of his hulk, Cresceus is not, below the knee and hock, more than usually heavy boned. Rather, he is less than usually so. His forearm, like his stifle, is prodigiously developed, but he is slim in the cannon and begins to show high quality there and in the ankle and pastern. On the withers he runs up well, but not sharply. His shoulder is nicely laid—oblique, but not extraordinarily so—not so much so, for instance, as is The Abbot's. And he is so deep through the waist that his immense depth through the girth is not at first very noticeable. As it is necessary to stand behind him to take in his herculean power there, so it is necessary to stand in front to get a true idea of his structure there. Such a chest and brisket as he has—those of an equino Sandow! Their depth and breadth betray at once the secret of his unfailing lung power and his mighty heart.

From his withers his neck runs up with no pretense of graceful arch. The top-line is straight and not very long—for the neck itself is short and thick—though not so heavy as might be expected of a horse otherwise so bulky. At the throat-latch it is not cleanly carved out, although the definition of the wind-pipe is perfect.

If Cresceus has any claim to beauty it rests with his head—and there I grant it him. Certainly, his head is beautiful. Not beautiful with the cameo delicacy of Moquette's, or Tommy Britton's, or the perfect contour of Nelson's or Joe Patchen's, but with a fine beauty all its own and none the less real. In profile this actual beauty is rather taken away from by his short, thick neck. Still, the line of the slightly dished face and fine nostril and ear shows at once there. But it is the view from the frontal angle that brings out the full beauty. I have looked in the faces of few other horses and found such speaking beauty there. The eyes set wide apart. They are clear and mild, and so singularly soft and luminous and intelligent that within them almost there "seems some soul aglow." They tell of both strength and sweetness, and bear no likeness to the small and restless orbs of his sire, whose wild light bespoke his wilder spirit. Above them, the cranial processes also indicate rare mental balance, and the ears, set well together, but not too closely, are small and fine, but full of character. Below the eyes, the sweep from the broad forehead to the slender muzzle is by a clear, clean, beautiful arch that catches the eye and holds it and lingers in the mental vision. There is no more meat about Cresceus' head than about a hawk's. The jaws spread wide apart to form a gateway for the admission of the great throttle, and there is no suggestion of grossness from there to the muzzle's tip.

"In repose, then, reading Cresceus' head and face, they speak—at least to me—of rare intelligence, a quiet reserve of indomitable strength and power, next to illimitable, and the "cleverness" of a big kind dog. I expect, if I had much to do with him, that I should end by falling completely under its spell.

Captor 2:09 1-4 by Electric Bell.

A Whatcom, Washington, correspondent writes the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN that a controversy has arisen between a couple of gentlemen in that town as to the breeding of the gelding Captor 2:09½, that was driven to his record by the veteran, Chas. Marvin, this year, and we are asked to decide whether the horse is by Capri or not.

Captor 2:09½ is a brown gelding and was sired by Electric Bell, son of Electioneer and Beautiful Bells. The dam of Captor is Eula Lee 2:29½, by Gen. Geo. H. Thomas.

Captor by Capri is a gray gelding and made his record of 2:26½ at Napa, August 24th, 1892. His dam was an A. W. Richmond mare and he was a full brother to Clara Z. 2:26½. They were bred by A. Zane of Haldsburg, California. We do not think Captor 2:26½ by Capri has been raced this year. He must be at least fifteen years old now if living, as we think he was foaled in 1886.

Trotting Bred Horses Sell Well.

The Old Glory Sale in New York this week shows that horse values are still on the ascendant. While some of the stallions sold brought less money than was expected, the average of the sale will probably exceed that of any previous New York auction. The Daly consignment brought good prices clear through. Directum was sold on Wednesday and brought $12,100. The $12,000 bid was that of Mr. Geo. H. Ketcham, owner of the champion Crceus, now in this State. Adbell sold for $10,000 and went to John Madden of Lexington. Bow Bells brought $5100 at the sale and was purchased by Samuel McMillan, who sold a half interest in the stallion the following day for $5000. The parties who paid this sum were Andy Welch and J. E. Madden. They have arranged to take Bow Bells to Charter Oak Park for the season of 1902.

Rusens, New York, $1550; Felle de Lelle, b f, 1, John Madden, Lexington, Ky., $1270; Bermuda Girl, b m, 9, W. H. Orr, Reading, Pa., $1000; Sallie Toler, b m, 11, J. L. Druen, Bardstow, N. Y., $1950.

On Thursday eighty-seven head were sold for a total of $36,265. The particulars of the sale with the prices of the California consignments will not reach us before next week.

The pacer Reckless 2:12, that W. O. Foote won five races with at the late Texas meeting, was got by H. R. Hiatt 2:17, a son of Mohican. The latter was by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, and his dam was by Seely's American Star, out of a daughter of Mambrino Chief.

rate of new performers, the table of comparison would stand quite different, Ashland Wilkes dropping to about last place, as seven of his new performers are slower than 2:25, and only four secured records faster than 2:20. Of Direct's ten new ones, seven have records of 2:20 or better, while all but one have records better than 2:22. In point of total number of new record makers and record reducers Allerton leads this group, with a total of twenty-one new record holders. He not only leads in the total number of new record holders, but also in point of average record and number of 2:20 performers, no less than an even dozen of his get having taken new records of 2:20 or better or having lowered previous 2:20 or better records. Direct comes next, of this group, in point of new 2:20 or better record makers, with ten. Ashland Wilkes has nineteen new record makers, but only five of them beat 2:20. Of McKinney's total of eighteen, new and reduced records, nine are as low as 2:20, while Wilton, with a total of seventeen of such performers for the year, has eleven in the 2:20 list, and Axtell, out of a total of sixteen, has eight in the 2:20 list. Sphinx does not appear in this group of sires of ten new standard performers for the year, having only eight, but otherwise his new table of performers for the year is decidedly striking. Thirteen of his got made new standard records or lowered old ones. Of this number, nine beat 2:20, five beat 2:12 and three took records better than 2:09. No other sire has three of his get to take new records of 2:09 or better during the year, though Chimes had two to beat 2:08. The honor of having gained three new 2:10 performers for the year is enjoyed only by Onward, one of the 2:09 performers by Sphinx having previously entered the 2:10 list, with a record of 2:09. Only three sires, namely, Onward, Sphinx and Chimes, added as many as two new 2:10 performers to their lists during the season, and, strange as it may seem to the extreme-speed-from-extreme-speed advocates, not one of these sires has a record as fast as 2:20. But they all carry trotting blood, and plenty of it."

The Forces or Heredity.

[American Sportsman]

As we mentioned quite recently, a Canadian student of Prof. Darwin's theory of evolution had made the experiment of breeding English fox hounds to Esquimaux dogs. The result fully justifies the scientific theory of heredity that the more intensely bred Esquimaux dog appears in the produce in temper, form and characteristics. The docile, domesticated English hound practically disappeared in the first fruit of the mating, and as far away as the fourth generation the mongrel, retained many of the traits and characteristics of the savage polar sire. One of these combination dog experiments, three generations removed from the primal Esquimaux, was sent to the hot climate of the West Indies to see what a change of climate would do for his polar habits and behavior. But the hot blaze of the torrid sun failed to modify the fierceness of his inherited temper or even modify the harshness of his voice. He continued to howl at sunset, after the style of his paternal grand sire, and in the morning would shake himself as if he were shaking the snowflakes from his shaggy sides. As breeders and students of the horse, let us not forget that the same forces of heredity pervade the entire animal kingdom. They are ever potent in the horse. Don't waste your money and still more precious time in fighting this theory. In breeding for a trotter, breed to a trotting family, and breed to the best. In considering the value of the inherent forces of heredity in the horse kingdom, we do not account for the fact that one horse sells for $20,000 and another for $20. Now can we account for the fact that a Creseus can command an offer of $50,000 while his full brother shot in the same mould sells for $500. But why heredity has a potent voice in the market is because the $50,000 horse has a chance to produce another $50,000 horse, while the $20 horse is not worth reproducing.

Ethelbert has been retired to Silver Brook, Mr. L. O. Appleby's beautiful farm in New Jersey. The champion is reported to be in excellent condition, and turfmen believe that his stud success is assured. He will be bred to some of the choicest mares owned by Mr. Perry Belmont and some choice matrons owned by Mr. Appleby and others. There is no reason to believe that Ethelbert will fail to get racehorses, and the hope is that he will produce one as good as he was in his primo.

During the short time that he has been an exhibitor the horses owned by Thomas W. Lawson of Boston have won more than five hundred ribbons, including eighty championships. Mr. Lawson at the start evidently adopted the motto of the late Robert Bonner, "When you see a horse that you want buy him and pay the price."

Jackson's Napa Soda is sold in every city, town and hamlet in the State.

The Year's Leading Sires.

The following is from the Western Horseman of November 22d, and sets forth fairly the status of the leading sires of 1901. While it credits McKinney with but 12 new performers, he is really entitled to four more, viz.: Sweet Marie 2:13, Maggie Murphy 2:20, Grace McK. 2:21 and Maud McKinney 2:21, whose records were made at matinees of the Los Angeles Driving Club. While these records will not be recognized, and will not be bars, owing to the fact that the races in which they were made were not for money or prizes and no gate receipts were charged, every horseman will recognize them as accurate measures of speed the same as the 2:06 of John A. McKerron of Cleveland. The article in the Western Horseman is as follows:

"Nowadays the matter of greatest interest in regard to prominent sires of the year or decade is the amount of money won by their get, yet the race for the post of honor of the leading sires of new standard performers is always a matter of general interest. For a good while it looked like Axtell would carry off the honor for 1901, but as the season drew to a close Ashland Wilkes forged ahead, and has a clear lead of all, with seventeen newcomers to the standard list to his credit, Axtell comes next, with thirteen, while the California sire, McKinney, is a close third, with an even dozen. Only five sires, if we have calculated correctly, have so many as ten new performers each this year, the list including Ashland Wilkes, with seventeen; Axtell, with thirteen; McKinney, with twelve, and Allerton and Thirt each with ten. The next highest are Expedition and Wilton, each with nine. Scored on points of speed

Yearling Trials Are Deceptive.

The subject of yearlings, which is the most pertinent in turf circles now, is engaging the attention of all interested in the sport. Winners and losers of last season's turf battles have forgotten their differences and now join in discussions of the problems that are to be solved in the next season.

The yearling problem is tougher than a lightwood knot. The subscriber has been duly informed of the fast trial by the youngster inmates of conspicuous stables, and he cannot plead ignorance, says a writer in Daily America.

Let it be remembered as a guard, however, that by the highest turf authorities yearling trials are not conclusive proof that the youngster "that breaks the watch" is going to make good and finish in the van when the two-year-old races are pulled off. To the contrary, and as a guide to the followers of yearling form, I am constrained to enter into the subject at some little length and go behind the scenes, as it were, to explain the fallacy of fast youngster trials.

The arguments pro and con by many of the most prominent owners and trainers in the land as to the value of yearling trials are many. Nothing positive has been learned.

With my own view of the case, and with evidence aplenty to substantiate it, the yearling trial as a test of merit, while a good thing to have on the side of a young racer, is not conclusive by any means.

The instances of the reversal of yearling to later form are so numerous that it would not be a half bad idea to look into the subject and get some little data regarding it.

Of course this data has not been gathered single handed by any means. It is the result of close observation and of opinions gathered from expert trainers who have noted the subject closely.

To the initiated it is well known that several of the greatest racers showed next to nothing in their yearling trials, and were only persevered with from their exceptional breeding and good conformation.

This is now recognized by all expert trainers, and if a worthy youngster performs to the bad when he is a yearling hope for him is not abandoned by a long shot, and with a winter's growth he is always given another chance.

This proposition is adhered to by the majority of experts that guide the paces of many stake candidates. In the opinion of many the yearling that is quick to hand and shows a phenomenal trial will become a sprinter, while his level headed stable mate that has the conformation, although his trial is not as fast, will be the stake winner.

This idea was never better exemplified than in the case of the great Hanover. He was notorious as a laggard in his yearling work, and I have Trainer Mc Cabe's word for it that he could not run fast enough to keep himself warm. In his stall he could not be made to move around without a slap on the flanks as a reminder.

During the winter, while his owners, the Dwyer Brothers, were away, he would have been sold for his cost price, $15,000. But the trainer felt his value and would not offer him.

Next year, when he was two years old, he was still sluggish and never woke up until one morning at Jerome Park, when, with Jockey McLaughlin having the leg up, he came to life, and afterward won the first start of his career, which took place at Monmouth Park.

The wonderful Tammany, that so easily breezed by Lamplighter in the great match at Guttenburg, was the slowest of yearlings.

Trainer Matt Byrnes never despaired of him, however, and finally landed him into retirement one of the grandest of racers. There are innumerable other cases of this kind that cannot be covered within the scope of this article, and the conspicuous ones are, of course, handled first.

Every trainer, however, notes closely the trial of his youngsters, and whether they develop as stake winners or platers, the consensus of opinion seems to be that their trials have little or nothing to do with it.

In this connection I am told by Trainer A. J. Joyner that a pair of his most useful runners of the season, Clonmell and Honolulu, were the worst of his lot when trial day came.

J. E. Madden's Yankee was tried in 0:36 4-5, and P. J. Dwyer's Luck and Charity in 0:36. One won the Futurity, and the other is still a maiden.

Of course, on the other hand, there are many cases where the yearling trial is verified and the smart one goes to the races and makes good. The two most conspicuous instances that can be now called to mind are those of Ballyhoo Boy and Nasturtium. Both were the fastest tried ones of the year, and both ran up to their mark when they went to the races.

Whitney Horses to Leave Kentucky.

Mr. William C. Whitney has concluded that he can raise just as good thoroughbreds in New Jersey as in Kentucky, the land of blue grass that makes muscle, and limestone that produces bone that is like iron. His stallion and mares will soon be taken to Rancocas, where the late Pierre Lorillard bred so many good ones. In an interview the other day Mr. Whitney said:

"The arrangements have been completed and I expect in the near future to bring all my horses to the New Jersey farm. I have not bought Rancocas. The farm is not for sale. I have simply made an arrangement to keep my horses on a part of it. When a man is interested in horses three-fourths of his leisure time is spent in seeing the horses. He wants to look at the animals two or three times a year.

"While my horses are in Kentucky it is only possible for me to see them about once a year, and because of that I have been looking over the field in the East for the last two years to find a suitable place. But you must remember that there are other things to consider besides the pleasure of looking at your horses. If a man is going into the breeding business now he must realize it is the day of sharp competition and he cannot afford to lag behind in any particular.

"Therefore it becomes a vital question as to where the field lies for the very best development of his animals. I have studied the eastern section in every respect, as to climate, food and other necessary feature for the horses' welfare. For instance, there is what is called the milk region in New York, where the great dairies are.

"I have looked into that district, and while it may be suitable in the summer, the winters are so cold that the horses would lose in such rigorous weather what they would gain in summer.

"August Belmont attempted to breed horses on his Long Island farm, and after a fair trial was obliged to admit that it was an absolute failure.

"Mr. Paget brought a carload of horses from Colorado a few years ago and took them to my place at Westbury, L. I. I told him to turn them out in the meadow there, where the grass was a foot and a half high, but instead of thriving the horses got thin. So that you see it is a very important point to find out just where the horses are capable of the very best development.

"I have had Rancocas in mind for some time. I knew that Mr. Lorillard had brought this farm up to the highest point of development for the breeding of horses.

"He had selected the farm because of its favorable location, and he had developed the very best grasses that are conducive to the health of horses. The farm lies just back of the pines and is sheltered from the severity of the wind.

"It is in the Lakewood section, which is noted, as everyone knows, for its climate. The only question that arose then was: Would it be agreeable to Mrs. Allen, the present owner, for me to take a part of the farm for breeding purposes? I was aware that it was entirely too large for her purposes, and thought that such an arrangement might be made.

"Mr. Paget saw Mrs. Allen in regard to the matter and when it had been fully laid before her, she acquiesced in my desire. No terms, however, have been fixed as yet, but I do not anticipate any trouble in that direction.

"I have three stallions, seventy mares and about forty weanlings on the Kentucky farm, and as soon as arrangements can be made I will move them all to Rancocas.

"I believe, after studying the matter from all standpoints, that the Jersey farm will prove as favorable to good breeding as the Kentucky farm. I shall give it a thorough trial, at least. I may go to Rancocas next week, look the farm over carefully and complete all my arrangements."

Commencing December 16th, the Charleston Racing Association will inaugurate a one-hundred day meeting on the circular half-mile track of the South Carolina Interstate and West Indian Exposition on the grounds belonging to Capt. Wagner at Charleston. The track will be improved under the direction of J. C. Hill, of St. Asaph, who has charge of the racing end of the exposition, and who announces the entry of many of the horses now running on the Southern and Central Western tracks. Liberal purse races have been prepared, aggregating a $1000 a day, and it is believed that the response to the plan will become general as soon as the Bennings track closes. The general management consists of Charles McCoy as presiding judge, Henry Shults as secretary and C. F. Gondolf, treasurer.

Raphael Bally, a wealthy horseman of Bologna, Italy, is in this country in search of a high-class mare or stallion that can trot in 2:10.
